DA903
.I681

DA
903
.E6
1856
v.1-v.2
(1856-1857)
OVERSIZE

The Irish News.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, Editor and Proprietor.

Three Dollars per Annum. Single Copies 6 Cents. Publication Office, 29 Ann St., cor. of Nassau.

VOL. I. NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, APRIL 12, 1856. NO. 1.

Publications.

THE IRISH NEWS,

EDITED BY THE PROPRIETOR,

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER,

DEDICATED TO THE SERVICE OF THE

IRISH PEOPLE,

AT HOME AND ABROAD,

Will be published every Saturday, on and after the 12th of April, at 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau, New-York.

TERMS.

For subscribers, $3 per annum: 6 cents a copy.
For wholesale dealers, $3 50 per hundred.
For retailers and carriers, $4 per hundred.
For Clubs, 4 copies to one address, per annum, $10.
" 7 " " " " $17.
" 10 " " " " $20.

For advertising.—Each square of eight lines,

Transient	$1
Monthly	$2
Quarterly	$5
Yearly	$16

N. B. Four lines, or under, constitute half a square.

Agents or Postmasters who interest themselves in procuring and remitting subscriptions, may retain 50 cents out of each annual subscription of $3.

☞ Subscribers, Agents, and Advertisers will please send in their orders early, any observe that our terms are invariably, payments in advance.

Communications of a PRIVATE nature should always be marked so. Those connected with the editorial department are to be addressed to Thomas Francis Meagher, and those on business to Richard J. Lalor, Irish News Office, 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau.

☞ Subscribers, residing in New-York, Brooklyn, and Williamsburgh, who pay in advance, will have their papers neatly enveloped, addressed, and delivered on each Wednesday through Boyd's Express or some similar medium.

WHOLESALE DEALERS.

ROSS & TOUSEY, 108 Nassau Street, New-York.
DEXTER & BROTHERS, 14 Ann Street, New-York.
SAMUEL YATES, 22 Beekman Street, New-York.
MIKE MADDEN, 22 Ann Street, New-York.
HAMILTON & JOHNSON, 30 Ann Street, New-York.
DE WITT & DAVENPORT, 160 & 162 Nassau Street, New-York.
HENRY TAYLOR, Baltimore, Md.
FEDERHEN & CO., 13 Court Street, Boston.
WM. HICKEY, 128 Federal Street, Boston.
REDDING & CO., 8 Court Street, Boston.
THOS. McLOUGHLIN, 42 South 4th Street, Philadelphia.
T. R. CALLENDER, 88 South-Third Street, Philadelphia.
DROVIN & CO., Philadelphia.
J. M. CRAWFORD, 30 and 32 Chestnut Street, St. Louis, Mo.
MATTHEW WALLACE, 25 Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.
McNALLY & CO., 75 Dearborn Street.
J. W. SULLIVAN, Kearney Street, (next Post-Office) San-Francisco, Cal.

Printed by J. C. Watters, 29 & 33 Beekman street.

A NEW IRISH BOOK.

In 1 vol. 12mo. Price $1.

'98 AND '48:

THE MODERN REVOLUTIONARY HISTORY AND LITERATURE OF IRELAND.

BY JOHN SAVAGE.

There is no one work which gives the spirit of the memorable periods to illustrate which the author has devoted the present volume. It contains vivid and carefully collated descriptions of the principal battles of the United Irishmen of 98, and a clear statement of the circumstances which led to the differences between "Old Ireland" and "Young Ireland," the line of national policy adopted by the latter, with biographical notices and mention of the following (with other) persons:

Theobald Wolfe Tone.	James Hope.
Henry Grattan.	Arthur O'Connor.
Thomas Addis Emmet.	Samuel Neilson.
Robert Emmet.	Hamilton Rowan.
William Putnam McCabe.	Dr. Wm. Drennan.

THE REBEL GENERALS:

Thomas Russell.	Ed. Fitzgerald of Wexford.
Henry J. McCracken.	Garret Byrne.
Henry Munro.	John Kelly.
William Aylmer.	Esmonde Kyan.
Bagnal Harvey.	Matthew Keugh.
Edward Roche.	John Devereux.
Lord Edward Fitzgerald.	Anthony Perry.
Dr. Esmonde.

PRIEST-GENERALS WHO LED THE INSURGENTS:

John Murphy.	Moses Kearns.
Michael Murphy.	J. Prendergast.
Philip Roche.	Nicholas Redmond.
Denis Teafe.

Baron Plunkét.	James Fenton Lalor.
Daniel O'Connell.	John O'Mahony.
Thomas Davis.	Father Kenyon.
William smith O'Brien.	Michael Doheny.
John Mitchel.	Joseph Brenan.
Robert Holmes.	Dr. Antisell.
Richard Lalor Shell.	C. Gavan Duffy.
Thomas Francis Meagher.	Richard O'Gorman.
Thomas Devin Reilly.	John Martin.
Tom Steele.	Lord John Russell.
John O'Connell.	Lord George Bentinck.
Kevin I. O'Doherty.	Sir Robert Peel.
R. D. Williams.	Ben. D'Israeli.
John B. Dillon.	T. Bellew McManus.
P. O'Donohue.

And many other Irish and English notables of the period.

"Mr. Savage is a man possessing an excellent taste, a brilliant fancy, and is a vigorous and earnest thinker."—Transcript.

"Mr. Savage is universally known as a writer, and universally popular as a man. He has since early boyhood been engaged in the struggles of his country, and never has been unfaithful to a friend or a principle."—Irish American, Feb., 1854.

"Mr. Savage, himself a poet, was a co-worker with the men of whom he spoke in arousing that spirit of hostility to English rule which was evinced in Ireland in 1848. From his intimate knowledge of the theme, and his well-known literary ability, much was expected of him, and expectation was by no means disappointed. We have rarely listened to a composition combining so many poetical thoughts, beautifully expressed, or images so luckily and naturally drawn."—N. Y. Daily Times, Dec. 4, 1854.

"Mr. Savage is an able writer and speaker."—Boston Times.

John Mitchel wrote in The Citizen, Dec., 1854:

"We freely grant that among the survivors of our band there is none so competent to the task of presenting them before the intellectual eye as Mr. Savage. They seemed to live and ring before us, to sing out their souls and die. We who saw what these men saw, who felt as they felt, and lived, may have coarser organizations, thicker souls, heavier and more earthly natures, which, perhaps, is for our advantage, and perhaps not."

Published by J. S. REDFIELD, No. 34 Beekman street.

Publications.

Annals of the Four Masters,

7 VOLUMES QUARTO, IN IRISH, WITH AN ENGLISH TRANSLATION BY O'DONOVAN. $45.

CARTER'S LIFE OF THE DUKE OF ORMOND, and the Great Affairs of his Time in Ireland. 6 vols. 8vo. Full calf, $20.

GRATTAN'S LIFE AND TIMES: By his son. 5 vols. 8vo. Cloth, $7.

CROKER'S LIFE OF J. HOLT, General of the '98 Rebels. 2 vols. 8vo. hf. calf, $3 50.

GAZETTEER OF IRELAND. 2 vols., map. Cloth, $3.

MAXWELL'S HISTORY OF THE REBELLION. Illustrated. 1 vol. 8vo. cloth. $2.

FITZPATRICK'S LIFE OF CLONCURRY. 8vo. cloth. $1 50.

HAY'S BOOK OF IRISH BALLADS. 2 vols., Eng. ed., cloth. $2 25.

FINDEN'S BEAUTIES OF MOORE. Forty-eight portraits, exquisitely engraved. Folio, cloth, gilt edges. $6.

WRIGHT'S HISTORY OF IRELAND. 3 vols. quarto, maps, portraits, and views, $7 50.

BARRINGTON'S SKETCHES. $1.

SAVAGE'S '98 and '48. 1 vol., 12mo. $1.

MRS. HALL'S IRELAND, 3 VOLS., 8VO., FULL OF ILLUSTRATIONS. $12.

Warner's History of Ireland, 4to., $2 50. Warner's Irish Rebellion, 4to., $2 50. Weil's Lives of Celebrated Irishmen, 6 volumes, $3. Life of Wolf Tone, 2 volumes, $3 50. Mitchel's Jail Journal, $1. Mitchel's Hugh O'Neil, 37 1-2 cents. Moore's Life of Lord Edward Fitzgerald, 75 cents. Davis's Poems, with an introduction by John Mitchel, 37 1-2 cents. De Jean's Poems, 37 1-2 cents. Meagher's Speeches, $1. Furlong's Irish Prayer Book, 50 cts. Recollections of Lord Cloncurry, $1. Carleton's Willie Reilley, 75 cents. Mooney's History of Ireland, 2 volumes, $3. O'Connor's History of the Irish Brigade, 1 50. Life of Fighting Fitzgerald, 25 cents. Irish Popular Superstitions, 25 cents. Ellis's Romances and Ballads of Ireland, 75 cents. Curran's Speeches, $1 25. Grattan's Speeches, 1 25. Grattan's Speeches, 1 25. Sheil's Speeches, 1 25. For sale by P. M. Haverty, Bookseller, 110 Fulton street, New-York.

With a few exceptions, any of the above will be sent by mail, free.

THE OLD ESTABLISHED CATHOLIC HOUSE OF

EDWARD DUNIGAN & BROTHER,

151 FULTON STREET, NEW-YORK.

Honored with a Gold Medal and letters of approbation from His Holiness

POPE PIUS IX.,

and patronized by the Archbishops, Bishops, Clergy, Colleges, Convents, and Religious orders in the United States,

HAVE JUST PUBLISHED

THE HAMILTON'S, a Catholic Tale, of great beauty and power, price 38 cts.

CONSCIENCE, or the trials of Maybrooke.

BROOKE, a tale, by Mrs. M. H. Dorsey, 2 volumes, cloth, each 38 cents.

HOURS BEFORE THE ALTAR, or MEDITATIONS ON THE BLESSED EUCHARIST, by the Abbe de la Bouillerie, Vicar-General of Paris, translated by a Religeiuse of the Visitation. 1 volume, price 25cts.

AND HAVE IN PRESS,

THE LOVE OF MARY, or reading for the month of May, by D. Roberts.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER, a tale. 4t

NEW ILLUSTRATED BIOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY.

D. APPLETON & CO., 346 and 348 BROADWAY,

HAVE NOW READY

APPLETON'S CYCLOPÆDIA OF BIOGRAPHY,

Embracing a series of original memoirs of the most distinguished persons of all times, written for the work by—

Sir Archibald Allison, D. C. L.,	Robert Jamieson, D. D.,
Wm. Baird, M. D., F. R. S.,	Charles Knight,
Sir David Brewster, F. R. S.,	James Manson,
James Bryce, A. M. F. G. S.	James McConnechy,
John Hill Burton,	Prof. Nichol, LL. D.,
Prof. Cressy, A. M.,	Elihu Rich,
Prof. Ferguson, A. M.,	Prof. Spaulding, M. A.,
Prof. Gordon, F. R. S. E.,	Prof. Thomson, M. D., F. R. S.,
James Hedderwick,	Ralph N. Wornum,
Prof. Eadie, D. D., LL. D.,	James A. Heraud.

AMERICAN EDITION, EDITED BY

FRANCIS L. HAWKS, D. D., LL. D.,

With 600 Wood Engravings.

One volume, royal 8vo., 1,056 pages. Price, in cloth, $4; sheep, $4 50; half morocco, $5; half calf, $5; full calf, $6.

A good Biographical Dictionary has long been a desideratum with the public. No book has been published for a long time which gave in a compact form for ready reference memoirs of all the distinguished persons who have figured in the world. Such a volume is of inestimable value and should be placed side by side with a Dictionary of the English language. The scholar, the merchant, the statesman, or the mechanic; the farmer or the lawyer, may well dispense with many other books which are nevertheless of standard value, but he cannot, if he reads a book, a magazine, or a newspaper, fail to have frequent cause for reference to a Biographical Dictionary.

The book now presented to the public is one which has been very carefully prepared, and as an evidence of the ability we need only refer to the list of names who have assisted in its execution. Particular care has been taken with the American portion, and it is believed that no really important name is omitted.

The illustrations have been executed with great care, and with a due regard to the genuineness of the portraits, and where residences are introduced from actual drawings of the places made by our own artists; and in no case has a portrait, a landscape view of a residence, or a drawing of a monument been introduced, without we could safely rely upon it for accuracy.

NEARLY READY.

Narrative of the Expedition of an American Squadron to the China Seas and Japan,

PERFORMED IN THE YEARS 1852, 1853 AND 1854,

By order of the government of the United States, under the command of Commodore M. C. Perry, U. S. N. Compiled from the original notes and journals of Commodore Perry, at his request, and under his supervision.

BY FRANCIS L. HAWKS, D. D.

One volume, 8vo, with two hundred Steel and Wood Engravings, Maps, &c.

This volume will be one of the most interesting works ever published. The new field of interest which it opens to the reader will not fail to prove attractive, especially as the volume is illustrated with nearly two hundred steel and wood engravings, all from drawings made on the spot by the draughtsmen of the expedition. 1t

HAMILTON & JOHNSON,

NEWS AGENTS,

30 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

DAILY, weekly and Sunday papers, Magazines, and Cheap Publications. The trade supplied. Orders from the country solicited and promptly filled.

JOHN HAMILTON,
J. W. JOHNSON. } tf

Publications.

A LIST OF NEW WORKS,

PUBLISHED BY

HARPER & BROTHERS,

327 to 335 Pearl Street, (Franklin Square.)

I.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE, for April.
Illustration. 8vo, paper, 25 cents.

II.

ELFRED;
Or, the Blind Boy and his Pictures. By JACOB ABBOTT. Beautifully Illustrated. Small 4to paper, 25 cents; muslin, gilt, 40 cents.

III.

JARVIS'S ITALIAN SIGHTS.
Italian Sights and Papal Principles seen through American Spectacles. By JAMES JACKSON JARVIS. Numerous Illustrations. 12mo, muslin, $1.

IV.

JARVIS'S PARISIAN SIGHTS.
Parisian Sights and French Principles seen through American Spectacles. Second Series. By JAMES JACKSON JARVIS. Numerous Illustrations. 12mo, muslin, $1.

V.

JAMES' OLD DOMINION.
The Old Dominion; or, The Southampton Massacre. A Novel. By G. P. R. JAMES, Esq., author of "Ticonderoga," "Agnes Sorel," "A Life of Vicissitudes," &c. 8vo, paper, 50 cents.

VI.

MAYHEW'S WONDERS OF SCIENCE.
The Wonders of Science; or, Young Humphrey Davy, (the Cornish Apothecary's Boy, who taught himself Natural Philosophy, and eventually became President of the Royal Society.) The Life of a Wonderful Boy written for Boys. By HENRY MAYHEW, Author of the "Story of the Peasant-Boy Philosopher," &c. With numerous Illustrations. 16mo, muslin, 75 cents.

VII.

THE ILIAD OF HOMER,
Literally Translated, with Explanatory Notes. By THEODORE ALOIS BUCKLEY, B. A., of Christ Church. Portrait, 12mo, muslin. 75 cents. Homer's Iliad forms the Eleventh Volume of Harper's New Classical Library.

VIII.

EWBANK'S BRAZIL.
Life in Brazil; or, a Journal of a Visit to the Land of the Cocoa and the Palm. With an Appendix, containing Illustrations of Ancient South American Arts, in recently discovered Implements and Products of Domestic Industry, and Works in Stone, Pottery, Gold, Silver, Bronze, &c. By THOMAS EWBANK. With over 100 Illustrations. 8vo, muslin.

IX.

SQUIER'S CENTRAL AMERICA.
Notes on Central America, particularly the States of Honduras and San Salvador; their Geography, Topography, Climate, Population, Resources, Productions, &c., &c., and the proposed Inter-oceanic Railway. By E. G. SQUIER, formerly Charge d'Affaires, of the United States to the Republics of Central America. With Original Maps and Illustrations. 8vo, muslin, $2.

X.

NAPOLEON AT ST. HELENA;
Or, Interesting Anecdotes and Remarkable Conversations of the Emperor during the Five and a Half Years of his Captivity. Collected from the Memorials of Las Casas, O'Meara, Montholon, Antommarchi and others. By JOHN S. C. ABBOTT. With Illustrations. 8vo, muslin, $2 50; half calf, $3.

XI.

MACAULAY'S ENGLAND.
The History of England from the Accession of James II. By THOMAS BABINGTON MACAULAY. With an original Portrait of the Author.

Prices of Harper's Complete and Uniform Editions.

A handsome Octavo Library Edition, complete. With Portrait and elaborate Index, of indispensable value to a Library Edition. Printed on superfine paper, muslin, $1 50 a volume.

A popular Duodecimo Edition, complete. With Portrait and elaborate Index. Printed on fine paper, muslin, 62½ cents a volume.

A cheap Octavo Edition. Paper covers, 25 cents a volume.

A cheap Octavo Edition. The Four Volumes neatly bound in Two Volumes, muslin, 62½ cents a volume.

The Volumes of any of the aobve Editions sold separately.

XII.

A CHILD'S HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES.
By JOHN BONNER. 2 vols., 16mo, muslin, $1. (Uniform with "Dickens' Child's History of England.")

XIII.

LILY.
A Novel. By the Author of "The Busy Moments of an Idle Woman." 12mo, muslin, $1.

XIV.

LEARNING TO TALK;
Or, Entertaining and Instructive Lessons in the use of Language. By JACOB ABBOTT. Illustrated with 170 Engravings. Small 4to, muslin, 50 cts.

XV.

LEARNING TO THINK.
Consisting of Easy and Entertaining Lessons, designed to Assist in the First Unfolding of the Reflective and Reasoning Powers of Children. By JACOB ABBOTT. Illustrated with 120 Engravings. Small 4to, muslin, 50 cents.

XVI.

ABBOTT'S HERNANDO CORTEZ.
The History of Hernando Cortez. By JOHN S. C. ABBOTT. Illuminated Title-page and numerous Engravings. 16mo, muslin, 60 cents; muslin, gilt edges, 75 cents.

☞ HARPER & BROTHERS will send the above Works by mail, postage paid, (for any distance in the United States under 3000 miles,) on receipt of the money. 1t

P. O'SHEA,

739 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK,

Catholic Bookseller and Publisher, Importer of Vestments, Altar Furniture, and Religious Articles generally,

RESPECTFULLY calls the attention of the Catholic Clergy, Religious Orders, Superiors of Schools and Libraries, and his patrons, generally, to his large and varied assortment of Standard and Devotional Books and Religious articles of every description, which he offers for sale on the most reasonable terms, wholesale and retail.

Particular attention is called to his recently published works, viz.,

Bickerton; or, The Immigrant's Daughter. (An anti-Know-Nothing Tale,) 12mo., cloth, ... $0 50

Life of the Princess Borghese; (Daughter of the Earl of Shrewsbury.) Translated by Rev. A. F. Hewit, (of the Redemptorists.) 1 vol., 18mo, cloth, ... 0 37½

Life of St. Francis of Assisium. By Rev. Titus Icelin. 1 vol., 18mo, cl., 0 37½

Life of the Egyptian Aloysius. Translated by Rev. A. F. Hewit. 2 vols., 18mo, cloth, each, ... 0 37½

Edna and Marguerite. A Tale; by the Author of the Orphan of Moscow. 2 vols., 18mo, cloth, ... 0 37½

Religious Articles.

Rosaries, per dozen, from 20 cents, to	4 00
" each, on silver chains, from 75 cents, to	12 00
Crucifixes, (brass,) per dozen, from 8 cents, to	12 00
" (silver,) each, from 25 cents, to	25 00

Statuettes, Holy Water Founts, &c., &c., in great varieties. Country Booksellers and travelling dealers, would do well when they come to New-York, to examine this stock before purchasing elsewhere.

8mos P. O'SHEA, 739 Broadway, New-York.

SAMUEL YATES,

GENERAL NEWS AGENT,

Foreign and Domestic Newspapers supplied to the Trade.

No. 22 Beekman Street.

Special Notices.

DRILL ROOM GUIDE.

NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

OMPANY B, (Fitzgerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MAGUIRE, Capt. ompany D, (Guyon Cadets) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle ms." THOS. MURPHY, Capt.
ompany I, (Jackson Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle ms." W. O. MURPHY, Capt.
ompany H, (Mechanics Guard) drill Thursday Evening at "Military l." R. CADDINGTON, Capt.
ompany —, (Irish Grenadiers) drill each Thursday Evening at 22 White et. FELIX DUFFY, Capt.

TENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

ompany —, (Emmet Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Brookes' oms." JOHN KENNEDY, Capt.

ELEVENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

ompany E, (Montgomery Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at agle Rooms." THOS. S. MURPHY, Capt.

SIXTY NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Irish Rifles) drill each Tuesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES QUINLAN, Capt.
Company K, (Brian Boroihme Guard) drill each Monday Evening at agle Rooms." JAMES HUSTON, Capt.
Company —, (Fag a Bealac Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at agle Rooms." GILBERT RIORDAN, Capt.
Company —, (Mechanic's Guard) drill each second Thursday Evening at Eagle Rooms." Lieut. WM. MALONE, Com'dt.
Company —, (Emmet Life Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle oms." T. LYNCH, Capt.

70th REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company D, (Napper Tandy Light Artillery) drill each Thursday Evening at Brooklyn City Armory. WM. H. HOGAN, Capt.

SEVENTY FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company A, (State Rifles) drill each Wednesday Evening at cor. of 11th reet and 1st Avenue. Lieut. JAS. KELLY, Com'dt.
Company B, (Irish National Guard) drill each Friday Evening at "Centre arket Rooms." JOHN LANE, Capt.
Company C, (Young Ireland Rifles) drill each Friday Evening at "Eagle oms." JOHN BURKE, Capt.
Company D, (—— ——) drill each —— at ——. —— NUGENT, Capt.
Company E, (T. F. Meagher Rifles) drill each —— at cor. of 11th street d 1st Avenue. J. B. DONNELLY, Capt.
Company F, (Mich'l. Doheny Rifles) drill each —— at ——. J. F. MAGUIRE, Capt.
Company G. (Emmet Rifles) drill each —— at ——. JOHN BEGG, Capt.

INDEPENDENT COMPANIES.

Company —, (Edward Fitzgerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at Eagle Rooms." MICH'L. FLOOD NAGLE, Capt.
Company —, (O'Mahony Guard, E. M. A.,) drill each Tuesday Evening at North America Rooms," cor. of Bayard and Bowery. JAMES HUSTON, Capt.

N. B.—Commandants of Irish-American Military Companies throughout United States, are respectfully tendered a place in the above "Directory," d requested to send such information as will enable us to represent them t.

A CIRCULAR.

TO those engaged in Mercantile pursuits, any invention that will facilitate ir labors is highly worthy of notice as well as extensive patronage. One the most important inventions of the present age is that of a pen which ossesses the necessary qualities of fineness in mark and durability in use. ose of John Foley, manufacturer Gold Pens and Pencils, 167 Broadway, w-York, stand pre-eminent. Their superior value is tested by the long time has been engaged in our city in their manufacture.

We, the subscribers who know the value of these pens, from long use o m, cheerfully recommend them to those who wish for the most convenient icle in the counting room. Signed by the following and many other parties.

eo. S. Coe, Vice-President American Exchange Bank.
. Murray, Assistant Cashier do. do. do.
. Seymour, Cashier Bank of North America.
. A. Platt, Cashier Corn Exchange Bank.
. T. Hoogland, Cashier National Bank.
. T. Hooker, President Continental Bank.
ames McCall, President Metropolitan Bank.
. Meigs, Jr., Cashier do do.
. C. Beach, Cashier Marine Bank.
. R. Conover, Cashier Importers' and Traders' Bank.
. H. Lowery, Cashier Bank of the Republic.
. B. Meeker, Assistant Cashier Bank of New-York.
. D. Meiggs, Teller Bank of America.
harles Windsor, Teller Mereantile Bank.
. Randall, do. do. do.
. M. Crane, Teller Shoe and Leather Bank.
. E. Southwick, President Atlantic Bank.
eorge D. Arthur, Cashier do. do.
. S. Henderson, Cashier Brooklyn Bank.
onstant W. Brown, Merchants' Bank.
oseph W. Corlies, President St. Nicholas Bank.
eorge Ellis, Cashier Bank of the Commonwealth.
. A. Tooker, Cashier Nassau Bank.
amuel B. White, Cashier Grocers' Bank.
dwin Ludlow, Cashier Ohio Life Insurance and Trust Co.
. W. Cheeseman, Teller Market Bank.
amuel H. Kissam, Teller Bank of Commerce.
illiam F. Brown, do. do. do.
. K. Raymond, Teller Mechanics' Bank.
eorge D. Lyman, Manager New-York Clearing House.
harles Dennis, Vice-President Atlantic Mutual Insurance Co.
A. B. Neilson, President Sun Mutual Insurance Co.
ilwood Walter, President Mercantile Mutual Insurance Co.
. Russell Hinckley, President Atlas Mutual Insurance Co.
Daniel Drake Smith, President Commercial Mutual Insurance Co.
John P. Paulison, Vice-President Astor Mutual Insurance Co.
J. F. Cox, Vice-President Great Western Insurance Co.
William Le Coney, Vice-President Pacific Mutual Insurance Co.
William K. Ackerman, Secretary Illinois Central Railroad Co.
Wm. Bement, Treasurer New-York and New-Haven Railroad Co.
E. B. Litchfield, Treasurer Cleveland and Toledo Railroad Co.
R. B. Turner, Register do. do. do.
J. M. Hopkins, Sec'y. Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana R. R. Co.
G. H. Ford, Dep. Treas. do. do. do.
J. F. Davenport, Treasurer Hudson River Railroad Co.
Edward Thompson, Agent Long Island Railroad Co.
James Rowe, Cashier New-York Herald.
A. Gordon, Bookkeeper New-York Herald.
Henry L. Meech, Cashier Daily Times.
Richard B. Connelly, County Clerk.
T. M. Wigham, of Jacob Little & Co.
J. H. Stebbins, of N. R. Cobb & Co.
of Wells, Fargo & Co.

nter & Co. — E. W. Tiers & Co.
, Dodge & Co. — Brown & De Rossett.
Vermilye. — Coolidge & Young.
reenleaf. — Shepard & Nelson.
n & Co. — Spies, Christ & Jay. ins & Co. — H. M. Schieffelin & Fowler.
medieu. — Fairchild & Fanshawe.
. — Beale, Melick & De Witt.
s & Co. — Carhart, Bacon, Clark & Co.
& Co. — Brewer & Caldwell.
dford. — American Express Co.
& Co. — Hall, Dana & Co.
Robert. — Gage, Sloans & Dater.
llace & Morris. — Afwater, Knapp & Woodruff. rfield & Co. — Richards & McHarg.
den & Co. — Johnson & Higgins.
r, Ide & Co. — James & Henry McBride.
. Babcock. — Moody and Telfair.
rt & Co. — L. Roberts & Co.
on. — Waldo, Barey & Co.
vingston. — Jewell, Harrison & Co.

ary in size and price, viz., $1, $1 25, $2, $3 and $4 each, with extension cases, new style pencil, &c., attached are $2, $2 50, $4 each. The undersigned is manufacturer of the celebrated bank pen," price $3 and $4 for the large size, including holder. manufacture are made of fine gold, finished in the best man- rranted not to come off, and guaranteed to give perfect satis- action; if not, will exchange them or return the money. Any of the above pens will be sent by mail on receipt of the price. Pens and cases made to for trade, on the most advantageous terms.

JOHN FOLEY, Gold Pen Manufacturer,
167 Broadway, New-York.

Shipping.

C. H. MARSHALL & CO.,

Old Black Ball Line of Liverpool Packets.

CERTIFICATES

Furnished for Passage to and from Liverpool, on the 1st and 16th of every Month, by the following splendid ships:

James Foster, Jr.	Capt. J. W. Porter.
Neptune	" E. W. Peabody.
Harvest Queen	" E. Young.
Isaac Webb	" J. M. Bayer.
Great Western	" W. G. Furrier.
Manhattan	" T. Dixon.
Isaac Wright	" E. Abeel.
Columbia	" C. Hutchinson.
Fidelia	" W. A. Macgill.
Yorkshire	" C. A. Marshall.

REMITTANCES.

Drafts, for £1 and upwards, on the Royal Bank of Ireland, and on Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., Bankers, Liverpool and London, payable on sight.

C. H. MARSHALL & CO.,
88 Burling Slip, N. Y.

Agents in Liverpool, Baring Brothers & Co.,

OLD LINE PACKETS,

Pier 23 East River, foot of Beekman street. 6m

WILLIAMS & GUYON'S

Old Black Star Line of Packets. 1856.

Passage from any part of Great Britain and Ireland, secured at the lowest possible rates by this old-established line, sailing from Liverpool to New-York every five days, comprising the following magnificent Ships:

Ships.	Captains.	Tonage.
AUSTRALIA,	Smith,	2,000
BRIDGEWATER (new),	Barstow,	2,000
CULTIVATOR (new),	Austin,	2,000
CYNOSURE,	Bray,	2,000
CORNELIA LAWRENCE (new),	Knapp,	2,000
DE WITT CLINTON,	Funk,	1,800
ENTERPRISE,	Davis,	1,200
GUY MANNERING,	Dollard,	2,000
JACOB A. WESTERVELT,	Hoodless,	2,000
IRENE,	Williams,	1,400
JOHN BRIGHT (new),	Cutting,	2,000
MARMION,	Hanley,	1,200
NORTH AMERICAN,	Clark,	1,800
OSWEGO,	Stevens,	1,400
ROBERT KELLY,	Barstow,	1,500
SILAS WRIGHT (new),	Freeman,	2,000
SOUTHAMPTON,	Furlong,	1,600
THORNTON (new),	Collins,	2,000
TICONDEROGA,	Boyle,	1,400
UNIVERSE,	Cave,	2,000
VANGUARD,	Norton,	1,800

The ships of this line are the largest and swiftest in the trade, their accommodations for passengers are unequalled, and the frequency and punctuality of their departure offer advantages to the emigrant not to be had by any Line of Packets. Such passengers as decline coming out, the money paid for them will be promptly refunded without discount.

Provisions of best quality are provided for passengers; rations, consisting of Bread, Flour, Rice, Oatmeal, Tea, Sugar, Molasses, Salt, &c.

The increased patronage received by the proprietors of the Old Black Star Line has induced them to add to the Line several New Ships, which have taken their place this season; no expense has been spared to render the facilities for Emigration equal to the times, and add to the renown of these celebrated Packets.

The regular Sailing days are 1st, 8th, 11th, 13th, 21st, and 26th of each month; this will give passengers opportunity for embarking more frequent than by any other established Line, to which the attention of the public is respectfully called.

No Certificate of Passage will be issued for children under 12 years of age unless accompanied by an adult, who must be paid for on same certificate; for persons over 60 years of age, or with any impediment, without a Permit from Commissioners of Emigration.

REMITTANCES.

Persons wanting to send money to their friends can obtain drafts for any amount, which will be cashed at sight at the following Banks:

Ireland—National Bank of Ireland; Royal Bank of Ireland; Ulster Banking Co., and their Branches.

Scotland—National Bank of Scotland and Branches.

England—Messrs. GLYNN, MILLS & Co, Bankers, London; GUION & Co., Merchants, Liverpool.

For further particulars apply, if by letter post-paid, to

WILLIAMS & GUYON,
40 Fulton street, New-York.

GUYON & CO.,
115 Waterloo Road, Liverpool.

AGENTS—JOHN WHITNEY, Providence, R. I.
EDWARD RYAN, 2 Albany street, Boston.
THOMAS RATTIGAN, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Emigration.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,

Office, corner of South and Beach Streets, Boston.

THE office of this Society is open from 7 A. M., to 6 P. M., where Emigrants can apply to obtain situations for which they are fitted. Farmers, Mechanics, and others in want of labor, will apply at the office.

Orders from employers in the country, stating the services required, the wages given, and the cheapest mode of conveyance, and giving respectable reference, will meet with prompt attention.

The Society will be thankful for all circumstantial and early information of any fraud, imposition or outrage committed on emigrants, and will endeavor speedily to apply a remedy.

MARTIN GRIFFIN, } Vice Presidents.
ARTHUR M'AVOY, }

NICHOLAS J. BEAN, Cor. Secretary.
JAMES FERGUSON, Rec. Secretary.
WILLIAM HICKEY, Treasurer.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

John Hughes,	P. Holly,
William Keating,	Christopher Plunkett,
Daniel O'Rourke,	Jeremiah Ford,
Thomas Hughes,	Hugh Duffy,
Owen Lappan,	M. Lennon, Charlestown,
J. Ryder,	James O'Brien, do.,

Patrick C. Boyle, Roxbury.

MICHAEL HUGHES, Agent.

EMIGRANT INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS BANK.

No. 51 CHAMBERS STREET.

THIS Institution has been established for the purpose of affording to Emigrants and others, a safe place of deposit for their funds, to protect them from robbery and fraud.

It is conducted with the strictest economy—neither the Officers and Trustees, receive any compensation for their services. The entire profits belong to the Depositors, and will be divided amongst them, having due regard to the safety of the funds.

The last dividend was six per cent. upon all sums of $500 and under, and and will be continued or increased as the profits may justify.

Bank open to receive Deposits, daily, from 10 A. M., to 2, and from 5 to 7 P. M.

TRUSTEES.

William Watson,	John P. Nesmith,
John Nicholson,	John Milhau,
Andrew Carrigan,	Edward W. Tiers,
James Kelly,	Charles M. Connelly,
James Kerrigan,	Cornelius H. Sheehan,
Hugh Kelly,	Edward Bayer,
Charles O'Conner,	Daniel Devlin.
James Olwell,

JOSEPH STUART, President.
FELIX INGOLDSBY, 1st Vice-President.
JOHN MCMENOMY, 2d Vice-President.
TERENCE DONNELLY, Treasurer.
LOUIS B. BINSSE, Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Accountant.

JOHN MANNING, Comptroller. 4t

Emigration.

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,
Office, 51 Chambers street.

NOTICE.—The recent failures, by which a large amount of Bills remitted from this country to friends in Ireland, has been returned unpaid, afford to this Society the opportunity, and at the same time impose upon it the duty of informing the public, that such losses would have been prevented if the parties purchasing Bills had availed themselves of the advantages offered by the Society.

For the purpose of entire protection a fund is constantly kept on deposit in the Bank of Ireland, against which this Society issues its drafts, payable at sight (from sums of £1 sterling and upwards), on the Bank and all its branches, and has thereby for the last Ten Years afforded a mode of remittance perfectly safe and unquestionable.

New-York, December 29, 1851.

ANDREW CARRIGAN, President.

JOHN MANNING,
ROBERT J. DILLON, } Vice-Presidents.
HUGH KELLY,

EDWARD C. DONNELLY, Corresponding Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Recording Secretary.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Felix Ingoldsby,	John Nicholson,	William Redmond.
William Watson,	Hugh Kelly,	James Olwell,
John Manning,	Cornel Sheehan,	Daniel Devlin,
Terence Donnelly,	Romaine Dillon,	John McMenomy.

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND, &c.

GEORGE McBRIDE, Jr., No. 14 Broadway, continues to transmit money, in sums large or small, to persons residing in any part of Ireland, in the same manner as he and his predecessor in business have done for the last thirty years, and more; also to any part of England or Scotland.

Money remitted by letter, post paid, to the subscriber, or personally deposited with him, with the name of the person or persons in Ireland, England or Scotland, to whom it is to be sent, and nearest post town, will be immediately transmitted and paid accordingly, and a receipt to that effect given or forwarded to the sender.

3mo GEORGE McBRIDE, Jr., N. N.

NATURALIZATION—IMPORTANT NOTICE.

THE subscriber respectfully informs the Foreign Population of New-England that he still attends to the business of preparing first and second papers for those who wish to become citizens of the United States, on very moderate terms, at his old stand, 129 Federal street, Boston.

N.B. First papers every day; last papers every Friday.

THOMAS ROWEAN, Justice of the Peace,
and the Oldest Naturalization Agent in New England.

Business Directory.

PROSPECTUS.

THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC REVIEW is now firmly established in Washington City. Every great question before the present Congress will be elaborately discussed in its columns.

Such subscribers to the "Western Democratic Review," as have overpaid, will be furnished with the "National Democratic Review," which, it is believed, will prove a work of vastly superior merit.

A considerable portion of each number of the REVIEW will be devoted to Literary and Scientific subjects. Several, among the most accomplished scholars and distinguished politicians in the country, will be regular contributors to its columns.

In answer to numerous inquiries of old and new friends, we deem it proper to say, THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC REVIEW will be printed and published at Washington City; is totally unconnected with any political Magazine in the country; is devoted, not to the support of any politician, but to the interests of the National Democracy—that democracy which will ever "carry the flag and keep step to the music of the Union."

The REVIEW is published in pamphlet form, upon beautiful white paper, in solid long primer, 96 pages per month—making two volumes per year, of 576 pages each.

TERMS.—$3 per year, payable invariably in advance.

INDUCEMENTS TO CLUBS.—Five copies for one year—$10; twelve copies for one year—$20. Booksellers ordering the work, will be furnished at the usual magazine rates.

Members of Congress, and postmasters in every part of the Union, are hereby authorized to receive and receipt for subscriptions to the REVIEW.

All moneys may be transmitted by mail at the risk of the editor.

Copies of the REVIEW will be found for sale at the Bookstore of Franck Taylor, 402 Pennsylvania Avenue, and at the office of publication 468 10th street, between D and E.

All communications to be addressed to

GEO. P. BUELL,
Editor National Democratic Review.

THE BEE HIVE.

No. 73 GRAND STREET, WILLIAMSBURGH.

Within this hive we're all alive,
Good liquor makes us funny;
If you be dry, step in and try,
The flavor of our honey.

tf. Connell & Hale, Proprietors.

IMPROVED BILLIARD TABLES AND CUSHIONS.

MICHAEL PHELAN'S

MODEL TABLES AND COMBINATED CUSHIONS,

(Patented February 19, 1856,)

CORRECT in principle and perfect in action—so constructed as to insure mathematical correctness of angles when played upon, and warranted to possess the requisite elasticity in all seasons, having been tested by the best players in this country, and by them pronounced the most perfect of any hitherto constructed—are offered to the public as cheap as the ordinary tables of the day. Orders promptly attended to for fitting up private or public Billiard Rooms; new Cushions put on old Tables, &c.

Saloon and Salesroom No. 39 Chambers street, up stairs.

WRITING AND BOOK-KEEPING.

FOSTER, DIXON & CO., give Lessons in Writing, Arithmetic, and Book-keeping, at 346 Broadway, where gentlemen are qualified for Mercantile situations, in an expeditious and superior manner.

The "New-York School of Writing and Accounts," is admitted to be the best organized institution of the kind in the United States. The course of instruction is practical, thorough and complete; the terms moderate; the hours of attendance 9 A. M. to 9 P. M., at the student's convenience; and every facility is afforded for the attainment of elegance in PENMANSHIP, expertness in ARITHMETIC, and skill in Book-keeping. 4t*

From the Dublin Tablet.

"Having experienced the benefits which Mr. Foster has bestowed upon the rising generation by his 'Pencilled Copy Books,' we were prepared to expect in his 'Double Entry Elucidated' a just theory, clearly and forcibly expressed. We are glad to see that the press has done the work justice—that Hood found it 'philosophical;' Friend of India 'scientific;' the Economist considers it the 'perfection of principle;' the Express recommends it for its 'simplicity;' and the London Times speaks of it as 'an excellent manual of business.' In all this we have only to add our full agreement. It removes a reproach which has hitherto fallen heavily upon our commercial education. It teaches a science."

KEATING'S IRELAND.

A NEW TRANSLATION OF THE

FORAS FEASA AR ERINN;

OR, GENERAL HISTORY OF IRELAND,

From a Manuscript Copy of the Original Irish of the Rev. and Learned

GEOFFREY KEATING.

With Notes, Historical, Topographical, and Explanatory,

By JOHN O'MAHONY, Esq.

The work is now in course of preparation, and will be speedily published, in one large octave volume of about 600 pages, with plates. Price to Subscribers, $2,00.

The book will be got up in superior style, and furnished to the address of Subscribers giving their names to a duly-authorized canvasser, or to

P. M. HAVERTY, Publisher,
tf 110 Fulton street, N. Y.

European News.

The Collins' Steamship, Atlantic, Capt. Oliver Eldridge, arrived at this port at 10½ o'clock, Wednesday (April 2d) morning. Liverpool dates to 19th ult.

The chief news was the birth of the King of Algeria, and the general impression that the Conferences at Paris would speedily be brought to a satisfactory close. It was stated, that Count Orloff had telegraphed to St. Petersburgh, that the "fifth point" had been definitely settled; and the official announcement of Peace was looked to with relieved anxiety. Prussia has been invited to join, and has sent her Minister of Foreign Affairs, Baron Manteuffel, who with Count Hatzfeldt, the Prussian Ambassador at Paris, will be her representative. The fact of Prussia being admitted is regarded as conclusive that Peace will shortly be declared. It is stated in a despatch from Kiel, that despatches from the English government have been received by Commodore Watson, instructing him not to commence hostilities in the Baltic. The great European War is at an end.

Nothing "particular" had transpired regarding American affairs. The Standard (London), of the 17th ult., says:

"Mr. James Buchanan had an audience, and delivered to her Majesty his letter of recall, as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary from the United States of America. His Excellency was introduced by Viscount Palmerston, G. C. B., First Lord of the Treasury (officiating for the Earl of Clarendon, Secretary for Foreign Affairs), and conducted by Major-General the Hon. Sir Edward Cust, K. C. H., her Majesty's Master of the Ceremonies."

The new Ambassador, Mr. Dallas, accompanied by his wife, two daughters and suite, arrived in Liverpool on Thursday, 13th. His movements are duly chronicled by the Liverpool journals. Immediately after landing Mr. Dallas proceeded to the Adelphi Hotel, where apartments had been previously engaged for him by Mr. Nathaniel Hawthorne, American Consul at that port. On Friday, a deputation from the American Chamber of Commerce, accompanied by their President, Mr. Siller, waited upon Mr. Dallas at the Adelphi Hotel, in order to welcome him on his arrival in this country. In replying to their felicitations, his Excellency expressed his belief that the causes of difference between the two countries were capable of an amicable solution, and trusted that peace would be preserved, not only for the sake of humanity, but also for the interests of Commerce. Mr. Dallas, accompanied by his son, paid a visit to St. George's Hall, and was shown over the building by Mr. Alderman Parker, and a gentleman of the local press present at the time. "His Excellency expressed himself much pleased with both St. George's Hall and the new Concert Hall, and on his desiring to hear the grand organ, it was arranged that Mr. T. W. Best, the organist of the Hall, should perform on it at four o'clock. At the time appointed, the Ambassador, accompanied by his wife, daughters and son, again visited the hall, when the varied powers and qualities of the organ were displayed most advantageously and effectively by Mr. Best, to the evident satisfaction of the distinguished visitors. The pieces played by Mr. Best included the "Chorale," the Bacchanalian Chorus," and the air, "Nobles Seigneurs," from Les Huguenots, Molique's song, "When the moon is brightly shining," and a "Storm Fantasia," composed by himself.

Mr. Dallas departed for London the following morning.

Nothing has been heard of the Pacific. A letter was received on Saturday, 15th ult., from Messrs. Brown and Shipley, the agents at Liverpool, the particulars of which were immediately communicated to the underwriters' rooms, at Lloyds. It says:—

"We have to state that we do not consider the case of the Pacific hopeless, nor shall we give her up until we have had a fortnight's westerly winds. In case she broke down, it is quite impossible she could have made, under sail, any port in time to hear of her at last dates from America. The winds have been against her for some time, and the latest dates of sailing ships from New-York are February 2, and from Newfoundland, February 8. It is quite clear, unless a steamer had fallen in with her, that we could not by any possibility have heard of her yet."

The Charivari, which is really "about the best political journal now in Paris," observes, that the very same newspapers which throughout the war have been doing their utmost to promote Russian interests, are now trying to foment the differences between England and America, in the hope that a serious quarrel may come out of them. Till lately, no expressions in the vocabulary of vituperation were too strong for these journals, when speaking of the citizens of the United States. They were in the habit of calling them infamous know-nothings, ferocious demagogues, sordid shop-keepers, greedy higglers, and so forth. But now that they fancy there is a prospect of a war between the two great nations whose greatness is indissolubly associated with the practice of free institutions, these journals neglect nothing to insure the coming of a spectacle which would be so delightful in their eyes, as that of the peoples of Great Britain and the United States setting to cut one another's throats. Therefore it is, says the Charivari, that the Russian journals at Paris, which are always so astute, have every interest at this moment to represent the Americans as harmless sheep, and would fain devour, like wolves, and tigers, and crocodiles, as they are.

The Cotton market was dull and rather easier, especially for the lower qualities, but the quotations were not changed. The business of the three days amounted to 19,000 bales, including 3,500 on speculation, and 2,500 to exporters. Money was in steady demand at former rates. The Manchester market was quiet but firm.

FRANCE.

The Empress of the French gave birth to a prince shortly after 3 o'clock on the morning of the 16th ult. The bulletins published state that the health of her Majesty was satisfactory, and the infant was quoted as "plump and promising." The Prince was christened on Sunday. His Majesty presented the Prince to the Bishop, his First Almoner, clothed in white robes, with Mitre and Cross. The Bishop was assisted by the Curate of St. Germaine l'Auxerres, who took the vase of gold containing the baptismal water, and poured it upon the head of the Infant Prince, pronouncing the usual benediction, amidst the most devout attention on the part of the persons assembled. A Te Deum burst forth, which was taken up by the choristers of the Imperial chapel, accompanied by the organ and harp. While the Te Deum was being chanted the Bishop of Nancy remained standing at the foot of the altar. The Baptismal Register was then taken from under the table, placed in the middle of the chancel, and the Curate of St. Germaine l'Auxerres took the two registers in which were inscribed the act of baptism of Napoleon Eugenie Louis Jean Joseph, son of France. His Imperial Majesty then received it from the hands of the Curate, and signed his name in the two registers.

Immediately after his Majesty's name came his Highness Prince Murat, his Excellency Duke Alva, his Excellency Marshal Vaillant, Ex-Minister of War, his Excellency Monsieur Noplong, President of the Senate, and his Excellency Count de Morny, and the Legislative Corps.

The London correspondent of the Herald gives the following retrospective summary:—"In former days the imperial astrologer would have drawn the horoscope, consulted the stars, and predicted the future fame and glory of this young scion of the house of Napoleon. All that sensible men can say is, that this boy has a good chance, if he lives, and at all events as much chance and as much right to the throne as the other candidates. It is a curious fact that for the last 200 years, no son has succeeded his father on the throne of France. From the accession of Louis XIV. to the present time, not a single King or Governor of France, though none, with the exception of Louis XVIII., have been childless, has been succeeded at his demise by his son. Louis XIV. survived his son, his grandson, and several of his great grandchildren, and was succeeded at last by one of the younger children of his grandson, the Duke of Burgundy. Louis XV. survived his son, and was succeeded by his grandson, Louis XVI. Louis XVI. left a son behind him, but that son perished in the filthy dungeon to which the cruelties of the terrorists had confined him. The King of Rome, to whom Napoleon fondly hoped to bequeath the boundless empire he had won, died a Colonel in the Austrian service. Louis XVIII. was, as we have said, childless. The Duke de Berri fell by the hand of an assassin in the lifetme of Charles X.; and his son, the Duke of Bordeaux, is in exile from the land which his ancestors regarded as their own estate. The eldest son of Louis Philippe perished by an untimely accident, and his grandson and heir does not sit upon the throne of his grandfather.

The life of a man is in itself a lottery, but when the chances of reigning depend upon the sovereign will of so fickle a people as the French, all that can be said is, that this new born imperial colt is the favorite for the imperial Derby.

On the 20th of March, 1811, there were similar rejoicings at Paris. One hundred and one guns on that day also announced to Paris that an heir had been born to Napoleon, and that child was called the King of Rome.

Since that day France has had again the legitimist dynasty, the heir of which is an exile, called the Duke of Bordeaux, by some Henry V.; the King of Rome is in his grave; the Orleanist dynasty, so firmly seated, to all appearance, on the throne of France, by the modern Ulysses—the crafty Louis Philippe—was blown away like chaff, in one day, and the Orleanist heir, the young Count of Paris, is an exile. The present Emperor, long a prisoner and an exile, has seated himself also, to all appearances, firmly on the French throne, after shooting down the sovereign people, and gagging the republic. But the life of man is but a span long, and should he die suddenly, who can say what would happen.

The Peace Conference.

The London Post, Lord Palmerston's organ, of March 15th, says: We are justified in supposing that the Conference has now succeeded in its mission, and has arranged the final terms of peace. The proof of this is that Prussia has at length been formally invited to the Conference, "not to negotiate a treaty, but to accept the result of the negotiations between the Powers which are interested in the matter." Prussia having assumed a strictly neutral position, it was impossible to allow her any part in the settlement of matters in which she refused to take an active interest; but an arrangement having now been brought about between the parties concerned, Prussia is admitted to sign that arrangement as a witness. Moreover, as one of the objects of the Conference is the revision of the treaties of 1840 and 1841, it has been thought expedient, just, and due to Prussia, to invite her to participate in the revision of acts to which she was a party. With the terms of the treaty which is about to be signed we shall soon be acquainted.

On the 18th, the same journal thus indulges in a "palaver" on Christian brotherhood and the subjugation of the human heart. The difficulties of War being overcome, Lord Palmerston issues his programme of Peace: "We have every confidence that we shall complete such a peace. We know, and all the nations of the world—those against whom we have been arrayed in battle, no less than those who have been mere spectators of the struggle—know that the allies have conquered the right to such a peace. And when it is concluded, there will be rejoicing among the victors no less than among the vanquished; for, although we have not quite arrived at that perfect state of fraternity which was prophesied as the immediate result of the Great Exhibition of 1851, yet true Christianity has so far made its way towards subduing the human heart, that we look at war in a very different light from that in which it was once upon a time regarded by the chivalry of France and England, and we embark in it with very different feelings and very much higher views. But at the same time we deem it our duty to warn the public not to form extravagant expectations of the effects which can immediately follow on a cessation of a state of war, nor to imagine that the task of England and France will have been completed when they obtain from Russia the ratification of the terms of peace which they have proposed. On the contrary, the state of things which peace will establish will impose upon us fresh labors, and an additional task more arduous, and requiring more care, attention, and sagacity than all the enterprises of war. The government of Lord Palmerston has conducted, in conjunction with our great ally, the Emperor of the French, a gigantic contest to an issue at once glorious to the two allied nations, and beneficial to the interests of humanity; and the conclusion of peace will put the finishing stroke to one portion of their task. But the greater and more important portion yet remains to be effected, and the first years of peace must be years of anxious care and watchfulness.

It will little avail to the future of Europe, and of the world beyond Europe, that by war we have stayed the onward march of the semi-barbarism of the races we have conquered, to erect a barrier against future aggression, of such a nature that every additional year of peace will add to its strength instead of spreading decay through its constitution. We must, in a word, establish a social and political organization in those rich districts which the feebleness and corruption of Turkey tempted the Russian to grasp at, so that she may eventuallydevelop herself into a Power capable of holding her position without foreign protectorates during peace, or the intervention of foreign fleets and armies during war, and able to vindicate that "independence and integrity" which we are so anxious to consolidate. The picture presented to us, in the papers lately published relating to the military affairs of Asiatic Turkey, of the utter disorganization of every civil, no less than of every military department of that hitherto most miserably constituted empire, must suffice to convince everybody, who has read those papers with ordinary care how absolutely impossible it is that Turkey should go on for any length of time as she is; while the evidence which is exhibited in every letter from our own authorities both at Constantinople and in Asia, of the corruption, the drunkenness, the ignorance, the dishonesty, and the cowardice which pervade the administration of Turkey throughout all grades—from ministers and commanders of armies down to collectors of revenue and drummers' boys—must satisfy all, that the Sultan of Turkey, were he ten times the man we take him to be, can never by himself clean out such an Augean stable, or, unaided, remove the incubus that prevents the development of the magnificent country which he in vain attempts to govern. Nor is this all that remains for the allies to accomplish. We have yet, be it remembered, to raise the principalities from the prostrate condition into which they have fallen, and to place them in such a position as shall secure them equally from being grasped by the aggression of Russia, upon the one side, or Germanized by the less ostensible though equally real advance of Austria on the other. These are great enterprises; and if we add to these the care, for some time to come, of the eastern shores of the Black Sea, the aggregate will constitute an undertaking which it will require all the sagacity, all the forbearance, and all the firmness, which the Emperor of the French and the government of Lord Palmerston have already exhibited, to conduct to a successful issue.

RUSSIA.

Russian Trade through Prussia.—Whatever proportion of the increase of the Zollverein revenues is due to the increased traffic at Memel and Pillau, or over the dry frontier at Tilsit, the whole increase, whatever it is, goes into the general treasury of the Zollverein, and Prussia derives only the same advantage from it as every other member of the Zollverein, by a fractional increase per head of the population, which constitutes the principle on which the revenues of the Zollverein are divided among its members. What the amount of advantage is that the Zollverein has obtained from Prussia's intervention between the commercial interests of the belligerent powers is to be measured by the fact of the eastern provinces showing an increase in transit dues amounting to 179,586 thalers; which, supposing that previous to the war they had no receipts at all from transit dues, would amount to an increase of revenue of £26,938 to be distributed throughout all the states of the Zollverein. The export duties in the eastern provinces, on the other hand, which are the measure of the real Prussian trade with Russia, show a diminution of 16,925 thalers out of 26,958, the whole amount of the diminished revenue from export dues.

Russian Intrigue.—A Paris letter says, "Russia calculates on the gradual loosening of the bonds which unite England and France, if she cannot cut the knot herself. She believes that two countries with a form of government so opposed, and with institutions so different, however they may unite for common safety in days of difficulty and peril, must be dissevered when the danger is gone by, and that there are a hundred chances, any one of which may be advantageously made use of for that end. Were the small extremity of the wedge to be inserted, Russia would answer for the speedy introduction of the whole. Indeed, Russia anticipates no small amount of confusion and quarreling after the peace. How is it possible, she asks, for the Emperor Napoleon to remain quiet? He is an absolute Sovereign, and the liberty he has put down in France he will not tolerate elsewhere. He cannot do so if he would; and Piedmont, Spain, and perhaps Belgium will soon have to look to themselves and their institutions. This reasoning is more specious than real. If Louis Napoleon Bonaparte be an absolute monarch, he is not absolute in the same sense as the Emperor of Russia or the Emperor of Austria; and if he has forced Russian Plenipotentiaries to come to Paris and sue for peace, he has done so by his union with England and Piedmont, two liberal countries; and supported by the sympathy, if not by the contingents, of Spain and Portugal. The scattered elements of real liberalism in Europe have aided, morally or materially, in the glorious cause of resistance to barbarous aggression."

Advices from Odessa of February 29th, say:—"A terrible complaint—the typhus—prevails in our city, and it is particularly violent among the troops. Above twenty thousand are now in the hospitals, and thousands have already died. Despite the greatest exertions, it is extremely difficult to find accommodation for so many patients. Hospitals have been established in the very midst of that part of the city which is inhabited by the better classes, and thousands of patients occupy them, but physicians and proper nurses are wanting. In one week twelve military physicians and four medical men in private practice died. Among them were two Americans, who were about to return home. The typhus had committed terrible ravages in the whole of Southern Russia, and particularly in those places which are near the theatre of war. Bakshiserai, Simpheropol, Kherson and Nicholaieff are almost empty. It is estimated that this pestilence has already carried off one hundred thousand men. It is gradually spreading over Bessarabia."

That most liberal millionaire, the Staatsrath Jakowleff, the proprietor of the Werch Isetz Mining and Smelting Works, who, on a former occasion, supplied one million silver roubles to make up for the defalcations and peculations committed in the funds of the Invaliden, has just signalized himself again by a patriotic gift of four million pounds of gun metal for the purposes of the army and fleet.

DENMARK.

A telegraphic despatch from Copenhagen announces that the Danish Minister, M. Scheele, had officially announced the prolongation of the treaty relative to the Sound Dues with the United States, for two months. The treaty would have expired on the 14th of April next. The proposition came from Washington.

By the Asia.

The arrival of the Asia, (Cunard Line,) Capt. Lott, on the 4th inst., brings intelligence up to the 22d ult. It was generally believed that the treaty of peace would be signed on Saturday, the 22d, or Monday, the 24th of March. In the event of delay occurring, the armistice would be extended to the 30th of April.

The London journals are already—before the terms of peace are known—beginning to grumble. The Times prepares the public for concessions; the other papers hint that England has been sold. A few more days and the text of the treaty will be before us. Till then, aspettiamo.

4269

Mr. Buchanan has introduced his successor, Mr. Dallas, to the diplomatic corps, and on Monday, the 17th ult., transferred to him the charge of the embassy. Mr. Buchanan will probably return home by the steamer leaving Liverpool on the 16th or 19th of April.

Additional forgeries by Sadlier have been discovered—among others, twenty-five thousand pounds on Mr. Dargan.

In France, the Empress of France and her child continue well. The papers are full of gratulatory addresses respecting the infant Bonaparte.

The Paris correspondent of the N. Y. Daily Times, says:—"The Imperial infant lies in State to receive visitors in a room entirely lined with wadded and quilted white satin, trimmed in blue and silver. The Prince receives in the cradle presented by the city of Paris. It has a very large head, which bears in its upper part the suspicion of Dutch origin which characterizes its father. It was a question at one period of her Majesty's accouchement, which was very laborious, of administering chloroform, but the forceps were used instead. Apropos of this circumstance, a government journal puts on record the overpowering fact that his Majesty was profondement emu—profoundly moved; which, it is safe to say, was the first time in his life that His Majesty was profoundly moved at the sufferings of another, except in the columns of the Moniteur. But I believe this was true, and therefore give him the benefit of the quotation. On the day of the reception of deputations, a committee of fish-women were admitted and conducted by the Emperor himself to the cradle of the young Prince—an honor which His Majesty does not even concede to the Legislative bodies. But the market women of Paris are tyrants in or out of the palace, and must be conciliated.

The Emperor (says the Paris Moniteur, March 21) has caused a return to be laid before him specifying the numbers and conditions of individuals still kept in Algeria, or abroad, in consequence of political measures. Through the events of June, 1848, 11,000 persons were condemned, under the republic, to be transported to Algeria; through the clemency of the the President, only 306 remain in Africa. In December, 1851, 11,201 individuals had to be transported or banished; the pardons granted by the Emperor have reduced the number of these to 1,058. On the occasion of the birth of the Imperial Prince, his Majesty has decided that leave to return to France should be granted to all those who shall declare that they loyally submit to the government which the nation has given to itself, and who shall engage their honor to respect its laws. This generous appeal was made at the inauguration of the empire; the Emperor has ordered its repitition. There will no longer remain aloof from their native soil any save these who shall obstinately persist in a refusal to recognise the national will and the monarchy it has founded.

In Spain, attempts were being made to form a tercer partido, or third political party. Senors Concha, Cortino and Cantero were at the head of the movement. Lord Howden had made some reclamations on the subject of English holders of Spanish bonds, but the government was indisposed to give any definite reply.

The Brussels Independence, of the 19th ultimo, asserts that Prince Frederick William, son of the heir to the crown of Prussia (now at Coblentz), has solemnly demanded of the King, his uncle, the consent indispensable to the projected alliance with the Princess Royal of England. This consent was granted in the presence of the whole court, and no doubt whatever exists as to the analogous disposition of the Queen of England.

The Armenians and Greeks have protested against the late toleration and reform decree of the Sultan. The Greek petition is especially directed against the articles relating to the clergy.

PEACE.

UNSATISFACTORY RESULT OF THE CONFERENCES.

Paris (March 20), Correspondence of the London Herald.

People are beginning to suspect that too much hurry and anxiety have been exhibited about peace, and there is an uneasy feeling, of the existence of which some proof is presented in the state of the public funds. The congress excited hopes which, it is feared, will soon turn to bitter disappointment, and whatever prestige France may have acquired by the glorious part she has taken in the war will hardly compensate her sensitive people for their sacrifices, if they find themselves made subjects for reproach by oppressed nations who looked to them for protection and support.

Poland will have her reproach to make, and Italy will refuse further confidence, and Hungary will think that if ever her constitution is to be restored it will not be through the aid of the Western Powers. In fact, the peoples of Europe will have to deplore that, when a mighty opportunity was afforded by their very oppressors for the inauguration of a grand and glorious policy, the greatest Powers of the earth, although combined in an irresistible league, wanted the heart to seize the victory which was touching their hands. It is whispered about that England is likely to feel dissatisfied, and that a coolness of relations may not improbably succeed an alliance which promised to be durable. Coolness with England would be felt to be a calamity. A greater evil is not impossible in the shape of an alliance with the Northern Powers. If there be not some serious misgivings in the public mind, how is it that two such mighty events, occurring simultaneously—the birth of an heir affording stability to the dynasty, and peace relieving the country from the burdens of war—should fail in giving elasticity to the funds? This dogged and pertinacious heaviness of the Bourse cannot be satisfactorily accounted for by local circumstances connected with the state of particular securities, but must come from a more general cause. We foresaw from the beginning the evil that would follow from making Paris the seat of the Congress. Such a resolution could have no other effect than to open to Russian emissaries opportunities for intrigues, of which they have amply availed themselves. Count Orloff has proved the most obsequious of flatterers to the Emperor. He has tried by all means to detach France from the alliance with England, and to bid for an understanding between France and Russia upon any conditions the former might dictate.

CONFERENCES ON COMMERCIAL POLICY.

The Paris correspondent of the London Herald says:

"Letters from St. Petersburg announce that after the conclusion of peace, conferences will be held to examine and discuss plans of reform in commercial policy. The journey of the Emperor into Poland is postponed until after his coronation. There are indications of a bad feeling between Russia and Austria."

A Paris correspondent gives a gloomy picture of commercial affairs. A crisis is anticipated on the Corn Exchange. Failures of some importance have occurred in several of the chief provincial towns.

Important from India.

PARTICULARS OF THE ANNEXATION OF OUDE.

From the London Daily News.,

A territory the size of Scotland, and a third more populous, has been transferred from a native to the British Government, without bloodshed or a blow. Oude, the fairest province of Bengal, covers an area of 24,000 square miles, and contains a population of between three and five millions, with a revenue of nearly a million. The Resident, General Outram, having spent some time with Lord Dalhousie, at Calcutta, in January, left on the 25th of that month for Lucknow, to carry out the policy with the execution of which he was intrusted. He reached Cawnpore on the 28th, where a force of 12,000 men had been established, and a bridge of boats constructed to convey them across the river.

On the following day orders were issued for two brigades to proceed to Lucknow. The first, commanded by Colonel Wheeler, consisted of her Majesty's 52d, two batteries with guns, the 1st Light Cavalry, and 18th and 73d Native Infantry. The second, of the 5th Irregular Cavalry, a battery of Artillery, and the 22d and 41st Native Infantry. These having proceeded to the capital, were in readiness to overawe the malcontents, should any present themselves, or to put down disturbance should it threaten to appear. But the king, of his own accord, had on their approach dismantled his guns, disarmed the garrison, and shut up the palace.

General Outram's first interview with the sovereign occurred on the 4th of February, when, accompanied by Captain Hayes and Captain Weston, members of the mission, his Majesty was urged to sign a deed of abdication. This he positively refused, saying that he would appeal to England, and go in person to London. General Outram then issued the proclamation (given below) deposing his Majesty. The general then ordered the minister to bring to the residency all the chief officers of state. About mid-day the following attended: the Minister Ally Nucky Khan; The Revenue Minister, Rajah Bal Kissen; The Custom-House Darogah, Shurff-ood Dowlah; the City Cotwal; and all other officers of the different branches of administration. The Resident ordered the Revenue Minister to give in the whole accounts of amount of revenue and the details of Purgunnahs, which was at once commenced upon. The Cotwal was directed to furnish the list of Thannahs to Captain Weston, which he did. The Resident then placed guards from Captain Magness's regiment over the office of the Revenue Minister and custom-house, directing that all should be allowed to go on as usual, but that no money nor papers were to be taken away. The king has sent a circular to the zemindars and amils, informing them that the Company have taken charge of the kingdom, and directing them to pay all rent to the officer sent by the Resident to collect it, and ordering them to offer no opposition. The king has closed the palace gates, and declared that he would never sign the razenahah. An allowance has been appointed to him of £150,000 a year.

According to the Bombay Times, the future administration will be conducted under General Outram, as Chief Commissioner, with four Commissioners, Mr. Wingfield and Mr. Christian, of the civil service, and Colonel Goldney and Major Banks, of the Bengal army. Mr. Cooper, Deputy-Secretary to the Government, is to be Secretary to the Chief Commissioner, and Captain Hayes, Military Secretary. The following are spoken of as Deputy-Commissioners: Messrs. Dennison, Forbes, Simpson, Boileau, Martin, Benson, Pollock, J. B. Thornhill, C. W. Cunliffe, G Lawrence, Gonne and Block. The above, with Mr. M. R. Gubbins as financial, and Mr. Ommaney as judicial Commissioner, complete the list up to the present time.

A contingent of some 15,000 men is to be raised, 12,000 infantry, 3,000 cavalry, and four companies of artillery; and this will take the place of an army larger than that of England itself in a peace establishment. The following officers are named as having been appointed to the contingent: Captain Gowan, Lieutenant Miles, and Lieutenant Hawes, of the Bengal army; and Captain Daly, and Lieutenants Black, Johnson, G Grant, and H. Johnstone, of the Bombay army.

Foreign Miscellany.

A great stir, says the Paris correspondent of the Illustrated London News, has been excited in the fashionable world by a sermon preached at St. Sulpice, by the Abbe Cambalot, censuring in the most violent and unmeasured terms, the extravagance of feminine attire in the present day. The Abbe has gone so far as to apply a term seldom addressed to ears polite, to such of his fair parishioners as indulge to the full extent in the ruling mania. The Abbe Ratisbonne strove to soften somewhat the effect of "his brother's" vehemence. M. Cambalot's terms may be objected to, but no reasonable person can object to his subject. At no period has the insane rage for extravagance in toilet, been carried to such a height as at present. Women of less than moderate fortunes appear now attired in a style that double their means would but justify the cost of. Who pays for this, or who suffers by the non-payment, are questions that would reveal many painful and some disgraceful secrets. We doubt if Paris goes ahead much of New-York in this respect.

HEALTH OF PRINCE JEROME BONAPARTE.—The Paris correspondent of the London Times, writing on 16th ultimo, says:—"I have seen a letter from one of the household of Prince Jerome, which gives an authentic account of his condition. I translate the following extracts:—

"This sad illness up to the present moment, (Saturday, two o'clock,) is taking its course, alternating between a little better and a little worse. There is no reason to fear, up to the present moment, that the Prince will not be spared. He has a wonderful constitution, and bears the remedies applied amazingly well. He is perfectly sensible, and likes to see people about him, although he may not speak to them.

"Prince Napoleon is always by his bedside, and shows the most solicitous affection; indeed, his tenderness and anxiety is almost womanly. I can only repeat that there is every hope of the prince struggling through an illness which I need scarcely remind you is very dangerous at this period of life.

The King of Rome, son of Napoleon I., was born the 20th of March; the King of Algeria, son of Napoleon III., was born on the 16th ult. Paul Dubois was the accoucheur of Marie Louise; Paul Dubois, son, was the accoucheur of Eugenie. Paul Dubois, father, slept in a certain room and bed adjacent to the room of the Empress Marie Louise for two weeks before and two weeks after the birth of the King of Rome; Paul Dubois, son, is now sleeping in the same room and on the same bed as were occupied by his father forty years ago! Can imitation further go?

A decree in the Paris Moniteur of the 19th ult., promotes Generals Randon Canrobert and Bosquet to the rank of Marshal of France; Generals of brigade Walsin-Esterhazy, Gagnon, d'Hugues, Jusuf and L. J. Walsin Esterhazy to the rank of Generals of Division, and Colonels Louis Devilliers, Daulomieu-Beauchamp, de L Abadie d'Aydren, Edgard Ney and Fleury to that of Generals of Brigade. Also, by a decree in the Moniteur, M. A. Fould, Minister of State, and Admiral Hamelin, Minister of Marine, have been promoted to the rank of Grand Crosses of the Legion of Honor.

It is rumored that M. Dubois is to receive five hundred thousand francs, not only for his services, but to compensate him for the fearful anxiety of mind he underwent when it became inevitable that violent means must be resorted to in order to bring about the birth. It is held that twenty thousand pounds, (the relative dearness of the two epochs well-considered,) is no more than the equivalent, in 1856, for the ten thousand pounds awarded in 1811 to his father, for his attendance upon the Empress Marie Louise, at the birth of the King of Rome.

The Brussels Herald of March 17, says:—A company, composed of a great number of families of Brabant, and of not less than 150 individuals, passed through Brussels during the past week, on their way to Antwerp, in order to embark for Central America. Omer Pasha has arrived at Constantinople. There has been a heavy fall of snow in Turkey.

The great Beer Question occupies a prominent place again among subjects awaiting the attention of the Bavarian legislature. There are no less than eleven bills, motions, and resolutions before the Chamber of Deputies, at Munich, for improving the terms on which the subjects of King Max may drink their beer.

There has just been discovered between St. Valery-on-Caux and Veules a new oyster bank, which, according to the French papers had its origin in the foundering and breaking up of a vessel laden with oysters bound from Saint Vaast to Dieppe thirty years ago. The quality of these oysters is declared to be exceedingly fine.

The Opinione announces that the property of the Marquis Georgio Pallavino, lately under sequestration, has been restored to him by the Austrian government, in execution of the late decree revoking the sequestrations laid on the property of political refugees.

In the Crimea, General Luders had ordered all officers on furlough to return. A letter from Kertch says that the news of the armistice produced a profound sensation of joy along the shores of the Sea of Azoff, and business became suddenly active.

The imperial foundry, established on the left bank of the Don, has been closed, and this would seem to confirm the news of the intention manifested by the Court of Russia to abandon all its maritime establishments on the Black Sea.

When Judge Torrens entered the Crown Court, at Omagh, last month, he was loudly cheered by all present. His lordship repeatedly bowed, in acknowledgment of the cordial manner in which he had been received.

The line of the acqueduct running along the left bank of the Tchernaya is the limit of separation between the English and Russian armies.

The London News of 18th ult. says:—"General Prim arrived at Bayonne on the 13th, from Madrid, on his way to Paris, where he is about to marry a rich American lady."

On the 17th ult. all the ships and allied batteries at Constantinople fired a salute in honor of the birth of Napoleon's son.

Dr. Conneau, first physician to the Emperor, has been promoted to the rank of Commander in the Legion of Honor.

English and Scotch News.

In the House of Commons, on the 16th last month, Colonel French asked the First Lord of the Treasury whether any inquiry had taken place, or was to take place, as to the causes which led to the failure of the attack on the Great Redan, at Sebastopol, by her Majesty's troops, on the 8th of September last? He thought, if the same precautions had been taken by our army, which had been taken by the French, the attack on the Redan would have been as successful as that upon the Malakoff, and that not a single man of the Russian army would have escaped. In answer to which, Lord Palmerston said, I quite agree that, so far from looking upon that affair as creating a slur upon the British army, it was one honorable to the army, proving the valor of both officers and men. (Hear, hear, and cheers.) But I beg to remind my hon. and gallant friend, that the assault was the result of a joint arrangement between the French and the British; and if the British did not succeed in their undertaking, so also the French did not succeed in part of their undertaking. From which remark it might be reasonably inferred, that the old grudge and jealousy between the "Allies" is breaking out.

The capital engaged in the Scotch fishing trade is at least £2,730,000, and is expended amongst some of the poorest of the population; in boats, lines, and netting alone, the capital employed amounts to above £580,000. The fisheries employ 10,000 boats, and give direct employment to upwards of 65,000 persons, including 38,000 actually employed as fishers. The grand total quantity of herrings cured during the eight years, 1848 to 1855, amounted to 4,942,807½ barrels, of which 1,650,580½ were branded; and in the eight years, 1840 to 1847, to 4,292,691½ barrels, of which 1,267,258½ were branded. The grand total quantity exported from 1848 to 1855, was 2,528,319 barrels, and in the preceding octave of years, 2,108,424½ barrels.

A return has been issued of the convictions and sentences within the police districts of London during the years 1854 and 1855, under the Act 16 and 17 Vic., c. 30, for the better prevention and punishment of aggravated assaults upon women and children. At Bow street there were 41 convictions. In one case the detender was fined £15, which was paid. Clerkenwell, 134; Greenwich and Woolwichh, 76; one a fine of £20; Hammersmith, 47; Lambeth, 57; one fined £15, and another £20; Marlborough street, 70; Marylebone, 40; Southwark, 49; Thames, 118; Westminster, 48; and Worship street, 209; making the total convictions at all the metropolitan police court for the two years 889.

The Queen has sent to the Commander of the Forces, ten portable boxes of a library for the use of the troops. The books are trusted, by her Majesty's desire, to the honorable keeping of the soldiers, who will remember that loss or damage hurts their comrades and their own good name. They will be distributed, in turn, to each division.

The Limerick Chronicle has the following—The eldest daughter of the Queen of England is to be married to the only son of the King of Prussia.

Queen Victoria usurps the prerogatives of the prophet Elijah. Mr. Jardine, solicitor to the Treasury, accompanied by Sergeant Lockyer, of the detective police, left town for St. Alban's, for the purpose of inquiring into the conduct of Mr. C. Parker, of that town, who has recently addressed two letters to her Majesty, describing himself as the prophet Elijah, and asserting his right to the crown, and also requiring her Majesty to surrender her rights and dignities to him as the prophet Elijah, at the same time threatening her Majesty that, if she refused, he should command it by main force at the point of the bayonet, and she must take the consequences when he came to the throne. The prophet was appropriately committed by the magistrates of St. Alban's to Bethlehem Lunatic Asylum.

The Highlanders of Glenmore, Inverness-shire, feeling aggrieved and indignant at the scandalous charges brought by Mr. Macaulay against their predecessors, in his last volume of the "History of England," assembled together, and headed by a piper playing the "Rogue's March," proceeded to the Black Rock, near Glenmore House, and there burnt in effigy the distinguished historian! The assembled crowd gave three shouts of execration as the effigy was consuming. Macaulay, when in the Highlands, resided for a considerable time at Glenmore House.

A gorgeous ostensorium has this week been purchased for Stonyhurst College, at the great sale of effects at the mansion and two Roman Catholic Colleges of St. Peter and St. Paul, at Prior Park, near Bath. It was the most costly article in the sale. The entire work is nearly five feet in height. It was designed by Bernini, for the high altar of St. Peter's, at Rome; was executed by Sciletti and Gelpi, and is studded with upwards of 500 precious stones. This ostensorium is as gorgeous as it is tasteful; the cherub masks which adorn the shaft are admirably introduced, and a work in metal more beautiful, in every respect, can hardly be imagined. It was purchased for 500 guineas.

The sale by auction of the entire effects of the central mansion and of the two Catholic Colleges of St. Peter and St. Paul, having lasted for sixteen days, was brought to a conclusion on Tuesday evening. Financial embarrassments led to the breaking up of this celebrated establishment. Altogether the sale realized about £7,500, which, it is said, is more than £3,000 above the sum guaranteed by the auctioneers.

On the evening of Passion Sunday, a solemn dirge for the repose of the soul of his Grace Henry Charles, late Duke of Norfolk, was performed in St. Marie's Church, Sheffield. A magnificent catafalque, emblazoned with the arms of the deceased Duke, was erected in the nave, surrounded with six candelabras—four mutes holding banners displaying insignia of the house of Norfolk.

Some discussion arose at the Marylebone board, on Friday, as to whether Sisters of Charity should be admitted to the workhouse. Finally, the following resolution was carried:—"That ladies being members of the Roman Catholic Church be admitted into the workhouse, subject to the same terms and conditions as other ladies of various religious denominations."

Mr. F. French, on the 13th of last month, gave notice that on the motion for adjournment, he should ask the First Lord of the Treasury whether any inquiry had been ordered, or had taken place as to the failure of the attack by the British upon the Great Redan, on the 8th September.

The King of the Belgians arrived in London, at noon, on the 18th ult., and immediately afterwards proceeded to Windsor, on a visit to the Queen.

The War between Cost Rica and Nicaragua.

From the Central American, (Extra,) March 15.

War has been declared against Nicaragua by the government of Costa Rica, and three thousand five hundred troops are under way, headed by General Mora, the Commander-in-Chief. Baron Bulow is in the field with five hundred men.

On the part of Nicaragua, General Walker has despatched Major Schlessinger to meet the Costa Ricans.

The President of Costa Rica, Juan R. Mora, has issued a proclamation calling on his fellow-citizens to arm, and march on Nicaragua. He says—

"We do not go to contend for a piece of land—not to acquire ephemeral powers—not to follow up miserable conquest, nor much less for sacrilegious purposes.

"No! we go to struggle for the redemption of all our brethren from the most iniquitous tyranny; we go to help them in the fruitful work of their regeneration: we go to tell them, 'Brethren of Nicaragua—arise, annihilate your oppressors; we come here to fight by your side for your liberty, for your country! Union, Nicaraguans, Union! Your feuds bury in oblivion. No more partizanships, no more fratricidal discords. Peace, justice, and liberty for all! War only on fillibusters.

"To the conflict, then, Costa Ricans—I march at the head of the national army.

"All the loyal sons of Guatemala, San Salvador, and Honduras are in march upon that herd of bandits. Our cause is holy—triumph certain. God will give us victory, and with that the peace, concord, liberty and union of the great Central American family.

"San Jose, March 1, 1856. "JUAN R. MORA."

WALKER'S ACCEPTANCE OF THE DECLARATION OF WAR.

General Orders.—No. 55.

Headquarters of the Army,
Adjutant-General's Office,
Granada, March 13, 1856.

The supreme provisional government of the Republic of Nicaragua having formally declared war, by decree of March 11, 1856, against the State of Costa Rica, the army will be held in readiness to commence active operations.

By command of WILLIAM WALKER,
General Commanding-in-Chief.

PH. R. THOMSON, Adjutant-General, N. A.

GENERAL WALKER'S ADDRESS TO THE PEOPLE OF CENTRAL AMERICA.

From El Nicaraguese, March 15.

Invited to Nicaragua by the Democratic party of the Republic, the American force under my command has steadily struggled to carry out the principles for which the revolution of 1854 was undertaken. In order, however, to consolidate a general peace, we were willing to bury past differences and endeavor to amalgamate the two parties into one. For this purpose we have, since the treaty of October last, held in check our old friends the democrats, and have attempted to conciliate the men formerly attached to the government of Estrada.

With the same view the provisional government of Nicaragua, although differing in ideas and principles from the governments of the other States of Central America, attempted to establish frank and friendly relations with the neighboring republics. Our overtures of peace have been rejected. Our propositions of friendship have not only been disregarded, but treated with scorn and disdain. Contempt and contumely have been returned for the amicable messages we sent to the other governments. The only reason given for such conduct is the presence of American forces in the State of Nicaragua.

The self-styled legitimist party of Nicaragua has repulsed our efforts at conciliation. They have maintained communication with their fellow-serviles in the other States. They have, by all means in their power, attempted to weaken the present provisional government, and have given aid and encouragement to the enemies of Nicaragua outside of the republic.

In this condition of affairs, nothing is left for the Americans in Nicaragua but hostility to the surviles throughout Central America. A very large proportion of the so-called legitimists of this State are either open or secret enemies to our presence on this soil. They owe us for the protection they have had for their lives and property; they have paid us with ingratitude and treachery.

Against the servile parties and servile governments of Central America, the Americans in Nicaragua are bound by the common law of self-protection, to declare eternal enmity. Our proffered friendship has been rejected. We can only make them feel that our enmity may be as dangerous and destructive as our friendship is faithful and true.

The troops of the army of the Republic will assume and wear the red ribbon.

By command of WILLIAM WALKER,
General Commanding-in-Chief.

PH. R. THOMPSON, Adjutant General Nicaraguan Army.

On the 12th March, Gen. Walker and 350 American troops under command of Col. Schlessinger arrived at Virgin Bay. Immediately after their arrival, outposts were stationed at every point where it was possible to enter or leave the settlement, and strict orders given that no person should be allowed to pass out.

The commissary found it very difficult to provision the battelion, but the men seemed resolved to be satisfied. It was generally believed that the battalion would march on Costa Rica on the 16th.

The soldier were in excellent spirits, and resolved, if they got a chance, to make their first fight tell. There were four companies, all recently arrived, one from New York, under command of Captain Creighton, one from New Orleans, commanded by Lieut. Coleman, a German and French company. The Cushing Guards delivered up their arms to the regulars.

El Nicaraguense, March 15 says: The proclamation of the President Mora is a regular piece of Buncombe, and would do credit to a backwood's lawyer. He says a great many things he does not mean, and proposes feats he has no idea of accomplishing.

To Costa Rica, as a nation, we cannot calculate the consequences. On her rests the blame, and on her must fall the effects. This much we can say, however—that peadeful citizens may apprehend no evil. The soldiers of Nicaragua come to regenerate, not to destroy; and while an energetic war will be waged against the government of Costa Rica, private property will be held sacred, and personal liberty protected as inviolable.

It has been vaguely hinted that Americans captured in battle by the enemy, are to be summarily executed. The truth of the report we must disbelieve, but we assure the army that the General has determined on a fearful retribution, in the event so inhuman a proceeding should be attempted.

It is highly probable our army is to-day within the borders of Costa Rica, and in a few days we shall hear of the capture of Guanacoste.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

Taken from General Orders.

Capt. J. C. O'Neal to be Major in the 2d Rifle Battalion.

Jas. S. Piper to be Lieutenant-Colonel of the First Light Infantry Battalion.

First Lieutenant H. Heuston to be Assistant Adjutant General, with the rank of Captain.

Second Lieutenant De Witt Clinton to be Assistant Adjutant General, with rank of Captain.

Wm. Rogers is appointed Second Lieutenant in the First Rifle Battalion.

A NEW RIFLE BATTALION IN THE WALKER ARMY.

By the following general order it will he seen that a second rifle battalion has been instituted in the army, and that Colonel Louis Schlessinger has been appointed to the command of it:—

General Orders—No. 54.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY,
Adjutant General's Office,
Granada, March 11, 1856.

1. Col. Louis Schlessinger is assigned to the command of the 2d Rifle Battalion, and will organize it from the troops recently arrived, on the same basis as the other battalions of the army.

2. The following promotions and appointments are made, to take effect from this date:—

Capt. J. C. O'Neal of the 1st Rifle Battalion to be Major of the 2d Rifle Battalion.

D. W. Thorpe, to be Captain, A company.
Fred. Prange, to be Captain, B company.
John Crighton, to be Captain, C company.
F. E. Lagray, to be Captain, E. Company.
J. T. Coleman, to be 1st Lieutenant, D company.
Anton Seldon, to be 1st Lieutenant, B company.
Ora. Paxton, to be 1st Lieutenant, C company.
M. E. Brady, to be 1st Lieutenant.
P. Coleman, to be 1st Lieutenant, A company.
C. T. Legroo, to be First Lieutenant, E. company.
W. E. Muir, to be Second Lieutenant, A company.
C. Bieber, to be Second Lieutenant, B company.
A. J. Higgins, to be Second Lieutenant, C company.
J. W. Anderson, to be Second Lieutenant, D company.
A. B. Watson, to be Second Lieutenant.
J. C. Richardson, to be Second Lieutenant C company.

Second Lieutenant R. A. Johnston, First Light Infantry, is transferred to the Second Rifle Battalion, and is promoted to First Lieutenant.

By command of WM. WALKER,
General Commanding-in-Chief.

PH. R. THOMPSON, Adjutant General, N. A.

THE ANGEL GABRIEL IN DEMARARA.—Advices of the 22d Feb. informs us that the noted street preacher, J. S. Orr, better known in New York, and other parts, as the Angel Gabriel, has created great excitement in Demarara, between the Portuguese and blacks, so that the authorities have dispatched to a number of islands for vessels of war to protect the place. No war vessels in port, and but few troops—mostly colored. They have taken about 600 or 700 rioters as prisoners. The negroes have pulled down, plundered and set fire to a good many Roman Catholic Churches and Portuguese ships. The Angel Gabriel is taken prisoner. The health of the ports is very good. Times rather dull, as all mercantile business is suspended, on account of the riot.

Havana letters of March 31st, informs us that the beautiful clipper ship Sea Witch lies a wreck upon the coast, about fifteen miles to the westward. She was from Hong Kong, having 500 Asiatic colonists on board, for the labor hands of Cuban cane fields. Eighty of these ignorant forced emigrants died on the passage.

The British Admiral Fanshawe is here, on board of the ship Boscawen, 74 guns. Still in port, the Powerful, 84 guns; screw-propulsion frigate Termagant, 20 guns; do. sloop-of-war Buzzard, 20 guns; and brig Arab, 15 guns. Six or seven more to come, when we shall know what for.

MILITARY CORRESPONDENCE.—At a recent meeting of the members of the new Irish Regiment, a series of resolutions were passed, tendering their services to the general government, through General Cass. The application was formally made, and the following correspondence will explain itself:

WASHINGTON, Monday, March 17, 1856.

MY DEAR SIR: It was not necessary to tell me who you are and what you are. I know you well for a true and disinterested friend; and what is better, for an active and devoted Democrat, never faltering in the cause. I have not yet wholly recovered from the effects of my accident, though I go to the Senate when the weather is good; yet I do not go anywhere else. I like the spirit and am pleased with your letter. The patriotic tender is worthy of you and of your associates. But before I can say anything, it will be necessary I should see the President, and I will do so as soon as it is in my power; I will lay your letter before him and say all the good words I can. Excuse my brevity, as I am in a good deal of pain.

Truly your friend, LEWIS CASS.

Lieutenant Colonel G. D. DOWLING.

WASHINGTON, Friday, March 28, 1856.

DEAR SIR: I have just seen the President, and shown him your letter. He appreciates the patriotic feeling that led to the offer; but there is at present no law which would justify his receiving a tender of services, and, therefore, he is compelled to decline the acceptance. I do not know that I can be of any further use to you or your colleagues in the matter. It will afford me pleasure at any time hereafter to render you a service.

I am, my dear sir, truly yours,

Col. G. D. DOWLING. LEWIS CASS.

A meeting of the members will take place on Monday evening at 8 o'clock, at No. 48 Bayard street, to complete the organizations of the companies, assign the officers their posts and put the men in active training. Members will attend and bring any that are willing to join, and the proposed names of the new officers and non-commissioned officers not already appointed. After the meeting referred to, a code of by-laws will be passed, which will regulate, in particular the mode of elections in the regiment.

GEORGE D. DOWLING, Lieutenant Colonel.

Excitement at Flushing, L. I.

TWO MANGLED BODIES DRIFTED ASHORE IN A FLOUR BARREL.

There was a great excitement on Sunday (6th), at College Point (the east side of Flushing Bay.) The cause may be gathered from the following statement of facts:

A German, named Wahndr, found a barrel washing ashore, knocked in the head, and discovered the remains of one or more human beings. He notified Justice Samuel Willett, of Flushing, who immediately got Coroner John Boyd, Constable Benj. Areson, and others, and proceeded to examine the barrel's contents.

On turning them out upon the sand, two human bodies were displayed—the arms and legs of each cut off, but present The second body was a smaller one—that of a short, stout man, about five feet two inches long; head large; arms and legs cut off, but present. Both bodies were otherwise mutilated. These remains were in a flour barrel, and nailed up with tenpenny nails. On the barrel was marked B. V., in large letters; also, the name "George H Fulton," and other marks indicating flour of a superior brand. The Coroner and his jury not being able to make out the meaning of all this, nor able at once to fathom the terrible mystery, re-packed the remains in a box, and removed them to Flushing for a more extended examination.

The news spread like wildfire. It was the talk of old and young. The public places were crowded, and the inhabitants stood around in little knots, discussing the theme. Copies of the Daily Times, of the 12th of March, were procured, and the description of the bodies foully murdered on board the Eudora Imogene were read carefully, and each point compared with the statements of those who had seen these bodies. Some points of resemblance between them and the missing bodies of the Eudora were evident, and what were not so clear were forgotten. The opinion generally prevailed that the Eudora bodies had at length been found.

One of the Daily Times' reporters, hearing of the stir, visited the spot at 10 o'clock on Sunday night, and, with the assistance of Drs. Vedder and Allin, obtained access to the remains and made a discovery which upsets at once the prevalent theory and renders it evident that the bodies were subjects of the dissectionists of some private or public school, the gashes were cut by the anatomists, and the fish-lines with which they were sewed up, the strong twine used by the boys after cutting down to inject the arteries and veins; or after trying the operation of tracheotomy upon the cadaver. The cuts upon the abdomen were not so very bungling after all. Indeed, the operation for hernia had been conducted very handsomely upon one; the wound on the head might easily enough have been made by a demonstrator prior to exhibiting the structure of the brain, and the other wounds were such as, with the greatest propriety, young surgeons who follow the excellent advice of all good old ones might make—with the laudable intent of studying Relative Anatomy. But, as if to make assurance doubly sure that the remains were not those of men foully murdered, but of some unclaimed relicts whom the law authorizes to be surrendered for the sake of science to decent people upon giving proper bonds for their Christian burial, a small card or label was found folded under the bend of the knee of one of the bodies. It read as follows:

A DR. DELAFIELD'S
COLLECTION, NO. 44.

From which it is clear that the relics have at one time or another been in the hands of the dissecters.

Correspondence.

DUBLIN, March 15th, 1856.

There is not much news here! For a correspondent who has undertaken to be an active feature in your paper, that's a poor way to begin. But the times are to blame. They alone. My head, and heart, and hand are free of fault. And as it is fact, and not fiction, you wish to have, it follows necessarily, I must be next to silent, when events are scarce.

We have had his Excellency, the Lord Lieutenant, laying the first stone of a Museum of Natural History. The ceremony took place in the lawn of the Dublin Society, where Dargan's Crystal Palace stood. The day was delightful. Merrion Square, on which the lawn looks out, with its lofty lines of mansions, and tasteful grounds and clumps of ever-greens, was not only charming, but superb. The rich silver sunshine played upon and colored every thing.

A brilliant crowd of our Dublin ladies—the wittiest and handsomest in the world; the band of the Somersetshire Regiment of Militia, with escort and colors; all the Castle folk, aides-de-camp, chamberlains, and chaplains; a troop of the 16th Lancers; and, as usual, a body of policemen, in their glazed cooking-pot hats, were on the ground. His Excellency handled the trowel with astonishing skill, if we're to take the word of the amiable journalists present. He made a pretty speech, too, and wound up the business by proposing three cheers for Her Majesty! The ladies blossomed into ruby smiles, and waved their little scented flags of cambric; the band rolled out the British anthem; the Lancers pranced; the Militia-men presented arms; the Marquis of Kildare, and other notables, lifted their hats; half a dozen workmen gave a cheer; his Excellency covered his head, and so the picture vanished.

By-the-bye, do you know that it was to his Excellency, some years ago, when he was Lord Morpeth, the exclamation, "What a shocking bad hat!" was first addressed? His Lordship was always remarkable for the deplorable condition of his head-piece. Eight years ago, on the lobby of the House of Commons, I met him for the first time. On that occasion he sported an old white beaver, very much bulged.

But I'm not yet done with heads and hats. Here is a sparkling little yesterday episode which occurred in the Naas Court-house during the Kildare assizes:

While Mr. Hayes, Q.C., was, on Friday, addressing the jury in the case, he said that Mr. Ardill was shaking his head, and he begged of that gentleman to desist, as he did not like his dumb oratory.

Mr. Ardill—I did not shake my head.

Mr. Hayes—I object to this nodding commentary upon my speech.

Mr. Battersby—Why, Lord Burleigh himself shook his head; no harm is meant.

Chief Justice—I will tell you a story that will probably remove this objection about the shake of the head. When Sir Watkins Lewis was Lord Mayor of London, he wore a peculiar kind of hat, and somebody made a remark in reference to it, which led to the writing of the following distich:

When Sir Watkins was told what was said of his hat,
The knight shook his head—but there's nothing in that.

(Great laughter.)

The Coroner's Jury have returned their verdict in the case of Sadleir. It is this: The deceased died by his own hand whilst he was in a perfectly sane state. The Coroner gave permission for the interment of the body, late on the Sunday night after it was discovered. From the Workhouse at Hampstead, it was conveyed to the residence of the suicide in Gloucester Square, and the following Thursday it was covered up in Highgate cemetery, a few of his immediate relatives standing by. The London papers state that the burial service was performed by a Catholic Clergyman. I doubt it. The suicide, I have always been under the impression, forfeited in the Catholic Church the rites of Christian burial.

The Times has a slashing article on the fearful business. It states, that the prosperity of a whole province—that of Munster—has received a severe shock from the proceedings of the forger. By his connection, with the Tipperary Bank, it appears, he contrived to swindle the population of the south of Ireland to an amount already stated at £400,000. On Tuesday week, the Master of the Rolls, delivering judgment, on motion that the copartnership of the Bank should be dissolved and its affairs wound up, informed the public, that the late John Sadleir was permitted by his brother, the sole director and manager of the bank, to overdraw his account to the extent of £200,000, without the knowledge, consent, or privity of a single other contributor or creditor. The article concludes with this sentence:

"Provincial attorney, and then attorney in Dublin, political intriguer, Parliamentary agent, member of Parliament, Lord of the Treasury, railway chairman, and bank director—such were the steps of his career, until he concluded it as a speculator, swindler, and suicide."

And such are the men whom our people here have been wheedled into accepting as their political instructors, whilst they are taught to repudiate Emmett as a miscreant, and Smith O'Brien as a madman. But when a people have been deluded to the lowest depth, Heaven enlightens them by catastrophes.

Apropos to this, the London Press shows up William Keogh, the Irish Attorney-General, with the most damaging exposition of facts. I inclose the article, so that if you think it would do service, you can publish it.

Quite a number of Irish members waited a few days ago on Lord Palmerston, at his private residence in Piccadilly, with another memorial praying for the unconditional pardon of Smith O'Brien. Your old school-fellow, Tom Bellew, one of the Members of the County Galway, was present. The spokesman of the deputation was John Francis Maguire, Shiel's successor, in the representation of Dungarvan. He made a clear and forcible statement of the views entertained by the memorialists. Alluding to O'Brien's intense love of Ireland, he quoted a few words which occurred in a letter written to a friend by the noble fellow from Florence two or three weeks ago. Here they are:

"I would rather live in a jail in Ireland, than in the loveliest spot in Italy."

In penning these words, he has furnished the grandest suscription, which, whether he dies at home or abroad, could be put upon his tomb.

Lord Palmerston assured the deputation, that the subject should have his most anxious consideration, but respectfully craved their patience, for a few days, until he made up his mind. Judging from an article which appears in the Times upon the subject, I should be disposed to think that O'Brien will be permitted to return. I give you an extract. It tells you, I think, how the winds blow about Piccadilly:

"As far as we can express the public opinion, we may very truly say that everybody would be glad to hear that Mr. Smith O'Brien was restored to his country and his friends. We do not believe that there is any danger in such a step, whatever his future conduct may be; but, at the same time, we most fully believe that Mr. Smith O'Brien would, by his future conduct, show himself sensible of the leniency with which he had been treated. Only, if the favor be granted, let all be generously and gracefully done. Let the pardon be complete, and the past forgotten. That is the way to win back hearts."

Talking of Piccadilly reminds me of old Dan Callaghan, so many years senior member for Cork. Dan, you remember, used to wear white trousers half the year round, and white silk gloves at all times and then, he had a very white head, and very bushy white whiskers. A white hat in the summer months, completed the snowiness of his aspect. Dan was much addicted to Piccadilly. It was his favorite region for a luxurious stroll every fine afternoon. The last fifteen years previous to his death, he was known as the White Bear of Piccadilly. A sign-board, over the door of a public-house in the vicinity, suggested the idea.

The pending elections in Sligo and New Ross happen, just now, to be the principal topics of political gossip. For the former place, J. P. Somers is up again, the twentieth or thirtieth time in his life. He is an old man—a very old man—to be upon the hustings, with all the horrors of a contest, yells and dead cats, raging and flying about him. The poor old rake! He should be doing penance on his marrow-bones, in the Abbey of Moyne, instead of trying to bamboozle his political creditors, at the end of his days, and in the middle of the nineteenth century. Sadleirism is the new name now for all such public knaves as J. P. Somers. It is an expressive one. Just now it is a deadly cry. The Nation of this morning dismisses the subject of the Sligo election, with the ringing shout—Down with Sadleirism, therefore, whatever name be written on the forehead of the beast!

As for New Ross, Redington, the Catholic Aristocrat, is pushing his exquisite pretensions for that place again. First of all, according to the Nation, he sent a sort of pilot-balloon aloft, to indicate the popular current, previous to letting go his ropes, and trying a sail among the mutable elements himself. Who do you think was the precursor? Give a guess! A patriot risen from the dead—or what is all the same, from an official berth in Cape Coast Castle. Your old friend, James Fitzpatrick, has turned up miraculously. Everybody was under the delusion he was a corpse these five years. Tom Steele, with his tattered uniform and olive-branch, once more presiding in Conciliation Hall, would not have been a more startling apparition than James Fitzpatrick, with his potato-shaped nose and butcher-like face, mixing his punch, the other evening, in the coffee-room of Shannahan's Hotel, in the ancient rebel city of New Ross.

You know, when he received the big blue envelope, half a foot long, enclosing his appointment in September, 1847, to Cape Coast Castle, where he served as a sort of Minister of Justice to the natives of the neighborhood, he drove off straight to to the office of the Colonial Secretary, and inquired of the head clerk the amount of the retiring salary. "Oh! we cannot tell you that," said the clerk, "for no one has ever been there long enough to receive it."

The face of the Minister of Justice suddenly turned into a flabby heap of mouldy blanc-mange. The answer froze the blood in his heart. He thought he'd expire. But go to Cape Coast Castle he must, or had infinitely better, though he were to cast up his soul in a yellow sea the day after he landed. 'Twere better to test his vitality in that pestiferous region, than dry-rot into eternity, under the care of Joe Mullen, in the utterly unproductive region of the Four Courts Marshalsea. He sailed with the strong conviction he'd never sail back. In that opinion his friends unanimously concurred. Disappointed, however, they beheld him in the flesh once more, pouring forth to the electors of New Ross the patriotism which even the scorching sun of Southern Africa failed to evaporate. There are some patriots who never die. Tom Arkins, tailor to the Liberator and the Hierarchy of Ireland, as the golden letters on his green sign-board informed the public, still lives. So does John Reynolds, the immaculate financier, and grave debater. So does Dr. Nagle, the librarian of Conciliation Hall, who spent ten years in seconding resolutions.

They appear to be vey pleasant in this contest for New Ross. The correspondent of the Freeman's Journal writes:

"There is a peculiarity in this contest worth mentioning, the antagonistic mobs cast fire balls at each other. If these balls (flax and turpentine) stick, there is danger of being burned alive. Several are in their beds from burns of these fire balls. The money spent by both parties of the mobs is enormous, and the debauchery that follows is proportionate."

Where is it you won't find an Irishman? The Paris correspondent of the Times mentions, that the stage coach plying between Pan and Dax was upset, the other day, within half a mile of Orthez. The carriage was smashed to pieces. Mr. Patrick O'Quin, on his way to Paris to take his seat in the Legislative body, was flung out of the coupe and dangerously wounded. In Melbourne, Australia, Catharine Hayes, on the eve of her departure, was presented with an address, magnificently signed, begging her to stay for some time longer. And in a little volume, just published by Bell & Daldy, London, entitled Here and There in Portugal, we light upon the following:

"Taking a boat one morning at the Caes de Sodre to go on board a vessel lying in the Tagus, I gave the sturdy boatman a silver piece of twelve vintems—just double his fare. He assailed me with a perfect storm of rude invectives, and held out his hand for a larger fee—an action that would have made his meaning clear, had I understood even less of his language, of which one opprobrious epithet, more than once applied, was sufficiently intelligible. Finding me deaf to Portuguese, and unable to reply, he changed his language to unmistakable Milesian, and vociferated, "Bad luck to ye for a poverthy-sthruck beggar. P'raps it's all ye've got." I answered him in his own rich brogue, and he bolted, laughing at having been caught off his guard.

I forgot to mention, that in the centre of the lawn where the National Museum is to stand, a statue of Thomas Moore will be erected. It is time he should have some honor done him in the land, the beauties and the sorrows, the hopes and legends of which his lyre has immortalized. But Ireland is a nation with memories only. She rears no monuments to her children, however nobly they have served her. It would be otherwise were she what Wolf Tone and Davis planned to have her.

Tenant-right meetings continue to be held. There was one in Rathkeale on the 2d of this month. It took place after last mass. Archdeacon Fitzgerald, the parish priest, delivered a strong speech. He said, among other things, that the province of Munster sent to Parliament, out of twenty-four members, but two tenant-justice men—"the eloquent member for Dungarvan, and that truly honest man, Meagher of Waterford." Though you are his son, I think you'd give a cheer for that. It is refreshing to find these truths thus boldly told the people:—

"What have those men of mighty name and transcendent powers, whom you sent to Parliament, those on whom you bestowed your love—your confidence—your money to a large amount, what did they effect for the masses? They could have got you tenant-right if they cared one farthing about the masses of the people. They got great things for the gentry. They made them members of parliament, high sheriffs, small governors, petty place men. But what is all that to the millions who were the victims of extermination? Two millions were hunted out and shipped in crazy hulks, filled with abomination, to America, of whom it is known that one-third perished within one year after landing. Another million were hunted into the grave. From your own Rathkeale Union workhouse, six thousand victims were conveyed to the promiscuous burying ground in Kiletnaun bog. How many hundreds went forth blinded by opthalmia? I went, said the Archdeacon, last week, through the parish of Ballingarry, to attend the funeral of Mr. Hall; the landlord ravage, the ruthless devastation of that parish was frightful."

If rebellion was not justifiable where such ravages occurred through the proved recklessness and blundering stupidity, not to say the criminal design and policy of the foreign English government, why no rebellion was ever justified. As for the Tenant-right agitation, it is a mere sickly pulsation of a great heart once full of red blood and the noblest aspirations. The people have no faith, or little, in it. They well know, that the settlement of the land question—the planting of their interest permanently and ineradicably in the soil—can never be effected through the eloquent statistics and "hear, hears!" of ever so many independent tenants of Parliament. Revolution—armed revolution—sweeping and implacable as a prairie fire—alone can settle that.

You will be pleased to learn, that our great Celtic scholar, John O'Donovan, the translator of the Annals of the Four Masters, and the author of the very best Irish Grammar extant, has been elected Corresponding Member of the Royal Academy of Berlin. The letter communicating this high compliment to O'Donovan came from Dr. Jacob Grimm, Prussian Minister of State. It informs him, that the Academy confers the membership "in recognition of the signal services he has rendered to the study of the Celtic languages," and is, moreover, much gratified at learning that "independently of his edition of the Ancient Laws of Ireland, he is engaged at an Irish Dictionary, which will no doubt throw all preceding ones into the shade."

Did you ever hear before, that Adam Loftus, Archbishop of Dublin, and also Lord Chancellor of Ireland, who died in, in an original miniature, recently discovered, is represented with a short moustache and a flowing beard, both of them nearly white? This bit of gossip appears in Notes and Queries, lately published, and may serve as another argument, at least among religious gentlemen, in favor of the moustache.

Talking of the moustache revives an anecdote, in which Daniel O'Connell and Colonel Sibthorp—both, as all the word knows, in their graves to-day—figure finely. If I recollect rightly, it was in one of the annual debates on the Maynooth Grant, the circumstances occurred. The Colonel was a High Church Tory. When he told Sergeant Murphy he'd not only have his whiskers and beard shaved off, but his head too, rather than let a hair of the Established Church be touched, he didn't in the least exaggerate. He'd go to another block, besides the barber's before that sacrilege should take place. And when he expressed his willingness to lose his beard in the cause of the pampered Episcopacy of Great Britain, he displayed, in the strongest style, his devotion to that cause. For his beard, his whiskers, his moustache, were the wealthiest in the House of Commons. Mr. Muntz, of Birmingham, alone excelled him. Grant, the author of the Random Recollections, says his face was so completely covered, that, were it not that he sometimes spoke, no one would have imagined he had either eyes or mouth.

On the occasion of this debate on the Maynooth Grant, he had, as usual, pitched furiously into the Irish. O'Connell rose after him, and observed, that the honorable and gallant member for Lincoln was the last man who should abuse the Irish, for, by act of parliament he was an Irishman himself. The House roared. So did the jovial old Colonel. "Would the gallant Colonel deny it?" asked O'Connell. "Prove it," exclaimed the Colonel. "That I shall," replied the Liberator. Forthwith the Liberator proceeds to the library, and returns with a ponderous volume of statutes. Opening it on the green baize-covered table, he solemnly put on his spectacles, gave his wig a twitch, and with the gravest intonation read out the statute of Elizabeth, which provides that no one should or shall wear any hair on his upper lip, under the penalty of being considered and dealt with as a mere Irishman.

Adam Loftus, the moustached Bishop, who reminded me of this anecdote, was an Englishman, and zealously endeavored to propagate the "reformation" in Ulster. Shane O'Neil swore he'd stop his doings—"for," said he, "his 'reformation' shall never blast the oaks of Columbkille!"

Being in the North, I might as well mention that the 'Prentice Boys of Derry held their annual Soiree in the Corporation Hall of that city, on Monday evening last. The Glorious, Pious, and Immortal Memory, as a matter of course, was drunk. Amongst the toasts were, "The shutting of the gates:" "The Earl of Enniskillen and the Orangemen of Ireland." Saunder's News-Letter, which Whiteside alluded to in the States-trials of '43 as "the frigid Saunders," prints the following pretty paragraph, in reference to this Soiree:

"Some men are like cats; you may stroke the fur the right way for years, and hear nothing but purring; but accidentally tread on the tail, and all memory of your kindness is obliterated."

I presume from this, that the pious and immortal Orangemen are as much out of sorts with the Earl of Carlisle as they used to be with the Marquis of Normunby. Should Mr. Fillmore be elected President, it might be prfitable for them to emigrate. The Nominee of the Nnow-Nothings, whose principles so thoroughly coincide with those of the Derry Boys, would, no doubt, sympathetically patronise them.

Just this moment I have been handed a Limerick Chronicle of yesterday. Under the head of "London Intelligence" it publishes this item:

"The Roman Catholic Clergyman who read the dead service over the remains of Mr. John Sadleir is under a ban by the Cardinal of London."

So, you perceive, I was not wrong in my impression concerning the usage of the Catholic Church relative to the bodies and burials of suicides. Enough, however, about that horrible business and that miserable man.

Some of your readers may be interested in knowing that in consideration of the services rendered by the Commissioners of Irish Fisheries in the artificial propogation and cultivation of salmon, and the models of fish weirs lately exhibited by that department at the Paris Exhibition, the Imperial Society Zoologique d'Acclimitation have conferred the degree of honorary member on the chairman and secretary of the board, Richard Griffith, Esq., and Edward Hornsby, Esq., both of the old sod. Thus Irishmen are winning laurels everywhere except at home. It has always been the case, and will be so as long as the Cromwellians hold the castle. I much fear it is a strong hold with them. This last year has proved it.

In this up-and-down, desultory, helter-skelter, free-and-easy way, you shall hear every week from your old friend,

KILMAINHAM.

Irish News.

LEINSTER.

An orator at New Ross, decrying the pretensions of Sir Thomas Redington to the representation of that borough, said, "Sadleir was worse than the devil, and the devil is better than renegade Redington."

The annual ceremony of relieving guard at the Castle took place on the 17th March in the presence of a vast crowd of spectators. The entire of the upper yard was crowded, save the open space in the centre set apart for the troops. Shortly before twelve o'clock his Excellency appeared on the balcony, when he was received with vehement cheering, which he acknowledged by bowing repeatedly. He was dressed in plain black, and wore a huge bunch of shamrocks on his breast.

One of the prize bells at the late Paris exhibition has been purchased from the founder, Mr. Murphy, of Dublin, for the Catholic chapel ot SS. Peter and Paul at Clonmel, at a cost of £230.

At Naas assizes, Mr. Henry Caldwell, architect, obtained a verdict of £100 damages against the late High Sheriff of Dublin, for false imprisonment.

In the town of Carlow the effect of the failure of the Tipperary Bank will be awful in the extreme, for, if all that we hear be true, it will affect a very large number of our fellow-townsmen, who, up to the last moment, placed the most unlimited confidence in its solvency and security, including those whose current bills are now in progress of collection. It is stated upon good authority that some very stupid forgeries have turned up—whence this description of paper emanated no one can even conjecture; but it is certain that payment has been applied for by the Secretary of the Bank of Ireland. They appear to be given as securities to the Bank of Ireland, and the parties who have received notice to pay the same have repudiated all connection with them. If such bills are so grossly fictitious as they are represented to be, the mystery will he unravelled before the Master But the public must abide the issue pending the investigation, which should be a very stringent.—Carlow Sentinel.

MUNSTER.

The Waterford Mail informs us that the war-frigate Gorgon, fired a feu de joie in honor of the birth of the son of the Emperor and Empress of the French. Fireworks were displayed, and the men were allowed to enjoy themselves beyond the usual hour.

The Limerick Reporter believes that Mr. James Sadleir intends to resign the representation of Tipperary County. His constituents, at all events, are in daily expectation of hearing of his resignation.

The novel and interesting pontifical ceremony of blessing a church bell was performed in all its solemn forms, on Palm-Sunday, at the chapel of Newtownsandes, in the north-east of Kerry, by the Right Rev. Dr. Moriarty. The bell, which was manufactured by Mr. John Murphy, of Dublin, is a very beautiful one. It was placed on the altar in the Sanctuary. It was the first ceremony of the kind performed in Kerry, since the Reformation—and the bell is the first church bell tolled in the parish of Murhus, since the same period.

Old Mrs. Sadleir, the mother of John Sadleir, has become almost a maniac. Her daughter has been for some time in a private lunatic asylum.

The works of the Irish Beet Sugar Company at Mountmellick have been resumed, and a considerable quantity of sugar turned out during the past few weeks. The concern is under new management, and we learn that there is a prospect of its being worked to some advantage. We have seen samples of the sugar, which is equal to the best of the former make.

The Clonmel Chronicle states that Capt. John O'Connell is about to vacate the representation of that borough.

The action for libel—Strange vs. the proprietor of the Waterford Mail—entered for trial at Kilkenny assizes, was arranged by the defendant paying damages of £20, with costs. The article complained of was inserted without the knowledge of the proprietor.

The retirement of Mr. Fagan from the representation of Cork is spoken of,

The Dublin Evening Mail intimates that Mr. Robt. Keating is about to retire from the representation of Waterford, and that a gallant Captain (Bonaparte Wyse), closely allied to the French Emperor, has been feeling his way with the electors on the Liberal interest.

The Rev. Hugh Huleatt, formerly curate of Nenagh, and now chaplain to the Light Cavalry Brigade of the British army in the Crimea, has arrived in Nenagh, having obtained a short respite from his duties.

Alexander M'Carthy, county of Cork, is about to apply to be relieved from his shrievalty in order to become a candidate for the county.

ULSTER.

A meeting of the creditors of Messrs. John Mackenzie & Co., eminent distillers in Belfast, was held on the 15th inst. The liabilities are £87,582.

Baron Pennefather and Justice Torrens, on entering their respective courts at the Donegal assizes, were loudly cheered by the bar, the grand juries and the entire court. The learned judges, in both cases, expressed their thanks and gratification at so enthusiastic a reception. These singular and unexampled scenes had reference to recent proceedings in the House of Commons.

The Ulsterman informs us that the upper end of Donegal street, in the city of Belfast, has been the scene of a grievous nuisance, and annoyance, frequently of late, at night. Drunken ruffians tramp up and down before the house in which the bishop and priests reside, close by St. Patrick's church, at the most unseasonable hours of the night, and indulge in the very christian and intellectual amusement of shouting, "To hell with the Pope."

We understand that the firm of John & Thomas Sinclair having offered to the Committee of the Belfast Seaman's Friend Society the munificent donation of £1,000, towards the erection of a Mariners' Church, the committee have resolved to take measures immediately for carrying out the design; and, in conformity with a general and earnest wish, they have resolved that the Church shall be erected as a memorial to the late John Sinclair, Esq., and bear his name.

Many of the Downpatrick people may remember old Rose Barra, or, more correctly, Doran, the old cockle-woman, who for 30 or 40 years supplied the lovers of that delicate shell-fish with the choicest and freshest specimens during the season. She lived to the age of 103 years, and died at Ballykinlar, on Monday last, having been able to walk about until the last four or five weeks, and up to the day of her death she could thread the finest needle. This is the second centenarian in that parish who has died within the last twelve months; a woman named Caul, who died in the Union Workhuose, being the other. We should also mention that another woman, also named Caul, died in Bailykinlar, about two years past, at the advanced age of 92.

The inhabitants of Monaghan have resolved to erect some suitable testimonial, to commemorate Colonel Dawson's fall, at the head of the Coldstream Guards, at the battle of Inkerman.

The Rev. E. M. Clarke, Local Inspector and Chaplain of Lifford Gaol, has published his usual table of the statistics of crime in the County Donegal, and it exhibits, in relation to the past year, a number of highly interesting results. With the exception of "illicit distillation"—in which class of offences there is an increase of thirty-seven cases over the returns of the year 1854—in most of the departments, a sensible diminution of crime has taken place during the last twelve months.

A Special Commission has been fixed for the trial of the persons charged with the murder of Miss Hinds, at Cavan, and commences the beginning of this month. Chief Justice Monahan and Mr. Justice Moore will be the presiding judges.

James Beatty, Esq., C. E., who has but recently returned to this country, from the Crimea, is at present very seriously ill. As Engineer-in-Chief of the Balaklava Railway, his name was very frequently and favorably mentioned by the late Lord Raglan, for his exertions. Mr. Beatty is an Enniskillener.

We understand that the Directors of the Belfast Steamship Company have declared a dividend of 10 per cent. per annum, free of income tax, on the half year, adding to the reserve fund the sum of £4,000. The steamer Telegraph, has been discharged from the service of the English Government, and is now in the Thames, for sale or re-charter. The Sea-Nymph is under charter to the French Government till May next.

CONNAUGHT.

A railway is to be constructed from Longford to Castlebar, upon guarantee of the Grand Jury to the Railway Company.

The result of the Sligo election is the return of the Right Hon. John Wynne, the Conservative candidate. The numbers at the close of the poll were—Wynne, 148; Somers, 108.

The Agricultural news from all parts of Ireland, up to the latest dates, is very cheering. The Nenagh Guardian informs us that Potato sowing is carried on through the country with great vigor, and that a large extent of land will be occupied with the valuable esculent this year. The Waterford Chronicle reports the weather very dry and fine; farming operations progressing rapidly, and everything promising well. According to the Wexford Independent, potatoes and spring oats are largely disposed of. The wheat crop, it appears from the Kilkenny Journal, promises a more luxuriant yield than has been witnessed for several seasons. The Dundalk Democrat confirms all these reports and expectations.

CATHOLICITY IN THE CAMP.

The following affecting letter, written by a military correspondent from Balaklava, appeared in the last number of the Dublin Weekly Register, just come to hand:

"It is my painful duty to have to announce to you to-day the death of Sister Mary Elizabeth Butler, one of the Sisters of Mercy, who departed this life on Saturday last, from the effects of a malignant fever, caught in the discharge of her duties. Her struggle was short, for her strength was already exhausted, and her health, on account of her excessive labors, had been more or less impaired. It was on this account that, as soon as any symptoms of fever had appeared, she at once fortified herself with the Bread of the Strong, and prepared herself to receive the last rites of the church. After having received all the consolations of our holy religion in a most edifying and Christian manner, her thoughts were henceforward directed solely towards Heaven, and her mind was entirely fixed upon her God. Like St. Paul her only desire was to be dissolved and to be with Christ. She had no desire to live any longer, except it were the holy will of God. On the contrary, she frequentty expressed a desire to die, and said on many occasions that she wished not to lose the present opportunity of going to her God. Although far advanced in years, and of a constitution naturally weak, she yet performed with a buoyant spirit and the greatest care all the painful duties of her calling—visiting the sick, waiting upon them day after day, procuring for them all the consolation in her power, then diffusing around her the sweet odor of Christ, and breathing that spirit of charity which alone is peculiar to the Christian religion. Neither rain, hail, nor snow prevented her from being amongst them. All was alike to her. She was never missed from her wards, no more than the youngest and strongest of her Sisters. Many a long and dreary winter's night she sat beside the bed of the dying man, tendering to him all the consolations which charity could suggest, or which it was in her power to afford. Her charity, too, like that of her Divine Master, knew no bounds or limit. It was not confined to any particular creed or class of persons. Neither the Protestant, nor the Presbyterian, nor the Musselman, nor any other whatever, were excluded from a participation in the benefits which she conferred. All experienced the same care, the same attention, the same soothing word of consolation. Such is the character of the Sister of Mercy out in the East. She does good to all, and consoles them. She recoils from no duty that is imposed upon her; she flies not even when death stares her in the face. For, when cholera raged, and fever prevailed, and dysentery swept off by hundreds her fellow-creatures, she shrank not from breathing the pestilential odor and corrupted air of an infected hospital; thus daily exposing herself to imminent danger. Yet she is ignored, and her services are passed over in silence, although it is she that has borne the 'heat of the day and the burden.' The funeral, which took place on Sunday, in the afternoon, was numerously attended; all seemed anxious to take part in offering this last tribute of gratitude to her. Long before the office began, persons were seen coming from all sides to pay this last tribute of respect to the mortal remains of the good Sister Elizabeth. All the Catholics of the 89th Regiment, stationed at Balaklava, to the number of near 500, were marched, by permission of the Colonel, to join the funeral procession. The office began at 3 o'clock, in the beautiful little Church of St. Vincent, which was hung in black for the occasion. The office was performed with all possible solemnity, at which all the priests in the camp attended. On leaving the church, after the office, the soldiers of the 89th fell into line, and the funeral procession moved slowly through a double file of soldiers, formed from the church to the place of interment. The procession was simple, but imposing. First came the cross bearer, the Rev. Mr. Unsworth; then followed Rev. Mr. Strickland, Rev. Mr. Duffy, Rev. Mr. Cuffe, Rev. Mr. Malony, Rev. Mr. O'Callaghan, and Rev. Mr. Gleeson, officiating clergyman. The coffin was carried by the faithful 89th, after which came the good Sisters, two-by-two, dressed in their choir habits, and bearing lighted torches. Six of the Sisters of Charity, from the Sardinian camp, took part also in the procession. Through respect, the moment the coffin appeared outside the church, all took off their caps and remained uncovered the entire time, even until the funeral service had been performed. The Crimea never witnessed such a real Catholic sight. It was a glorious triumph for Catholicity, and an honor to the holy church. The evening, too, was such as one would desire for the solemnity of the occasion. The sun shone forth brilliantly in all its splendor, and lit up the surrounding heights, as though it were a midsummer day; the vessels in the harbor lay calm and still, the sailor dropped his work, and gazed with admiration on the assembled multitude; not a breath disturbed the silent whispering of the angelic voices raised in holy prayer, as the funeral cortege moved slowly up the hill. A breathless silence was observed by all; no one daring to interrupt the fervent throbbings which ascended like incense for the departed soul. All nature appeared to join in our holy work; and heaven itself seemed to smile in approbation. Her mortal remains were deposited beside her sister in religion, on the hill which commands the harbor. A beautiful marble cross, which stands six feet high, has been just erected by the Catholic soldiers of the 89th, to the memory of Sister Winefred; and another similar one is going to be raised to Sister Elizabeth. The spirit of the Catholic soldiers in the East requires no stimulus in this way; they only look forward with anxiety to the time when some move will be made at home, in order to contribute largely to raise a lasting memorial to the zeal, the charity, and the indefatigable exertions of those good ladies. If, then, such a thing was once set on foot, I hesitate not in saying that a large sum may be realized—a sum sufficient to raise some memorial worthy of them; and not only would Catholics gladly contribute, but even their Protestant neighbors would, I am sure, be most liberal in their donations. What prevents, then, a step of this nature being undertaken? Let only some one begin it, and be assured the work will go on of itself. If I may make a suggestion, let it be that the monument embrace all the works in which they are engaged, according to the nature of the institute—a Convent, a School, a House of Mercy, an Hospital, in order that they may have full scope to extend the blessings of religion to all."

Answers to Correspondents.

Our readers, in consideration of this being the first number, must kindly overlook, or make the friendliest allowances for the imperfections of the press-work. It is much more—infinitely more difficult to launch a new paper cleanly before the public, than to launch even such a stupendous specimen of ship-craft, as the Adriatic of the Collins' line, to which with a warm Irish Hurrah we bid success! Next week we promise a decided improvement in our looks.

Arrangements are being perfected which will enable us, after a short time, to present our readers with regular monthly correspondence from California, Pernambuco and Rio Janeiro, Buenos Ayres and Montevideo, Lima, Valparaiso, Tasmania, Sydney and Melbnurne. In South America, particularly in Buenos Ayres and Valparaiso, there have been, for several generations, thousands of Irish. In the former city, the Irish population is computed at 6,000. The war of independence, all through the Spanish-American colonies, disclosed in brilliant light many an Irish name. Francis Burdett O'Connor, a brother of the late Feargus O'Connor, resides in the Republic of Bolivia, where he owns extensive salt mines, and where he has greatly distinguished himself, both in the field and cabinet. Besides holding the rank of General, he has been twice Secretary of War to the republic. Our visit to South America for a few weeks, in the Spring of 1852, and the circumstance of some of our nearest relatives having lived at Lima, Valparaiso, and Buenos Ayres, for several years, enable us to perfect the arrangements we have mentioned.

Our military friends must not take exception to the order in which the different companies or regiments may appear in our columns. We parade them without any order—without any regard to right of precedence—without any partiality or design; they take their place, just as they accidentally come to the ground. There are a few officers in command of military organizations in different parts of the Union, with whom we have not had the honor of being acquainted, and whose names and address we find it difficult to procure; they will confer a great favor by forwarding them, at their earliest convenience. Any and every communication sent to us from competent and responsible officers, will be promptly attended to. Our friends here at home, the officers and privates of the 9th, 69th, and 75th Regiments of the First Division, the Long Island Volunteers, the Jackson Horse-Guards, Montgomery Troop, Emmet Guard of the 10th Regiment, Captain James Brady's Company of the 11th Regiment, the Lancers, the Montgomeries of New Jersey, and all the other companies of this and the neighboring cities and towns, may rest satisfied that in the IRISH NEWS they have a journal, the space and services of which shall always be theirs.

Our Dublin correspondent, in his very agreeable and lively letter, so industriously puts together all the news items of interest he could pick up in any part of the country, that he has left us hardly more than a few scrapings of an exceedingly well picked bone, to lay before our guests. Besides these communications, we can promise from him several papers on Australia, the Cape of Good Hope, Tahiti, and the Sandwich Islands, to which places he has within the last three or four years, in the discharge of an important mission, paid the most interesting visits.

An intimate friend of ours in the National Guard of Paris, has undertaken to supply us every fortnight with French news, fresh from the beautiful capital of France.

Our Waterford friends in America will be glad to hear, that, twice a month, the IRISH NEWS will publish a letter from a correspondent in Waterford—a man of proved ability and patriotism. These letters will furnish our readers with interesting news, not only about Waterford, city and county, but Munster, generally.

An article on the National Academy of Design, is crowded out.

We are compelled from the press of editorial matter to withdraw our theatrical notices of this week. In the ensuing, and every succeeding number, they shall punctually appear. A gentleman of competent criticism and fine taste, has undertaken this department, and we confidently trust he will discharge his duties in a manner worthy of the reputation and genius of the New-York stage.

☞ Literary men and students of Irish History, will be delighted to read the advertisement in another column announcing the intended publication, by Haverty, of Keating's History of Ireland; translated from the original Irish by John O'Mahony, who brings to the task a profound knowledge of the Celtic tongue, a deep veneration for the historic memories shrouded in it, and a vast acquaintance with the various scholastic and antiquarian accessories to the work in hand. He is just the man to transfuse old Geoffrey into the language of the day, and to throw much light upon his allegorical pages.

"LOUGH DEARG."—You're quite right. No matter what his religion, every Irishman honors St. Patrick. In the broadest sense, the day is a national day—the only national day Irishmen have. Differences of creed, politics, descent, all blend and are lost that day in one grand sentiment of brotherhood. Catholic, Episcopalian, and Presbyterian; monarchist, republican, rebel, and loyalist, thoroughly unite in festivity on the occasion, pledging their cups and hearts to one matter and one memory. The Protestant Irish are just as devoted to the good Saint as the Catholics themselves. Some of them go so far as to declare he was a Protestant. Mr. Napier, one of the Members for the Dublin University, and Lord Bernard, the Member for Bandon, among the number. The famous Monks of the Screw—of which glorious convivial Club John Philpot Curran was the Prior or President, and of which Dean Kirwan, the great Protestant preacher, and Charles Kendal Bushe, and Henry Grattan, and Lord Avonmore, and such men, were members—installed St. Patrick as their patron; and the Prior wrote the charter song in his honor, and with the burden of his name, which song the entire brotherhood, at the opening of their gay chapters, enthusiastically sung. No one but a bigot will claim him otherwise than as the patron saint of Ireland, from top to bottom, including saints and sinners.

"DOWN-PATRICK."—You are right.

"The King of Oude Was mighty proud,"

at least we have Charles O'Malley's word for it; but mean or mighty, poor or proud of spirit, his style, title, and royal dignity, have been swallowed up by the filibustering hunger of the progressive British Lion. It is said, that his majesty's dominions of Oude, had long been a "pattern of bad government, roguery and rascality," and the like; and that "civilisation," which means the British Empire, had such a paternal and pious regard for the morals of the earth, that it really could not stand by any longer to witness such Oriental contamination in the Eastern Hemisphere, and so took the matter thoroughly in hand, as the Tribune lately said, "to afford new ideas to the people by the better administration of justice, and the diffusion of European genius and philosophy."

In other words, it sanctimoniously "filibustered" a most beautiful and fertile country, annexed a new and productive farm to its manor-house of London; and chained the late "mighty proud" monarch with a pension of some $600,000 a year. The annexed territory contains about 23,788 square miles, is excessively fertile, watered by some of the chief tributaries of the affluent Ganges, and richly productive of barley, rice, wheat, indigo, sugar, and other "saleable commodities." The population is nearly three million. It is a good speculation. You must not press us to give a detailed account of British filibusterism. Go read the history of the country. The instances you mention are merely secondary in importance—the mere side-dishes to the substantialities prepared by English statesmen for the dinner-table of the "Lion."

SEEKER.—It is impossible we could answer your query in less than twenty years from this date; for, certainly, we would be as old as you are now were we to undertake to get through the mass of ill-written MS. you left at our office.

DECLINED.—"A New Song to an Old Tune." This is a mistake—the song is twice as aged as the air. Mordecai's "First Smile of Spring." (A perfect broad grin.) "E. L. P.," "Wesley," "Paradox," "Minus." (The less the better.) "A Vegetarian," (squash.) "An Earnest Man"—(You're surely joking.)

The Irish News.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, APRIL 12, 1856.

THE IRISH IN AMERICA.

Chateaubriand, in his beautiful Memoirs, speaking of the foreign names to be found on the map of the United States, observes, that the oppressed of every country have brought hither their memories and affections.

Disagree as people may about it, the fact is so. Prohibit and condemn it, the fact to the conclusion of the chapter will be so. No nation forgets its past. In glory or tribulation, in captivity or freedom, the recollection of it survives—becomes the theme of triumphal ode or loving lamentation, the inspiration of revolution, monumental art, the romance of history or military daring.

Greece rises in the midst of her transcendant ruins, centuries after her fleet had rotted in the Ægean, and the phillipics of Demosthenes had been transferred to distant colleges, and the field of Marathon had been sold for a few piastres.

So, too, with Poland, the kingliest of kingdoms, with the sumptuous chivalry of her camp, and the inextinguishable piety of her altars. Sobeiski dies; Kosciusko dies. Yet when the worms have been busy with them for years, when Poland, they say, has stifled her last throb for freedom in the folds of her red winding-sheet; when all Europe is asleep; just then is heard, along the Carpathian base, and through the startled courts, senates, and streets of Europe, the cry of—Poland is in arms!

Thus with other nations. Thus with those who have suffered most—had most reason to bow their head and accept their fate in deep despair—or in their agony mutter contrite words to propitiate their crucifiers.

Is it strange, that to this grand lesson the Irish race should present no abject contrast? Strange, that even here, in the midst of plenty, in the full fruition of the largest liberty, with many blessings to soothe the quick promptings of revenge long baffled or of hope deceived, they should still think ardently of the land, from which, sorely pressed by poverty or scared by famine, they have fled, or striking for the rights and fame of which, they have been routed, proscribed, and driven?

It would argue poorly for their loyalty to the Commonwealth in which they have settled down, if the propitious change in their government and fortunes were to sap their first love, efface the pictures of home and the story of their fathers, leaving their memory a confused canvass, from which the grand impressions made by nature had been blotted out. The preservation of these memories and affections is not only natural, inevitable, full of good ness and full of beauty, but unequivocally compatible with all the duties and liabilities the oath of citizenship provides and sanctifies.

Especially of the Irish in America is this true, since the recollections most dearly treasured by our race, are those which intimately associate themselves with the resistance to the Stamp Act, the reverses and endurance of the Army of the Delaware' the guerillas of Marion, the funeral urn of Montgomery, the pure eloquence and compact logic of Calhoun, the stern words and fierce successes of old Jackson. Resistance to England, hatred of her intolerance, defiance of her power, these are recollections and virtues common to the citizens of America and the emigrants of Ireland. Would that with similar hopes and sufferings, they had equal victories to celebrate!

Nor does the perpetuation of the sentiments and reminiscences we bring from home concur merely with our good faith, duty, and devotion to the Republic. It deepens that devotion, and into a high ambition translates the sense of duty.

Be it in the workshop, at the press, in the pulpit, in the field of letters, administering great public trusts in the commercial world, confirming them in the halls of legislation, extending them in adventurous ships upon the sea, or with the sword defending them at the gates and highways of the Republic, the Irishman well knows, that his conduct will redound to the credit of, or reflect sneers and odium on, the land of his ancient home. For better or for worse, for panegyric or reproach, he is an Irishman, the world over, and will be spoken of as such.

This conviction stimulates his republican life. It transcends the oath of citizenship. Far more strongly than this oath, it impels him, truthfully and generously, to acquit himself to the Constitution, which, on the broadest scale, realizes the freedom that has been his fitful dream at home.

The world has heard of Patrick Sarsfield. Hardly a meeting of Irishmen takes place, where that name is not a thrilling invocation. He fought in Ireland, and after the capitulation of Limerick, left it for perpetual exile. Entering the service of Louis the Fourteenth—pledging him the soldier's oath—he fought through the siege of Namurs and the campaign of Flanders. Made a Marshal, he dies at Landen, heading his countrymen in the van of victory, as Davis tells us.

"His last thoughts were for his country. As he lay on the field, unhelmed and dying, he put his hand to his breast. When he took it away, it was full of blood. Looking at it sadly, with an eye in which victory shone a moment before, he said faintly—Oh! that this were for Ireland."

To perpetuate the memories which thus incite to a great career, and then crown it with a sublime prayer of filial love; and whilst all that is good and precious in the past is treasured and kept bright, to chronicle, so far as in us lies, the sayings and doings, the struggles and successes of the Irish in America, and elsewhere abroad—this is the dutiful and happy service to which we devote ourselves this day, and from this day out.

THE COUP D'ETAT OF NEW-YORK.

Such a war as the American papers seem to desire, and for which their statesmen are so anxious to find cause, would be quite as likely to affect the relations of American society as those of the English. It could hardly fail to hasten the inevitable day when the republic, like all new worlds, is to bloom into empire.

This sentence, taken from a recent number of the London Times, suggests some very amusing pictures. America blooming into an empire, would be a fertile subject for a delightful extravaganza by the author of the latest edition of Po-ca-hon-tas. New-York, we presume, would be the starting point of the imperialistic revolution. Our excellent friend, the General of the First Division, the St. Arnaud of the coup d'etât. On the Fourth of July, and the occasion of the Fall parade, he brilliantly entertains his Staff, and several of the field and regimental officers. Louis Napoleon laid the foundations for his throne in baskets of champagne, on the plain of Sartory. Here the analogy is striking, and the prediction of the Times has an alarming coincidence to start from.

What next? There's a new hotel, just opposite the desolate amphitheatre of the Hippodrome, distinguished by the name of the most aristocratic faubourg of Paris. Fifth Avenue is but a telescopic elongation of the Hotel St. Germain. The whole of that region, by birth and ancestry, have the strongest affinities with royalty. In Broadway, a little above Union Square, on the left hand side, there is the Hotel de Finigan. The revolutionary symptoms in favor of an empire are complete.

One of these mornings, the papers will announce, that during the previous night, several of the most conspicuous democrats were arrested in their beds by officers of the National Guard, by order of Major-General Sandford. We shall hear of George Sanders being sent to the top of the Latting tower, overlooking the Croton Reservoir and Crystal Palace, in charge of three sergeants of the Garde Lafayette. We shall hear of John Van Buren being arrested by Brigadier Spicer in person, and detained under the fire-bell, on the top of the City Hall, closely invested by a detachment of the City Grenadiers.

Horace Greeley will be the first victim. Brought down stairs instantly from the editorial attic, and placed with his back to his own bulletin-board, he is destined to be shot by a file of the Veterans of 1812, and bayoneted on the spot. Immediately after, his body will be thrown into the fountain in the Park, to be devoured by the gold-fish.

As for the Postmaster, the Collector of the Port, and Port Surveyor, the public will be informed, by an extra, or an official proclamation covering one of Barnum's cartoons, that, early in the morning, just at sunrise, they were conveyed on board the North Carolina, in the steam-tug Pluto, with their legs and arms tied behind their backs.

Then, of course, we shall have a detailed and picturesque account of the disposition of the troops. Tammany Hall in possession of Kerrigan's Dragoons, two companies of the German Hussars, and two companies of the 11th Regt., under Colonel Van Buren. The Tombs, bristling with cannon, will be represented as echoing with the shrieks of the Democratic General Committee, and the Delegates to the Cincinnati Convention. Whilst in the porch of Grace Church, Sexton Brown, holding the gilt eagle, and dressed in the costume of a Senator of the new empire, will figure in the plenitude of his white satin knee-breeches, carnation colored dinner coat, cocked hat and rapier. Radiantly gossipping with the officers and men of the old Butcher troop, he will be described as standing sentinel over two or three hundred charming old and young ladies, who inside in the aisles and round the registers, wait for the storm to clear off, before starting for the Academy of Music, where they are to be installed as Mistresses of the Bed-chamber, Maids of Honor, and Dowagers of the Nursery and Kitchen.

The "Four-sheets-a-penny" man will, no doubt, be the most successful candidate for the American purple.

Vive l'Empire! A bas la Republique!

IRISH PRESBYTERIANS.

One of the lastest mails from Europe furnishes a novelty in Irish agitation, which seems to be overlooked by the press of this country. The new movement, to be sure, may not offer at present a programme so extensive in scope, nor so decisive in its political aspects, as that towards which the energies of Irish and American sympathizers and organizers are directed; yet, from the peculiar character and historic antecedents of the parties engaged in it, it is one which cannot be regarded with silence. However sectional it may appear at the first glance, it contains an embryo power, quite capable, as the past history of Ireland shows, of being grown into stalwart dimensions.

The Presbyterians of Ireland, by whatever political shibboleth identified, have as a mass been at heart republicans, and whenever forced into agitation, have acted as a body, and consequently made themselves felt. Principally located in the north of Ireland, the most prosperous province of the country, they are industrious, educated, stubborn in the maintenance of their ideas, and rigid in the observance of a manly and decisive action.

When Ireland was rocked in a tempest of the fiercest intolerance, in the last decade of the last century, their voice was heard above the storm. It rode on the whirlwind, and directed the energies of the people into a contentional attitude that broke the fury of the elements by which it was inspired.

When Theobald Wolfe Tone came upon the scene of action, about the year 1790, he found Ireland in the hands of a caucus of the Protestant Aristocracy, their heads bound to England by the coronets which surrounded them; the Presbyterians, chiefly of the mercantile and industrial classes, dissatisfied, and the Catholics, small farmers and peasants for the most part, without a voice at all. Understanding well the tolerant character of the Presbyterians, he appealed to them on behalf of the Catholics, united both, and sowed the seeds which eight years after broke out into such luxuriant "treason," and sustained a war which cost the English over thirty thousand men, and very nearly the possession of the island.

Then, as now, the Presbyterians commenced the agitation by demanding parliamentary reform. It soon grew into a revolution. The union which took place between the chief interests in Ireland at that period, though hugely invaded by various agitations in the intervening years, was still visible in the last decade,—waves of the agitation flashing over '48, and breaking on the shores of the following year. In this, as in the struggle of '98, many of the chief leaders were from that stubborn Northern province of Ireland.

With these antecedents, the action of the Presbyterians is certainly not less important than the movements of other bodies, however voluminous and more apparently attractive may be the indications of the latter.

Under these circumstances, we regard the address lately issued by the Presbyterian Society to their co-religionists in Ireland, as worthy of remark. The object of the society is to obtain for the Presbyterians of Ireland "what is already enjoyed by the other principal sections of the population—parliamentary representatives to uphold their principles and rights. The fact of their coming forward is conclusive evidence enough that they see the machinery of government is not sufficient, or too much, for their happiness. That the equality, which is a type of their religious and political belief is not.

The address calls on the Presbyterians to remember the struggles and trials of their "sainted sires, who so nobly illustrated their principles by their lives, and who, in many cases, still more nobly testified to them by their martyr death." It boasts that Presbyterianism has raised its favored locality, Ulster, to a state of intelligence and prosperity unsurpassed by any other province "of her Majesty's dominions; and as a proof thereof, that in one of the most Presbyterian counties, Derry, there are but two of that persuasion in jail; that taking Ulster entire, while one out of every 900 Episcopalians, and one Catholic out of every 1100, there is but one Presbyterian to every 3,700 of the population in the prisons; that the ratio of paupers to the respective populations in Derry is as follows:

Population.	Paupers.
50,000 Episcopalians,	800
101,000 R. Catholics,	1,600
31,000 Presbyterians,	450

The address continues:

"History affords many sad and significant evidences of the jealous vigilance with which presbyterians need to guard their rights and privileges against intolerant and oppressive legislation. We cannot so soon forget the Test and Corporation Acts, by which Presbyterians were excluded not only from municipal offices, but from all offices in the army, navy, magistracy, customs, excise, and courts of law; nor the fact, that ten out of twelve aldermen, and fourteen out of twenty-four burgesses, were turned out of office because Presbyterians, in the city of Derry—the very city which they had been mainly instrumental in defending in its memorable siege. * * * The recent assault on the validity of Presbyterian marriages, and others of a similar character, prove that our privileges are far from being secure."

With such intelligence and capacity for unity of action, it was their own fault if they suffered. They are nearly as numerous as the Episcopalians, yet the latter are represented by six ty-one seats in the house of Commons, the former by one. In the Lords, "of course," says the address, "no one ever dreamed of seeing an Irish Presbyterian; nor was a Presbyterian ever raised to the Irish Bench." Of magistrates there are two thousand Protestant, sixteen Presbyterians; of children attending the schools of the National Board of Education, there are sixty thousand of the latter persuasion and twenty-four thousand of the former, yet the former have six commissioners on the board, the latter but two. In the Queen's Colleges, the students are equally disproportionate against the Presbyterians; yet, on the Senate, there are ten Protestants to two of the others. Other "National" boards are instanced, which are entirely governed by Episcopalians. In fact, out of a population of 700,000, but two Presbyterians hold offices of any importance whatsoever, while a large portion of the wealth and prosperity is due to them. It is pleasant to hear these grim Dissenters complain at last.

"The Presbyterians of Ireland are little, if at all, inferior in number to Episcopalians, and although not including in their ranks many of the higher classes, they embrace a still smaller proportion of the lowest. They consist chiefly of that middle class, which is the strength of any country, and which is now peculiarly powerful in this. They possess, in a high degree, all the ordinary elements of influence—intelligence, energy, industry, and independence; and they enjoy moreover, by their peculiar position in Ireland, an extraordinary advantage, which, if rightly understood and efficiently used, would give them a preponderating weight."—Address.

The profligacy of Parliament called them into an angry attitude before. The dignity due to their position evokes decisive action at this moment. By their own presence in Parliament they seek redress. They are men of business, and demand the right to look after their own affairs. A few such men, who have real, living interests in the country, would fling some wholesome but distasteful common sense among the Irish members. We are glad to see the Presbyterians make any move. They have been asleep for half a century. It is time they were awake.

If the Irish will send men to an English parliament, and if men will continue to recognize their provincialism by attending there, then by all means let turbulent slaves be sent, who have bitter memories clouding their hearts—men, the principles of whose fathers made scaffolds as plenty in '98 as crosses in the Appian Way in ancient Rome.

Whatever these men may do, it is not likely they will sell the country for a mess of colonial pottage. "Reform," in the mouth of a Presbyterian, means some sort of a change, and any change in Ireland must be for the better.

CITIZEN-SOLDIERS.

We present our readers to-day with sketches, in rough pencilling, of three companies of the State Militia.

The Citizen-soldier deserves a prominent position in the public journals of the day. The examples he throbs to emulate; the memories he invokes, and sets in letters of gold upon his colors; the prompt generosity with which he completes his equipment, and to military practice devotes hours which might otherwise be given to less irksome pleasures, the duties of his home, or the necessities of his business; the love of freedom which animates him; the chivalrous alacrity with which he obeys, and when occasions require it, the steady strength with which he vindicates the laws; every thing entitles him to this position.

From these pages, his name shall be seldom, if ever, missed. There is a column specially assigned him, in which, we sincerely trust, he shall figure as respectably at least, if not as brilliantly, as he does in the column on parade, and, as in many instances, he has done in column in the field.

To ensure accuracy in our notices of the Militia, a systematized correspondence has been opened with the commanding officers of the different companies throughout the Union. Every incident, favorably and pleasurably connected with them, shall be put on record. The date of their formation; the regiment and division they belong to; the names and birth-places of the officers; uniforms, facings, plumes or pompous devices and mottoes on accoutrements and colors; the posts of honor they have held; escort duties they have performed; every circumstance and detail will be mentioned. The record shall be not only retrospective but contemporaneous. In a word, we design the Irish News to be, in connection with other interests, the military journal of the Irish in America.

DEATH OF A TRUE IRISHMAN.

Just as we are going to press, the news comes to us that our friend, Patrick Kerrigan, for several years Captain of the Irish Dragoons, is dead. His painful illness of some months' duration, terminated on Monday last.

Captain Kerrigan was an honest, true-hearted, gallant Irishman. His purse was ever open in the cause of Ireland; and whether it was patriotism or charity required it, his generosity was quick and cheerful. His strong arm would have been as active as his heart was generous, had there been a trumpet-call for it from Ireland.

MILITARY NEWS.

THE NAPPER TANDY LIGHT ARTILLERY.

This company was organized in 1851, by Captain John G. Fay, and other spirited young Irishmen, in the city of New York. After many preliminary meetings and drills, the company selected the following officers: for Captain, John G. Fay; first-lieutenant, Jeremiah Flynn; second-lieutenant, Daniel K. Rooney.

The uniform first worn by the company, was a green fatigue-jacket, with yellow braid; light blue pantaloons, with scarlet stripe; blue cap with yellow band braided on the top, and a tassel.

For the first six months, the progress of the company was comparatively slow, owing to opposition from quarters where it was least expected. But the perseverance of the officers and men, overcame every obstacle. In the beginning of 1852, a position was sought in the 70th regiment, 5th brigade, located in the city of Brooklyn, and at that time commanded by Philip S. Crooke, Esq., and charge of the battery, formerly in possession of Capt. Olney, of the City Guard, 13th regiment, consisting of four six-pound brass field pieces, with harness and other equipments complete, was assigned the company.

Shortly after, the company made its first parade, with the battery fully mounted, and upon that occasion the display elicited the highest praise. From that day the company began to grow strong. Many intelligent young Irishmen, with strong partialities for that arm of the service, desired to be enrolled, and, in a few weeks, the ranks of the young company were full and efficient.

Capt. Fay resigning the command of the company, for several weeks first-lieutenant Flynn held the command. Subsequently, a committee of the company waited on Mr. W. H. Hogan, of Brooklyn, who, after making the necessary inquiries, accepted, and was unanimously confirmed in the post. Capt. Hogan at once set to work to repair the severe loss the company received through the resignation of Capt. Fay, who was deservedly esteemed and respected by the members; for to him the credit is due of organizing the first Irish artillery company in this country.

The press of New York and Brooklyn bear ample testimony to the progress and action of the company; and the reputation it acquired with the military public, is the best evidence that it advanced rapidly, not only in numerical strength but in scientific acquirements. There are various incidents of interest connected with the rise and progress of the Napper Tandy Artillery, which it would be most pleasing to allude to, but our column will not admit of more than a general glance at them.

The first annual target excursion of the company took place in the fall of 1854, and the novelty of seeing cannon target practice, drew forth a large concourse of military and civic gentlemen and ladies. The ground selected was Coney Island, but owing to a tremendous storm, the firing could not be proceeded with.

The company boast the honor of firing the first gun on the arrival of Louis Kossuth and John Mitchel.

The company have adopted a By-Law, providing that, should any of the members die, they will defray all expenses of interment, if the family of the deceased consents. They have done so in two instances—the only ones that have occurred since its organization.

The company now wear the regular artillery United States uniform. It consists of forty-two effective men; but as the artillery practice requires intelligent, educated, young and active men, it is the determination of the officers to be careful in their selection, as they aim more at perfection in discipline and scientific knowledge than a crowd of men for the sake of show.

At their last target practice, last Fall, the company fired 44 six-pound balls, at a distance of nine hundred and sixty yards, out of which forty-two took effect on the target, and thirteen marked inside the Black Ring.

The officers are William H. Hogan, captain: formerly President of the Sarsfield Club, which met in Longford street, Dublin, and at that time proprietor of the Irish Examiner newspaper, which was suppressed by the government, for the part it took on the side of Ireland and Freedom.

The first-lieutenant is Mr. Thomas Byrne, formerly of Athlone, in the county of Roscommon; the second-lieutenant is Mr. Robert Smith, formerly of the north of Ireland; the third lieutenant is Mr. Charles O'Neil, also of the north of Ireland, and one of the Red-Hand tribe.

We should not omit to mention, that while the officers and men of this company cherish a warm love and veneration for the land of their birth, they are, to a man, true Democrats and loyal citizens of the Republic. They have always honored the birth-days of Washington, and the other illustrious soldiers and statesmen of America, with salutes from their battery, and the usual military demonstrations of gratitude and veneration.

THE MONTGOMERY GUARD, N. Y.

In 1836, in consequence of a resolution adopted by the New-York Cadets, prohibiting persons of foreign birth from joining the corps, ten members of Irish birth demanded their discharge, and received it. Immediately after, they commenced the organization of a new company, to be called the Montgomery Guard. Proceeding to the Navy Yard, Brooklyn, they made choice of the green coat, then worn by the United States Marines. If we are rightly informed, they are the only corps, at present in the first Division of N. Y. S. Militia, who still wear the same color they formed under.

Directly after their formation, they were attached to the Fifty-First Regt. N. Y. S. M., together with the old Tompkins Blues, now in the 12th Regt., and made their first parade on the 4th of July, 1837, proceeding to Jersey City by invitation of the Jersey Blues. The Montgomeries at present belong to the 11th Regt., 4th Brigade, 1st Division, N. Y. S. Militia. The Captaincy of the company has been successively filled by Mr. John Mahon, Wm. A. Wisdom, and John Munday. It is officered at present by the following gentlemen: Thomas S. Murphy, Captain; Thomas Clarke, First Lieut.; Patrick F. Begg, 2d Lieut; George Rice, Quartermaster. The adjutancy has been vacant for the last three weeks, in consequence of the death of Timothy Garrick, who occupied the post for a very long period, and was beloved by his comrades for his generous and truthful nature. He was an efficient officer, and warmly devoted to the company.

The uniform, full dress, consists of a light green coat, with buff facings; white shoulder-knots, with green crescent; dark mixed pants, with inch and a half buff stripe; bear-skin caps; black leather stock; black leather cross and body belts, with breast and body plates; priming wire and brush; knapsack and white pants for summer. In winter, the United States Regulation overcoat, with green facings, is worn. The fatigue dress consists of Navy blue jacket, trimmed with yellow; wings; blue cap, with peak and green band; mixed cloth pants for winter, and white duck for summer.

The company carries the American flag—a very costly and splendid one—presented, on the 4th of July, 1853, by Andrew Clarke, Esq., and a green standard, displaying a masterly likeness of Major-General Richard Montgomery, with the motto, in gold—"We emulate his virtues."

They were on duty two nights during the Macready riots, and had two men severely injured. They number at present eighty men, rank and file; and are the first and only American military corps that has visited and stood upon the spot where Montgomery fell.

Literature.

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS.

THE IRISH JESUITS—CLONGOWE'S WOOD COLLEGE.

After an absence of three years, I returned, on a visit of a few days, to the sweet old spot. It was just the same as I had left it. Not a stone had been touched. Not a tree had fallen. I doubt if a single cobweb, in the corners of the black rafters of the kitchen-roof, had been swept off.

As I drove in through the gates, on the west front of the college, there were the two admonitory birch-trees, fresh and bright and shining, and just as suggestive of tingling blood, as when I had gratefully looked upon them last. There was Nelly's ditch, with its scant supply of lazy water, full of frog's blankets, weeds, pinkeens, and dock-leaves—the same old dismal ditch it was some thirty years ago. Thirty years ago it received the name it bears. An old woman of the name of Nelly, being very blind and helpless, walked into it one winter's morning, on her way back from the chapel to the laundry, and remained there until it was useless to take her out.

It served as a fosse for one face of the castle, approaching which all pedestrians and vehicles, coming from the South, passed over it, through the gates flanked by those admonitory birch-trees.

As for the building itself, there was not the shadow of a change in that. The little evergreen oak which stood near it, at the end of the avenue leading up from the Dublin road, gracefully typified its immutability and strength. There it was—a solid square of grand dimensions, finished off with light angular towers on the west front, and with great round towers on the east—standing out boldly from the beautiful woods which form a lofty rampart round it.

Like Stonyhurst, architecturally considered, it is a curious compound. There are Gothic windows over the main door-way, and Norman towers to the right and left of that. The front looking out on the play-ground and the Dublin mountains, is illuminated with windows of the Elizabethan era, and connects the round towers we have mentioned. What era or order of architecture they belong to, it would be perplexing to determine. The old wind-mill at Newport reminds me of them More ornamental, however, and less ventilated than the latter, the analogy between these Irish and American enigmas of architecture is restricted to their bulk.

In this massive square of masonry, the private rooms of the Jesuits, their refectory, library, chapel, and the museum, are situated. Some of them sleep in the towers. The Father-Provincial, for instance, occupies during his visits to the college, a large chamber in the square tower, on the right of the principal entrance. From the spacious window of this chamber, he looks down the full length of the noble avenue of beech-trees, nearly half a mile in length, which in former days served as the highway to the castle. For Castle Browne it was called, more than a century ago, when it was little thought the disciples of Loyola would be one day lords of the domain. In the Cromwellian days it belonged to a family of the name of Eustace. Curry, in his History of the Wars in Ireland, makes sad mention of the ancient place. He tells us—

"The soldiers of Clongowe's wood, and Rathcoffy, yielding upon quarter, were conveyed to Dublin, and hanged there, and upwards of 150 women and children were found in the said places murdered. It is well known that the commons of that country were, for the most part destroyed and slaughtered by the English, in so much, that there were not so many left living as could gather the twentieth part of the harvest."

From the Eustaces it dropped into the possession of the Brownes, from whom it derived, and for many years held, the name of Castle Browne. Wogan Browne, the proprietor of the estate at the time, was implicated in the insurrection of 1798. Irish gentlemen of fortune and high social rank thought it no discredit then to be found in the rebel camp, entrenched and staked against the power of England. Not far from Wogan Browne, in his stately mansion of Rathcoffey, buried deep in the midst of the noblest old trees that ever made music with the wind, Hamilton Rowan lived, whose chivalrous love of Ireland would have made his name memorable, had not the eloquence of Curran rendered it immortal. Of him, however, and the grand old woods and mansion of Rathcoffey, there will be more to say. For the present I cannot stray from Clongowes Wood, though tempted by many a memory, whispering through the aged glories of the former scene, to do so.

The Brownes yielded possession to the Jesuits, in the summer of 1816. They restored to the estate the name of Clongowes Wood. An inscription, in the graceful Latin of which they are the incomparable masters, on the stone architrave of the great door-way, chronicles the fact.

The Castle, with all its sports and feastings, its hounds and steeds, its lords and mistresses, its equipages and gold and velvet liveries, has sobered into the College, with its tranquil government and discipline, its mute studies and solemn ceremonies, and the innocent festivities of imprisoned boyhood. Along the corridors and through the halls, the shrubberies, the fields, and gardens, where rustling hoops had sumptuously swept, or the daintiest sandals of red morocco had with the prettiest pertness tripped, the black gowns and caps of those who have renounced the world and all its pomps are seen. The drinking-cup, the hunting-horn, the snowy ruffles, the gay coat of velvet, stiff with embroidered gold, the crisp boot with its sparkling spur—these have all become, within those altered walls, the shadowy colors and visions of a feudal dream. I have sometimes, in our rambles through the country, spoken to some gray oracle of the people, and have heard poetic stories of the nights, when that great avenue of berch trees was lit up with colored lamps, hung in thousands, across from tree to tree. And through this dazzling highway, carriages, with footmen and outriders, all clad in the costliest cloth or velvet, rolled on for hours and hours—the carriages sinking with their weight of landed property and nobility, and their pounds of perfumed loveliness and painted wrinkles.

Of those gay grand times, there were memorials full of interest, still left within the college walls. The Jesuits' library, and the reception-room for strangers, still wear the rich paper, still display the fine cornices and carvings, still boast the spacious floors of polished oak, which helped the scenery and formed the stage for many a social pageant. A mile from the college, close to the Maynooth road, the spare, melancholy, spectral trees of the churchyard of Manheim rise up. They are clearly visible from the college. In regular lines, a few feet apart, they stand upon a rising ground of the blackest mold, and the rankest grass of the darkest green. The red sun of August, going down behind them, looks like a huge furnace, of which they are the iron grating. The ruins of a little church, the name and history of which has been buried in the dense ivy which impenetrably veils its very stones, lie behind those gaunt dismal trees, covered up forever, like the other dead around them. In a small chapel, not much larger than a family vault, close to these ruins, the ancient owners of the castle, the Eustaces and Brownes, sleep in their narrow beds of oak. The door-way was long ago walled up, but through the narrow openings in the walls one can, by squeezing hard, catch a dim glimpse of the huge slab, with its four huge iron rings, under which the coffins of the old masters of the old place rest.

Extending from the left of the main building, we have the kitchen; and then the refectory of the boys; and then the great corridors or galleries, flagged with brown sandstone, principally used for their in-door exercises and amusements; and branching off from these, their several class-rooms on one side, and the dispensary, music-room, and wash-room on the other.

Overhead are the dormitories for the boys—sleeping nooks, three hundred in number, partitioned off from each other by thin boards, six feet in height. The entrance to each nook is through an opening in the boards, covered by a curtain of coarse red stuff; which curtain, furnished with brass rings, playing on an iron rod, advances or recedes, expands or withers up, just as the case requires. Over each curtain, on a lozenge of black tin, appears in white figures the number assigned the young tenant the night he is first installed. This number is stamped upon the books handed him from the library, stamped upon the leather peak of his blue cloth cap, stamped, or chalked, upon the soles of his shoes and boots, stamped, or coarsely lettered, in herring-bone stitch with black linen thread, upon the lining of the collar of his jacket, or the inner side of the waistband of his green corduroy pantaloons or breeches. The officiating lay-brother of the dormitory, the librarian, the cobbler, and the tailor of the college, are never supposed to know a name, but impartially administer to a number. It is a military system. The individual subsides into an imperceptible unit of a compendious mechanism.

All over the world, the colleges of the Jesuits are precisely alike. I have spent six years in Clongowes, their Irish college. I have spent four years in Stonyhurst, their English college. I have visited their college in Brussels; visited their college in Namours; visited their college in Georgetown, in the District of Columbia; visited their college at Spring-hill, a few miles from Mobile, in the State of Alabama; visited their college in New Orleans, on the banks of the great republican river of the Mississippi; and in each and all, whether as an inmate or a visitor, the prevailing identity in each and all, no matter what the clime, what the government—the prevailing identity has been to me not only very perceptible, but singularly striking. Not only singularly striking, but, from the completeness of its identity, suggestive of a grand belief. The belief that there is, or can be, with all the strifes, vagaries, incongruities, or enmities of this world, a code of moral excellence, gentleness, and beauty, which may reconcile and blend the diversities and antipathies which our common nature, diseased by the fatal Fall, has thrown out and multiplied malignantly.

For the past two years, the Atelier of Mr. Kirwan, in Dublin, has been occupied in the construction of a magnificent and massive marble altar for the Catholic church at Ballinamore. In the "ages of faith," it was not unusual to construct altars and tabernacles from materials of the most precious nature—from the richest jaspers, and verd antique, and lapis lazuli, and plates of gold and silver—and even in our own age all that wealth can purchase of the richest productions of nature are not considered too costly for the sacred use to which they are consecrated in devoting them to this holy purpose; but in point of actual workmanship, says the Dublin Freeman's Journal, we are not aware that the altar to which we are now directing attention is excelled by any other in the world. The style selected by the artist is the Gothic, with all the gorgeous richness of which it is susceptible. No technical enumeration of details could convey to the reader an accurate conception of the work itself. The altar, strictly so called, is composed of white veined Italian marble, with the exception of the shafts of the pillars, which are of rich Sienna (yellow) marble, and the bases, and capitals, and richly-carved entablature which are of statuary marble There are sixteen detached pillars supporting the altar, the front of which contains three open Gothic panels that are to receive as many bas-reliefs, the centre one of which will represent our Lord at the table of the Last Supper. There will be also sculptured panels at each end; and, besides the centre ones which we have mentioned, the other four will represent St. Peter, St. John, St. Paul, and St. Patrick. The capitals of the columns, which are richly foliated, and the carved moulding which surrounds the altar, covered with symbolical fruit and foliage, are all of exquisite workmanship. The tabernacle is entirely of the finest statuary marble of Carrara, and is more like a rare gem of art to be preserved under glass in a museum than a work to be exposed unprotected in an open church. Its form is octagonal; four opposite sides projecting beyond the others, and consisting of richly-worked and deeply-recessed Gothic arches, surrounded by pediments and finials; the centre arch in front forming the door of the tabernacle. Above these rises Gothic temple, formed of slender columns, panels of open work, ornamented cornice, &c., &c.; the whole surmounted by an octagonal dome carved in rich fret work, and terminating above in a globe, and beautifully-designed cross. It was designed by Mr. Ryan, the Irish architect.

REVOLUTIONARY MEMORIES.

MEN AND TIMES OF THE REVOLUTION; OR, MEMOIRS OF ELKANAH WATSON, including Journals of Travels in Europe and America, from 1777 to 1842, with his correspondence with public men, and reminiscences and incidents of the Revolution: edited by his Son, WINSLOW C. WATSON. New-York; Dana & Co.

If the memoirs and writings of such men as George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Ben. Franklin, and Paul Jones are, so to speak, the solid blocks by which the monumental history of the Revolution is raised before the eye of the world, the memoirs of such a man as Elkanah Watson may be accounted the mortar or cement that happily fills up the crevices, and thus becomes a most useful and necessary part and parcel of the structure.

At a period, such as that of the American Revolution, every man may be said to be public. When Revolution is awake, no man sleeps. When society trembles, like a city on the jaws of an earthquake, and when all thought is overrun by, or run into, the exigencies of the time, every mind is a microcosm of the public life, an index to the public trepidation, a beacon to the public hope. The individual memories of such a period are public property, and more fully daguerreotype the passions, purposes and movements of the populace than can, in general, be gleaned from the official documents which are too often the sole basis of history, and which, being dictated more to make than to reflect opinion, need the concurrent testimony of the streets and by-ways to endorse the camp and capitol; the griefs of private hearths, to substantiate the recital of public calamities; the devotion and struggles of the man, to more distinctly indicate the strength of the many. The drummer or private can fill up many a brilliant episode in the battle, which is but outlined in the General's dispatch—can supply many a magnanimous picture, which, like the thunder in the heavens, is born in clouds of battle smoke, and is only recognizable to the opposing forces that beget it.

For these reasons, the unofficial histories of great eras have an importance which cannot be too highly valued by the student, and possess a charm which at once commands the attention of those who read either for amusement or instruction.

Like Orlando, in "As You Like It," Elkanah Watson was "never schooled, and yet learned." Like him, in being "so full of noble device," and "so much in the heart of the world," his companionship is of rare interest, and his reminiscences teem with suggestiveness, that sends the blood flinging through us like sheet-lightning in the skies of Indian summer; and under the hearty and absorbing influences of which, we are favored with glimpses of men and movements, even the names of which are talismanic. From an early age up to his last days, Elkanah Watson was in the habit of recording his observations on men, occurrences and places, and not the least interesting portion of the volume before us is occupied with clear outlines of localities, which, while they furnish the future historian with the memorable scenes of the Revolution, as they were in the days thereof, afford the present generation a standard by which to measure the growth of many important places, and whereby to judge of the beneficial effects of the war of Independence.

Descended "in the sixth generation" from Edward Winslow a Puritan father, and third Governor of the Colony, Elkanah was born in the town of Plymouth, in the year 1758, within rifle-shot of the Rock on which his ancestors landed. His father and all his relatives, "with few exceptions," he states, were "zealous and active Whigs (which in those days meant rebels), aiding with their hands and purses the glorious struggle for Independence." He lived a long, eventful and useful life, took up the ploughshare in the post-meridian of it with as much enthusiasm as he had seized the sword in his boyhood—went to cultivating the fields in his ripe middle age that he had defended in his youth; and having educated a naturally vigorous mind by travel, keen observation and communion with many distinguished intellects of Europe, as well as with some of the best men of America, flung his hale intelligence and active frame into scuffles with the stubborn soil of New-England; directed his energies to the rearing and improving of live stock; founded Agricultural societies, and died at the patriarchal age of eighty-four years, at Port Kent, in the year 1842.

The portion of the present volume having chief attraction for us is that which embraces the author's services and observations during the period of Revolution. The first thunder over Lexington startled him to action. He heard the last echo of it dropping acknowledgment of Independent America, from the King's lips, in the British House of Lords. These scenes embrace the grand period. They are the prologue and epilogue of the immortal drama.

Before entering on them in detail, we shall look at the School exercises of young New-England in those days. Verily these school-masters taught the young idea how to shoot. Let us listen to Elkanah:

"The School was kept by Alexander Scammel and Peleg Wadsworth, both, afterwards, distinguished officers in the Revolutionary army. In common with the other patriotic spirits of the age, they evidently saw the approach of the coming tempest. I remember them as early as 1771, intently studying military tactics, and have often seen them engaged in a garden adjoining my father's, drilling each other. They formed the boys into a military company, and our school soon had the air of a miniature arsenal, with our wooden guns and tin bayonets suspended round the walls. At twelve o'clock, the word was given, 'to arms,' and each boy seized his gun; then, led by either Scammel or Wadsworth, we were taught military evolutions, and marched over hills, through swamps, often in the rain, in the performance of these embryo military tactics."

Wadsworth and Scammel were beloved by their pupils, as captains should be adored by their soldiery. In the midst of their School the masters were only bigger boys; and if they did not weigh the pupils down with learning and initiate their young shoulders into the "scholastic bend," they did what was much better, they instilled a chivalric love of truth into their minds—pushed their young muscles into a gallant hardihood—prepared them for those fields upon which, having exchanged their tin bayonets for more relentless weapons, more than one-half of this little school-army gave up their lives, manfully fighting the battles of their boy-ideas. In a word, these schoolmasters taught their scholars to love Liberty, and how to defend it—taught them to die—taught them to be free!

As Paul Jones, a child, stood on the hill over Solway Frith, and yelled his boyish mandates to the vessels below; as Lord Edward Fitzgerald's boyhood revelled in an orangery, which he transformed into a mimic fortification, and sent the little thunder of his dwarfish cannon in joyous echoes over the Garonne,—so the Plymouth legion of urchins, in their school-house arsenal, or scampering in a retreat after, or rallying in a charge round the kind and lathy Scammel, (for he was as tall and thin as a flag-staff,) beheld, if they could have read, their future destiny in the boy-glory of the present.

Brave boys! brave masters! There should be a monument on the site of your old school-house, with grand entablatures and heroic basso relievos of your history. The spot would be but duly honored by a Military Academy, with Scammel and Wadsworth professorships. Have we a painter who will give us an interior at twelve o'clock, Scammel giving the word, "to arms." Wilkie would have chuckled over such a subject.

Leaving home at the age of fifteen, Young Elkanah was apprenticed to John Brown, of Providence, Rhode Island, then one of the foremost merchants in America. The following year, the pupil of Scammel had a real gun over his shoulder, and a scarlet coat, with yellow facings, enwrapping his body; for lo! under the wintry favor of a December night, a party of unknown men had flavored the disquiet appetite of the times, by emptying a cargo of tea—more famous than cargo ever was before or since, or may be in the future—more famous in its destruction than ever in decoction were the aromatic leaves of the delicatest products of the celestial shrubberries of Quang-Tong—into Boston harbor. No æsthetic tea party, where simple-minded blue-stockings of both sexes congregate to deify the transcendental blue-devils of either, was this, but a gallant party of defiant "Colonists," whose great glory was to do the deed; and whose greatest ambition was to remain unknown and allow the American character to take the credit of it.

The Revolution was ripening. The noon of Scammel's school-house had evidently spread, for the cry, "to arms," set the population of every community perambulating the streets, in soldier fashion. In Providence there were five companies, in one of which our young Elkanah was a worthy member.

The storm kept on thickening and lowering, until the blood of Lexington, like a streak of lightning, lit up the rebellious atmosphere. "Lexington and Concord have been soaked in blood, and the country is in a blaze," was heard everywhere along the road. The tocsin was sounded. The "dreadful note of preparation" travelled on the wings of fierce hope, or undecided trepidation. Time-strengthened age and robust youth, matron's prayers and maiden pallor bore the words far and wide. The response was instantaneous. Within ten minutes after he received the news, John Stark was in the saddle, making with all speed for Boston. The tidings reached Israel Putnam in his farm fields at Pomfret, the April sun shining blissfully on his quiet labor and weather-beaten face. In a moment, the old lion is aroused! Leaping on his best horse, in his laboring garments, he is off without even bidding adieu to his family. "Those who saw that rough form fly past, knew that wild work would soon be done."*

The "blood of Lexington" splashes in the streets of New-Haven. Benedict Arnold takes up the theme, and with that audacity which in time of need surpasses eloquence, invokes the multitude to war. They rally round him. He leads them to Boston. Varnam, with his Greenwich Volunteers, and the merry quaker, Nat. Greene, who had but a few years previous hammered the way from his blacksmith's forge into the General Assembly of the Colony, headed his Warwick Greens towards Lexington. All these men became great Generals; one, alas, a great traitor.

When the news reached Providence, on the afternoon of the day of Lexington, "our five Companies," says Elkanah Watson, 'flew to arms. The whole population was convulsed by the most vehement excitement." Their immediate march, however was deferred, as they were unprovided with cartridges. During that "agitated night," young Watson and his comrades were busy "running bullets and preparing ammunition." Early on the next morning they were on the road, in defiance of the proclamation of the royalist Governor, Wanton, threatening the penalty of open rebellion, against all those who crossed the colony line.

"We had advanced six miles," (says our auto-biographer,) "amid the cries and tears of women, every road we passed enveloped in a cloud of dust from the march of armed men, hastening onwards, when an express met us with the information that the regulars had been driven back into Boston."†

These "exhilarating, though tragic scenes," awoke the adventurous nature of Elkanah. He desired to join the army, as many of his comrades had done; but he appealed to his father and Mr. Brown in vain, to break his indenture to the latter. The spirit of the lad, however, was not unnoticed. At the beginning of July, 1775, Washington received the chief command of the forces besieging Boston. The "rebels" were very destitute of munitions of war, and were reduced to but four rounds of powder before the besieged city. At this moment a ship belonging to Brown (who, foreseeing the impending hostilities, directed his sea-captains to freight with powder on their return voyages,) arrived, bringing a ton-and-a-half of the immortal necessity. To Watson, not yet eighteen years old, was the charge of delivery given. The account of the mission is peculiarly interesting, and lets us into some secrets of rebel strength and artifice.

"I took with me six or eight recruits to guard it. I delivered my letter to Gen. Washington in person, and was deeply impressed with an awe I cannot describe, in contemplating that great man; his august person, his majestic mien, his dignified and commanding deportment, more conspicuous, perhaps, at that moment, from the fact that he was in the act of admonishing a militia colonel with some animation. He directed a young officer to accompany me and superintend the delivery of the powder at Mystic, two miles distant. Whilst delivering it at the powder-house, I observed to the officer, 'Sir, I am happy to see so many barrels of powder here.' He whispered a secret in my ear, with an indiscretion that marked the novice in military affairs: 'These barrels are filled with sand.' 'And wherefore,' I inquired. 'To deceive the enemy,' he replied, 'should any spy, by chance, look in.' Such was the wretched appointment of that army, upon which rested the hopes of American liberty."

So the American Revolution is initiated; and the "Mystic" powder is in a fair way of being magical.

It is seven years after, and Elkanah Watson is in London. During these seven years he has had many adventures; travelling from Massachusetts to South Carolina and Georgia, as the agent of Mr. Brown. The Revolution was at its height, and the danger was imminent. His track, the people he met, the towns he visited, the battle-fields he contemplated, the wrecks and ravages of war that came within his observation, are all clearly indicated in his reminiscences. Visiting Europe, in the same capacity, he was intrusted with despatches to Franklin, which fact, and an intimacy with John Adams and other Americans, opened the way for him into the best political and literary society of the day, in France and England. His notes on these people are acute and numerous. Mingling with the "great luminaries," he felt himself "occupying exalted and privileged ground."

Early on the ever-memorable 5th of December, 1782, the Earl of Ferrers conducted our hero to the door of the House of Lords, gave him a card of admission, and whispered, "Get as near the throne as you can—fear nothing." Elkanah, scarcely needing the hint, soon found himself elbowing my Lord Admiral Howe, exactly in front of the royal chair. The day was ominously dark and foggy. The Lords were in promiscuous and sullen groups. The antiquated, narrow and elevated windows but added to the gloom of the hall, for want of occupation. England's victory over the Spanish Armada, on the dark tapestry, was fitly almost obscured from recognition. Unuttered and unutterable discontent and dejection sat upon the visages of some American royalists present. Now was the winter of their discontent. The American painters, Benjamin West and Singleton Copley, escorting some ladies, were visible; but scarce dare talk American, for their studios were the "constant resort of the Royal family and the nobility."

For two hours, the gloom seemed growing deeper, the Spanish Armada more obscure, the windows more distant, the royalist Americans more dejected—when "a tremendous roar of Artillery" was heard; "a small door on the left of the throne" opened, and George III, the "simple maniac," as John Adams calls him,* "seated himself upon the chair of state, in a graceful attitude." But withal he was agitated. Watson watched "with intense interest, every tone of his voice, and every motion of his countenance." It was to him, he writes with pithy fervor, "a moment of thrilling and dignified exultation." The Commons being summoned, the King proceeded to read his speech, acknowledging the Independence of the States. Coming to the passage in which he, with the "powers" vested in him, "offered to declare them free," &c., "he paused," writes Watson, "and was in evident agitation; either embarrassed in reading his speech, by the darkness of the room, or affected by a very natural emotion." Elkanah humorously italicizes the natural emotion. Of course it was a very natural emotion. No emotion could well be more natural. Could the emotional affections of "simple maniac," who, with "a Machiavelian maniac who had been his preceptor, conceived the design of enslaving these Colonies they pretended to favor,"* have more natural cause of agitation, than to see the red armies of England fall, like red sparks from an anvil, into black uselessness and death; the beloved Colonies swept clear of them, and the Declaration of Independence forced at the point of the bayonet across the surging Atlantic—into the House of Lords—forced, not to the foot of the throne, but upon it; and out of the mouth of a King who had despised it?

Ah! shade of Elkanah, it was, indeed, a very natural emotion. As you wrote at the time,—

"He was evidently embarrassed; he hesitated, choked, and executed the painful duties of the occasion with an ill grace that does not belong to him. I cannot adequately portray my sensations, in the progress of this address; every artery beat high, and swelled with my proud American blood. It was impossible not to revert to the opposite shores of the Atlantic, and to review in my minds eye, the misery and woe I had myself witnessed in several stages of the contest, and the wide-spread desolation, resulting from the stubbornness of this very King, now so prostrate, but who had turned a deaf ear to our humble petitions for relief."

Watson went home to dine with Copley, who had finished a fine portrait of the former, saving the last touches to the back ground, in which a ship was depicted, bearing to America the news of its acknowledged Independence. The flag alone of the vessel was unfinished; Copley's prudence forbidding him to unfurl, until assurance was made doubly sure. On their return from the House of Lords, "he invited me," wrote Watson, "into his studio, and there, with a bold hand, a master's touch, and, I believe, an American heart, attached to the ship the Stars and Stripes. This was, I imagine, the first American flag hoisted in Old England."

Mr. Winslow C. Watson has performed a highly commendable labor in arranging these interesting reminiscences for the press. He advises us that his materials are only touched on. We are glad to hear it. The portions illustrating the years of the Revolution are deeply interesting. They supply the commercial under-current, the ways and means of it; as Vincent Nolte's work exhibited the speculations and financial projects by which Napoleon was supplied, in many instances, with the sinews of war. The present work is admirably put through the press, and very creditable to the young publishing house from which it is issued.

* Letter from Adams to Elkanah Watson, printed at p. 379.—Men and Times, &c.

† John Adams' Letter, before quoted.

‡ Washington and his Generals: By J. T. Headley, vol. 1.

THE MESILLA VALLEY.

FROM THE NOTE-BOOK OF AN IRISH SURGEON.

The first glimpse of the Mesilla Valley is sufficient to excite in the mind of the beholder feelings of surprise and admiration; and they are produced, it matters little from what quarter the traveller may come, whether from the gradually ascending plains of western Texas, or the rolling basaltic tableland of what was formerly northern Mexico, now an integral portion of this country, added on to the territory of New Mexico. For to the eyes of those accustomed to behold our more favored lands—blessed with abundant streams, perennially full, bringing constant life to a variety of vegetation, whether of grass, bush, or forest, and forming as it were the basis or ground, to use a technical phrase, upon which climate and season work out the different tints and tones constituting, as a whole, the beautiful landscapes so familiar to us—to such eyes, the western portions of Texas, and the plains beyond the Rio Grande, are unmitigated deserts, covered with grass only one third of the year. Scantily supplied with timber and water, they afford a precarious subsistence for the 150 miles over which the voyageur is necessitated to travel before he can reach the bed of the river. Nor does he see the latter from any distance; his eye is not gladdened, his heart not supported by the prospect, still enlarging by degrees at his approach. On the contrary, ascending as he nears the Rio Grande, which lies in a deep depression in the general elevated level, he gains no sight of the Valley until within a few miles of its actual bottom. But what a glorious prospect there is stretched out before him! Groves of cottonwoods, majestic in height and luxuriant in foliage, whose bright green tint contrasts vividly with the sombre brown of the hills in the background; immense areas of Indian corn, growing to a luxuriance hardly exceeded by California productiveness, tended with little care, and guarded from depredation with so little apparent caution, that the trail—for there is no high road in these parts, fencing off with jealous care what is peculiar from what is common—passes through the centre of such plantations (for fields they cannot be termed), leaving the large and ripened ears a ready prey to hungry man and beast that pass along; vineyards scattered here and there, and growing a profusion of finely-flavored grapes; orchards of quinces, peaches, pears, and apples—such are the prominent features caught at a coup d'œil.

So much has been talked in public, and so much has been written about the Mesilla Valley, of late years, that those unfamiliar with the locality may be apt to attribute too much importance to it, merely regarding its superficial extent. Considering its fertility, it cannot be too highly prized, but the area it occupies is small. The name is now applied to the very eastern portion of the Gadsden purchase, that portion which lies on the immediate banks of the Rio Grande. This river having its sources four hundred miles farther north, in the melting snows of the Sierra San Juan, and other ranges of what are called the Rocky Mountains, travels almost its whole course for 250 miles between two ranges, which narrow its bed by their proximity; further south they drop down and disappear, leaving, for the greater portion of its southern passage, the further direction of the stream to be determined by some lesser ranges of hills, which, lying more apart from its bed, allow a wider space for the valley of the river.

This widening commences at the village of Doña Anna, about latitude 32 deg. 20 min., and extends south to El Paso, a distance of nearly fifty-two miles, the breadth varying from half a mile to two miles, and is more generally not more than a mile in width. Within this extent are two military points of the United States, one at the lower end of the valley, opposite El Paso, termed Fort Bliss, the other 38 miles up the river, called Fort Fillmore. Between the latter place and Doña Ana, the Valley preserves its greatest width, and within these 14 miles lie the towns of Doña Ana, Las Cruces, and Mesilla. In the languge of the place, the Mesilla Valley is this strip of river bottom, 14 miles in extent, but in the understanding of all who speak of it geographically, the whole Valley to within a few miles of El Paso, is called by the same name; and as its population and productions are alike along its whole extent, we shall speak of the whole River Grande Valley, in the Gadsden treaty purchase, as the Mesilla Valley, the name being derived from the Spanish word signifying a "little table," applied to the low, flat topped, elevated land which bounds the sides of the river course. This same Gadsden purchase deserves a passing notice. Before the separation of Texas from Mexico, both sides of the Rio Grande, or Rio Bravo del Norte (as it is more properly termed), belonged to the latter power. By the boundary treaty, the Americans stipulated, much against Mexican will, that the left bank of the river should be the Texan boundary. Later still, on the acquisition of the territory of New Mexico, at the close of the Mexican war, the southern boundary of New Mexico was looked upon as the dividing line between this country and Mexico. The boundary commission were appointed to settle the dividing line, but some difficulty arising about the exact limit, Mr. Bartlett, the American commissioner, decided that the line should be struck at a point seven miles above El Paso. By a treaty with Santa Anna, made a few years back, Mr. Gadsden, on behalf of the United States, acquired the undisputed possession of a large portion of territory south of the river Gila, and at one time a portion of the Mexican states of Sonora and Chihuahua, extending from the Colorado river on the west to the Rio Bravo eastward, occupying an extent of six million acres. Ten million of dollars was the sum agreed upon, of which the greater portion is already paid, and until full payment of which it was to remain subject to Mexican laws; but so little is this stipulation regarded, that in the town of Mesilla, the American candidate and ticket is put forward, and voting for members of the legislature of New Mexico is carried on as vigorously as if they were already integral parts of that district.

A dear purchase it would have been if every acre represented a dollar and half, but with the purchase there was also the wiping out of an old stipulation, constant in former treaties, viz., that the United States should protect the Mexican border from the incursions and depredations of Indians. Neglecting this, the Mexicans claimed indemnity for their losses by Indian inroads, amounting to six millions of dollars. All this, both the indemnity and the old stipulation, was wiped out, and the whole Mesilla Valley became a part of New Mexico.

Of all the towns in the Valley, Mesilla is the most populous. It is built upon a sand-hill, elevated some feet above the general level of the Valley. A portion of the town looks well, the houses being built of mud, sun-baked bricks (adobes as such are termed in Spanish phrase), and many of them whitened or plastered on the outside. At one end of the town is the Plaza or public square, with the few shops and stores which supply this village of 3000 souls; at the other, in straggling disorder, are heaped the houses of the Indian and New Mexican inhabitants, some made of adobes, but the majority built in what is called the "Jacal" fashion, namely, erecting thin poles about a foot apart, inclosing a square, putting a light cover of brush for a roof, and covering the sides in either by mud, brush, or canvas. A light defence, this, from the weather, but the winter is short and not very severe, and shelter from the rain is more needed than from the cold. There are few American families in the village, not more than six; a small sprinkling of adventurers, many of them outcasts from society, unconvicted refugees from the laws of Arkansas, Texas, and other southwestern states; deserted or discharged soldiers, a motley group, ready for any occupation of the roughest and most daring kind, living for the time a life of lawless indolence, and deriving an existence by acts of cruelty and theft upon the weaker and more inoffensive New Mexican. The latter has all the traits of his Spanish descent. Fond of his horse, and indolent to a degree beyond belief, he is either lounging in the sun at his own door, or on horseback at a neighbor's; fond of gambling, he works but to live and obtain wherewithal to risk at the table, and so great is the infatuation, that not only money, but chattels, land, and even self is staked upon the success of the game. It has happened so frequently as to pass without remark, that a New Mexican may come to the table a freeman, and before he leaves it at night become a slave. The majority live by cultivating a portion of the Valley, and herding cattte and sheep upon the tablelands which lie at some elevation above on either side of the river, reaching upon the east to the base of the Organ Mountains, a distance nearly fourteen miles in a right line. A ready market is found for stock in the village population of the Valley, at El Paso, and more especially by the two military stations, and whatever government trains and outfits which may happen to be quartered in the Valley for the sake of recruiting the health of men and mules, previous to a journey across the country to either ocean.

The people of New Mexico, and those inhabiting this part of t especially, are paler in complexion than any other mixture of Spanish and Indian blood; they are of light make, with straight nose, small and frequently retiring chin, and black hair. Among the females there is a greater variety in form and color than among the men. In a crowd of the former, as on the occasion of a dance or baile, every shade of color and outline of profile can be traced, from the almost copper-colored Indian squaw to the delicately fair skin and well filled figure of European blood; but whether approximating to Indian or Spanish type, there is an ease of manner and grace of motion common to both, which constitutes the charm of female society there, and renders it so fascinating a spot to the youthful and passionate pleasure-seeker. Dances and fandangoes are improvised without notice or preparation, and it needs only the arrival of a few strangers, and the sending round word to the villagers that some cavaliers are desirous to be amused, to turn out one half of the female population, in their best gowns, and robed in their bright rebosos or shawls, which serve them alike for cloak, bonnet, and veil, as ready and willing, night after night, to undergo the constant whirl of the waltz or the more easy grace of the Spanish dance, as the daintiest belle of Newport or Saratoga.

Yet it would be wrong to class the whole female population among the votaries of Terpsichore, or as rushing in crowds to enjoy the society of strangers. Every village and town contains families, the females of which live as retired as those of China, and whose society is only to be obtained through the key of private friendship.

Nine miles above Mesilla town is the village of Doña Ana, situated on a flat terrace, perhaps twenty-five feet above the river level, on its east bank. This peculiarity of locating towns, not on the river side but on the terrace land or mesa above, is common to most villages on the Rio Grande, and arises from two causes: first, because it thus allows the whole fertile land of the river sides to be appropriated to tillage or cultivation, and secondly because the situation is much more healthy than if it were on the bottom, where in spring and autumn congestive fevers abound with remarkable fatality. Seated thus, overlooking the river, the towns are often one or two miles from the stream, and in order to supply themselves with this most necessary element, they draw off a channel or water-course from the river several miles up, where its level is that of the town to be supplied. These channels or asequias are tended with care, and their sides repaired to prevent their being broken and the supply of water to the town thus cut off. They are carried through the principal ways of the village, or sometimes around it, and in these they wash and bathe outside and below the town, taking their portable water from above. This arrangement is simple and economical of expense, but very rude and wasteful of so precious a liquid as water is in these latitudes. Not one half the quantity of rain which falls in the Atlantic states falls here in the year, and dropping on a heated and parched soil, it is greedily drank up and lost to the surface. The river itself, the Great River as it is called by excellence,—the Rio Grande,—in its serpentine course, soaks into the light clays and loose sands over which it rolls, saturating the whole Valley bottom, and producing thus that wondrous fertility; but in so doing has its volume so constantly diminished, that after travelling down 600 miles, and receiving several streams to mingle in its waters, it yet appears to gain no increase in volume, and where it rolls into the Gulf of Mexico it is not so large a stream as it is 400 miles above.

At Doña Ana it is about 60 yards wide and 4 feet deep, rising several feet during freshets. It lies nearly ten feet below the Valley level, with steep banks, which it corrodes and washes down by the frequent changes in its channel which the current yearly makes. On account of the water level being so much below the Valley, asequias are brought down from higher points to irrigate the fields, without which the soil would scarcely produce any thing. By this means, corn, wheat, onions, beans, grapes, tomatoes, &c., are raised in great abundance. This town, (Doña Ana), though small, containing hardly more than 400 people, is yet more wealthy than many larger places. When Mesilla was first raised into a village, a few years ago, it was peopled by most of the poorer New Mexicans from this place, and though the population of the town was diminished, yet little wealth was removed. The present inhabitants are of the old families of New Mexico, who own large tracts of land, and besides cultivating the ground raise stock. It is the oldest town in the Mesilla Valley, although it can scarcely date further back than 1836, when some settlers from El Paso, allured by the fertility of the place, settled it, and named it after the wife of Don Armijo, the Mexican governor of the territory. These settlers would speedily have become wealthy, were it not for the constant incursions of those brigands of the mountains the Apaches, who driving off horses and cattle, and "reaping what they have not sowed," cripple the resources and check the industry of a people not over-industrious.

"Conscience: or the Trials of May Brooke," (in two volumes) "The Hamiltons" and "Hours before the Altar" are the titles of four little books on our table, from Dunigan & Brother (James B. Kirker). The first is from the pen of a graceful writer, already favorably known by her labors in, and illustration of the field of American Catholicity. To our juvenile readers the work will be particularly acceptable. It will interest as well by the character of the tale as the principles upon which it is founded. "The Hamiltons," in the words of the author, is intended to illustrate "the strength, the beauty and the purity of a true Catholic heart.," and the irresistible influence it may acquire over those who come within its sphere. An idea of the tale may be furnished from the beautiful thought which inspires the writer, and which to her mind pictures Catholicity as "fully equal to all the emergencies of the most eventful life," in its child-like repose and tender purity. Of the "Hours" the Archbishop of Paris, in 1851, said—"The book is well adapted to aid pious souls to nourish in their heart's sentiments of a sweet and tender devotion." Kirker (brother and sucessor of Dunigan) is one of the most enterprising publishers in the States, who brings his taste and experience into the production of that specialty of the book publishing for which his house has been so long established.

THE MAGAZINES.—We are too late in the field this month to do more than acknowledge the receipt of the Monthlies. The spirited biographies of the men of the Revolution continue a prominent feature of Harper. The "All Fool's Day Sketches" are capital. We have read a very happy and appreciative paper on Erastus Palmer, the "Sculptor of Albany," in Putnam. The paper entitled "A Talk about Popular Songs" is clever, and though too sketchy, much to the point. It is interesting more for the power of talk than the reflection exhibited. The article on Browning's Poetry is the outpourings of one evidently deaf, blind and lame to everything else, save the poetry of the author of "Paracelsus." It is a strong weakness, and we must say we rather approve of it than otherwise. The old Knickerbocker and the young Schoolfellow conduct themselves as their respective years might suggest,—the latter being rather a better specimen, for his age, than is usual. Household Words convey many pleasant and interesting sentences, which naturally enough amalgamate into paragraphs, which associate into pages, which hold, in turn, a mass meeting, and turn out a book.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Congressional Reports, from	Hon. S. A. Douglas.
Men and Times of the Revolution; or Memoirs of Elkanah Watson, &c., edited by his son, Winslow C. Watson.	Dana & Co.
'98 and '48, the Modern Revolutionary History and Literature of Ireland. By John Savage.	Redfield.
Charlemont, } By Gilmore Simms. Beauchampe, }	"
Works of Edgar Allan Poe. Vol. 4. Arthur Gordon Pym.	"
Miscellaneous Writings of Dr. Maginn, edited by Dr. Shelton Mackenzie. Vol. 3. Shakspere Papers.	"
Sketches and Adventures in Madeira, Portugal, and the Andalusias of Spain. By the author of Daniel Webster and his Cotemporaries.	Harper & Brothers.
Physiology and Calisthenics, for Schools and Families. By Catharine E. Beecher.	"
The Rise of the Dutch Republic; a History. By John Lothrop Motley. 3 vols.	"
The Hamiltons; or Sunshine in Storm. By Cora Berkley.	Dunigan & Brother. (James B. Kirker.)
Hours before the Altar, by the Abbe de la Bouillerie	"
Conscience; an American Catholic Tale. By Mrs. A. H. Dorsey. 2 vols.	"
Putnam	Dix & Edwards.
Schoolfellow: for Boys and Girls	"
Household Words	"
Knickerbocker	S. Houston.
National Democatic Review; March; Washington.	G. P. Bail.
Brownson's Review. April.

Literary and Artistic News.

The copyrights of several popular authors were lately sold by Hodgson, the book auctioneer of London. There was a full attendance of the most eminent publishers and booksellers, not only from all parts of the metropolis, but also from Manchester, Liverpool, and other small towns of the country, among whom there was a very active competition for the property. There were 757 lots, of which the following brought the prices attached: The works of Captain Maryatt; Madame de Stael's "Corinne," £21; Gleig's "Country Curate," 51 guineas; Manzoni's "Betrothed," 16 guineas; Lover's "Rory O'More," £140; Captain Chamier's "Ben Brace and Life of a Sailor," 190 guineas; Ingoldsby's "My Cousin Nicholas," 95 guineas; Banim's "Smuggler," £23 10s.; Captain Maxwell's "Stories of Waterloo," "The Bivouac," "Hector O'Halloran," and "Captain Blake," £550; six works of Theodore Hook, 456 guineas; Grattan's "Heiress of Bruges," "Jacqueline of Holland," "Legends of the Rhine," 108 guineas; Captain Trelawney's "Younger Son," £42; Lady Scott's "Trevelyan," £21; Edgeworth's "Helen," 105 guineas; Mrs. Trollope's "Vicar of Wrexhill," and "The Widow Barnaby," £104; Hood's "Tylvey Hall," 121 guineas; Whitehead's "Richard Savage," £14; Albert Smith's "Scattergood Family," "Adventures of Mr. Ledbury," and "The Marchioness Brinvillier's," £535; Landon's "Romance and Reality," £22; Leigh Hunt's "Experiences of a Jail Chaplain, 45 guineas, &c. The property realized above £11,000.

The controversy between the next of kin of the late Mr. Turner and the trustees of the National Gallery respecting the pictures bequeathed by that eminent artist has at length been adjusted, and a compromise of the contested claims has received the sanction of the Court of Chancery. All pictures, drawings, and sketches, either wholly or partially painted, sketched, or drawn by Mr. Turner (and whether finished or unfinished) are to be deemed the property of the trustees of the National Gallery for the benefit of the public; Sir C. Eastlake and Mr. Knight being the persons to make the selection of such pictures as, in their opininion, have been touched by the master. The trustees of the National Gallery are to be declared well entitled to the picture "Dido Building Carthage," and the pictures formerly in the Tabley collection, now in their possession. All other the drawings, sketches and pictures and all other the personal estate of the testator (excepting stock in the funds), are to be given over to the next of kin. The trustees of the Royal Academy, waiving all rights under the will, are to be declared entitled to £20,000 clear, free from legacy duty.

At the last meeting of the Artists' Provident Institution, Earl Stanhope stated that a portion of the papers left by the late Sir Robert Peel, under the care of himself and Mr. Cardwell, would be published in a few weeks. The publication would consist of a part of Sir Robert Peel's memoirs, written by that statesman himself, and related to the period in which the Roman Catholic relief bill was passed, and contained a full account of his own opinions and conduct in that transaction. The late Sir Robert Peel had directed his literary executors to apply the profits arising from the publication of any of his papers to the assistance of deserving men in need, who had followed the pursuits of art, literature, and science. In virtue, therefore, of the powers vested in them, he (Earl Stanhope) and Mr. Cardwell now offered to this institution the first fruits of the intended publication, and he begged to tender to the society a draft for one hundred guineas, which he trusted they would accept as another proof, if any other was wanting, of the good will that Sir Robert Peel ever felt and displayed towards art and artists.

A purely original conception of the Anunciation of the Virgin Mary, life size, has just been published by James Farrell, the sculptor, of Dublin. The artist selected that portion of Sacred History where the Virgin said—"Behold the handmaid of the Lord: be it done to me according to Thy word." The attitude of the figure (says the Dublin Freeman) is most graceful, the head slightly raised, with the eyes looking towards Heaven, expressive of intense love and devotion; the right hand elevated on the breast, while the other falls gracefully by the side, the hand holding a lily and a portion of the garment, which falls in artistically arranged folds. It was the intention of the artist not to circulate any casts of the figure until he had executed it in marble, but he has yielded to the solicitations of many friends, who are most anxious to have duplicates of it. We have no doubt but that many religious establishmeuts in this country, will be desirous to have copies of a figure so much and justly admired.

Mr. Buchanan, the American Minister, has sent home from London an original portrait of John Hampden, the celebrated English patriot, who was one of the first to resist the encroachments of the Stuarts, and to assail the prerogatives of the Crown, in the great struggle for popular rights which led to the establishment of the English Commonwealth, and subsequently planted on this soil the republican germs which have grown up into a nation of thirty millions of freemen. This portrait belonged to Mr. John Maegregor, member of Parliament for Glasgow, and is presented by him, through Mr. Buchanan, to the Congress of the United States, who will undoubtedly give it a conspicuous place among the national pictures. It is one of the only two original portraits of Hampden now in existence.

Dr. Deakin, in a botanical book on this subject, says that 420 species of plants are found growing upon the Coliseum, including 253 genera, and illustrations of 66 of the natural orders of plants. There are 59 species of grasses, 47 of the syngenocious plants, and 41 of the pea tribe. This in an enclosed space of six acres of ground, a limit that does not include the walls and ruins. This space includes a great variety of soil and temperature. The lower or north side is damp, while the upper walls and accumulated mould are warm and dry; and the south side is still hotter and more Italian.

The following announcement, which appears in the number of the Catholic University Gazette just published, will afford much grtification to all who take an interest in Irish literature and antiquities:—We are gratified to be able to inform our readers that there is every ground to hope, through the liberality of the Father-General of the Franciscans, and of the Father Guardian of St. Isidore's at Rome, that the celebrated Irish MSS. deposted in that house, will soon be in the hands of the professor of Irish Literature in the Catholic University. It is well known what valuable materials those MSS. afford towards the elucidation of the history of the Irish church."

A Naples letter says:—"I have promised to invite your attention to a universal language invented by Sig. Valle and his brother, after fifteen years' devoted application to the subject. The peculiarity of it is this, that only seven letters are used, being consonants. Three of these are sufficient to describe any radical sound. The inventors contend that the system may be applied to telegraphic communication with a considerable saving of both time and money. I do not, of course, descend into details; but Sig. Valle is anxious to invite the attention of scientific men to the subject.

The magnificent paintings of M. Delaroche, at the Ecle des Beaux-Arts, which had been injured by fire some months back in the hall of meetings, are being cleaned. All the smoke and soot which had covered the paintings has been removed; the parts which had been cracked have been repaired; and the injury which had been inflicted by the heating of the wall has been completely removed. M. Delaroche will only have to give a few touches here and there, and one of his finest works will again appear in all its original perfection.

The English government has set three excellent antiquaries at work upon the state papers. Mr. Lemon, keeper of the state papers, takes the reign of Edward VI. (already advanced some stages) and the next three reigns. Mrs. Everett Green, author of "Lives of the Princesses of England," is laboring at the time of James I. Mr. John Bruce has undertaken the reign of Charles I. and the period of the commonwealth.

Dr. G. A. John, the astronomer of the University of Leipsic, has just published a pamphlet to prove that the comet expected to appear in the course of the present year is identical with that of 1266 and 1556. The latter is called in Germany Melancthon's comet, from the fact of that reformer having written several letters and dissertations about it, eleven of which are still extant.

The scientific world will learn with regret the death of the celebrated astronomer, Von Biela, which took place at Venice on the 18th of February. Wilhelm, Baron Von Biela, a major in the Austrian army, was born on his parental estate of Rossla, near Stolberg, in the Hartz mountains, on the 19th of March, 1782, and had consequently nearly completed his 74th year.

An admirable copy in chromo-lithograph, after one of Nicholl's happy and characteristic portraits of an Irish peasant, has just been published in Dublin. The artist is supposed to have made "the sketch," and to be in the act of submitting it for approval to the admiring subject, who, with his dudheen between his teeth, has let off a whiff to enjoy a hearty laugh of enjoyment.

The collection of paintings in the studio of Mr. J. F. Cropsey are soon to be offered at public sale. Mr. Cropsey is well known as one of the most distinguished landscape painters of America. For several years past he has resided in this city, but his health now requires him to go abroad, and his fine collection, the fruit of the labors of many years, is to be sold.

One of the oldest papers in Northern Europe is the official gazette of Sweden, the Postoch Inrikes Tigning. It was founded in 1644, during the reign of Queen Christina, the daughter of Gustavus Adolphus the Great; and the present year is, without interruption, its two hundred and eleventh anniversary.

Cambridge University has received from his Highness Prince Louis Lucien Bonaparte, "The Gospel of St. Matthew," translated into Lowland Scotch by H. P. Riddell; 8vo., Lond., 1856; a copy expressly struck off for this University, being one of a small limited number.

Dubufe has painted a character-portrait of M'lle Rosa Bonheur, which is exciting some attention in Paris. The lady-artist is represented as leaning, pencil in hand, on the neck of a favorite heifer—one of those fine young bulls (says an English paper) which she loves so well to paint.

Piccо, the "Sardinian minstrel," appeared, for the first time, last month, before a London audience. His performance on a shepherd's reed, not more than three inches long, was very extraordinary. The "Casta Diva" and the "Carnival of Venice" were very wonderful displays both of taste and skill.

A company is about to be started in London, under the auspices of Cramer, Beale & Co., with a view to erect a new music hall in the neighborhood of Regent street. The hall is to be large enough to accommodate between 3,000 and 4,000 persons, and the cost of the building is estimated at £40,000.

London Theatres Destroyed by Fire.—Drury-lane, 1762 and 1809: her Majesty's, 1789; Pantheon, 1792; Astley, 1794, 1803; and 1841; Surrey (circus), 1805; Covent-garden, 1808 and 1856; Royalty, 1826; English Opera-house, 1830; Argyle Rooms, 1830; Olympic, 1849; Pavilion, 1856.

It is said that Lord Lucan has a work of some bulk in the press, which will be forthwith published, and in which he goes into various important matters with respect to affairs in the Crimea, when he and Lord Cardigan were there, which have never before been touched upon.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Florence, "the Yankee and Irish comedians," sailed for England, on a professional tour, in the Persia. Mr. Florence, though an "Irish comedian," is an American born, and carried out despatches to the United States Legation at London.

Ary Scheffer has just finished a portrait of Dickens. It is said to be quite worthy of the painter and the subject. The likeness is considered a very happy one, the remarkable expression of the novelist being seized with a vigor and reality most striking.

Every body was astonished, a few days ago, at the announcement that a Russian geologist, M. Ostrogradski, had been elected unanimously to a vacant place in the French Academy of Sciences, section of geology.

Queen Victoria has intimated her wish that the engraving of Sir Robert M'Clue, discoverer of the north-west passage, should be dedicated to her.

Two editors of the Figaro were lately sentenced to a fortnight's imprisonment and £20 fine each, and to £40 damages, for having libelled the well-known theatrical critic, Jules Janin.

Mr. Villemain has just written, for a new edition of the "Biographie Universelle," a life of Charles Fox, of which the Debats speaks in very high terms.

The Supreme Council of Denmark has decided on starting a journal to give short-hand reports of their proceedings, to which the public are to be admitted.

Gustavus Heine, the brother of Henry Heine, who lately died in Paris, is about to erect a monument to the memory of the latter, which will cost 10,000 francs.

The celebrated Bowyer Bible, in 45 folio volumes, and containing 6,000 engravings, was sold by auction, at Bolton, on Thursday, and bought by Robert Heywood, Esq., for £550.

The report that Mll'e Rachel was shortly to be married is contradicted by her friends in Paris. She will shortly re-appear at the Comedie Francaise, in "Louis XI."

The last volume of the first complete collective edition of the works of Gallileo has just been published in Florence.

Emerson lately delivered a series of lectures in Boston, on "English Civilization."

At the election for Vice President of the Royal Irish Academy, the numbers were: Rev. Dr. Todd, 111; Dr. Apjohn, 57.

New-York Over Sixty Years Ago.

When George Washington was elected first President of the United States, he moved to New-York and began looking around for a residence befitting his rank and station. At last he fixed upon the house No. 3 Cherry street, and soon after took up his abode therein. This, was in 1789, and great were the complaints that the President had fixed his residence so far out of town, way off on the road leading to the farm of Mr. Rutgers. The objections which would be urged now would be rather different. The house was situated at about the corner of Dover street.

The Vice-President lived up in Greenwich-road, (now Greenwich street,) on the other side of town, while the different officers of the government and the Senators and Representatives of the several States were scattered through the lower portions of the city. Thus, Oliver Ellsworth, the honorable Senator from Connecticut, was an inmate of the house, No. 193 Water street, near Fulton street, while Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, the Senator from Maryland, lived in Smith street, as William street between Old-slip and Liberty street was then called. Robert Morris, the financier of the Revolution, and then Senator from Pennsylvania, lived at No. 39 Great Dock street—that is, in Pearl street below Hanover Square. Of the Representatives, two of the best known, Fisher Ames and Theodore Sedgwick, both of Massachusetts, lived together, at No. 15 Great Dock street. F. A. Muhlenberg, of Pennsylvania, Speaker of the House, resided at Rev. Dr. Kunzie's, the pastor of the Lutheran Churches, No. 24 Chatham (now Park) row. Rhode Island had as yet neither Senators nor Representatives. Samuel A. Otis, of No. 5 Wal street, was Secretary of the Senate, and John Beckley, of No. 19 Maiden-lane, Clerk of the House.

Hon. James Duane, residence No. 17 Nassau street, then filled the chair which Mayor Wood now occupies, and Robert Benson, of Maiden-lane, filled the offices both of Mr. Valentine and of Richard B. Connolly, as "City and County Clerk." The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, Hon. Richard Morris, lived at No. 27 Nassau street.

The Chamber of Commerce already existed, and John Broom, of No. 6 Hanover street, was its President. Merchants lived over their warehouses then, and their clerks and apprentices boarded with them. The "Society for Promoting the Manumission of Slaves" was active, Hon. John Jay, the revolutionary statesman, being its President. The St. Patrick's, St. Andrew's, St. George's, and the German Societies, had all been already founded, and Baron Frederick William Steuben was President of the latter. The "St. Tammany's Society, or Independent Order of Liberty," had recently been founded, and from the following statement of its aims, &c., seems to have been something of a Know-Nothing concern:

"This being a national society, consists of Americans born, who fill all offices, and Adopted Americans who are eligible to the honorary posts of warrior and hunter."

Wm. Mooney was then the Grand Sachem of this rather exclusive Society.

Coach hire was not as dear then as now. "To take up and set down one passenger within one mile, one shilling. Two passengers, two shillings. To the two-mile-stone, and round by Cumming's, (a tavern in Water street,) for a party, &c., six shillings. Horn's Tour, eight shillings; Lake's Tour, ten shillings; and for each hour the carriage may be detained on the above routes, two shillings. For waiting on company in the city, three shillings per hour."

In 1790, the Boston stage left Courtlandt street on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, leaving Boston on alternate days. To Albany, it went on Mondays and Thursdays. There were several routes to Philadelphia, the fare being three dollars, about the same as now.

We have gleaned the foregoing curious information mostly from a copy of the City Directory for 1789–90. In the Historical Library, there is one for 1786, but in the City Library we find them for every year since 1789. The Directory for 1786–7 was edited by "David Franks, Conveyancer," and published by "Stephen Kollock, corner of Wall street and Water street." From 1789 to '91, Robert Hodge, Thomas Allen and Samuel Campbell were the publishers. Then for four or five years Wm. Duncan edited and T. and J. Swords published it. From 1796 till 1819, David Longworth conducted it. In 1819 Jonathan Olmstead published it, but in 1820 Thomas Longworth compiled it and continued till the edition of 1841. After that, John Doggett, Jr., published it for 11 years, since when it has been in the hands of John F. Trow.—N. Y. Times.

State of New Jersey.—At the last meeting of the Geographical Society, a very interesting paper was read by Lieutenant Viele, on the topographical survey of New Jersey. After some introductory details defining his idea of topography, Mr. Viele gave some facts, which we condense:

Three-fourths of the State of New Jersey is unimproved. Three millions of acres of land in that State remain uncultivated. The first settlers always seek the alluvial bottom lands. The elevated portions of any country furnish the key to its topography. The Blue Mountains form the most elevated New Jersey range, having an entire length of thirty-five miles, forming part of the Blue Ridge which runs through Pennsylvania, and there reaching a height of 1,500 to 1,800 feet. The course of an intended railroad was pointed out on the map. Limestone, slate, and the old red sandstone compose this ridge.

The continuation of the highlands of New York from north-east to south-west, forms another great feature of New Jersey. This range is primitive rock, intersected with iron ore very abundantly.

The lower section of the State, down to Cape May, was described as a dense forest, and has probably been submerged and risen from the water frequently. Three successive deposits of marl are separated by layers of sand. Cedars have grown over layers of fallen cedars. Immense cedar logs are now extracted from the earth and sawn into sound shingles. The Atlantic coast about Cape May subsided about a foot in one hundred years, in a country where the people are actually mining for wood. They mistake the subsidence by saying that the tide rises much higher than formerly. Thousands of lives and millions of dollars are lost upon the low beach extending some distance from Cape May. The arrangement of sluggish water and swamp, as shown on a map of two inches to a mile, presents a most curious appearance. The general habits of the wreckers was described as good, and even kind, not deserving the name of Barnegat pirates. They attended to this business with much disinterestedness until the Government appropriation was made. (Here several gentlemen interposing, declared that humanity was the first feeling of the inhabitants of this district.) This flat part of the coast is not particularly insalubrious.

A vote of thanks being presented to the Lieutenant for his interesting conversational paper, it was hoped that the State of New York, at no distant day, would enter upon a topographical survey of her own State, similar to that conducted by Lieut. Viele in New Jersey.

Connecticut River.—Opening of Navigation.—The moist weather of the last two or three days has pretty effectually taken off the ice in the river. At the Narrows, near Middletown, it is still fast, but will probably move off during the next twenty-four hours. The water is rising steadily. The steamboats are to commence running between Hartford city and New York as soon as the river is clear. Business has already commenced in the loading of propellers and vessels.

The April term of the Court of Sessions commenced on the 7th inst., before Judge Capron. The following is the list of crimes on the April calendar:—

Murder	5	Abortion	1
Arson	1	Forgery	7
Burglary	36	False Pretence	2
Grand larceny	18	Kidnapping	1
Robbery	4	Bigamy	2
Embezzlement	1	Felonious assault	2
Stabbing	1	Bastardy	1
Perjury	1	Abandonment	4
Receiving Stolen Goods	4
Total			91

The trial of the "Nicaraguan Filibusters" is set down for the present term of the United States District Court, which opens on Monday, 8th inst. Messrs. O'Keefe and Male were discharged from bail on their own recognizances to appear at trial. Mr. Creighton, under bail of 2,000, was paevented from returning from Nicaragua, whither he went three steamers since, by missing the last return steamer. A. J. Morrison and Wm. S. Lyster have, since their arrests been to Nicaragua, and now hold commissions in Gen. Walker's army. Those in New York waiting trial are George B. Hall, Addison Farnsworth, Charles Walters, and D. S. Dillingham, private secretary of Col. French. They have engaged as counsel Ogden Hoffman, Francis B. Cutting, Wm. West, Alfred A. Phillips, and Thos. Van Buren. Captain Tinklepaugh, at present of the Orizaba, and formerly of the Northern Light, together with Joseph L. White, Esq., counsel for the Accessory Transit Company, are also to be tried this term, on charge of having resisted the United States authorities, at the time of the detention of the Northern Light.

Launches.—The Adriatic was launched on Monday. If she does not surpass her noble cotemporaries in the beauty of her lines, she exceeds them in the magnitude of her proportions, which will be seen in the following table:

	Adriatic.	Niagara.	Vanderbilt.	Atlantic.
Length, -	354 feet.	345 feet.	335 feet.	287 feet.
Breadth, -	50 feet.	55 feet.	49 feet.	48 feet.
Depth, -	33 ft. 2 in.	31 feet.	33 feet.	31 feet.
Tonnage, -	5,900	5,200	5,100	3,000

The Adriatic has been built for the Collins' line of European steamships, by Messrs. J. & G. Steers. She will sail under the command of Capt. James West.

The splendid steamship Cuba, 1,000 tons burden, was launched on the same day, from the ship-yard of Wm. H. Webb, foot of Sixth street, East River. This vessel was built for B. Blanco, Esq., and is intended for the South American trade.

The steamships North Star and Ariel, of the Vanderbilt line to Havre, having been refitted, are now at the foot of Corlear street, E. R. The new steamship Vanderbilt, also of that line, is at the same wharf, receiving her machinery.

The Results of Riots.—The Louisville Democrat says that that city is in a happy condition—that "she is out of funds, has no Fire Department, no work to do, property ready for sale, but no bidders, plenty of room in vacant houses, with but few to occupy them. Multitudes of the foreign horde are gone, and Know Nothings gone after them, finding no work to do here."

Advices from New Mexico represent the Indians as desirous of Peace.

There is a report from the Crimea that two divisions of the British army, under Sir Colin Campbell, will immediately proceed to Canada.

Suicide of a Polish Exile.—A most melancholy affair occurred at the house of Mr. Fugh, in Drayton-street, yesterday afternoon. Mr. John F. Dembriski, a Pole, and one of the unfortunate exiles who have been driven from their own land by the political convulsions of late years, being destitute of means and employment, deliberately placed a pistol to his side and discharged its contents into his body. He died about half-past ten o'clock at night.

Mr. Dembrinski was a young man, some 24 or 25 years of age, was educated for the army at St Petersburgh, joined the Hungarians in the revolution of 1848, taken prisoner after a disastrous battle, and sent to St. Petersburgh. While on the way he made his escape from the guard, passed through Belgium, into England, and thence came to the United States. He arrived in this city about three weeks ago. The following note in the handwriting of the young man, was found in his room:

Savannah, April 2, 1856.

I am tired of life. I am here as a stranger. Could not find any employment, and my money was all gone, and so I resolved to commit suicide.

I fought in Europe against despotism, lost everything I possessed. No bullet could find me in the battles, and here in a Republican country I am obliged to shoot myself.

Dear Charles, you are my only friend. Farewell forever. If there is another world, there we will see one the other again.

J. F. W.

The cause that I don't sign my name is because I don't want my parents to know that I am dead. It would kill my mother. X. Arvery Rg. Pinsk, remember me.—Savannah Republican.

The investigation into the burning of the Philadelphia and Camden Ferry-boat, which occurred on the Delaware, on the 15th of March, has been brought to a close, and the Coroner's Jury have returned a verdict,—That the deceased (numbering thirty-two) came to their deaths by violence, to wit: by exposure to fire and drowning, in the burning and sinking of the steam ferry-boat New-Jersey, on the night of Saturday, March 15, 1856, between the hours of 8½ and 9½ o'clock, and by the inefficiency exhibited by Richard Fetters in the examination of the boilers of said boat, and by the negligence of John W. Mickle, president, E. A. Stevens, Benjamin Fish, John L. McKnight, Gideon V. Stevens, John C. Bullitt, Samuel Thompson, directors and managers, and A. B. Frasee, general superintendent of the said company in the employmeent of an unfit and unsafe boat for the transport of passengers, and their omission properly to man equip and supply with means of escape from the said ferry-boat.

A fearful conflagration took place at Galena, March 31, which destroyed some thirty-two buildings. The loss is estimated at $300,000. The Galena Advertiser says, the fire on Main, Washington, and Commerce streets, "like one mighty candle, lit up the whole heavens with a most terrific glare."

Nicaragua Emigrants.—The bark Emeka, chartered by the Nicaragua government, was to sail from New-Orleans on the 2d inst., with 400 passengers. A number of others are compelled to remain for want of conveyance. The N. O. Delta learns that a line of steamers will shortly be put on between that city and San Juan.

American News.

Thirty-fourth Congress—First Session—Senate.

WASHINGTON, April 1.

THE DIPLOMATIC AND CONSULAR SYSTEM.—Mr. Mason, of Va., from the Committee on Foreign Relations, reported a joint resolution amending the act of March, 1855, to remodel the diplomatic and consular system of the United States. He explained that the resolution proposed to change that feature of the act which seemed to make it mandatory on the President to elevate all our foreign Ministers resident to Ministers Plenipotentiary, and to affix the salary of each mission Congress has no power to commaud, but could only recommend this to the President. Adopted.—THE NAVAL RETIRING BOARD.—Mr. Clayton, of Del., resumed his remarks on the action of the Naval Board; and in order to prove that it was no disgrace to officers to be placed on the retired list, mentioned the fact that in England the heroes of the Nile and Trafalgar were relieved from active service, and received less pay than officers of the same grade on our retired list. He replied to Mr. Houston's attacks on Com. Pendergrast, Capt. Dupont, and other naval officers. Mr. Bell, of Tenn., sustained, in the main, the proceedings of the Board, and earnestly defended Lieut. Maury from charges made in Mr. Clayton's speech. Mr. Fitzpatrick asked Mr. Bell to give way for a motion to adjourn. Messrs. Clayton and Bell were equally excited at each other's insolence, and the Senate was adjourned while they were engaged in a lively colloquy.

April 2.

Mr. Seward, of N. Y., reported the House resolution for the enlargement of the Custom House, Post Office, and Federal court building at Buffalo. Passed. THE KANE ARCTIC EXPEDITION.—Mr. Mason, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, reported a joint resolution to permit Dr. Kane, and the officers associated with him in the expedition to the Arctic seas, to accept such tokens of acknowledgement therefor as the government of Great Britain may please to present, in accordance with its wishes on the subject. After a slight discussion the matter was postponed. THE THREE MILLION ARMAMENT BILL was then taken up. Mr. Fessenden, of Me., in allusion to the enlistment question, expressed the opinion that Mr. Crampton ought to be dismissed, because, after the publication of the official correspondence, it is impossible that he can receive that respect which should be entertained for the representative of a foreign Power. He censured Senators for taking so much pains to prove that Great Britain has no good title in Central America. Great Britain does not pretend to interfere with our rights, nor to do anything conflicting with our interests, and we should wait until she gives occasion before we interpose in Central American affairs. If we expel her in that quarter, not one foot of the territory will be ours. We have no claim to it. As to giving a year's notice to Britain to vacate, and in the meantime to prepare for war, he was opposed to it. Mr. Cass, of Mich, could see no use in continually protesting, unless some more definite action be taken. He did not suppose England would retract at all, and it was not probable she would declare war against us. Why should she, when she has got all she wants? The true question is, what ought we to do? Shall we continue to submit, or shall we take a decided stand that we will enforce and maintain our rights? Great Britain has changed her grounds three times in regard to the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. As fast as she is driven from one untenable position, she takes refuge in another. Mr. Butler gave notice that he should discuss the bill as a war measure. Further consideration postponed. Mr. Bell, of Tenn., alluded to the rupture between himself and Senator Clayton, yesterday. He regretted the occurrence, as it resulted from a misapprehension on his part. Mr. Clayton tendered his hand with all his heart. Adjourned.

April 3.

The bill for the relief of the widows and orphans of the officers, seamen and marines of the sloop of war Albany, was passed. CHEROKEE PENSIONS.—The joint resolution declaring the manner in which pension laws for the benefit of the Cherokee Indians shall be executed, was adopted. KANSAS AFFAIRS.—Mr. Collamer argued to show that Congress never submitted the question of Freedom or Slavery to the people of the Territories, and insisted that Congress had the power to legislate them. He defended the Emigrant Aid Societies, and read from South Carolina papers to show that the South had adopted similar measures, thus entering into competition with the North, which was altogether proper.

April 4.

Mr. Seward gave notice of his intention to introduce a bill supplementary to the Copyright law of 1821. EXTRA PAY. The Senate then considered the bill to allow extra compensation to George P. Marsh for diplomatic services on his special mission to Greece. After debate the subject was postponed. THE INDIAN BILL PASSED.—The House bill appropriating £300,000 for restoring and maintaining the peaceable disposition of the Indian tribes on the Pacific coast, and £120,000 for gunpowder was passed. KANSAS AFFAIRS.—Mr. Collamer resumed his remarks on Kansas affairs, and contended that the Missourians went into the Territory to control the elections, fearing that the Free-State men would triumph unless they interposed. He believed that 5,000 illegal votes were cast, and that the inhabitants were driven from the polls, not being permitted to vote in some districts. Mr. Douglas replied, maintaining that the purpose of the Free-State men in Kansas was to resist the Federal Government, if their application as a State was rejected. They had given notice that unless they were admitted, they would resist to a bloody issue. Yet the Senator from Vermont omitted all these facts in his two-days speech. It was a remarkable fact that the first intimation that an election was to take place in Kansas on the 30th of March came by way of Boston, through the agents of the Emigrant Aid Society.

House of Representatives.

April 1.

Bills were reported establishing land districts in Kansas and Nebraska. THE CENTRAL AMERICAN CORRESPONDENCE.—Ten thousand copies of the Central American correspondence, together with that between the United States and Great Britain on the arbitration and enlistment questions, were ordered printed, as were also the same number of copies of the document on the commercial relations of the United States with all foreign nations, statistics, comparative tariffs, &c. INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL PASSED.—The bill appropriating 300,000 for restoring and maintining the peaceable disposition of the Indian tribes on the Pacific coast, and 120,000 for the purchase of gunpowder was passed. SLAVERY IN THE TERRITORIES.—The House then went into committee of the Whole on the President's annual message, and Mr. Warner, of Georgia, vindicated the rights of the South in the common territories of the United States. Mr. Allison, of Pa., spoke in opposition to the extension of Slavery.

April 2d.

The entire session was occupied in the consideration of the Senate's amendments to the West Point, Pension and Deficiency Appropriation bills, without coming to any conclusion thereon.

April 3.

Various reports were made by Standing Committees. The House then engaged in considering the Senate's amendments to the Deficiency appropriation bill.

April 4.

Mr. Evans introduced a bill to authorize and facilitate the construction of a Northern, Southern and Central Pacific Railroad and Magnetic Telegraph Line. Referred to Select Committee.—CHALLENGING JURORS. On motion of Mr. Underwood, the Committee on Judiciary were instructed to inquire into the Expediency of regulating, and making uniform, the right of challenging jurors in criminal cases before Federal Courts. THE DEFICIENCY BILL—SLAVERY. The Senate's amendments to the Deficiency bill were taken up in Committee. Mr. Smith, of Tennessee argued that the South is more Conservative than the North—hence the accession of Slave States has a tendency to strengthen the Union. Mr. Granger argued that slavery is incompatible with the constitution of the United States, and therefore illegal. That instrument, he contended, repudiates Slavery.

New York Legislature.—Senate.

April 1.

Mr. Brooks presented a remonstrance from the citizens of New York against the construction of wet basins in the East River. Mr. Bradford reported in favor of purchasing the standard works of American authors for the use of schools, Mr. Nichols introduced a bil to provide that insurance companies shall pay the expenses of commissions examining into the condition of their affairs. Bills passed.—To incorporate the Metropolitan Medical College. Authorizing the construction of a bridge over the Hudson river at Albany, by ayes 18; nays 12.

April 2.

Mr. Sickles reported from the select committee, a bill to amend the charter of New York The bill proposes—1st. A change in the legislative branch of the city government, known as the Board of Councilmen, by changing the number of the Board from 60 to 15, to be elected by districts, according to the population. 2d. Proposes a change in the Executive Department by doing away with the election of heads of departments by the people—to have one responsible executive head, and make the other subordinate heads of departments subject to him for their appointment, and for their removal for misconduct—thus restoring the principle of the charter of 1830. 3d. Proposes to reform the selection of municipal officers, by changing the time for such election from the fall to the spring—making the charter election a separate election, thus concentrating public attention upon the candidates, and removing therefrom the influence of State and national elections. The bill does not interfere with the terms of office of any officer elected by the people, but provides for a chan e as vacancies occur. The bill was ordered to a third reading, under a suspension of the rules.

April 3.

A petition was introduced from B. Brandreth, for a charter to work the silver mines leased from the State. Variours reports were brought in by Messrs. Upham, Cuyler, Ferdon, Brooks and Patterson, that of the latter being in regard to the supplementary bill to reorganize the judicial districts, giving New York an additional justice of the Supreme Court. Read a third time and passed. Mr. Petty, introduced a bill in relation to the Police Department of New York, naming six Commissioners of Police—James S. Sibley, Wm. M. Vermilye, Wm. D. Andrews, Alex. Spaulding, Wm. N. McIntyre, and Isaac Dayton, with power to appoint the Chief and entire force; the Commissioners' term of office to commence on the 1st of June 1856, but the present Chief and members of the force to hold office until their successors are appointed. The Commissioners are to hold office as follows: the two first named for three years; the two next named for four years, and the two last named for five years, at salaries of $2,500 each per annum, with a clerk at $1,500. In 1859, and every year thereafter, two Commissioners to be elected by the people, to hold office three years. The law contains the usual provisions as to the qualifications and power of the Commissioners.

Also by Mr. Petty—To amend the law relative to landlord and tenant, so as to facilitate the recovery of the premises by the landlord in case of a breach of covenant.

Assembly.

April 1.

Robert Kelly accepted the office of Regent of the University. On motion of Mr. Odell, the amendment excluding the Albany Hospital from the appropriation was stricken out, and the amendment requiring hospitals receiving appropriations to provide an apartment for persons having infectious diseases retained. The bill was then ordered to a third reading. Under the general orders, the bill authorizing the continuance of the business of individual bankers by the legatee or heir-at-law, was ordered to a third reading; also the bill to amend the charter of Brooklyn. The bill to create the county of Kent was, after a long debate, recommitted to the committee to report complete.

April 2.

The bill to provide for the distribution of the Colonial History was passed. A remonstrance was presented against the Broadway Railroad, signed by residents and property holders on Broadway. Mr. B. Smith reported against the bill creating Jones Park, New York.—Agreed to. The bill to provide for the extension of the Genesee Valley canal was ordered to a third reading. The bill to authorize the construction of two additional State Lunatic Asylums, was referred to the committee to report complete. The bill to prevent intemperance and repealing the Prohibitory law was discussed, but the third reading was cut off by adjournment.

April 3.

The House was occupied in discussing the items of the Supply bill, the Committee of Ways and Means having cut down the appropriations far below ordinary years.

April 4.

Some fifteen reports were made. Mr. Duganne presented a report from the Tenement House Committee, with a resolution to extend the powers of the committee during recess.—Laid on the table. The Temperance bill coming up for third reading, Mr. Northop's amendment, to prevent the sale of liquor in stores where merchandise and groceries are kept, was adopted, by ayes, 63; nays, 53. Mr. Duganne moved a reconsideration of the above vote; and, in doing so, he made a violent attack upon the Republican party. He charged that they were dishonest in their professions of temperance, and were desirous of throwing over the bill that they might keep the agitation of the question still in existence. They were dishonest in all their professions—mere political tricksters, desirous of keeping a moral question to use as political capital. He moved the previous question. Immense excitement ensued upon this, members jumping to their feet and calling upon Mr. Duganne to withdraw his motion for the previous question. Mr. Duganne refused, when a dozen members strove to speak at once. Mr. Pendergrast replied to Mr. Duganne, denying the charge. A motion to reconsider then prevailed by ayes 60, nays 54. Mr. Northop's original amendment was then lost by ayes 55, nays 56. Subsequently Mr. Hampton, who voted in the affirmative, found his vote recorded in the negative. This changed the result of the vote. Mr. B. Bailey appealed from the decision; but the decision of the Chair was sustained by ayes 53, nays 42. The bill was therefore recommitted. Confusion prevailed upon the announcement of the result, and motions were made to reconsider.

The Mysteries of New-York.

The Committee on Tenement Houses in New-York city after a seven days' inspection have submitted a report (which we condense) to the Assembly. In the brief space of time allotted, the members could do little more than glance "at evils of such magnitude" as demand a "thorough scrutiny."

Partial returns, made up hurriedly by the Captains of Police for the use of the Committee, show that in 22 Districts there are over 1,200 tenement houses, of the lowest description, occupied by not less than ten families each. In some of these as many as 70 different families reside, and into a few over 100 families are crowded. A number of these dwellings were visited by the Committee. In one building 112 families were gathered, some of them numbering eight or ten members, occupying one close apartment, and others huddled indiscriminately in damp, foul cellars. Here, in their very worst aspect, are to be seen the horrors of such mode of living. Here are to be found drunken and diseased adults of both sexes, lying in the midst of their filth; idiotic and crippled children suffering from neglect and ill-treatment; girls just springing into womanhood, living indiscriminately in the same apartment with men of all ages and of all colors; babes left so destitute of care and nourishment as to be fitted only for a jail or hospital in after years, if they escape the blessing of an early grave. No language could faithfully depict the suffering and misery witnessed.

In the IXth District, out of 70 houses reported by the Captain of Police as being let in tenements to not less than 10 families, 40 are designated as unfit for human habitation, and all of these are occupied by from 16 to 35 families each, In the Xth District, out of 67 houses, several are occupied by as many as 70 distinct famil es, and are reported as in a filthy condition, without ventilation, and destitute of the accommodations necessary for the use of civilized beings. In the XIth District, in which are some seventy houses of a like description the report says: "Of all the tenement houses in the District, Folsom Barracks and the Cottages are the most wretched and filthy—alike disgraceful to the owners of the property and the city that tolerates such nuisances. It could not fail to be a matter of surprise that the occupants did not all die of pestilence generated by their unspeakable filth and dissolute habits of living."

In the Thirteenth Ward, in a building known as Manhattan place, there are 96 separate apartments. These are inhabited by 146 families—or more than 1½ family to each room—numbering in all 567 persons—or about 6 individuals to each single room. The report of the Health Warden, setting forth these facts, says: "These premises are three stories high, the cellars are in a bad condition, the sinks filthy, and the ventilation poor. In the summer season these premises are known to be very filthy, and not the least attention is paid to them whatever by either owner or agent—their sole aim apparently being to make money."

In many houses visited by the committee, whites and blacks were living indiscriminately together, negro men with white women, and white men with negro women. Young faces, haggard with want, and bearing that peculiar look of premature age imparted by early sin, peered at them from every corner; misery and vice, in most repulsive features, met them at every step. Scarcely an apartmeut was free from sickness and disease, and the blighting curse of drunkenness had fallen on almost every family. Here and there might be found, it is true, some attempt at cleanliness, some display of a love of home, some evidence of industry and sobriety, with the internal accompaniments of cheerfulness and good health. But these were in most instances families that had not long been inhabitants of the neighborhoods in which they lived. The demoralization and ruin apparent all round had not had time to do their work on them. It is to be feared that too soon the miasmal air will creep into their systems, undermining the sturdy constitution, and prostrating its victims on a bed of sickness.

Many of the buildings thus rented to the poor realize to their owners larger annual incomes than do the first class dwelling-houses in the best parts of the city. And yet they are estimated by the Assessors as almost valueless, and escape anything like a fair taxation, notwithstanding they are the principal cause of the heavy burdens imposed upon the citizens of New York for the support of the criminal and the poor. This is of itself a forcible argument in favor of some active legislation upon the subject of tenement houses. Every underground cellar in these tenement buildings that is not absolutely flooded by water and filth, is made a lodging-room for one or more wretched families. All of these are destitute of any species of ventilation. One of the provisions of a law regulating these matters should be directed against permitting an underground apartment of any description to be rented as a tenement. It would be unnecessary to present in detail the various suggestions made by practical builders, and by the police and health officers of New York, who appeared before the Committee, in reference to the best method of effecting the reform in the construction and management of tenement houses. It is sufficient to say, that they all concurred in recommending legislative action at the earliest possible moment, and that they were unanimous in the opinion that only through the passage of some law regulating the style of tenement buildings, and providing for their management, could the existing evils be properly reached or remedied. In the views of these parties the entire New York press has concurred. From the foul atmosphere of the tenement houses spring the infectious diseases that so frequently spread through the city.

Hundreds upon hundreds of paupers pour into the hospitals, stricken by disease contracted in these hotbeds of pestilence. From them drunkenness mainly receives its victims; for what will sooner drive man to the intoxicating cup than an absence of all attraction and all comfort from his home? From them the brothels of the city are peopled; for there the female is early taught to forget all womanly feeling, and inured to a life of shame. From them the jails are supplied; for they are the natural haunts of felons. It is no idle assertion to say that a reform by which the condition of the homes of the poor could be improved would remove a large proportion of the criminals from our prisons and the paupers from our almshouses.

The practical results which the committee will endeavor to secure through legislative action are:

Ventilation and cleanliness in tenement houses, so thar the public health may be protected, the spread of infectious diseases checked, and the expenses of public hospitals and almshouses decreased.

An enactment against permitting the renting of underground apartments or cellars as tenements.

Regulations as to the building of halls and stairways in houses occupied by more than three families, so as to insure easy egress in case of fire.

The prevention of prostitution and incest, by providing that only a sufficient number of rooms, or a room properly divided into separate apartments, shall be rented to families, and by prohibiting sub-letting.

The prevention of drunkenness, by providing to every man a clean and comfortable home.

In conclusion, your committee would state that as they are all residents of New York, or its immediate neighborhood, the expenses attending their labors during the recess would be comparatively trifling, and they therefore beg respectfully to submit, for the consideration of the House, the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Special Committee appointed to examine into the condition of the tenement houses in New York and Brooklyn, have power to extend their operations, during the recess of the Legislature, so far as is necessary to enable them to perfect some plan of reform, and to prepare a bill for the consideration of the next House of Assembly; and that they be required to present their report and bill to the next Legislature some time during the first week of January, 1857.

JOHN M. REED, Chairman, WILLIAM J. SHEA,
A. J. H. DUGANNE, ELI CURTIS,
SAMUEL BREVOORT, Committee.

Albany, April 4.

City News.

Gideon A. Worth, President of the City Bank of this city died, on Thursday morning, of inflammation of the lungs, in the 73d year of his age. Mr. Worth was born in Hudson, and began life as a merchant's clerk, in that city; he then became clerk in the Bank of Hudson; afterwards cashier of the Mechanics' and Farmers' Bank of Albany; then cashier of the United States Branch Bank of Cincinnati; and afterwards held the same position in the Tradesmen's Bank of this city, from which he was transferred to the City Bank, with which institution he was connected as cashier and president for over thirty years. Mr. Worth was a man of marked financial ability, and was much esteemed amongst those who knew him best. He employed his leisure hours in literary compositions, though none of his productions, we believe, were ever published. Mr. Worth's ancestors came from Nantucket, and were among those who founded the city of Hudson. One of his sisters was the mother of John W. Edmonds, of this city, and another the mother of T. W. Olcott, of Albany. The deceased leaves four sons and two daughters.

At a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, on the 3d inst., the following resolutions, introduced by Mr. Caleb Barstow, were passed:

Resolved, That this Chamber learns with regret that the efforts to procure a modification of the usury laws have failed.

Resolved, That the opinion of the Chamber remains unchanged as to the great need of the relaxation asked for in these laws, and that the Chamber recommends a continuance of unremitting efforts to disseminate information as to the evil influence of stringent usury laws upon the great financial movements of this State.

Almost every night we hear of new cases of dresses injured by the malicious and stealthy operations of a villain, or gang of villains, who throw vitriol by night indiscriminately over the garments of ladies in our thoroughfares. Hitherto these wretches have been treated with leniency and regarded rather as maniacs than as criminals. It must be remembered, however, that all crime is a mania, and that the deeper and more malignant the injury and the less the temptation the more it approaches the madness of a demoniac nature. The great end is to exercise the fiendish propensity and dispel the perverse hallucination which makes evil its god. We hope that the wretches may be discovered and dealt with so that the propensity to this form of secret crime may be effectually nipped.—Daily News.

Mr. E. M. Hendrickson of Brooklyn has invented a lock designed for the doors of Safes and Banks, which materially differs from any thing of the kind ever before in use. The central portion of the lock is a cylinder, which revolves with the key. The key, instead of maintaining one fixed form, is made to contain a portion of the mechanism, and, when pressed into its place, extends three or four slender arms to touch as many levers. These levers catch in the side of the main bolt or bolts, and prevent the unlocking, unless they are all worked at the same moment.

A correspondent of the Daily Times, thinks that the present is an excellent opportunity for Judge Edmonds or any other spiritualist or prophet to show proof of his claims, by giving information of the Pacific. The writer reminds us that, "No sooner had the full details of the Arctic catastrophe been published and read by every one, than the public were favored with an account of Judge Edmonds' interview, on the evening succeeding that disaster, with the spirits of those who then perished."

A SINGULAR SUICIDE—MELANCHOLY DEATH OF A WELL-KNOWN CHARACTER.—Cornelius C. McAuliffe, well-known as the proprietor of the news and periodical depot in the Rotunda of the Astor House, committed suicide on Friday night, at his boarding-house, No. 7 Varick street, by partaking of some of the oil of bitter almonds. Mr. McAuliffe was a man of winning manners and was much respected. He was 36 years of age, and a native of Ireland, where, for some years, he was engaged in commercial pursuits. The following letter from the deceased, addressed to his friend Coroner Connery, gives all that is known of the cause of the rash act:

NEW-YORK, Monday, March 3, 1856.

To Coroner Connery:

DEAR SIR: Believing that a man has the right of disposing of his own life as he may deem proper, he does so without injury to others, and when he has no one for whom he is bound to provide, I have determined to retire from this world, and this communication is to prevent any misapprehension as to the cause of my death. No one is aware of my intentions; he through whom I have procured the poison I have deceived—he is, therefore, altogether innocent. The reason of my determination is simply this, that some years ago I formed an attachment, unfortunately loving not wisely but too well. The object of my idolatry proved unworthy of my affections, but this could not alter me, nor weaken the spell that bound me to her. I have used every exertion in my power to obliterate her image, but in vain. I find, after change of scene, &c., nothing can effect the purpose, and it is altogether out of the question that I ever could love another woman. I am, indeed, desolate! No home, nor anything resembling it. The four walls of a bedroom, when I retire at night! What is there, then, to toil for? Fruitless, unproductive! what good am I to society and to myself? None; I am only in somebody's way, therefore I shall retire.

I well know how many worthy friends will be horrified at this step, as they will regard it in the light of "flying in the face of Providence"—going into the presence of God uncalled, unsent for. I respect their ideas, although I do not coincide with them. The great Creator of the Universe knows the secrets of all hearts, and

"Sees as equal Lord of all
A hero perish or a sparrow fall."

I desire to be buried in the plainest manner, and at as little cost as possible. I cannot conclude without expressing the deep sense of obligation I am under to Messrs. Coleman & Stetson, of the Astor House, for their great kindness to me; and my grateful acknowledgments are due also to their employees, from whom I have received nothing but kindness.

I have written a statement of my affairs addressed to Mr. Butler, but I do not wish it published, as it would only gratify idle curiosity, and I presume this letter will answer all the ends of public justice in reference to the cause of my death, &c.

In conclusion, I beg to say that I am at peace with all mankind, and if I have any enemies I freely forgive them, and hope I shall be forgiven by those I may have injured.

Wishing you every happiness, and asking nothing of the world but the charity of its silence,

I am, dear sir, respectfully,
CORNELIUS C. MCAULIFFE.

An inquest was held on the body on Saturday. The jury rendered a verdict of death by suicide.

The remains of the deceased were yesterday interred in Greenwood Cemetery.

The trial of the "Nicaraguan Filibusters" is set down for the present term of the United States District Court, which opened on Monday, 7th inst. Messrs. O'Keefe and Male were discharged from bail on their own recognizances to appear at trial. Mr. Creighton, under bail of $2,000, was prevented from returning from Nicaragua, whither he went three steamers since, by missing the last return steamer A. J. Morri on and Wm. S. Lyster have, since their arrests, been to Nicaragua, and now hold commissions in Gen. Walker's army. Those in New York waiting trial are George B. Hall, Addison Farnsworth, Charles Walters, and B. S. Dillingham, private secretary of Col. French. They have engaged as counsel Ogden Hoffman, Francis B. Cutting, William West, Alfred A. Phillips and Thomas Van Buren. Capt. Tinklepaugh, at present of the Orizaba, and formerly of the Northern Light, and Mr. Fowler, first engineer of the Northern Light, together with Joseph L. White, Esq., counsel for the Accessory Transit Company, are also to be tried this term on charges of having resisted the United States authorities at the time of the detention of the Northern Light.

Miscellany.

THE TENNESSEE VALLEY.—The railroad in progress from Gadsden to Guntersville, Alabama, is, as we learn from the Huntsville Advocate, in a more forward state than we were before aware of. The aid received from the State, by the appropriation of a portion of the two per cent. fund, will enable the company to grade the whole road. Eight miles of the grading are already completed, and eight more under contract. The Advocate thinks that the connection with the Selma and Tennessee Railroad will be effected in two years; and when this is accomplished, the long talked of and desired connection of the Mobile bay and Tennessee river will have been effected, and the cotton and other valuable produce of the Tennessee valley will doubtless be sent to Mobile and Charleston, instead of taking the circuitous route by the river to New Orleans. There is also, as we have before noticed, an effort on foot to build a railroad from West Point to connect with these roads, at Oxford, we believe. Should this last enterprise succeed (and the spirit manifested induces us to hope that it will,) our own facilities of communication with the Valley of the Tennessee will be greatly improved.—Columbus Sun.

A MODEL BANKER.—The Postmaster of Chicago, it is said, has been dabbling extensively in the whiskey trade and wild-cat banking business, being the principal owner of a saloon and wild-cat bank. But the charter election drew so heavily upon the latter, that it collapsed soon after, leaving his credulous depositors minus about $35,000. He and his friends have been engaged, for some days, in attempting to ascertain whether a "bank," like "truth," "when crushed to earth will rise again." They have determined, as we learn from the Chicago Democrat, to distribute its assets, pro rata, to the depositors and other creditors. It appears that $35,000 of its funds have been loaned to his saloon, upon his own endorsement, and $25,000 more to himself. The whole assets of the defunct bank, including this sum of $50,000, amount to $85,000. Its liabilities amount to $120,000. Only $85,000 have been accounted for, leaving a deficit of $35,000.

The Cooperstown Journal speaks of several failures in that and adjoining counties, of parties in the butter and cheese business, under circumstances which lead to the belief that fraud has been practiced.

FOREIGN COINS IN CLEVELAND.—By a notice given of all the banks and bankers of Cleveland, it will be seen that the following value is to be given to the foreign silver currency in that city:—On and after Tuesday, April 1, 1856, the following foreign coins will be received at rates annexed:—

The Spanish, Mexican and South American shilling, or real,	10 cents.
The Spanish sixpence,	5 do.
The Spanish pistareen,	15 do.
German guilder,	35 do.
German half guilders,	15 do.
French two franc pieces,	35 do.
French one franc pieces,	15 do.
French half franc pieces,	8 do.

DEATH OF COMMODORE MCKEEVER.—A telegraphic dispatch reached this city yesterday morning, from Norfolk, announcing the death of Commodore Isaac McKeever. Commodore McK. was born in the State of Pennsylvania, and entered the naval service from Louisiana, on the 1st of February, 1809. He received a captain's commission on the 8th of December, 1838. At the time of his death he stood fifth number eight on the list of captains.—Union.

Gov. Clark, on learning from the highest medical authority that Dr. Robert M. Graham, who was convicted, more than a year ago, of killing Mr. Loring in a personal rencontre at the St. Nicholas Hotel, is so ill that longer imprisonment would have resulted fatally, granted a pardon on the 4th inst.

The Germans of Elizabethtown, N. J., have organized a club for the purpose of instructing its members in the duties and obligations of American citizens, and in the rights and privileges secured to them by the Constitution. It is not intended to be a secret organization.

A LONG AND RAPID VOYAGE.—The ship Boston Light, Capt. Collagan, from Shanghae, which arrived here on the 26th ult., was absent for fourteen months and twenty-six days, and has sailed during that period, as per log, 46,320 miles, or about double the circumference of the earth, and, in addition, has received and discharged two cargoes.

The new license act in Pennsylvania, passed both Houses, will have the effect of reducing the number of taverns in Philadelphia to about 900, and restaurants to about 225. It will no doubt be signed by the Governor, and may therefore be considered a law.

A notorious convict, named Jack Simpson, succeeded in making his escape, on the 5th inst., from the State Prison at Sing Sing, where he had been confined on conviction of burglary.

The State Legislature of Kentucky has passed a law suppressing billiard and Jenny Lind tables and ten pin alleys. There is some excitement in Louisville about it, among those interested.

The Salem (Mass.) Gazette says, that the journeymen carpenters of that city having voted to raise their prices, and the employers not having agreed to the same, the journeymen are now on "a strike."

The American Organ, at Washington, announces that Edward Everett, Robert C. Winthrop, with other distinguished whigs whose names it gives, "are content with Fillmore and Donelson," and "will take the field under the American banner."

The Superintendent of Public Libraries in Indiana has ordered about a thousand copies of Holbrook's "Ten Years Among the Mailbags," to be placed in the various libraries in that State.

The Cleveland Herald hoists the name of Col. Fremont as the Republican candidate for the Presidency, and endorses him in a leading column.

GERMAN EMIGRATION TO KANSAS.—The plan of the Turner-Bund, to found a German colony in the West, appears to meet with favor, and if we mistake not, a committee has already been appointed to locate the colony. We do not learn that any particular State or Territory has been decided upon. Why should not, just at this juncture, the Territory of Kansas be selected? Will not the Germans, and especially the robust and freedom-loving young men who compose the Turners, contribute their mite to secure the triumph of freedom in Kansas? Or do some still entertain the idea that in this country one must surround himself with a Chinese wall, to prevent the intrusion of other nationalities? We can scarcely believe that Germans of principle could feel happy in a colony observing a cloister-like seclusion from the world. Such a life they should leave to religious sects, like the Shakers, the Millerites and others. But freedom and her defenders must seek the light of day, must strive and struggle, and cannot live in seclusion. On the fruitful prairies of Kansas liberty is to be established, and it will be an honor to the Germans if they can say: "We too have done our duty."—Illinois Staats Zeitung.

The St. Louis Democrat of the 26th ult. says that a pioneer party, consisting of numerous members of the Vegetarian and Octagon Settlement Companies, after making considerable purchases in that city, are proceeding up the Missouri river to Kansas this week, with a view to commence a new settlement.

The "James H. Lucas" arrived yesterday from the Missouri river, crowded with passengers. Among them, we hear, was Col. Lane, elected as a Senator to Congress from the State of Kansas, by the sham Legislature which recently held a week's session at Topeka, and then adjourned to the 15th of July, to see what would "turn up." He is on his way to Washington. Gov. Charles Robinson, of State government notoriety, is a passenger on the "Omaha," with, it is presumed, an Eastern destination. Kansas was as quiet as any other section of the country up to Monday last. The District Court for the Territory of Kansas, it is stated, will meet at Lecompton on the first Monday of April. At that time the case of the members of the bogus Legislature, and of the mock Governor and other State officers, will be presented for the consideration of the Grand Jury. Under the laws of the Territory now in existence, it will be strange if all these men are not indicted. That their arrest will follow, if they do not make their escape from the Territory, is equally certain.—St. Louis Republican, March 29.

FROM NEW MEXICO.—Col. Savery, Mr. Bransford, Mr. Rees and several other gentlemen, have recently arrived in St. Louis, from New Mexico. They report the Indians as quiet, and a better prospect for peace among the hostile tribes, who have heretofore been a terror to the plains, than ever before. Indeed, the Indians may be said to be sueing for peace and forgiveness. There is news of any particular interest in New Mexico. The winter has been the hardest one ever experienced there, and the upon the plains have suffered quite severely. The Arkansas is reported to be frozen to the bottom. A number of merchants from New Mexico are already in our city, and others are expected, to lay in their stock of goods for the season. The purchases this season will be very heavy.

The Post is out in a formidable three-decker of an in every chase of the re-nomination of Franklin Pierce for the Pianos promptly

dule of pr
Gr
the Horace W
MILTON,
NSON.

Special Notices.

PROSPECTUS

OF THE SIXTH VOLUME—NEW SERIES OF THE

UNITED STATES DEMOCRATIC REVIEW,

For 1856.

The United States Democratic Review, established in 1838, entered upon the Sixth Volume of its new series the first January, 1856.

In Politics, the Review will faithfully adhere to the principles recognized by Jefferson and Jackson, and as set forth, from time to time, by the Democratic National Conventions. At the same time, keeping pace with the progress of the age, it will advocate all those measures of public policy calculated to promote the best interests of our common country.

It will be the aim of the Editor to make it not only an efficient advocate of Democratic men and measures, but also

A WELCOME AND USEFUL FAMILY MAGAZINE.

Various causes combined to withdraw from the Review that powerful array of talent which so long placed it foremost amongst its cotemporaries. Those causes have ceased to operate. The most distinguished Statesmen and writers of the Democratic party will again contribute to its pages; and nothing will be omitted to make it worthy of the high vocation it aims at, viz., to be the organ of the United Democracy of the Union. The Democratic Review will be published in the same form as its preceding volumes, and is under the editorial charge of SPENCER W. CONE.

In addition to its political features, no exertions will be spared to make its Literary, Scientific, and Miscellaneous Departments worthy of the old days of its fame.

The urgent demand for something in its character, firm, uniform, and reliable, upon national questions, above the sectional squabbles of individuals, and always true to the great end of the party organization, viz., the dissemination and support of the pure principles of national Democracy—affords a wide field of usefulness; and we rely upon the Democracy of the Union for our support.

TERMS—$5 PER ANNUM, OR $3 STRICTLY IN ADVANCE.

GREAT INDUCEMENTS TO FORM CLUBS.

PREMIUMS.

Any person sending $13 will receive Five copies of the Review for one year, and either of the following works: "Longfellow's Hiawatha," "Songs of the Revolution," "Widow Bedott Papers," "Bayard Taylor's Travels in China and Japan," or "Life of Daniel Boone." Price, $1.25 each.

Any person sending $25 will receive Ten Copies of the Review, and either the whole of the Works above named, or "Dr. Kane's Arctic Explorations," beautifully illustrated. Price, $5.

Any person sending $40 will receive Twenty Copies of the Review, and "Irving's Life of Washington," in three large vols. Price, $6.

Any person sending Five prepaid subscriptions, at $3 each, will receive "Irving's Life of Washington. Price, $6."

Any person sending Ten prepaid subscriptions, at $3 each, will receive "Calhoun's Works," by Kralle, in four large vols. Price, $8; and "Van Santvoord's Lives of the Chief Justices of the United States." Price: $2.25.

Any person sending Twenty prepaid subscriptions, at $3 each, will receive "Jefferson's Complete Works," in nine large vols., published, by order of Congress, from original manuscripts. Edited by A. H. Washington. Price, $25.

☞ The books above named are all handsomely bound, and recently published.

Specimen Numbers of the Review will be sent gratis when requested.

☞ TO POSTMASTERS.

POSTMASTERS ARE RESPECTFULLY SOLICITED TO ACT AS AGENTS FOR THE UNITED STATES DEMOCRATIC REVIEW.

All communications to be addressed to Lloyd and Campbell, 252 Broadway, New York.

The friends of the late Richard Walsh, formerly Publisher of the Honest Truth, and subsequently Secretary to the New-York Irish Emigrant Aid Society, are requested to meet at the EAGLE DRILL ROOMS, cor. Christie and DeLancy streets, on NEXT MONDAY EVENING, at 8 o'clock, to make some provision for his destitute widow and family.

Catholic Society for the Promotion of Agricultural Settlements.—Office No. 8 Chamber street, (over East River Bank.) Open from 9 to 4.

J. G. MOYLAN, Sec., pro tem.

The New-York Young Men's Roman Catholic Benevolent Association.—At a meeting of this Association, held on Wednesday, 2d inst., the following preamble and resolution were unanimously adopted,

Whereas, it has pleased an all-wise Providence to remove from our midst, in a life of usefulness, ere he had arrived at the years of manhood, our late brother, Michael Phalen, thus depriving his widowed parent of her chief consolation in her declining years, his brother and sisters of his affection, and our society of one of its brightest ornaments, whose actions were always marked with a modest simplicity, yet with firmness; and whereas, in his removal we recognise the will of an all-wise Providence, and bow, with humble submission to his infinite decrees, therefore, be it

Resolved, That while we bow with patient resignation to our great loss, we extend to his bereaved relatives our heartfelt sympathies, and pray that the Almighty will endow them with grace to bear with resignation this, their great affliction.

JEREMIAH QUINLAN,
JOHN J. SCULLY,
DENNIS J. CONLEY, } Committee.

Post Office.—NOTICE.—The Mails for Europe, per U. S. Steamer ATLANTIC, will close at this office on Saturday, the 12th day of April, at 10½ o'clock, A. M.

New-York Catholic Library Association.—A public meeting of the above named Association, will be held in the Hope Chapel, 720 Broadway, on Tuesday Evening, April 15th, at 8 o'clock. Dr. O. A. Brownson, and J. A. McMasters, Esq., will be present and address the meeting.

D. QUINN, Cor. Sec.

The Catholic public are invited to attend.

Emigrant Intelligence Office and Labor Exchange, No. 8 Canal street, corner of Centre street, New-York.—The office is established by the Commissioners of Emigration, where can always be found large numbers of LABORERS and SERVANTS, at very low rates of wages; and persons can have their orders filled by writing to the Superintendent, and sending the amount necessary to pay the passage of the parties required. No fees charged to employers.

JAMES P. FAGAN, Superintendent.

REMOVAL.

McCorville & Murphy, Importers of Wide Silks, Shawls, Vestings, and Linen Goods, have REMOVED to No. 36 LIBERTY STREET, where all orders will be punctually attended to. tf

---

COUNTY CLERK'S OFFICE, NEW YORK, April 4, 1856.

PUBLIC NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That on Monday, the 14th day of April, 1856, at 10 o'clock, A. M., I shall proceed to draw Panels of Jurors for the following Courts to be held in and for the City and County of New York, on the first Monday of May next, viz.:

A panel of one hundred jurors for a Supreme Court.

A panel of one hundred and eighty-four jurors for a Superior Court.

Two panels of one hundred and four jurors each for a Court of Common Pleas.

A panel of thirty-six grand jurors, also a panel of one hundred and fifty petit jurors, for a Court of General Sessions.

RICHARD B. CONNOLLY.

To Military Companies and Civic Societies.

OLD MONTGOMERY HALL, 46 Prince Street.—The Subscriber, having taken a Lease of the above well known popular concern, begs to inform the Members of Military Companies and Civic Trades Bodies, and Managers of Balls, that he is ready to treat for the letting of spacious and well-lighted rooms, suited for meetings, &c.

The Bar attached to the Hall is always supplied with the best imported and domestic Liquors, Brandies, Wines, Ales, Irish and Scotch Whiskey, and choicest brands of Havana Segars.

JOHN DOLAN.

P. HUGHES,

LEMON SYRUP AND CORDIAL MANUFACTURER, and Dealer in Foreign Liquors, Cognac and French Brandies of different brands, Hollands Gin, Irish and Scotch Whiskey, Scotch Ale and Porter, and other Liquors, returns his sincere thanks to the public for the patronage he has already received, and hopes they will continue the same. No. 88 Cherry street, New York. tf

---

JAMES AINSLIE,

NO. 39 BEAVER STREET,

OFFERS for sale from U. S. Bonded Warehouses, of his importation, Cognac Brandies, also Rochelle Brandies, in half, quarter, and eighth pipes, pale and dark, of the well known brand of Azaac Seignette, and eighth casks—Sole importer of the superior Magnolia Brand; Foreign Schnapps Gin.

Wines—Burgundy, Jura Juice, and old Port, Sherry, Appropriation, and Croix Rum's; Stewart's Paisley Whiskey, &c. 0,000 for relief of the Indian

---

Business Directory.

JAMES HARLIN,

WATCH, CLOCK MAKER, AND JEWELER.

236 HENRY STREET, BROOKLYN.

All watches and clocks bought or repaired at my establishment, warranted for twelve months. *

JOHN KENNEDY'S

STEAM MARBLE WORKS,

35TH STREET, NEAR BROADWAY.

Statuary and Marble Mantle-Pieces, Monuments, Grave Stones, Tombs, &c. All orders thankfully received and punctually attended to. *

M. J. CONNELL,

METROPOITAN BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTER,

NO. 39 BEEKMAN STREET, 1 DOOR EAST OF WILLIAM, NEW-YORK, AND 73 GRAND STREET, WILLIAMSBURGH.

All orders intrusted to me will be promptly attended to, and executed with unparalleled dispatch. tf

---

J. W. FOOT, CHAS. COLE, HENRY C. GOODWIN.

FOOT & COLE,

COMMISSION PAPER WAREHOUSE,

NO. 32 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW-YORK.

Paper of all descriptions made to order on the shortest notice.

Book and newspaper constantly on hand. Tar Paper, suitable for Roofing Houses, Lining Ships, and Cases for shipping goods to foreign portsot, prevent wet or damp.

KNOX'S

OFFICE FURNITURE WAREROOMS,

59 AND 89 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

☞ Desks, Chairs, Cushions, Book-Cases, Lounges, Stools, and every article suitable for counting-rooms, Banks, and Insurance offices.

Desks of every description made to order on short notice.

MEAGHER AND CAMPBELL,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

NO. 82 BROADWAY.

Commissioner for the U. S. Court of Claims.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, having formed a partnership with Malcolm Campbell, for the general practice of the law, the firm will continue to devote their attention to such law business as may be intrusted to them, including conveyancing, in all the courts of the state of New-York and of the United States, and general collecting business in all parts of the world. Particular attention will be given to the preparation of claims against the United States in the Court of Claims.

Mr. Meagher may be consulted daily, on law business only, at No. 82 Broadway, from three till five o'clock P. M.

B. S. TREANOR,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW, No. 15, Massachusetts Block, Court Square, Boston. tf

---

DAYTON, ROBINSON & COURSEN,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS, 257 Broadway, (third door below Chambers street), New-York:

ISAAC DAYTON, 319 West 24th street.
WM. E. ROBINSON, 219 West 32d street.
WM. A. COURSEN, 234 Fourth street.

tf

CABINET FURNITURE AND UPHOLSTERY.

Established in 1827.

THE largest and cheapest assortment in the State of New-York. Every thing, from a Broom to the richest article, may be found, including Carpets, Oil Cloths, Mattrasses, Beds, &c., &c., at 1yr R. J. TODD'S, 88 Fulton street, Brooklyn.

HARDWARE, CUTLERY, MECHANICS' TOOLS, &c.

THE subscriber has constantly for sale, of the best quality, and at the lowest prices, an assortment of the following articles: Tea-Trays, Cooking Utensils, Britannia and Plated Goods, Stair Rods, Table Cutlery, Tin Ware, Wooden Ware, Brushes, Brooms, &c.

Mechanics' Tools.

Also a full supply of Saws, Planes, Braces and Bits, Edge-Tools, Files, Hammers, Squares, Augers, Rules, Bevels, &c.

4t JOHN W. SULLIVAN, 74 Sixth Avenue, corner of Waverley Place.

DRAFTS FOR £1 AND UPWARDS,

ON THE ROYAL BANK OF IRELAND,

FOR SALE BY JOHN B. MURRAY,

No. 44 Wall street, (over Bank of North America,) New-York.

PERSONS wishing to send money to their friends in Europe, can remit to Mr. Murray, by letter, post-paid, who will, upon receipt, forward a draft on the Royal Bank, without charge. 3m*

THE STATEN ISLAND

FANCY DYING ESTABLISHMENT.

OFFICE No. 3 John street, (two doors from Broadway,) New-York, solicit orders for dying Broadcloths, Merinoes, Paramattas, De Laines, and Silk, Woolen, and fancy goods of every description; Satin and Taffeta Ribbons, Gimps, Fringes, Galloons, and other trimmings dyed and re-finished with great success.

Also ladies and gentlemens Garments, Shawls, &c., &c.

BARRETT, NEPHEW & CO.,

April 12. 3mos. 3, John st., (2 doors from Broadway,) N. Y.

EDWARD ROYLE,

CHIEF ENGINEER 2D & 9TH AV. R.R.'s.

123 CHAMBER STREET, NEW-YORK.

THOS. H. HURLEY,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 252 BROADWAY.

O'CONNOR & COLLENDER,

BILLIARD TABLE MANUFACTURERS

53 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

NICHOLAS WALSH.

SEXTON AND UNDERTAKER.

NO. 8 SIXTH AVENUE.

WILLARD, FELT & CO.,

MANUFACTURERS OF ACCOUNT BOOKS,

AND IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER AND STATIONERY,

NO. 14 MAIDEN LANE,

3mos. (near Broadway.) April 12.

Business Directory.

GEORGE B. COOK,

IMPROVED STEAM CYLINDER AND ADAMS PRESSES,

JENKIN'S BUILDING, Nos. 22 AND 24 FRANKFORT STREET, NEW-YORK. tf

---

MRS. J. McCARTHY,

FASHIONABLE MILLINERY STORE,

44 THIRD AVENUE,

Third door from 10th Street, NEW-YORK.

Cheap Straw Hats, Ribbons, Flowers, Ladies' Straw Goods.

Straw Bonnets cleaned and altered to the newest fashions.

LADIES' OWN MATERIALS MADE UP TO THE LATEST STYLES. tf

MATTHEW WALLACE,

25 CLARK STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.,

WHOLESALE DEALER IN NEWSPAPERS, BOOKS, &c.

☞ "The Irish News," on hand, by the earliest moment, each week. tf

---

B. S. TREANOR,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

15 MASSACHUSETTS BLOCK, COURT SQUARE, BOSTON.

Particular attention paid to Conveyancing, and the examination of titles to Real Estate.

NEWARK, NEW-JERSEY.

J. DONOHUE,

NEWSPAPER AND PERIODICAL DEALER,

149 MARKET STREET,

Will serve "The Irish News," in any part of the city. tf

McLOUGHLIN, McSHANE, & CO.,

(Successors to THOS. ANDREWS,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN

CHOICE TEAS, COFFEES, WINES, BRANDIES, AND GROCERIES,

61 FULTON STREET, near Cliff street,

M. C. McLOUGHLIN,
ANDREW McSHANE,
JAMES DOWLING. } NEW-YORK.

3m

JOHN J. STAFF'S.

WINES, LIQUORS,
SEGARS,
LONDON,
DUBLIN,
PHILADELPHIA,
PORTER and ALE,
SCOTCH,
BURTON,
and EAST INDIA ALES,
CHAMPAGNE CIDER,

In quantities to suit purchasers, at 333 Broadway, tf corner of Anthony street, New-York.

JOHN A. McSORLEY,

CUSTOM HOUSE AND SHIP BROKER, AND NOTARY PUBLIC,

7 BROAD STREET,

Clergymen, importing Vestments, Church Ornaments, &c., will be liberally treated with by calling on the subscriber.

REFERENCES:

Messrs. Thos. McClane & Co., | Messrs. D. & J. Sadlier & Co.,
C. Meletta, | James Cook & Co. 6mos

COAL.

THE subscriber respectfully informs his friends and the public generally that he has opened a new Coal Yard, cor. 27th Street and 9th Avenue where he is prepared to sell the best quality of Red and White Ash Coal, at the lowest market price for cash. Weight warranted, or forfeit coal.

6mos* JOHN MACDONALD, formerly with Peter Clinton.

J. MURPHY & SON,

IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN

BRANDIES, WINES, GIN, RUM, IRISH AND SCOTCH WHISKEY, SEGARS, ALE AND PORTER, CORDIALS, &c.

J. M. & SON would call the attention of City and Country Dealers to their EXTENSIVE STOCK OF LIQUORS AND SEGARS under CUSTOM HOUSE LOCK and in STORE.

☞ We do not claim any superiority for our goods over those of any other House, but customers may rely upon being honorably and fairly dealt with, and all Liquors warranted as represented.

J. M. & SON are SOLE AGENTS for this City of Messrs. BUNCHARD & HARRISON'S superior Creaming and Sparkling DOMESTIC CHAMPAGNE, which possesses the same qualities as Imported Wine, and is more agreeable to the palate. It can be sold as low as $7 the basket.

A Superior Quality of IMPORTED ST. JULIAN CLARET, in cases, at $2 50.

Orders from Country Merchants solicited, and shipped with dispatch, at 150 Pearl, and 113 Water streets.

☞ Office 138 Pearl street.

Shipping.

BLACK BALL LINE OF LIVERPOOL PACKETS.

CROGAN & CO., 41 FULTON ST.

CERTIFICATES furnished for Passage to and from Liverpool on the 1st and 16th of every month by the following splendid Ships:—

James Foster, Jr	Capt.	J. W. Porter.
Neptune	"	E. W. Peabody.
Harvest Queen	"	E. Young.
Isaac Webb	"	J. M Bayer.
Great Western	"	W. G. Furber.
Manhattan	"	M. Dixon.
Isaac Wright	"	E. Abeel.
Columbia	"	C. Hutchinson.
Fidelia	"	W. A. Macgill.
Yorkshire	"	C. A. Marshall.

REMITTANCES.

☞ Drafts for £1 and upwards on the Royal Bank of Ireland, and on our agent, Patrick Tracy, 60 Waterloo Road, Liverpool, payable at sight.

Old Line Packets, Pier 23 East River, foot of Beekman street. 3m

---

MARITIME INTELLIGENCE.

MOVEMENTS OF OCEAN STEAMERS.

FROM EUROPE.

Names.	Leaves.	Date.	For.
Cambria	Liverpool	Mar. 29	Boston.
Alma	Havre	April 2	New York.
Baltic	Liverpool	April 2	New York.
Africa	Liverpool	April 5	New York.
Arago	Havre	April 9	New York.
City of Baltimore	Liverpool	April 28	Philadelphia

FOR EUROPE.

Atlantic	New York	April 12	Liverpool.
Washington	New York	April 19	Bremen.
Alma	New York	May 8	Havre.

FOR CALIFORNIA, &c.

Black Warrior	New York	April 12	Hav. and N. Orleans.

The Irish News.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, Editor and Proprietor.

Three Dollars per Annum. Single Copies 6 Cents. Publication Office, 29 Ann St., cor. of Nassau.

VOL. I. NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, APRIL 19, 1856. NO. 2.

Publications.

THE IRISH NEWS,

EDITED BY THE PROPRIETOR,

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER,

DEDICATED TO THE SERVICE OF THE

IRISH PEOPLE,

AT HOME AND ABROAD,

Will be published every Saturday, on and after the 12th of April, at 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau, New-York.

TERMS.

For subscribers, $3 per annum: 6 cents a copy.
For wholesale dealers, $3 50 per hundred.
For retailers and carriers, $4 per hundred.
For Clubs, 4 copies to one address, per annum, $10.
" 7 " " " " $17.
" 10 " " " " $20.

For advertising.—Each square of eight lines,

Transient - - - - - - - - - - - - $1
Monthly - - - - - - - - - - - - $2
Quarterly - - - - - - - - - - - - $5
Yearly - - - - - - - - - - - - $16

N. B. Four lines, or under, constitute half a square.

Agents or Postmasters who interest themselves in procuring and remitting subscriptions, may retain 50 cents out of each annual subscription of $3.

☞ Subscribers, Agents, and Advertisers will please send in their orders early, any observe that our terms are invariably, payments in advance.

Communications of a PRIVATE nature should always be marked so. Those connected with the editorial department are to be addressed to Thomas Francis Meagher, and those on business to Richard J. Lalor, Irish News Office, 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau.

☞ Subscribers, residing in New-York, Brooklyn, and Williamsburgh, who pay in advance, will have their papers neatly enveloped, addressed, and delivered on each Wednesday through Boyd's Express or some similar medium.

WHOLESALE DEALERS.

DEXTER & BROTHERS, 14 Ann Street, New-York.
ROSS & TOUSEY, 108 Nassau Street, New-York.
SAMUEL YATES, 22 Beekman Street, New-York.
MIKE MADDEN, 22 Ann Street, New-York.
HAMILTON & JOHNSON, 30 Ann Street, New-York.
DE WITT & DAVENPORT, 160 & 162 Nassau Street, New-York.
HENRY TAYLOR, Baltimore, Md.
FEDERHEN & CO., 13 Court Street, Boston.
WM. HICKEY, 128 Federal Street, Boston.
REDDING & CO., 8 Court Street, Boston.
THOS. McLOUGHLIN, 42 South 4th Street, Philadelphia.
T. R. CALLENDER, 88 South-Third Street, Philadelphia.
DROVIN & CO., Philadelphia.
J. M. CRAWFORD, 30 and 32 Chestnut Street, St. Louis, Mo.
MATTHEW WALLACE, 25 Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.
McNALLY & CO., 75 Dearborn Street.
J. W. SULLIVAN, Kearney Street, (next Post-Office) San-Francisco, Cal.

Printed by J. C. Watters, 29 & 33 Beekman street.
POWER PRESS OF GEO. B. COOK.

A NEW IRISH BOOK.

In 1 vol. 12mo. PRICE $1.

'98 AND '48:

THE MODERN REVOLUTIONARY HISTORY AND LITERATURE OF IRELAND.

BY JOHN SAVAGE.

There is no one work which gives the spirit of the memorable periods to illustrate which the author has devoted the present volume. It contains vivid and carefully collated descriptions of the principal battles of the United Irishmen of 98, and a clear statement of the circumstances which led to the differences between "Old Ireland" and "Young Ireland," the line of national policy adopted by the latter, with biographical notices and mention of the following (with other) persons:

Theobald Wolfe Tone.	James Hope.
Henry Grattan.	Arthur O'Conner.
Thomas Addis Emmet.	Samuel Neilson.
Robert Emmet.	Hamilton Rowan.
William Putnam McCabe.	Dr. Wm. Drennan.

THE REBEL GENERALS:

Thomas Russell.	Ed. Fitzgerald of Wexford.
Henry J. McCracken.	Garret Byrne.
Henry Munro.	John Kelly.
William Aylmer.	Esmonde Kyan.
Bagnal Harvey.	Matthew Keugh.
Edward Roche.	John Devereux.
Lord Edward Fitzgerald.	Anthony Perry.
Dr. Esmonde.

PRIEST-GENERALS WHO LED THE INSURGENTS:

John Murphy.	Moses Kearns.
Michael Murphy.	J. Prendergast.
Philip Roche.	Nicholas Redmond.
Denis Taafe.

Baron Plunket.	James Fenton Lalor.
Daniel O'Connell.	John O'Mahony.
Thomas Davis.	Father Kenyon.
William Smith O'Brien.	Michael Doheny.
John Mitchel.	Joseph Brenan.
Robert Holmes.	Dr. Antisell.
Richard Lalor Sheil.	C. Gavan Duffy.
Thomas Francis Meagher.	Richard O'Gorman.
Thomas Devin Reilly.	John Martin.
Tom Steele.	Lord John Russell.
John O'Connell.	Lord George Bentinck.
Kevin I. O'Doherty.	Sir Robert Peel.
R. D. Williams.	Ben. D'Israeli.
John B. Dillon.	T. Bellew McManus.
P. O'Donohue.

And many other Irish and English notables of the period.

"Mr. Savage is a man possessing an excellent taste, a brilliant fancy, and is a vigorous and earnest thinker."—Transcript.

"Mr. Savage is universally known as a writer, and universally popular as a man. He has since early boyhood been engaged in the struggles of his country, and never has been unfaithful to a friend or a principle."—Irish American, Feb., 1854.

"Mr. Savage, himself a poet, was a co-worker with the men of whom he spoke in arousing that spirit of hostility to English rule which was evinced in Ireland in 1848. From his intimate knowledge of the theme, and his well-known literary ability, much was expected of him, and expectation was by no means disappointed. We have rarely listened to a composition combining so many poetical thoughts, beautifully expressed, or images so lucidly and naturally drawn."—N. Y. Daily Times, Dec. 4, 1854.

"Mr. Savage is an able writer and speaker."—Boston Times.

John Mitchel wrote in The Citizen, Dec., 1854:

"We freely grant that among the survivors of our band there is none so competent to the task of presenting them before the intellectual eye as Mr. Savage. They seemed to live and sing before us, to sing out their souls and die. We who saw what these men saw, who felt as they felt, and lived, must have coarser organizations, thicker souls, heavier and more earthly natures, which, perhaps, is for our advantage, and perhaps not."

☞ Published by J. S. REDFIELD, No. 34 Beekman street.

Publications.

Annals of the Four Masters,

7 VOLUMES QUARTO, IN IRISH, WITH AN ENGLISH TRANSLATION BY O'DONOVAN. $45.

CARTE'S LIFE OF THE DUKE OF ORMONDE, and the Great Affairs of his Time in Ireland. 6 vols. 8vo. Full calf, $20.
GRATTAN'S LIFE AND TIMES: By his Son. 5 vols. 8vo. Cloth, $7.
CROKER'S LIFE OF J. HOLT, General of the '98 Rebels. 2 vols. 8vo. hf. calf, $3 50.
GAZETTEER OF IRELAND. 2 vols., maps. Cloth, $3.
MAXWELL'S HISTORY OF THE REBELLION. Illustrated. 1 vol. 8vo. cloth. $2.
FITZPATRICK'S LIFE OF CLONCURRY. 8vo. cloth. $1 50.
HAY'S BOOK OF IRISH BALLADS. 2 vols., Eng. ed., cloth. $2 25.
FINDEN'S BEAUTIES OF MOORE. Forty-eight portraits, exquisitely engraved. Folio, cloth, gilt edges. $6.
WRIGHT'S HISTORY OF IRELAND. 3 vols. quarto, maps, portraits, and views, $7 50.
BARRINGTON'S SKETCHES. $1.
SAVAGE'S '98 and '48. 1 vol., 12mo. $1.

MRS. HALL'S IRELAND, 3 VOLS., 8VO., FULL OF ILLUSTRATIONS. $12.

Warner's History of Ireland, 4to., $2 50. Warner's Irish Rebellion, 4to., $2 50. Will's Lives of Celebrated Irishmen, 6 volumes, $3. Life of Wolfe Tone, 2 volumes, $3 50. Mitchel's Jail Journal, $1. Mitchel's Hugh O'Neil, 37 1-2 cents. Moore's Life of Lord Edward Fitzgerald, 75 cents. Davis's Poems, with an introduction by John Mitchel, 37 1-2 cents. De Jean's Poems, 37 1-2 cents. Meagher's Speeches, $1. Furlong's Irish Prayer Book, 50 cts. Recollections of Lord Cloncurry, $1. Carleton's Willie Reilley, 75 cents. Mooney's History of Ireland, 2 volumes, $3. O'Connor's History of the Irish Brigade, 1 50. Life of Fighting Fitzgerald, 25 cents. Irish Popular Superstitions, 25 cents. Ellis's Romances and Ballads of Ireland, 75 cents. Curran's Speeches, $1 25. Grattan's Speeches, 1 25. Burke's Speeches, 1 25. Sheil's Speeches, 1 25. For sale by P. M. Haverty, Bookseller, 110 Fulton street, New-York.

With a few exceptions, any of the above will be sent by mail, free.

KEATING'S IRELAND.

A NEW TRANSLATION OF THE

FORAS FEASA AR ERINN;

OR, GENERAL HISTORY OF IRELAND.

From a Manuscript Copy of the Original Irish of the Rev. and Learned GEOFFREY KEATING.

With Notes, Historical, Topographical, and Explanatory,

By JOHN O'MAHONY, Esq.

The work is now in course of preparation, and will be speedily published, in one large octavo volume of about 600 pages, with plates. Price to Subscribers, $2,00.

The book will be got up in superior style, and furnished to the address of Subscribers giving their names to a duly-authorized canvasser, or to

P. M. HAVERTY, Publisher,
tf 110 Fulton street, N. Y.

THE OLD ESTABLISHED CATHOLIC HOUSE OF

EDWARD DUNIGAN & BROTHER,

151 FULTON STREET, NEW-YORK.

Honored with a Gold Medal and letters of approbation from His Holiness

POPE PIUS IX.,

and patronized by the Archbishops, Bishops, Clergy, Colleges, Convents, and Religious orders in the United States,

HAVE JUST PUBLISHED

THE HAMILTON'S, a Catholic Tale, of great beauty and power, price 38 cts.
CONSCIENCE, or the trials of Maybrooke.
BROOKE, a tale, by Mrs. M. H. Dorsey, 2 volumes, cloth, each 38 cents.
HOURS BEFORE THE ALTAR, or MEDITATIONS ON THE BLESSED EUCHARIST, by the Abbe de la Bouillerie, Vicar-General of Paris, translated by a Religeiuse of the Visitation. 1 volume, price 25cts.

AND HAVE IN PRESS,

THE LOVE OF MARY, or reading for the month of May, by D. Roberts.
THE YOUNG CRUSADER, a tale. 4t

P. O'SHEA,

789 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK,

Catholic Bookseller and Publisher, Importer of Vestments, Altar Furniture, and Religious Articles generally,

RESPECTFULLY calls the attention of the Catholic Clergy, Religious Orders, Superiors of Schools and Libraries, and his patrons, generally, to his large and varied assortment of Standard and Devotional Books and Religious articles of every description, which he offers for sale on the most reasonable terms, wholesale and retail.

Particular attention is called to his recently published works, viz.,

Bickerton; or, The Immigrant's Daughter. (An anti-Know-Nothing Tale,) 12mo., cloth, ... $0 50
Life of the Princess Borghese; (Daughter of the Earl of Shrewsbury.) Translated by Rev. A. F. Hewit, (of the Redemptorists.) 1 vol., 18mo, cloth, ... 0 37½
Life of St. Francis of Assisium. By Rev. Titus Icelin. 1 vol., 18mo, cl., 0 37½
Life of the Egyptian Aloyzius. Translated by Rev. A. F. Hewit. 2 vols., 18mo, cloth, each, ... 0 37½
Edma and Marguerite. A Tale; by the Author of the Orphan of Moscow. 2 vols., 18mo, cloth, ... 0 37½

Religious Articles.

Rosaries, per dozen, from 20 cents, to 4 00
" each, on silver chains, from 75 cents, to 12 00
Crucifixes, (brass,) per dozen, from 8 cents, to 12 00
" (silver,) each, from 25 cents, to 25 00

Statuettes, Holy Water Founts, &c., &c., in great varieties. Country Booksellers and travelling dealers, would do well when they come to New-York, to examine this stock before purchasing elsewhere.

3mos P. O'SHEA, 789 Broadway, New-York.

CHARLES SCRIBNER,

Nos. 377 AND 379 BROADWAY,

Published Thursday, April 17:

REALITY; Or, THE MILLIONAIRE'S DAUGHTER. By Mrs. L. C. Tuthill. 1 vol., 12mo, $1.

On Saturday, April 19:

THE SECOND MARRIAGE. By Charles Burdett. 1 vol., 12mo, 75 cents.
SIGHT AND HEARING—HOW PRESERVED—HOW LOST. By J. Henry Clarke, M. D., 1 vol., 12mo, $1.

LATEST PUBLICATIONS.

LIVES OF BRITISH HISTORIANS. By E. Lawrence. 2 vols., $2 50.
LIFE OF SEARGENT S. PRENTISS. 2 vols., 12mo, $2 50.
HOMES FOR THE PEOPLE. By G. Wheeler. 1 vol., $2 50.
MY FATHER'S HOUSE; Or, THE HEAVEN OF THE BIBLE. By Rev. J. M. Macdonald, D. D. 1 vol., 12mo, $1 25. ap191t.

HAMILTON & JOHNSON,

NEWS AGENTS,

30 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

DAILY, weekly and Sunday papers, Magazines, and Cheap Publications. The trade supplied. Orders from the country solicited and promptly filled.

JOHN HAMILTON,
tf J. W. JOHNSON.

Publications.

COMPLETION OF THE SIXTH YEAR.

HARPER'S NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE,

FOR MAY.

CONTENTS.

A VISIT TO THE SILVER MINES OF CENTRAL AMERICA.
Illustrated by Thirteen Engravings.
COMMODORE PERRY'S EXPEDITION TO JAPAN.
Illustrated by Eighteen Engravings.
THE GNAWERS. Illustrated by Twelve Engravings.
MARTHA WYATT'S LIFE.
THE RISE OF THE DUTCH REPUBLIC.
TWO COLLEGE FRIENDS.
THE STORY OF KARS.
THE SENSES.—SIGHT.
RECOLLECTIONS OF SAMUEL ROGERS.
LITTLE DORRIT. By CHARLES DICKENS.
ILLUSTRATIONS.—Mr. and Mrs. Flintwinch.—The Ferry.
CHAPTER XV. Mrs. Flintwinch has another Dream.
CHAPTER XVI. Nobody's Weakness.
CHAPTER XVII. Nobody's Rival.
CHAPTER XVIII. Little Dorritt's Lover.
MONTHLY RECORD OF CURRENT EVENTS.
LITERARY NOTICES.
Books of the Month.
EDITOR'S TABLE.
EDITOR'S EASY CHAIR.
EDITOR'S DRAWER.
MAY DAY IN NEW-YORK.
MAY DAY IN THE COUNTRY.
FASHIONS FOR MAY.
ILLUSTRATIONS.—Promenade Costumes. Mantilla.—Bonnet Shapes.—Bonnet.

This Number closes the TWELFTH VOLUME and the SIXTH YEAR of HARPER'S NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE, with the extraordinary issue of One Hundred and Sixty Thousand Copies. The Publishers have endeavored, by a well-directed use of the abundant resources at their command, to render it not only the cheapest, but the most attractive and most useful Magazine for popular reading in the world; and the extent to which their efforts have been successful is indicated by the fact, that it has attained a greater circulation than any similar periodical ever issued.

Special efforts will be made to render it still more interesting and valuable during the coming year. The new volume will commence with the June number. No labor or expense will be spared to render it in every way, and in all its departments, still more worthy of the unparalleled favor with which it has been received.

HARPER'S NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE owes its success to the fact, that it presents MORE reading matter, of a BETTER quality, in a MORE ELEGANT style, and at a CHEAPER rate than any other publication.

It sustains its well-earned reputation, both for the variety and quality of its contents. There is much to instruct, as well as to amuse all classes of reader, and we deem it fortunate for the country that the most popular Magazine of the United States is avowedly an ally in the cause of virtue and morality. We have seen no article in this (March) or any past number which a Christian man would not desire his family to read.—N. Y. Christian Advocate and Journal.

It is the foremost Magazine of the day. The fireside never had a more delightful companion, nor the million a more entertaining friend than Harper's Magazine.—Methodist Protestant, (Baltimore).

The most popular monthly in the world. It has become one of the literary wonders of this country. Almost exclusively composed of the works of American authors and artists, it pays its contributors some twenty-five hundred dollars monthly. It is a happy circumstance that it aims at the highest standard of literature and the purest of morals in all its pages.—N. Y. Observer.

TERMS.—The Magazine may be obtained of Booksellers, Periodical Agents, or from the Publishers, at THREE DOLLARS a year, or TWENTY-FIVE CENTS a Number. The Semi-annual Volumes, as completed, neatly bound in Cloth, are sold at TWO DOLLARS each, and Muslin Covers are furnished to those who wish to have their back Numbers uniformly bound, at TWENTY-FIVE CENTS each. Twelve Volumes are now ready, bound.

The Publishers will supply Specimen Numbers gratuitously to Agents and Postmasters, and will make liberal arrangements with them for circulating the Magazine. They will also supply Clubs, of two persons at Five Dollars a year, or five persons at Ten Dollars. Clergymen and Teachers supplied at Two Dollars a year.

ap191t Harper & Brothers, PUBLISHERS.

IF you would be posted,

If you want mental food, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you want good Pictures, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you want tip-top Stories, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you admire Cobb's stories, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you like Fanny Fern's Sketches, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you want good Romances, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you want a good, cheap Paper, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you have four cents over, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you are lazy in the morning, You will miss THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!

ap191t Ross & Tousey, are the Agents for this Paper.

PIANOS, MELODEONS AND MUSIC.

The Cash system adopted!—Prices greatly reduced.

HORACE WATERS,

No. 333 BROADWAY, N. Y.,

AGENT FOR THE BEST BOSTON AND NEW-YORK INSTRUMENTS.

THE largest assortment of Pianos, Melodeons, Musical Instruments, and Musical Merchandise of all kinds, in the United States, Pianos from ten different Manufactories, comprising those of every variety of style, from the plain, neat and substantial 6¼ octaves, in Walnut or Rosewood Cases, from $150 to $200, to those of the most elegant finish up to $1000. No house in the Union can compete with the above in the number, variety, and celebrity of its instruments, nor in the extremely low prices at which they are sold.

HORACE WATERS' MODERN IMPROVED PIANOS, with or without Iron Frames, possessing in their improvements of over-strings and action, a length of scale, power, and compass of tone equal to the Grand Piano, united with the beauty and durability of structure of the square Piano. They are justly pronounced by the Press and by the first Musical Masters to be equal to those of any other manufacturer. They are built of the best and most thoroughly seasoned material, and guaranteed to stand the action of every climate.

Each Instrument guaranteed to give satisfaction, or purchase money refunded. Second-hand Pianos at great bargains, constantly in store; price from $30 to $140.

HORACE WATERS' MELODEONS, superior instruments in tone, touch and durability of make. (Tuned the equal temperament.) Melodeons of all other styles and makes. Price, $45, $60, $75, $100, $125, $140; double Reeds, $150; double Reeds and two banks of Keys, $200. Less a liberal discount. Clergymen and Churches, an extra discount.

MARTIN'S GUITARS, BROWN'S HARPS, FLUTES, FLUTINAS, ACCORDIONS, VIOLINS, and MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS of all kinds, at lower prices than ever before offered to the public. A large discount to Teachers and Schools. The trade supplied on the most liberal terms.

MUSIC.—One of the largest and best selected catalogues of Music now published, comprising many of the choice and most popular airs of the day, and will be sold at one-third off from the regular prices.

Music sent by mail to all parts of the country, post paid. Particular and personal attention paid to all orders received by mail. Satisfaction guaranteed in every instance. Pianos and Melodeons for rent, and rent allowed on purchase. Pianos and Melodeons for sale on monthly payments. Second-hand Pianos taken in exchange for new. General and select Catalogues and schedule of prices forwarded to all parts of the country by mail.

☞ Great inducements offered to agents in all parts of the country, to sell the Horace Waters' Pianos, Melodeons, and Catalogue of Music.

Shipping.

C. H. MARSHALL & CO.,

Old Black Ball Line of Liverpool Packets.

CERTIFICATES

Furnished for Passage to and from Liverpool, on the 1st and 16th of every Month, by the following splendid ships:

James Foster, Jr.	Capt. J. W. Porter.
Neptune	" E. W. Peabody.
Harvest Queen	" E. Young.
Isaac Webb	" J. M. Bayer.
Great Western	" W. G. Furrier.
Manhattan	" T. Dixon.
Isaac Wright	" E. Abeel.
Columbia	" C. Hutchinson.
Fidelia	" W. A. Macgill.
Yorkshire	" C. A. Marshall.

REMITTANCES.

Drafts, for £1 and upwards, on the Royal Bank of Ireland, and on Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., Bankers, Liverpool and London, payable on sight.

C. H. MARSHALL & CO.,
38 Burling Slip, N. Y.

Agents in Liverpool, Baring Brothers & Co.,

OLD LINE PACKETS,

Pier 23 East River, foot of Beekman street. 6m

WILLIAMS & GUION'S

Old Black Star Line of Packets. 1856.

Passage from any part of Great Britain and Ireland, secured at the lowest possible rates by this old-established line, sailing from Liverpool to New-York every five days, comprising the following magnificent Ships:

Ships.	Captains.	Tonage.
AUSTRALIA,	Smith,	2,000
BRIDGEWATER (new),	Barstow,	2,000
CULTIVATOR (new),	Austin,	2,000
CYNOSURE,	Bray,	2,000
CORNELIA LAWRENCE (new),	Knapp,	2,000
DE WITT CLINTON,	Funk,	1,800
ENTERPRISE,	Davis,	1,200
GUY MANNERING,	Dollard,	2,000
JACOB A. WESTERVELT,	Hoodless,	2,000
IRENE,	Williams,	1,400
JOHN BRIGHT (new),	Cutting,	2,000
MARMION,	Hanley,	1,200
NORTH AMERICAN,	Clark,	1,800
OSWEGO,	Stevens,	1,400
ROBERT KELLY,	Barstow,	1,500
SILAS WRIGHT (new),	Freeman,	2,000
SOUTHAMPTON,	Furlong,	1,600
THORNTON (new),	Collins,	2,000
TICONDEROGA,	Boyle,	1,400
UNIVERSE,	Cave,	2,000
VANGUARD,	Norton,	1,800

The ships of this line are the largest and swiftest in the trade, their accommodations for passengers are unequalled, and the frequency and punctuality of their departure offer advantages to the emigrant not to be had by any Line of Packets. Such passengers as decline coming out, the money paid for them will be promptly refunded without discount.

Provisions of best quality are provided for passengers; rations, consisting of Bread, Flour, Rice, Oatmeal, Tea, Sugar, Molasses, Salt, &c.

The increased patronage received by the proprietors of the Old Black Star Line has induced them to add to the Line several New Ships, which have taken their place this season; no expense has been spared to render the facilities for Emigration equal to the times, and add to the renown of these celebrated Packets.

The regular Sailing days are 1st, 8th, 11th, 13th, 21st, and 26th of each month; this will give passengers opportunity for embarking more frequent than by any other established Line, to which the attention of the public is respectfully called.

No Certificate of Passage will be issued for children under 12 years of age unless accompanied by an adult, who must be paid for on same certificate; for persons over 60 years of age, or with any impediment, without a Permit from Commissioners of Emigration.

REMITTANCES.

Persons wanting to send money to their friends can obtain drafts for any amount, which will be cashed at sight at the following Banks:

Ireland—National Bank of Ireland; Royal Bank of Ireland; Ulster Banking Co., and their Branches.

Scotland—National Bank of Scotland and Branches.

England—Messrs. GLYNN, MILLS & Co, Bankers, London; GUION & Co., Merchants, Liverpool.

For further particulars apply, if by letter post-paid, to

WILLIAMS & GUION,
40 Fulton street, New-York.

GUION & CO.,
115 Waterloo Road, Liverpool.

AGENTS—JOHN WHITNEY, Providence, R. I.
EDWARD RYAN, 2 Albany street, Boston.
THOMAS RATTIGAN, Pittsburgh, Pa.

BLACK BALL LINE OF LIVERPOOL PACKETS.

CROGHAN & CO., 41 FULTON ST.

CERTIFICATES furnished for Passage to and from Liverpool on the 1st and 16th of every month by the following splendid Ships:—

James Foster, Jr.,	Manhattan,
Neptune,	Isaac Wright,
Harvest Queen,	Columbia,
Isaac Webb,	Fidelia
Great Western,	Yorkshire.

REMITTANCES.

☞ Drafts for £1 and upwards on our agent, Patrick Tracy, 60 Waterloo Road, Liverpool, payable at sight.

Old Line Packets, Pier 23 East River, foot of Beekman street. 3m

Emigration.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,

Office, corner of South and Beach Streets, Boston.

THE office of this Society is open from 7 A. M., to 6 P. M., where Emigrants can apply to obtain situations for which they are fitted. Farmers, Mechanics, and others in want of labor, will apply at the office.

Orders from employers in the country, stating the services required, the wages given, and the cheapest mode of conveyance, and giving respectable reference, will meet with prompt attention.

The Society will be thankful for all circumstantial and early information of any fraud, imposition or outrage committed on emigrants, and will endeavor speedily to apply a remedy.

MARTIN GRIFFIN, ARTHUR M'AVOY, } Vice Presidents.

NICHOLAS J. BEAN, Cor. Secretary.
JAMES FERGUSON, Rec. Secretary.
WILLIAM HICKEY, Treasurer.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

John Hughes,	P. Holly,
William Keating,	Christopher Plunkett,
Daniel O'Rourke,	Jeremiah Ford,
Thomas Hughes,	Hugh Duffy,
Owen Lappan,	M. Lennon, Charlestown,
J. Ryder,	James O'Brien, do.,

Patrick C. Boyle, Roxbury.

MICHAEL HUGHES, Agent.

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND, &c.

GEORGE McBRIDE, Jr., No. 14 Broadway, continues to transmit money, in sums large or small, to persons residing in any part of Ireland, in the same manner as he and his predecessor in business have done for the last thirty years, and more; also to any part of England or Scotland.

Money remitted by letter, post paid, to the subscriber, or personally deposited with him, with the name of the person or persons in Ireland, England or Scotland, to whom it is to be sent, and nearest post town, will be immediately transmitted and paid accordingly, and a receipt to that effect given or forwarded to the sender.

3mo GEORGE McBRIDE, Jr., N. N.

Emigration.

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,
Office, 51 Chambers street.

NOTICE.—The recent failures, by which a large amount of Bills remitted from this country to friends in Ireland, has been returned unpaid, afford to this Society the opportunity, and at the same time impose upon it the duty of informing the public, that such losses would have been prevented if the parties purchasing Bills had availed themselves of the advantages offered by the Society.

For the purpose of entire protection a fund is constantly kept on deposit in the Bank of Ireland, against which this Society issues its drafts, payable at sight (from sums of £1 sterling and upwards), on the Bank and all its branches, and has thereby for the last Ten Years afforded a mode of remittance perfectly safe and unquestionable.

New-York, December 29, 1851.

ANDREW CARRIGAN, President.

JOHN MANNING, ROBERT J. DILLON, HUGH KELLY, } Vice-Presidents.

EDWARD C. DONNELLY, Corresponding Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Recording Secretary.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Felix Ingoldsby,	John Nicholson,	William Redmond.
William Watson,	Hugh Kelly,	James Olwell,
John Manning,	Cornel Sheehan,	Daniel Devlin,
Terence Donnelly,	Romaine Dillon,	John McMenomy.

EMIGRANT INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS BANK.

No. 51 CHAMBERS STREET.

THIS Institution has been established for the purpose of affording to Emigrants and others, a safe place of deposit for their funds, to protect them from robbery and fraud.

It is conducted with the strictest economy—neither the Officers and Trustees, receive any compensation for their services. The entire profits belong to the Depositors, and will be divided amongst them, having due regard to the safety of the funds.

The last dividend was six per cent. upon all sums of $500 and under, and and will be continued or increased as the profits may justify.

Bank open to receive Deposits, daily, from 10 A. M., to 2, and from 5 to 7 P. M.

TRUSTEES.

William Watson,	John P. Nesmith,
John Nicholson,	John Milhau,
Andrew Carrigan,	Edward W. Tiers,
James Kelly,	Charles M. Connelly,
James Kerrigan,	Cornelius H. Sheehan,
Hugh Kelly,	Edward Bayer,
Charles O'Connor,	Daniel Devlin.
James Olwell,

JOSEPH STUART, President.
FELIX INGOLDSBY, 1st Vice-President.
JOHN MCMENOMY, 2d Vice-President.
TERENCE DONNELLY, Treasurer.
LOUIS B. BINSSE, Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Accountant.
JOHN MANNING, Comptroller. tf

NATURALIZATION—IMPORTANT NOTICE.

THE subscriber respectfully informs the Foreign Population of New-England that he still attends to the business of preparing first and second papers for those who wish to become citizens of the United States, on very moderate terms, at his old stand, 129 Federal street, Boston.

N.B. First papers every day; last papers every Friday.

THOMAS ROWEAN, Justice of the Peace,
and the Oldest Naturalization Agent in New England.

REMITTANCES TO

ENGLAND, IRELAND AND SCOTLAND.

STERLING BILLS for sale on Messrs. Prescott, Grote & Co., Bankers, London, from £1 upwards, payable on demand, and negotiable in any part of the United Kingdom; also Bank of England Notes and Drafts of any of the English Banks or Bankers, bought and sold.

ap19 1y Prime & Co., 54 Wall street.

DRAFTS FOR £1 AND UPWARDS,

ON THE ROYAL BANK OF IRELAND,

FOR SALE AT THE BANKING HOUSE OF JOHN B. MURRAY,

No. 44 Wall street, (over Bank of North America,) New-York.

PERSONS wishing to send money to their friends in Europe, can remit it to Mr. Murray, by letter, post-paid, who will, upon receipt, forward a draft on the Royal Bank, without charge, to the person designated. 3m*

☞ To prevent loss, every Draft is registered here, and a copy of the register forwarded to the Bank by every mail steamer.

Business Directory.

PROSPECTUS.

THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC REVIEW is now firmly established in Washington City. Every great question before the present Congress will be elaborately discussed in its columns.

Such subscribers to the "Western Democratic Review," as have overpaid, will be furnished with the "National Democratic Review," which, it is believed, will prove a work of vastly superior merit.

A considerable portion of each number of the REVIEW will be devoted to Literary and Scientific subjects. Several, among the most accomplished scholars and distinguished politicians in the country, will be regular contributors to its columns.

In answer to numerous inquiries of old and new friends, we deem it proper to say, THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC REVIEW will be printed and published at Washington City; is totally unconnected with any political Magazine in the country; is devoted, not to the support of any politician, but to the interests of the National Democracy—that democracy which will ever "carry the flag and keep step to the music of the Union."

The REVIEW is published in pamphlet form, upon beautiful white paper, in solid long primer, 96 pages per month—making two volumes per year, of 576 pages each.

TERMS.—$3 per year, payable invariably in advance.

INDUCEMENTS TO CLUBS.—Five copies for one year—$10; twelve copies for one year—$20. Booksellers ordering the work, will be furnished at the usual magazine rates.

Members of Congress, and postmasters in every part of the Union, are hereby authorized to receive and receipt for subscriptions to the REVIEW.

All moneys may be transmitted by mail at the risk of the editor.

Copies of the REVIEW will be found for sale at the Bookstore of Franck Taylor, 402 Pennsylvania Avenue, and at the office of publication 468 10th street, between D and E.

All communications to be addressed to

GEO. P. BUELL,
Editor National Democratic Review.

WRITING AND BOOK-KEEPING.

FOSTER, DIXON & CO., give Lessons in Writing, Arithmetic, and Book-keeping, at 346 Broadway, where gentlemen are qualified for Mercantile situations, in an expeditious and superior manner.

The "New-York School of Writing and Accounts," is admitted to be the best organized institution of the kind in the United States. The course of instruction is practical, thorough and complete; the terms moderate; the hours of attendance 9 A. M. to 9 P. M., at the student's convenience; and every facility is afforded for the attainment of elegance in PENMANSHIP, expertness in ARITHMETIC, and skill in Book-keeping. 4t*

From the Dublin Tablet.

"Having experienced the benefits which Mr. Foster has bestowed upon the rising generation by his 'Pencilled Copy Books,' we were prepared to expect in his 'Double Entry Elucidated' a just theory, clearly and forcibly expressed. We are glad to see that the press has done the work justice—that Hood found it 'philosophical;' Friend of India 'scientific;' the Economist considers it the 'perfection of principle;' the Express recommends it for its 'simplicity;' and the London Times speaks of it as 'an excellent manual of business.' In all this we have only to add our full agreement. It removes a reproach which has hitherto fallen heavily upon our commercial education. It teaches a science."

STATEN ISLAND

FANCY DYING ESTABLISHMENT.

OFFICE No. 3 John street, (two doors from Broadway,) New-York, solicit orders for dying Broadcloths, Merinoes, Paramattas, De Laines, and Silk, Woolen, and fancy goods of every description; Satin and Taffeta Ribbons, Gimps, Fringes, Galloons, and other trimmings dyed and re-finished with great success.

Also ladies and gentlemens Garments, Shawls, &c., &c.

BARRETT, NEPHEW & CO.,
3mos 3, John st., (2 doors from Broadway,) N. Y.

Special Notices.

DRILL ROOM GUIDE.

NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

COMPANY B, (Fitzgerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company D, (Guyon Cadets) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MURPHY, Capt.

Company I, (Jackson Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." W. O. MURPHY, Capt.

Company H, (Erina Guard) drill Thursday Evening at "Military Hall." R. CODDINGTON, Capt.

Company —, (Irish Grenadiers) drill each Thursday Evening at 22 White street. FELIX DUFFY, Capt.

TENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Brookes' Rooms." JOHN KENNEDY, Capt.

ELEVENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Montgomery Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. S. MURPHY, Capt.

SIXTY NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Irish Rifles) drill each Tuesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES QUINLAN, Capt.

Company K, (Brian Boroihme Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES HUSTON, Capt.

Company —, (Fag a Bealac Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." GILBERT RIORDAN, Capt.

Company —, (Mechanic's Guard) drill each second Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." Lieut. WM. MALONE, Com'dt.

Company —, (Emmet Life Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Worth's Military Head Quarters," 22 White street. T. LYNCH, Capt.

70th REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company D, (Napper Tandy Light Artillery) drill each Thursday Evening at Brooklyn City Armory. WM. H. HOGAN, Capt.

SEVENTY FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company A, (State Rifles) drill each Wednesday Evening at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. Lieut. JAS. KELLY, Com'dt.

Company B, (Irish National Guard) drill each Friday Evening at "Centre Market Rooms." JOHN LANE, Capt.

Company C, (Young Ireland Rifles) drill each Friday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JOHN BURKE, Capt.

Company D, (——— ———) drill each ——— at ———. ——— NUGENT, Capt.

Company E, (T. F. Meagher Rifles) drill each ——— at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. J. B. DONNELLY, Capt.

Company F, (Mich'l. Doheny Rifles) drill each ——— at ———. J. F. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company G. (Emmet Rifles) drill each ——— at ———. JOHN BEGG, Capt.

INDEPENDENT COMPANIES.

Company —, (Edward Fitzgerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." MICH'L. FLOOD NAGLE, Capt.

Company —, (O'Mahony Guard, E. M. A.,) drill each Tuesday Evening at "North America Rooms," cor. of Bayard and Bowery. JAMES CAVANAGH, Capt.

N. B.—Commandants of Irish-American Military Companies throughout the United States, are respectfully tendered a place in the above "Directory," and requested to send such information as will enable us to represent them in it.

A CIRCULAR.

TO those engaged in Mercantile pursuits, any invention that will facilitate their labors is highly worthy of notice as well as extensive patronage. One of the most important inventions of the present age is that of a pen which possesses the necessary qualities of fineness in mark and durability in use. Those of John Foley, manufacturer Gold Pens and Pencils, 167 Broadway, New-York, stand pre-eminent. Their superior value is tested by the long time he has been engaged in our city in their manufacture.

We, the subscribers who know the value of these pens, from long use of them, cheerfully recommend them to those who wish for the most convenient article in the counting room. Signed by the following and many other parties:

Geo. S. Coe, Vice-President American Exchange Bank.
B. Murray, Assistant Cashier do. do. do.
J. Seymour, Cashier Bank of North America.
F. A. Platt, Cashier Corn Exchange Bank.
B. T. Hoogland, Cashier National Bank.
W. T. Hooker, President Continental Bank.
James McCall, President Metropolitan Bank.
H. Meigs, Jr., Cashier do do.
J. C. Beach, Cashier Marine Bank.
G. R. Conover, Cashier Importers' and Traders' Bank.
R. H. Lowery, Cashier Bank of the Republic.
W. B. Meeker, Assistant Cashier Bank of New-York.
T. D. Meiggs, Teller Bank of America.
Charles Windsor, Teller Mercantile Bank.
D. Randall, do. do. do.
J. M. Crane, Teller Shoe and Leather Bank.
J. E. Southwick, President Atlantic Bank.
George D. Arthur, Cashier do. do.
P. S. Henderson, Cashier Brooklyn Bank.
Constant W. Brown, Merchants' Bank.
Joseph W. Corlies, President St. Nicholas Bank.
George Ellis, Cashier Bank of the Commonwealth.
R. A. Tooker, Cashier Nassau Bank.
Samuel B. White, Cashier Grocers' Bank.
Edwin Ludlow, Cashier Ohio Life Insurance and Trust Co.
H. W. Cheeseman, Teller Market Bank.
Samuel H. Kissam, Teller Bank of Commerce.
William F. Brown, do. do. do.
S. K. Raymond, Teller Mechanics' Bank.
George D. Lyman, Manager New-York Clearing House.
Charles Dennis, Vice-President Atlantic Mutual Insurance Co.
A. B. Neilson, President Sun Mutual Insurance Co.
Elwood Walter, President Mercantile Mutual Insurance Co.
E. Russell Hinckley, President Atlas Mutual Insurance Co.
Daniel Drake Smith, President Commercial Mutual Insurance Co.
John P. Paulison, Vice-President Astor Mutual Insurance Co.
J. F. Cox, Vice-President Great Western Insurance Co.
William Le Coney, Vice-President Pacific Mutual Insurance Co.
William K. Ackerman, Secretary Illinois Central Railroad Co.
Wm. Bement, Treasurer New-York and New-Haven Railroad Co.
E. B. Litchfield, Treasurer Cleveland and Toledo Railroad Co.
R. B. Turner, Register do. do. do.
J. M. Hopkins, Sec'y. Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana R. R. Co.
G. H. Ford, Dep. Treas. do. do. do.
J. F. Davenport, Treasurer Hudson River Railroad Co.
Edward Thompson, Agent Long Island Railroad Co.
James Rowe, Cashier New-York Herald.
A. Gordon, Bookkeeper New-York Herald.
Henry L. Meech, Cashier Daily Times.
Richard B. Connelly, County Clerk.
T. M. Wigham, of Jacob Little & Co.
J. H. Stebbins, of N. R. Cobb & Co.
Jesse Payne, of Wells, Fargo & Co.

Winslow, Lanter & Co.	E. W. Tiers & Co.
R. W. Clarke, Dodge & Co.	Brown & De Rosset.
Carpenter & Vermilye.	Coolidge & Young.
Meigs and Greenleaf.	Shepard & Nelson.
H. T. Morgan & Co.	Spies, Christ & Jay.
Condit, Jenkins & Co.	H. M. Schieffelin & Fowler.
Quick L'Hommedieu.	Fairchild & Fanshawe.
Atwood & Co.	Beale, Melick & De Witt.
G. S. Robbins & Co.	Carhart, Bacon, Clark & Co.
T. Ketcham & Co.	Brewer & Caldwell.
Drake & Bradford.	American Express Co.
E. S. Munro & Co.	Hall, Dana & Co.
Wetmore & Robert.	Gage, Sloans & Dater.
Stevens, Wallace & Morris.	Afwater, Knapp & Woodruff.
Wells, Butterfield & Co.	Richards & McHarg.
S. B. Chittenden & Co.	Johnson & Higgins.
W. Carpenter, Ide & Co.	James & Henry McBride.
C. E. & W. J. Babcock.	Moody and Telfair.
Sheldon, Hoyt & Co.	L. Roberts & Co.
Bird & Neilson.	Waldo, Barey & Co.
Barclay & Livingston.	Jewell, Harrison & Co.

These Pens vary in size and price, viz., $1, $1 25, $2, $3 and $4 each, with complete silver extension cases, new style pencil, &c., attached are $2, $2 50, $3, $3 50, and $4 each. The undersigned is manufacturer of the celebrated "John Foley's bank pen," price $3 and $4 for the large size, including holder. All pens of my manufacture are made of fine gold, finished in the best manner; points warranted not to come0off, and guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction; if not, will exchange them or return the money. Any of the above pens will be sent by mail on receipt of the price. Pens and cases made to order for trade, on the most advantageous terms.

JOHN FOLEY, Gold Pen Manufacturer,
1mo 167 Broadway, New-York,

Thirty-fourth Congress—First Session—Senate.

April 7.—Mr. Mason, from Committee on Foreign Relations, reported a resolution to the effect that no further legislation is necessary in order to put an end to the treaty with Denmark, regulating the Sound Dues. The subject was made the special order for the 4th inst. Mr. Cass—I desire to present a memorial from persons composing the self-styled Legislature of Kansas, and move its reference to the Committee on Territories. Mr. Seward—Which of them? Mr. Cass—The Honorable Senator understands just as well as if I told him. After some further discussion, Mr. Seward withdrew his question. The subject was laid aside, and the Bounty Land bill taken up, which was also set aside, after an argument by Mr. Foot in favor of its passage.

Mr. Geyer addressed the Senate on Kansas affairs, saying that his position in the Senate, as the sole representative of the State of Missouri would not permit him to decline participation in the debate. He engaged in it as a work of necessity, rather than inclination. He proceeded to consider the constitutional aspect of the slavery question, contending that the power of Congress to make all needful rules and regulations in regard to the Territory and other property of the United States extends to the public domain only, and not to the domestic affairs or institutions of the Territory. Without concluding, Mr. Geyer gave way to a motion to adjourn.

April 8.—Mr. Pearce reported a bill to remit and refund duties on goods, wares, and merchandise destroyed by fire. Mr. Seward said the same was bill passed by the Senate last session, but failed in the House for want of time. Passed. Mr. Sumner introduced a bill supplementary to the act to limit the liabilities of ship-owners. Mr. Mason introduced a bill to make further provision for the satisfaction of Virginia land-warrants. Mr. Geyer on Kansas affairs expressed the opinion that, had it not been for the Emigrant Aid Societies, Kansas would be a Free State. But the South, having been stimulated by the attempt of the North to shape the destiny of that Territory, would in all probability maintain the present Southern ascendency therein. He quoted from the Massachusetts Personal Liberty bill, unfavorably contrasting some of its provisions with the laws of the Kansas Legislature, against which so much has been said by Senators on the other side.

April 9.—A number of bills from the Court of Claims making appropriations for certain claims, were passed. The question of printing the memorial of the Kansas Legislature, presented by Mr. Cass, was taken up. Mr. Butler opposed the motion. Mr. Mason moved it be laid on the table. Mr. Seward then addressed the Senate at considerable length. The Tribune correspondent says: "It was listened to with profound interest, especially by the pro-slavery members. The galleries were crowded, and the House was for a time without a quorum, so many members had come into the Senate Chamber to hear the speech."

April 10.—After a slight discussion as to the printing of the memorial from the members of the Free State Legislature of Kansas, Mr. Hamlin desired that the memorial might be printed for his own information, so he could act understandingly on the question of the admission of Kansas under the present State Constitution. He thought the striking parallel which could be found to the treatment Senators were inclined to bestow on this memorial, by laying it on the table or rejecting it, was the conduct of Lord North, when the petitions of the North American colonies were laid before the British Parliament. Mr. Butler replied that if the motion to print this Kansas memorial prevail, he should regard it as the greatest contempt ever offered to the South. Mr. Hale believed the refusal to admit Kansas as a State, would leave her a State out of the Union, and quoted the case of the admission of Missouri to prove that position. Mr. Douglas replied, saying this was not a parallel case. Congress had passed a law authorizing the people of Missouri to form a Constitution and a State Government, preparatory to admission into the Union. In the present instance the proceedings of the Topeka Convention were not only unauthorized by Congress, but were revolutionary and rebellious. He could not recognize Kansas as a State either in or out of the Union, in consequence of anything they had done without authority of law. Mr. Yulee said that under the rules of the Senate, the memorial could not be printed. The Chair decided that the motion to print must to go to the Committee on Printing. Mr. Butler was unwilling the memorial should take that course. Mr. Cass explained that, in presenting the memorial, he by no means endorsed its statements. He had always made it a principle to present every petition which he had been asked to present. Messrs. Trumbull and Bayard entered into the general question of Kansas matters.

April 11.—The Senate passed forty-eight private bills, including one for the relief of the officers and soldiers of the army who sustained losses by the San Francisco and Winfield Scott steamboat disasters.

House of Representatives.

April 7.—Mr. Bingham, from the Committee on Elections, reported a resolution declaring vacant the seat of the Eighth District of Illinois, claimed by Mr. P. B. Foulke; also, that Mr. S. S. Marshall, the sitting member from the Ninth District of the same State, was elected over Mr. L. J. B. Forney. Consideration of the Committee's report was postponed. Mr. Mace, by unanimous consent, presented the Constitution of Kansas, together with a memorial of the new Legislature of Kansas on the subject. Referred to the Committee on Territories. Mr. Mace's motion to print 10,000 copies, was referred to the Committee on Printing. In Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union, the deficiency appropriation bill being in order, Mr. Keitt, of South Carolina, made a speech on political affairs, calling on the democratic party and the conservatives of the North, to crush the aggressive spirit of fanaticism directed against the South. Mr. Millson spoke in favor of appropriating $1,000 for filling up and grading the grounds belonging to the Custom House building at Norfolk, Va. Mr. Pelton, from the Committee on Commerce, reported a bill authorizing the President to cause to be procured a suitable steamer to be stationed at New York as a revenue cutter to afford relief to distressed vessels. Referred to the Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union. On motion of Mr. Humphrey Marshall, the Committee on Foreign Affairs were instructed to inquire into the expediency of declaring the engagement of American vessels in the Chinese Coolie trade to be illegal, and a sufficient cause of forfeiture to the captors of the ship engaged therein. On motion of Mr. Pringle, it was resolved that the President be requested to communicate what information he may possess in regard to citizens of the United States being engaged in the slave trade, or in the transportation in American ships of coolies from China to Cuba and other countries, with the intention of placing or continuing them in a state of slavery or servitude, and whether such traffic is not, in his opinion, a violation of the spirit of existing treaties, rendering those engaged in it liable to indictment for piracy; and especially that he be requested to communicate to this House the facts and circumstances attending the shipment from China of some 500 coolies in the ship Sea Witch, of the city of New York, lately wrecked on the coast of Cuba. Some changes on Standing Committees having been made the House adjourned.

April 8.—The Deficiency Appropriation bill pending, Mr. Zollicoffer replied to his colleague, Mr. Smith, in justification of his vote for a new American platform in the Philadelphia Convention. Mr. Hugnaton argued against the extension of Slavery. Mr. Waldron earnestly condemned the violation of the Missouri restrictions, and expressed, as his opinion, that the rights of the people of Kansas had been usurped by invaders, and the government designed for their protection to be made an instrument for their oppression. Mr. Boyce argued that Great Britain had violated our neutrality laws, in the enlistment case. We should insist by negotiation for reparation, which will be forthcoming when a future British Administration attain power; for the present, one cannot make reparation without condemning itself. He objected to Great Britain's pretence to the Mosquito Protectorate and occupation of Ruatan. War was not a remedy for the settlement of the question, our policy being peace.

April 9.—The Deficiency Appropriation bill was taken up. Mr. Shorter contended that Massachusetts, by her conduct relative to the Fugitive Slave law, has placed herself outside of the pale of the Constitution, and ought not to be represented here. He said the South had been victimized every time she had compromised with the North. He hoped, therefore, that no further attempt of that kind would be made. If the Republican party should triumph in the next Presidential election, the Union would be destroyed. The Conservative Democracy alone could save us. The Senate's amendment appropriating nearly $50,000 for engravings, maps and drawings accompanying the report of the explorations and surveys to determine the route for a Pacific railroad, was discussed. The question of extravagance was dilated upon in this connection, one gentleman saying the printing and engraving of this will cost $1,000,000, while others thought such large outlays would have a tendency to prejudice the construction of the road. An ineffectual effort was made to confine the appropriation within proper limits, excluding illustrations fitted only to adorn books of travel and natural history.

April 10.—The resolution from the Committee on Elections, declaring P. B. Foulke to be not the duly elected member from the 8th Congressional District of Illinois, was taken up and discussed. The resolution was adopted, there being but nine votes in the negative. The resolution declaring Samuel S. Marshall, the sitting member from the 9th district of Illinois, elected over Mr. Turney, was also passed. Messrs. Foulke and Turney were allowed per diem and mileage to date. The Senate's amendments to the Deficiency Appropriation Bill were then further considered in committee. Without concluding, the committee rose, and the House adjourned.

April 11.—The bill to compensate ex-minister John S. Pendleton for extra diplomatic services, was passed, together with a number of other private bills.

Adjournment of the New-York Legislature.

From the Albany Argus, April 11.

The adjournment of the Legislature Wednesday night was a scene. Both houses had, some days previous, agreed to adjourn at 10 P. M. As the pressure seemed to require it, the Senate proposed to prolong the session till Friday—for twenty-four hours—even for six hours. The House not only refused, but consumed the time by wasteful debate on the subject. The Appropriation bill passing into the hands of the Assembly, they refused to relinquish it, though the Senate asked for it, for the purpose, it is said, of receding from their amendments. In that event, the bill would have gone to the Governor and become a law. But the House was determined to defeat the bill, and to force the necessity for an extra session. The Supply bill shared the same fate. Among the other bills lost were the Assembly Apportionment, Senate District, and Judicial District bills, the Canal Superintendent bill, the Temperance and License bills, the State Lunatic Asylum bill, the Stockbridge Indian bill, the Charles Watson Contract bill (for Sing Sing convict labor), the Railroad Commissioner Repeal bill, the New-York City Charter and Police bills, the State Arsenal bill, the New-York Park bill and City Hall bill, the Schuyler County bill, and Kent County, and all other new county projects. The Broadway bill was killed before the close of the session, as were some other projects, though these will undoubtedly be revived if there is an extra session; and it was the hope of this event that animated all those interested in defeated schemes, to bring about the crisis and its supposed necessity.

In the Senate, when the hour arrived for adjournment, Mr. Barr was speaking in behalf of his claim to a seat. His eloquence was cut off midway by the advent of the hour. So that plot has failed.

There were some 900 bills on the calendar of the Assembly, of which 400 had passed to a third reading. The people have escaped with only 200. They are fortunate in this.

The failure of the appropriation bills will affect only the fiscal year beginning October 1, 1856, until which time provision is made by the law of last year. From that date, until the Legislature takes further action, the State stops payment.

The Governor has refused to call an extra session, and will probably adhere to his determination. He has made a political point of it, and will probably not be disposed to relinquish the advantage.

The State officers will doubtless be embarrassed in the conduct of the government, by the refusal of the representative body to "vote the supplies." But the fault is not with their opponents. The Senate exceeded its duty in its desire to pass these necessary laws; and in the House, the Speaker, by an unprecedented stretch of courtesy, had given them the Committee of Ways and Means. The main questions of government were in their own hands.

Who is responsible for the untimely end of the Legislature? We do not know that any one need excuse himself from complicity in "its taking off," but we suppose it may be ascribed to a chance-medley. Members of all parties were busy with it, in its last hours, with evidently fatal intent.

It has terminated, and we congratulate the people on its end. It was an ill-constituted and irresponsible body, of whose action it was impossible to predict anything with any certainty, subject to combinations and intrigues, swayed by dictation, and showing vacillation of purpose of which there are few parallels.

It was, perhaps, necessary that the people should see exhibited thus publicly the weakness and folly of the political parties that now stand between them and the administration of State, before restoring the democratic rule. Certain it is, that this session is the prelude to a long reign of democracy in the councils of New-York.

From the Albany Journal, April 10.

The State Legislature adjourned at 10 o'clock last evening, pursuant to a concurrent resolution adopted four weeks since, leaving nearly all the public business, much general legislation, and most of the half-matured local bills, as unfinished business. The Canal Appropriation bills are the only measures of a public nature passed into laws. The Supply bill did not reach its third reading in the House. The Appropriation bill, having been amended in the Senate, was laid on the table in the Assembly, where the Apportionment bill, passed by the Senate, also lies. Scarcely more than two hundred laws were enacted. Last year's statute book contains over five hundred enactments.

In no former year in our history has the legislature failed to discharge its more important functions. Hitherto the public business has been either well or ill done. The State government has, for the first time, come to a stand still.

The responsibility for this condition of things rests with and upon the House of Assembly, the Senate having, during the whole session, kept its calendar, whether the business originated there or in the Assembly, clear.

The House was unfortunately constituted. With three political parties nearly equal in strength, three weeks were occupied in its organization. Another week was lost by a recess. All this time, however, would have been made up if the cause which delayed the organization had not delayed and embarrassed business. The House did not lack ability or industry; but it never got into working order.

The two houses adjourned without the usual interchange or messages between the Executive and themselves; nor was the usual committee to examine the treasury, bank department, &c., appointed by the Assembly.

Of the bills that have become laws the only ones of very great importance that now occur to us are the two Canal Appropriation bills, two bills amending the statutes relating to public instruction and the support of schools, the Albany Bridge bill, the New-York City Tax bill. Doubtless many other bills of considerable importance have become laws, but it is still true that most of them are local and unimportant enactments.

Presidential Prospects.

The American State Council of Wisconsin have thrown Fillmore overboard, and recommended Speaker Banks for the Presidency.

It is said that Speaker Banks declines being the "Republican" candidate for President. Hopes are still entertained, however, that Abby Kelly will consent to run.—Daily News.

The Cleveland Plaindealer says that Douglas' Kansas report should be adopted as the Democratic "text-book of the campaign."

The Goshen Independent Republican, reviewing the Presidential field, concludes thus:

But while we take encouragement for our cause, we look for consistent and genial counsels and decisions from the Democracy in State and National councils. With a standard bearer who has been loyal and bold as a politician and statesman, who by his career can link the memories of the past to his banner as a ground of confidence for future Democratic successes, the National Democracy have no political enemies whom they cannot, with a worthy zeal, meet and overcome.

A correspondent of the Washington Union, who subscribes himself "An Old Whig," says:

Let not the Whigs be humbled because their party has been swallowed. The whale swallowed Jonah; Jonah was heard of afterwards, the whale never.

Maj. Donelson is called "the greasy Tennessean." Greasy as he is, says the New Albany Ledger, a good many Know Nothings find it very hard to swallow him.

The Pennsylvanian and some other journals are classing Maryland—some for Mr. Buchanan and some for Mr. Pearce. The fact is, Maryland will go into the Cincinnati Convention unpledged to any one, prepared to sustain the nominee of that Convention, whether he shall be one of the distinguished gentlemen above named, or any other good Democrat. The intemperate zeal manifested by the friends of particular candidates is not favorable to the union and harmony of the party.—Cecil Democrat.

The Rochester Union (Soft) is fighting Mr. Buchanan, and quoting his Berks letter to prove him opposed to the Kansas principle.

The Chicago Democrat, edited by Hon. John Wentworth says: We are now satisfied that neither Mr. Pierce, Mr. Buchanan, nor Judge Douglas can get the nomination. They may all three get a majority of the convention on different ballots, but there will be one third that will be very likely to checkmate either of the three. There is every probability that the party will have to go into the woods again to pick out a new stick, and the chances are some Southern man will be nominated, and if slavery is to be the issue, it is right that a Southern man should be the standard bearer.

Union of New York and Kings County.—Senator C. P. Smith recently introduced a bill providing for the consolidation of New York and Brooklyn and County of Kings. He proposed it now, he said, for consideration, and, next session, will advocate it all in his power. His plan is as follows:

"The Corporation of New York to appoint ten freeholders, Corporation of Brooklyn four freeholders, and the towns in the County of Kings, by the Supervisors and the Justices of the Peace, to appoint one freeholder, who together shall constitute a Board of Commissioners. The Commissioners to mature a plan of consolidation of the several territories, to be called the City of New York—such plan to set forth the relative value of taxation; the general division into wards; the proposed method of government; election and appointment to officers; the terms on which the consolidation shall be made; having reference to a plan of retaining the present county of Kings as a recording district, (as to deeds, &c.,) probate district, collection district, (as to taxes and assessments,) fire departments, and the towns to remain as rural districts and liable to taxation for county purposes only, repair of roads, &c. At a general election the question of consolidation to be submitted to the legal voters."

The Brooklyn Eagle, the Democratic organ in that city, opposes consolidation with New York.

Correspondence.

DUBLIN, March 22nd, 1856.

I hope it's not too late to send you a word for your second number. My first, of course, you have received, and published. I'm longing to see how I look in print, as a correspondent. You'll send me a bundle of the News, and, one of these days, I'll send you a budget of fun.

Since I last wrote to you, the most important event that has taken place in Ireland has been the expulsion of the Nation, the Tablet, and the Telegraph, from the Reading-room of the Catholic Young Men's Society of this city. The expulsion was by order of His Grace, the Most Rev. Paul Cullen, Archbishop of Dublin. The Nation, in a spunky leading article, entitled, The Index in Ireland, informs the public of the event, assigning as the only possible reason for the episcopal interdiction it has incurred, the fact of its having published the speech of Archdeacon Fitzgerald, delivered at a Tenant-right meeting, in Rathkeale, the other day. In this speech, alluding to Father Tom O'Shea, and some other priests, being forbidden by their Bishops to meddle any further in politics, the Archdeacon expressed himself very independently, giving the Bishops to understand that, in the sight of God, the poorest curate was as good as the lordliest of them. The Rev. Mr. Mulligan communicated his Grace's pleasure and displeasure to the Society, and the Society passed a vote accordingly. The Telegraph, it appears, was discontinued merely from an affectation on the part of this very dutiful Society to keep up an appearance of impartiality.

Next to this, the result of the Parliamentary contest in Ross is the most entertaining topic on the table. Reddington, I told you, was beaten. The excitement was furious. The Lords and Gentlemen of Dublin Castle ordered down a troop of Lancers, and 150 men of the 69th Regiment. Then there was a contingent of mounted Police, the uniform of which, by-the-by, I often said would set off a squadron or two of Irish national Hussars to the brightest advantage. The liberal papers exult over the defeat of the Knight of Kilcornan. The Cork Examiner says it is an event full of hope for the future. The Limerick Reporter strikes the same key, and with the loudest variations about the Treasury and Orangeism, prolongs the jubilee. The Kilkenny Journal gives an additional flourish, jumping with all its might and glee upon the prostrate body of the renegade; for that's what the Journal delicately calls the fugitive from the battle of the Barrow.

Now, isn't it miserable to see these enthusiastic writers lavishing their ink, and blunting all their goose-quills, upon such a barren triumph, if triumph it can be called, where the people saw their most hated enemy defeated, without being victorious themselves? Will they ever become inspired with common sense?

A delightful chapter of the History of Dublin appears in the University Magazine this month. It is written by J. T. Gilbert, Member of the Royal Irish Academy. "The history of cities," he writes, "is the history of nations. Thus Babylon, Thebes, Rome, Jerusalem, are words that express nations." It is a massive chain of golden sentences. For example:

"Statue and column, mausoleum and shrine, are trophies of a nation's triumphs or its tragedies. The young children, as they gaze on them, learn the story of the native heroes, poets, saints, and martyrs, leaders, and law-givers, who have flung their own glory as a regal mantle over their country. Spirits of the past, from the phantom-land, dwell in the midst of them. We feel their presence, and hear their words of inspiration, or warning, alike in the grandeur or decadence of an ancient city."

Then follow these mournful, solemn truths:

"Dublin differs from all other capitals, past or present, in this wise—that by its history we trace, not the progress of the native race, but the triumphs of its enemies; and that the concentrated will of Dublin has always been in antagonism to the feelings of a large portion of the nation. This being the position of a country and its capital, it is evident that no effort for national independence could gain nourishment in Dublin. Our metropolis is associated with no glorious moment of a nation's career, while in all the dark tragedies of our gloomy history its name and influence predominate. Dublin is connected with Irish patriotism only by the scaffold and the gallows. Statue and column do indeed rise there, but not to honor the sons of the soil. The public idols are foreign potentates and foreign heroes. Macaulay says eloquently, 'The Irish people are doomed to see in every place the monuments of their subjugation; before the senate-house, the statue of their conqueror; within, the walls tapestried with the defeats of their fathers.'

"No public statue of an illustrious Irishman has ever graced the Irish capital. No monument exists to which the gaze of the young Irish children can be directed, while their fathers tell them, 'This was to the glory of your countrymen.' Even the lustre Dublin borrowed from her great Norman colonists has passed away. Her nobility are remembered only as we note the desecration of their palaces; the most beautiful of all our metropolitan buildings but remind us that there the last remnant of political independence was sold; the stately Custom-house, that Dublin has no trade; the regal pile of Dublin Castle, that it was reared by foreign hands to 'curb and awe the city.'"

I send you the number of the University which contains this noble paper. You should certainly give it in full. Every Irishman should read it.

Patrick's day has been celebrated this year more jovially in England than in Ireland. That, however, is nothing new. With the exception of winding a sprig of shanrock in the hat-band, or sticking it in a button-hole, or pinning a Patrick's Cross on the breast or shoulder of an unconscius little vagrant, there never was, in my recollection, any popular celebration of the day in Ireland. I don't call the marching of the Temperance Societies a celebration, no more than I'd call a spade a spoon. Much less do I regard the mounting of an extra guard on Dublin Castle, on the morning of the blessed day, a national solemnity The life is fairly oozing out of Ireland.

For my part, the days of the great hurling-matches, andwakes, and weddings, and fairs and foot-balls, with all their riotousness, devilment and mischief, were to my thinking, infinitely brighter and better than those snivelling, shivering days, when, for the life of you, you can't knock a good shout out of the biggest parish from Lough Neagh to Knockmealdown, on the top of which, 4,000 feet above the Blackwater, that old County Waterford Major is buried, in conformity with his dying request, along with his pointer and double-barreled gun.

Drogheda is improving her water facilities. Four tons of slates were lately recovered from a schooner which sunk on the bar, a little below the town, some forty-six years ago; vessel and all were completely covered by a huge heap of sand, until very recently.

On looking over the list of evening amusements in this morning's Saunders, I see that old Gallagher, the ventriloquist, is still upon his spindles. He heads his advertisement with the inspiring legend, Ireland for the Irish, and proceeds respectfully to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and Public generally, that he will "unlock his Bureau of the Fancies and Follies of the Age" before his generous patrons in Dublin. He winds up magnificently:

"When the 'Hero of a Hundred Battles' was told by the Commissariat, previous to a terrible engagement, that there was no room for the cannon, 'Never mind,' replied the warrior, 'the cannon will make room for itself.' So it is with Gallahger; his cannon will penetrate through the opposition, and make room for itself; only with this difference, that Mr. G. neither loads with lead, nor fires blank cartridge, but touches the fair mark within the circle of fun, and on Irish affairs hits the bull's eye. Doors open at Half-past Seven o'clock—to commence at Eight."

Poor old Gallagher! It's now fifteen years since I last saw him, for the one hundred and twentieth time, in a little room above in the Royal Exchange, at the top of Parliament street, in this same beautiful metropolis, singing "The Groves of Blarney," and reading the letter which commenced thus: "My dear infectious Richard." Will Gallagher ever die? That's the question I frequently propound to myself to-day. He has survived his fame—rather, I should say, his novelty. It's all the same old thing; the only difference is, his wardrobe is much the worse for the wear, and his voice indicative of permanent bronchitis.

The Cork Reporter mentions that a feu de joie was fired at the stores of Messrs. P. Murphy and Son, provision merchants, on the pleasant margin of the Lee, in honor of the baby King or Sultan of Algiers. The tri-color, also, was hoisted on the bacon-yard to commemorate the event. All this for the very suffieient reason, that the Messrs. Murphy have been declared contractors to a large extent for provisions by the French government. The circumstances remind me of what your friend Richard Shiel said, in explanation of the enthusiasm displayed upon a certain occasion, by one of the clerks or accountants in the O'Connell Brewery: "He's an excellent man, and patriot to a brewery."

Talking about a brewery, reminds me of beer; and beér irresistibly reminds me of an anecdote which I heard Shiel repeating with enchanting vivacity, one evening that I dined in his company. It was at the house of a parish priest, not many miles from Dungarvan. The priest was an excellent, social old soul. Shiel was his principal guest; the dinner was got up for him. There were two boiled legs of mutton, a pair of very large-limbed fowl, which even in death seemed to stand in sad need of a razor, and several large dishes, of all sizes and capacities, full of carrots, potatoes, and parsnips. Besides the beer, there was sherry, whisky, port, and champagne; the champagne was exquisite.

Throwing off a tall, slender glass of it, Shiel said: "By-the-bye, Father John, I'll tell you a capital story. The other day I was dining with my Lord Melbourne; taking a glass of Champagne with his Lordship, and a superb vintage it was, he says to me: 'Mr. Shiel, can you inform me how it comes to happen, that in your poor Catholic countres you have the very best wines, whereas in our quiet Protestant nations, we have nothing but damned home-brewed ale or porter?' Oh, my Lord, I replied, there's nothing wonderful in it. The fact merely illustrates the truth of the old saying, 'In vino veritas'—orthodoxy in the bottle!" Shiel's beautiful black eyes sparkled with ecstacy, as he threw off this story, and finishing another slender, tall glass on the strength of it, leaped, as it were, on Father John, who was in hysterics of delight, and asked him, "wan't it capital—first-rate?"

You recollect having seen the Count Magawlay once or twice at Clongowes? Well, he lies now with the mark of the dagger in him, under his shroud, under the pavement of the Church of the Holy Trinity, at Parma. For several years past, he had resided at the family mansion of Temora, in the King's county. As a landlord, a magistrate, and a grand juror, he was greatly loved and honored. The family is one of remote antiquity. In the counties of Meath and Westmeath, they were styled the Princes of Calry, and until the reign of William and Mary, were proprietors of immense estates. Their loyalty to James II. proved a loss to them. The greater portion of those lands came within the grasp of the escheats. The deceased was a Count of the Holy Roman Empire. So was his father before him. But his father had been Envoy from Pius VII. to Napoleon, in 1812, and Regent of the Duchies of Parma and Placentia. In 1845, Valerio Magawlay, whose death I mention, returned to Italy, where the services of his family were remembered, and, in his person, were most honorably rewarded. All through '48, he held the position of Mayor of Parma, with the rank of Major in the army. He was afterwards appointed Chamberlain to the Archduchess Regent, and Director of the Central House of Detention. On the evening of the 4th of March, accompanied by his wife and sister, he was walking home from the theatre, when he was suddenly attacked by two young ruffians, armed with pointed files. The assassins have effected their escape. Political motives are ascribed to them.

I find the following little item in the Leinster Express:

"A very beautiful and chastely executed monument has been erected to the memory of this gallant soldier in the elegant little chapel of St. Stephen, Upper Mount street, Dublin. It is of white marble, and the inscription is as follows: 'Sacred to the memory of the late Captain Jackson Wray, of the 88th Connaught Rangers, who fell before Sebastopol on the night of the 7th of June, 1855, after the storming and while holding the Russian advanced works, well known as the Quarries. This Tablet is erected to his memory by his mourning and deeply afflicted parents."

Besides giving you little bits of news, as they chance to come across me, I shall, from time to time, send you, as well as I can pencil them off, sketches of the pristine localities of Dublin and its neighborhood—the vaults, for instance, where the Thearses lie—the house and room.

In Thomas street, where Lord Edward was surprised—the quarters from whence Robert Emmett issued the night of his insurrection, and which, in company with Dr. Madden the historian of the United Irishmen, I have visited more than once—the house in Christ Church Place, in which Wolfe Tone was waked—the churchyard of Bodenstown, near Sallins, on the Grand Canal, where he was laid to rest, and where Thomas Davis and his comrades placed the stone above him.

You shall hear, too, of the beautiful grounds where O'Connell and Curran sleep, and of the stately ancient edifice of St. Patrick's, within whose bannered chancel the bones of Swift have been shrouded and enshrined. Even sitting on our ruins, let us recount the joyful decades of the past. Thus shall sorrow be turned to gladness, and a wilderness become a garden. Vines and olive-trees spring from the lava of Vesuvius. Green and fruitful memories shall shadow and make beautiful the graves and wreck of Ireland.

KILMAINHAM.

European News.

By the arrival, on the night of the 12th inst., of the U. S. steamer Washington, Capt. Cavendy, from Bremen via Southampton, we have dates to 26th ult.

The probabilities of peace have, since our last intelligence from England, received a check. It was presumed that the meeting of the 22d ult. would have been the last; the discussion was not so amicable as had been anticipated. The London Times correspondent defines the cause to be a demand put forth by the Prussian Plenipotentiaries to be admitted to sign the treaty of peace on the same footing and in the same character as if Prussia had been a party to the alliance throughout—as if she had accepted all the obligations involved in it, had joined in the ultimatum, and declared that she would abide by all its consequences. It is also said that Russia supports Prussia in these pretensions.

Advices from St. Petersburgh say: "I can give you some details on the first visit of the Imperial family to the Grand Theatre since the death of the late Emperor. It was on the 5th of March, and the piece represented was 'Il Trovatore.' All the places were occupied by the higher classes, who were in brilliant toilettes; and the foreign ministers were to be seen in the boxes. The Queen Dowager of the Netherlands, the Grand Duke Nicholas and his bride, the Grand Duke Constantine and his Grand Duchess, the Grand Duke Michael, the Grand Duchess Mary, the Prince of Oldenburg and the Prince Augustus of Wurtemberg, accompanied their Majesties. On the arrival of the Emperor, loud cheers were raised, and they continued until the national hymn, 'Basche chrani Zara' (God protect the Czar), was struck up by the orchestra. When the hymn was terminated, the hurrahs re-commenced, and did not cease until after the rising of the curtain."

The Paris Moniteur, of 25th ult., publishing the following:

"A solemn Te Deum of thanksgiving for the happy delivery of the Empress and the birth of an Imperial prince, was chanted on Sunday, at one o'clock in the Church of Notre Dame, in presence of the ministers, marshals, Presidents and members of the Senate, of the Legislative body, and of the Council of State, of the courts and tribunals, of the Superior Council of Public Instruction, of the Institute, of the different administrations, and of the superior officers of the National Guard and of the army. After the Te Deum and the Domine Salvum, the Archbishop of Paris, surrounded by all the clergy of the metropolis, gave the Pontifical blessing."

A letter from Rome, of the 15th ult., says:

"It has been decided that a special delegate will be sent to Paris, in the month of June, to baptize the child whose birth is expected by the Emperor of the French. The person hitherto mentioned for that mission is the Cardinal Vicar Patrizi. The Roman Chancery, is at this moment negotiating an important affair, with the prospect of a favorable solution. It had asked to be allowed to appoint bishops to the principal vacant sees in Poland. The new Emperor replied that his Holiness was at liberty to name bishops to all the sees, the Russian government reserving to itself the right of presentation, and a few other privileges. I am informed that the Courts of St. Petersburgh and Rome are on the point of coming to an understanding highly advantageous to the interests of Poland."

Another meeting of the Conference was held on the 24th, but nothing had transpired with respect to the nature of the deliberations. The opinion that the Conference would ultimately resolve itself into a European Congress, was generally believed.

According to a correspondent of the Independence Belge, the minutes of the sittings of the Plenipotentiaries at Paris are lithographed, twenty-five copies being taken of each report. The process takes place at the Foreign Ministry, the two printers employed being under the rigid surveillance of a trustworthy and venerable employé.

Accounts from the Crimea state that the allies have commenced the demolition of the inclosure wall round Sebastopol.

The London Times correspondent, writing from the Crimea, says:

"The war party still cherishes hopes that the negotiations may break down. It may suit the French to make concessions, but it ought not to suit us. They doubtless consider that they have done enough for honor and glory, and to revenge the reverses of 1812. Moreover, they cannot afford war; England can; and their army, however numerous they may show it to be on paper, it dwindling sadly. Scurvy and fever are playing havoc in the ranks. The mortality in the French army is positively asserted to be one hundred and twenty a day, and generally more."

The Austrian Gazette announces the death and burial, at Warsaw, of Gen. Popoff, Hetman of the Don Cossacks.

Mr. Buchanan, ex-Minister of the United States to the Court of St. James, was to have left England, for New York, by the Arago, from Southampton, on the 9th of April. Mr. Buchanan, accompanied by Gen. Campbell, American Consul for London, and Col. J. R. Croskey, American Consul for Southampton, left London on the 20th ult., via Folkestone and Boulogne, for Paris, where it was his intention to pass a few days before visiting the Hague, previous to his departure for the United States.

A letter from Rome, in the Milan Gazette, says: "The Rome and Frascati Railway, which, as already stated, will be opened in May next, has its terminus just outside the Porto Maggiore. This line will become the main section of the Rome and Naples Railway, which is soon to be conceded. Both the Count de Montemolin and the family of Orleans are deeply interested in the matter."

The Moniteur publishes an Imperial decree withdrawing from circulation the old copper coin—namely, the pieces of one liard and two liards, and those of one centime, bearing the effigy of Liberty, on the 1st of July next; and pieces of one sou and two sous, and those of five and ten centimes, bearing the effigy of Liberty, on the 1st of October following.

The Paris Monituer of 25th ultimo announces that the state of her Majesty, the Empress, continuing to be excellent, no further bulletin of her Majesty's health will be issued. In the same publication it is stated that Prince Jerome Napoleon, being out of danger, and his state gradually improving, this bulletin will be the last.

The British Admiralty have, in accordance with an appeal addressed to them through the London Times, decided upon sending two steamers in search of the missing steamship Pacific. The ships are the Desperate and Tartarus, and were immediately despatched.

Intelligence from Paris states that the city of Parma and the surrounding country had again been laid under a state of seige, which arose from renewed attacks of assassination. The Auditor of the War Department had been stabbed in the back while walking with another officer.

Sir Henry Pottinger died at Malta on the 18th March. This officer had rendered great service in his administration of public affairs in India, China, and Africa.

Ishmael Pasha was said to be increasing the army of Anatolia. Gen. Mouravieff had received reinforcements by way of the Caspian Sea and Tiflis.

The government had become greatly alarmed at the cattle murrain, which was said to be spreading all over the continent.

Sir Hyde Parker, commander of the British naval forces in the East Indies, died at Davenport, on the 21st ult.

Australian News.

By the royal mail clipper Lightning, at Liverpool on 22d ultimo, advices have been received from Melbourne to the 28th of December. She brought 12,000 ounces of gold dust, the amount having been limited owing to a dispute with the surveyors.

The Legislative Council of New South Wales had been prorogued. The demand for money was not active. The grain and flour markets quiet; the price of flour was £30 for firsts, £28 for seconds. In Hobart Town, the decline in bread-stuffs was progressing. Price of gold £3 14s. 6d.

On the 16th and 17th a calamity not less destructive of life and property occurred in a heavy flood, of which the following is the newspaper account:

"On the evening of the former day, and again on the latter, a thunderstorm was followed by a tremendous shower of hail-stones as large as marbles and by a deluge of rain. The gullies were soon flooded by torrents, and the ordinary channels proved quite insufficient to carry off the water; houses and stores were carried away; the deep shafts sunk with much toil and at great expense were filled to the brim and had their works undermined, and piles of washing stuff were swept away. The destruction of property consequent upon this flood is estimated at £120,000. By this visitation, too, there was a lamentable loss of life, six persons having been drowned on the evening of the 16th. The severity of this calamity, it is stated, would have been much diminished had proper precautions been taken to provide for the unimpeded flow of the water by its natural channels. The necessity of the erection of Ballarat into a municipality is obvious from these two events. Measures might then be taken for mitigating the effect of such occurrences, if they could not be in a great measure prevented.

The British Enlistment Question.

The London Times of the 22d ult. thus reviews the position taken by Mr. Marcy on this subject. Comment is unnecessary.

"By an act of Congress it is forbidden 'to hire or retain another person to enlist or enter himself, or to go beyond the limits or jurisdiction of the United States with intent to be enlisted or entered in the service of any foreign prince.' That being the law, then, of the United States, the English government respected it, and gave strict instructions to its officials for the observance of it. But it was no violation of this law simply 'to make generally known' in the United States that the English government were ready to avail themselves of the services of volunteers. To make known such readiness on the part of the English government to receive volunteers was not 'to retain or to hire volunteers.' It was to communicate intelligence, and no more. If any person in the United States chose to avail himself of such intelligence, and go either to Quebec or Halifax, Liverpool or London, to enlist, he had a perfect right to do so, and no more transgressed a law of the United States than if, upon the sight of a mercantile advertisement in a New-York paper, he crossed the Channel to offer his services to a Bristol counting house. Neither the giver of such intelligence, then, nor the user of it, can be charged with a violation of law.

"Now, the answer of the United States to this statement is this—they as good as admit that there has been no violation on the part of the English government of any law of the United States, though they admit this grudgingly, and misrepresent while they admit it. 'For very obvious reasons,' says Mr. Marcy, 'the officers employed by her Majesty's government would be cautioned against exposing themselves to the penalties prescibed by our laws.' This is not a true statement of Lord Clarendon's instructions. The officials of the British government in the United States were not advised to elude the penalties for violation of the law, but told not to violate the law. However, the admission being made that there has been no violation on the part of the English government of the United States' law, Mr. Marcy falls back upon another much loftier but much more indefinite ground. 'We had a right,' he says, 'to expect that the government of Great Britain would regard the policy indicated by those laws, and respect our sovereign rights as an independent and friendly power.' And the English government is charged with 'having violated international law, and offered an affront to the sovereignty of the United States.' 'Had there been no acts of Congress on that subject, foreign governments are forbidden by that law to do anything which would in any manner put to hazard our position of neutrality in respect to belligerents.

"Now, there can he no doubt that laws ought to be obeyed, but when we are taken from the ground of law, and told that we were bound to attend to certain other vague and general considerations, the question becomes not so easy. What is meant, in the first place, by Mr. Marcy saying that the English government was bound to attend to the policy indicated by those laws? What is this policy? Who is to say what it is? Is Mr. Marcy to determine this point, and to be allowed to forbid generally anything to be done in the United States which is against his own ideas of a certain general design and intention of the United States' law? If he is, with all respect for the Marcian code, we defy any man living to tell what the law of the United States is. It is not written law, nothing so common and vulgar; it is lex innubibus. The more common sense view is, that the law of the United States declares its own policy and design by what it actually prohibits or allows. It is against the rights of a sovereign State to have actual engagements formed with a foreign power within its jurisdiction. But if the United States allows its citizens liberty to choose their line, calling, and occupation in life, there can be no encroachment on a government standing in so free a relation to its citizens in simply giving the latter information of military service, should they choose to enter it.

Again what is meant by "an affront to the sovereignty of the United States?" What sovereignty? Does the American government claim a sovereignty over the ingress and egress of its—Mr. Marcy will not object to the term—subjects, and prevent them from entering what military service they please? Certainly not. America boasts of freedom of her citizens. "The government of the United States," says Lord Clarendon, "has enacted no such law; it justly boasts of its complete freedom in this respect; 'civitas non carser est.' All residents therein, whether foreigners or citizens, are perfectly free to leave its territory without the permission of the government, at their own absolute discretion, and to enter the service of any other state, when once within its frontier." Then, how is the sovereignty of the United States affected by its citizens being informed of such service, into which they may enter, in such other State?

But Mr. Marcy is afraid that such an act of a foreign Power "will put to hazard the United States position of neutrality in respect to belligerents," and he reminds us that "among the solemn duties imposed upon the President is that of vindicating before the world the good faith of the United States in sustaining neutral relations with other Powers." But how is the good faith of the American government hazarded by such a liberty as this being allowed to a foreign Power? It is a liberty which both sides may use. If the English can advertise their military service in the United States, the Russians can do so too.

Mr. Marcy then, appears to us to make a very poor claim out of his indefinite, unwritten, majestic law of American sovereignty, American Neutrality, and American policy, indicated by American law. Is there any law, we ask, of the United States which the English government has violated, or rather has not scrupulously respected, in this whole affair? If not, then the charge of Mr. Marcy against the English government, as distinguished from any charge against its officials, is disproved; and thus by far the largest and most important part of Mr. Marcy's argument is disposed of. He has rested upon a very weak ground for the principal part of his attack, and, that having given way, the rest of his attack is not formidable.

Again on the 25th—

We have not done justice to Mr. Marcy's argument—his argument, we mean, against the English government, and its presumptuous act of advertising its military service in the United States. He appeals to authority as well as to reason. Wolfius is on the side of Mr. Marcy. Wolfius says, "It is not permitted to raise soldiers on the territory of another without the consent of its sovereign." Now, if Wolfius is right, what then? The English government sent out no instructions to raise soldiers within the jurisdiction of the United States. It only sent out instructions to advertise its military service, leaving whoever choose to avail themselves of such information to repair the English territory to put their choice into effect by enlisting. So much for Wolfius. Vattel says, "The man who undertakes to enlist soldiers in a foreign country without the sovereign's permission violates one of the most sacred rights of the prince and nation." Vattel, then, only so far says what Wolfius says. But Vattal says that it is wrong to "entice away the subjects of another State." Does Vattel, by enticing, mean advertising giving intelligence? If he does, of that further on. Hautefeuille, "a modern French author of much repute, regards permission by a neutral Power to one belligerent, though extended to both, to raise recruits in its territories, to be an act of bad faith which compromits its neutrality." Well, but a man should really talk sense before he is considered an authority. How can a state possibly compromise its neutrality by allowing the same liberty to both belligerents? Our acquaintance with M. Hautefeuille being confined to this extract, we will not assert that he is not a writer of judgment or sagacity; but, if he is, this dictum does not represent him fairly.

The London Chronicle of 24th has the following on the subject:—

Lord Clarendon, we fear, stands self-convicted of having unworthily abused the privileges of diplomacy in this respect. He is accused of having violated the laws of the United States by encouraging the enlistment of American subjects in a foreign legion. His answer to the charge is a positive denial, and the points triumphantly to the letter of the American law as justifying his argument. Mr. Marcy, on the other hand, recalls him to a sense of somewhat better than a mere technical interpretation of the law, and points out, with great force, the impropriety of offering to American citizens under-hand temptations to violate their own laws. We venture to say that the English nation will regard with a feeling of shame the exposure of artifices on the part of their Foreign Minister, opposed as they are to every principle of honor which ought to regulate the intercourse of States. Lord Clarendon would not openly enlist Americans in the British service, because that would have been a manly and straightforward avowal of his purpose. But he does not think it beneath his own dignity, or that of his country, to provide across the American borders the means by whch such persons could enlist.

Interesting from Mexico.

SURRENDER OF THE PUEBLA REVOLUTIONISTS.

The Mexican brig Hercules, Capt. Purnarino, arrived at New Orleans on the 3rd from Vera Cruz. The Puebla revolutionists are reported to have surrendered to the Government forces on Saturday, the 22d ult., the day after Good Friday, and the day of the departure of the Texas from Vera Cruz. They are stated to have surrendered at discretion; but this is incompatible with a few details which a passenger on the Hercules says he saw given in some of the Vera Cruz papers. He says that it was therein reported that a parley had taken place between a General who announced himself in command of the revolutionists, and two officers in behalf of the Government, the result of which was an agreement that such of the revolutionists as chose should be allowed to join the army, and the rest be permitted to proceed to their homes unmolested. Neither Haroy Tamariz nor Castillo appeared in the matter, nor were they referred to in the conditions of surrender. These last, it is said, were published at full length in the Vera Cruz papers.

We hear with regret that those who are in a position to form a reliable judgment on the subject, consider the whole proceeding a mere compromise between the revolutionists and the Government, indicating that the latter found themselves really unable to overcome the former, while the revolutionists have adopted the step merely for the purpose of gaining time, and seizing a better opportunity for carrying out their object. It is said, too, that they are numerous and strong enough to ensure their eventual success.

For fuller and it is to be hoped more satisfactory particulars, we suppose we shall have to await the arrival of the Texas, due at New Orleans on the 11th inst.

THE PUEBLA REVOLUTION—CONDITIONS OF THE SURRENDER.

From the N. O. Picayune, April 5.

Since the account of the surrender of the Puebla revolutionists, published in yesterday morning's Picayune, we have been favored with the official account of the occurrence which we subjoin. It was published in a supplement or extra to the Vera Cruz Progress, of the 24th ult.

"The reaction which made Puebla its head-quarters," says the Progress, "has terminated in the surrender of the rebels who had promoted it! The only particulars that we have upon this important event, will be found by the reader in the following important documents, just received by his Excellency the Governor of this State. We omit all comment at present, in order not to delay the publication of this extra.

Private Correspondence of the President of the Rebublic.—To the Most Excellent Sr. D. Ignacio de la Llave, Vera Cruz.—Puebla, March 23, 1856, 3 o'clock A. M. My esteemed friend: After a previous day and night of great fatigue, I have scarcely time to inform you that this city is now in possession of the Supreme Government. I have agreed to a capitulation in the terms of which I send you a copy, in order to spare the city from greater miseries.

In accordance with this, and with the disposition to be made of the surrendering officers, some will have to leave the Republic; and I have to-day given to General D. Leonardo Marquez a passport for that purpose, of which I inform you, that being aware of the fact, you may keep him under surveillance from the time of his arrival at your port until his embarkation.

I do not desire to keep back this gratifying information from you, and, therefore, I send it to you by express, in confidence, until appropriate circulars, shall be issued.

I remain, &c., J. Comonfort.

Army of Operations on Puebla—General-in-Chief—Field Secretariat. Considering that civil war is the greatest of evils for a nation, especially at the moment when it is endeavoring to establish itself; that the power of the Government is reorganized by the State to which the insurgent forces have been confined; that these are ready to submit to obey the Government, by which the desired result is attained in the state of political affairs, while the misery and destruction to which the innocent inhabitants of this city would otherwise be reduced are avoided—the Most Excellent Senor, the President, General-in-Chief of the Army of Operations on Puebla has deemed it meet to agree to the following capitulation, through the M. E. Sr., the Governor of Guanajuata, D. Manuel Doblado, and Generals D. Vicente Rosas and Ramon, Iglesias, nominated by his Excellency, and Sr. Licenciado D. Pascual Almazan, and Generals D. Ignacio Ormachea and D. Miguel Andrade, nominated by Gen. D. Carlos Oronoz, on whom the command of the insurgent forces has fallen:

Art. 1. The troops in garrison in the Square of Puebla shall be at the disposition of the Supreme Government, and shall remain quartered at such points as the latter shall designate, under the strictest responsibility of their respective chiefs.

Art. 2. The wishes of the troops shall be consulted, and absolute freedom shall be at once granted to all privates who do not desire to continue to bear arms.

Art. 3. The Major-General of the army of operations against Puebla shall designate the places in which the artillery and the stores for the park shall be deposited, the delivery of both to be attested by the person or persons whom the Government shall appoint to receive and take charge of them.

Art. 4. The Generals, chiefs, and officers in the square, shall proceed to take up their residence at the points to be indicated by the Supreme Government, while the latter shall determine in what manner they are to remain in the army.

Art. 5. The property of private persons, which may have been taken for the defence or service of the place, and which may be in it on its being occupied by the besieging army, shall be restored to its owners on claim and identification.

Art. 6. The wounded of the place shall be considered and assisted the same as those of the Supreme Government.

Art. 7. The Government shall dictate such measures as it may deem proper, in order to provide for the security of the persons and property of the city.

Art. 8. As soon as this capitulation shall be signed, the M. E. Senor, the President, shall designate the hour and manner of occupying the place.

Puebla, March 22, 1856.—Manuel Doblado, Vincente Rosas, Ramon Iglesias, Pascual Almazan, Jose Ignacio Ormacheg Ernaiz, Miguel Andrade.

Copy.—Headquarters, in Carmeau, Puebla, March 22, 1856.

J. M. Campuzano, Secretary."

The British bark Alliance, which arrived on the 11th inst., reports that when in latitude 87 deg. 28 min., longitude 71 deg. 47 min., saw the top part of a steamship's paddle-box, painted black, with a new board in it.

The Ice moved out of Buffalo harbor on the 11th. In the Lake it is slowly breaking away.

Public Dinner of the Dramatic Fund Association.

The Eighth Anniversary of the institution of the New-York Dramatic Fund Association was celebrated on the 10th inst., under the auspices of the Association, at the Metropolitan Hotel, by a dinner and festival. Arrangements were made on the most liberal scale, with the view of surpassing, in all desirable respects, the celebrations of previous years. The tables were arranged for two hundred and twenty-five guests. Every seat was occupied. Dodworth's band was in attendance, and during the evening furnished some of their finest selections. The spacious dining hall was appropriately decorated. At the head of the hall were suspended the portraits of Washington, Shakespere and Garrick. On the walls at intervals were inscribed the names of those who had added lustre to the Drama by the pen or by filling the ranks of the profession.

The President of the Association, James T. Brady, presided. Ex-Judge Edmonds and Hiram Fuller, Vice-Presidents, were at the opposite ends of the tables. On the right the President was supported by Messrs. T. F. Meagher, W. R. Blake, of the Broadway, J. Stagg and others, and on the left by Judge Daly, J. Brooks and Mr. Wemyss. It was a matter of remark that few theatrical people were present, the most distinguished members being professionally engaged. Authors, journalists, and dramatic critics made a fair display, but young New-York was the most striking feature of the audience. Dr. Mackenzie, Chas. Gayler, Chas. F. Briggs, Chas. A. Dana, C. H. Burkhardt, E. J. Wilkins, Wm. J. Rose, and others represented the editorial fraternity on the occasion. Among the artists who assisted in the vocal exercises were Signora Vertiprade, Sigs. Badiali, Rovere, Messrs. Frazer, Allan Irving, and an excellent Glee Club, led by Mr. Walcot. After the removal of the cloth, "Non Nobis" was sung in such admirable style that it elicited a burst of applause which rather astonished the singers.

Before the company were summoned to the dining-room, Mr. W. R. Blake presented the President with a very handsome emblematical ornament attached to a collar of crimson silk, to be worn by him as a badge of office on all public occasions.

Mr. Jas. T. Brady, the President, arose, and after some introductory observations, said: The programme for this evening, so varied in character, admonishes me that I should detain you but a few moments from the enjoyment of the pleasures which it promises; but I should be wanting in justice to you and in justice to my own feelings if I did not thus early tender to you my sincere and grateful acknowledgments for the very great honor that has been done me by some gentlemen connected with this association, in selecting me as its president, and affording me the glorious opportunity to preside upon so brilliant an occasion as the present. [Applause] After paying a compliment to Mr. Stebbins, the late president, Mr. Brady said: Upon my word, gentlemen, I do not know upon what principle I have been selected as the successor of Mr. Stebbins, except to present the beautiful antithesis of perfect laziness opposed to efficient industry. I believe I recognize in this choice the gratifying assurance that the precepts of the sagacious Dogberry still continue to rule in the world. [Laughter and applause] I believe that his rules apply as well to the selection of more important functionaries as they do to to the nomination of a constable of the watch; for amongst all who might aspire to the dignity I enjoy, I will not permit myself to be contradicted when I insist that I am "the most desartless and fit man of them all." [Laughter and cheers.] Much as I admire, gentlemen, that distinguished sage for having promulgated a precept that has led to my occupying this place to-night, I shall not endanger your happiness by imitating all his examples; I will not bestow my tediousness upon you, for that "would be most tolerable and not to de endured." [Laughter and applause] If you cast your eye over this bill, you will observe that I am not one of the "stars" on this "benefit night." Amongst them you will find the Lelands, the purveyors and architects of this superb banquet which we have so nobly and so delightfully appreciated. [Applause.] You will find amongst those "stars" Dodworth's Band, to whose enlivening strains we always listen with such intense delight [Applause.] Amongst these stars are the glittering intellects whose fragrance will be shed before you ere this evening closes, and those artists who have come here with the harmonies of sound to furnish us with pleasing thoughts to soothe our senses and make us feel how great an acknowledgment is due to them for the skill and generosity with which they contribute to the great pleasures of the night. [Applause.] Nor, gentlemen, are these the only stars that deck the occasion; for, though I miss from the tables the fragrant and the beautiful offerings that the spring time might have sent here, I discover that the reason why your Committee and the Lelands have omitted them, is, that some gentlemen preferred to substitute their rivals in beauty, the stars which glitter round this table, and form a beautiful fringe and garlanding decoration for the hour. [Applause.] If I cannot play a star engagement, I can at least, for the first and last time, "on this occasion only," and not by "particular desire," represent the bouquet-man, and call your attention to these flowers of beauty. [Loud applause.]

A few words more. It is not entirely to appreciate loveliness—it is not entirely to gratify any tastes by which we are distinguished, that we assemble here to-night. Ours is no transitory and selfish festival. The gratifications which we enjoy here are not limited to this hour, nor to this place; but it is hoped and expected that the radiations of our pleasure will penetrate the gloom that hangs around many an humble tenement, in the future, and relieve the darkness that overshadows many a fond and faithful heart. It is our hope that the gladness which we share may be extended throughout our land, and far in the future come to cheer the widow and the orphan—come to assist the faltering steps of age—come to bestow itself upon the poor decayed actor in the decline of his life—and to spread comfort and contentment in the abodes where sorrow and privation may have obtained access, or may threaten an invasion. It is our hope and our expectation that when the lovely flowers of the time shall have departed, when the women who come here to smile upon us shall have returned to grace their homes, when the voice of the orator shall become silent, and the music which is to delight us shall be hushed, when all of us, after long lingering, have gone away and left "this banquet hall deserted," even out of the ashes of our feast there shall arise a spirit which shall go abroad upon a bright errand of mercy, of charity, and of benevolence, extending its progress and its beneficence far and wide, diffusing gentle and benign influences and shedding upon the hearts bowed down by sorrow the "gentle dews from Heaven upon places beneath." [Loud applause.] Without any formal preface I will now call your attention to the first regular toast. It will be repeated by Judge Edmonds, the first Vice-President:

The President of the United States.

The toasts which succeeded were well received.

Judge Daly responded to "Shakespere and the elder Drama." At considerable length the judge sided with those who had vindicated the character of the Bard of Avon from the imputations thrown on his education. The speaker argued that Shakspere was acquainted with Greek, Latin, Spanish, French, and Italian, and concluded an elaborate and eurudite speech with applause.

To the fourth toast, "Sheridan and the later Drama," Mr. Meagher responded as follows:

In this brilliant company, I know not to what merits I am indebted for the very flattering call that has just been made. Being myself only an humble worshipper in the temple of that noble art, whose charitable feast we this night solemnize, I could have wished silently to have sat and worshipped its high priests, so many of whom I see around me, dwell upon its beauties, and speak the glories of its gods. (Applause.) But as I have been called on, my heart would indeed be cold if it failed to catch some inspiration from the name which has been committed to my keeping, and which, with an inextinguishable splendor, is interwoven with that of Ireland. (Applause.) It is now some years, sir, since a circumstance occurred to me, the impression of which, though I have since seen many countries and experienced some troubles, still vividly remains. It was my first visit to London, and one of my first visits there was to Westminster Abbey—that beautiful palace of the dead, where sleep so many of Ireland's gifted sons, doomed to lavish, in swelling the renown of another people, that genius which belonged to their parent land.

I was looking on the pale, worn stones which mark the sleeping place of Burke and Grattan, when suddenly I observed a lady near me, whose presence at once fixed me with a strange attention. She was frank, noble, and bold in bearing. About her seemed to float, like the air circling the golden brow of the Sybil, the luminous intimations of genius. The portraits of Sheridan had been familiar to me, and in the classic face, the vivid eye, the rich lip, the proud nostril, I felt as if he had risen up before me. It was the grand-daughter of Sheridan—it was Caroline Norton—she, who with his beauty of person, and brilliancy of mind, inherited at the same time that which is too often the accompaniment of genius—the slander of the envious, sorrow and solitude of heart. As she stood over his grave, I could not help feeling how sad her reflections must have been. She had been, like him who slept there, once the charm of every circle. Every gift of his was hers. The same careless daring, the same Celtic buoyancy and reckless gaiety of spirit, and, to borrow an illustration from this profuse and sparkling social board, the same champagne of conversation, crested with a thousand sparkling bubbles of wit and fancy. Yes, the joy of the Club, the magnet of the stage, the lustre of the Senate, what a touching picture did his last hours give of the heartless desolation which, with very few exceptions, has been the invariable destiny of genius in those countries where rank and wealth are worshipped whilst they live, but genius only when death emancipated it from its rags, its drudgery, and chains. (Applause.)

In this land, would such a man be permitted to lie a lonely and deserted wreck, in a wretched chamber in a bye street, forsaken by all those to whose hours of leisure and pleasure he had ministered, and with the unquenchable love of one true woman only to relieve the eclipse of his fall? Would not hundreds of those whom I have seen, night after night, hang with delight upon those exquisite creations of his high genius, rush with impetuous sympathy to succor him while living, instead of handing him over to the painted pomps and melancholy masquerades of the undertaker? It is this which strikes the difference between an aristocratic and a republican land. The one pours out its thousands to meet Nicholas or Louis—potentates by slaughter or superstition. The other welcomes with ovations Rachel or Dickens, sovereigns of the world by the Divine right of sovereign intellect. It is touchingly told, that in Sheridan's closing hours, a countryman of his mentioned to him that Byron had said he had written "the best opera, the best farce, the best comedy, and the best oration which had ever been invented or spoken in England." When he heard this, his dim eye brightened—his wasted hand thrilled. He did not speak. But the eye sent an answer more eloquent than lips could give. There rolled from it one big tear. "I would rather," said Byron, "have won that tear than have spoken the Phillippics of Demosthenes or written the Illiad of Homer."

If these few words brought such joy to Sheridan, what would have been his rapture had he foreseen that, in a distant land, in the land for whose freedom he had spoken out in Parliament, in a land destined to gather in its grasp many kingdoms and races, and among an opulent and enlightened people, his name was to be treasured as a household word, and be assigned the place it has found in your homage this night, among the supreme spirits of the drama. Let it not be thought that I assign to Sheridan too conspicuous a niche in the temple of dramatic fame. Both poet and period were circumscribed. He was not, even at a distance, like Shakespere, the mirror of nature, as it is in all lands and all times. He was simply one of those bright spirits who stand at the gateway of centuries as they pass, and transfer to the imperishable page the laws and fashions of the time. (Applause.) What Farquhar was to the century previous, Sheridan is to ours. Both wrote what is called the comedy of manners. Both had high animal spirits, with hearts of deep sympathy, the daintiest discrimination of character, the most delicate instinct in avoiding all extravagance, and the happiest invention in situation and plot. Neither were architects of comedy, but Sheridan was something near one. He was a restorer, and under his renovating touch the picture always caught fresh colors. When he appeared, all save Farquhar had passed from the stage to the book-shelf.

For half a century, Wycherly had been voted impracticable. For years Congreve had only been revived at intervals, as a sort of historical specimen of old taste. Vanburgh clung to the boards merely on the strength of a comedy which Colley Cibber wrote for him, and which was reckoned what some managers understand to be a bore. The days of the first three Georges were dull days for the stage. They preferred a boiled leg of mutton and a farce to a cotellette and comedy. It was from the brilliant circle which, in his youth, George the Fourth drew round him, that the stage derived the inspiration by which it was redeemed. Of that circle Sheridan was the central and communicating light. Like many other artists, it is true that Sheridan plucked with unsparing recklessness every flower which touched his fancy in another's garden. But these pilfered flowers were wound and girded by a graceful clasp of genius, which gave them the look of having been gathered in a garden of his own. Indeed, in the production of his fine effects, he reminds me of another Irishman, whom, in profusion and delicacy of fancy, and exquisite elaboration, he much resembled—the late Richard Shiel, the author of Evadne.

When that brilliant orator was asked to explain the secret of those wonderful effects with which he delighted and enthralled an assembly so reluctant in its sympathies and so fastidious in its taste, his answer was—"Setting, sir; all setting. They are all old things. 'Tis the art of the jeweller." But then how exquisite that setting! Every sentence a diamond, and every diamond in its true place. Then, what a gallery of pictures does the School for Scandal and the Rivals open out—pictures so original, so varied, so freely drawn, so richly colored, and so full of telling truth. From the inimitable Fag to the pugnacious and polished Sir Anthony, every one is a study from nature, and one feels it a calamity to lose a single touch which ekes out the interest of the plot.

As far as the American stage is concerned, I would venture deferentially to say, that it has been already too crowded with tame translations, adaptations and emendations of a school which, being alien to the character and habits of the people, can only live in sufferance until such time as America produces and encourages men to write for the American stage, works racy of the soil. We are not without such, and I trust it may not be considered an excess of national vanity, if I feel proud that among the foremost of those is a countryman of Sheridan—one, however, who has had the better fortune to devote his talents to a country which warmly appreciates and will liberally reward them. Like Shakespere, he has sometimes violated, with a most shocking recklessness, the unities of art, and tortured history to gladden the winter season, to make Christmas the more merry, please his patrons, and suit his purpose. But he has committed his crimes with such malicious grace that I much question whether posterity will not prefer Brougham's version of Pocahontas to that of Bancroft. [Prolonged cheering.] I conclude with the sentiment:

"Edwin Forrest and James Wallack—The one an alien, the other a native—the genius of both contribute to the glory of the Republic—both names shall find the same place in the heart and homage of the future of America."

To the toast of "The Dramatic Fund," Mr. Blake, of the Broadway Theatre, in the absence of Ogden Hoffman, responded in a very effective speech. He gave a graphic history of the society, and dwelt pathetically on the benefits rising from it.

The report of the Secretary, Mr. Wemyss, exhibited the funds of the society to be in a very healthy and flourishing condition.

Mr. Brooks made an elegant response to "the Press," and Messrs. Fuller and Brougham, followed on the part of the ladies. Our space is the enemy of our inclination. We should like to publish the sayings and doings of the evening in extensio, but it is impossible.

Hiram Fuller, of the Mirror, responded happily to the toast of "The Ladies," in thorough homage to whom we must make room for some at least of the graceful allusions of the speaker, and are only sorry that we cannot give them fuller.

Since the time of Adam, who, instead of "popping the question" to his beautiful partner in paradise, went quietly to sleep a lonely bachelor and woke up a happy married man, to speak for one woman, has been considered rather an embarrassing effort for the bravest of us. How overwhelming then must be the feeling of diffidence to a man of moderate modesty who is called upon to speak for the entire sex!

But, Mr. President, the toast—the sentiment—(for "Woman" is all sentiment) to which I am called to respond is full of inspiration; and while it requires all the gems of Eloquence, and all the jewels of Poetry to do justice to this little word Woman—the dearest word in all the dictionary—which represents the fairer and the better half of creation—yet there is a silent homage of the heart, a mute eloquence of the eye, burning and beaming with the emotions "awakened by the inspiring theme," compared with which, the rhetoric of even the most gifted tongue could only make us more sensibly feel the utter poverty of speech.

I trust there has never lived a man so utterly unblessed and and desolate of soul, who has not at some period of his life met with some breathing, beautiful counterpart of his fairest ideal angel, to whom he could sing and drink with the poet:

"I fill this cup, to one made up
Of loveliness alone;
A being of her gentle sex
The seeming paragon,
To whom the better elements
And kindly stars have given
A form so fair, that like the air,
She's less of earth than heaven."

In all the relations of life, amidst all its troubled scenes, the presence and the love of Woman is like the music of David to the dark spirit of Saul. She lays her soft palms upon our troubled hearts, as the harper presses his hand upon his harp-strings, not to increase, but to still its vibrations.

Perhaps I should say something on this occasion, of the illustrious women created by the genius of the Dramatist, scarcely less real and beautiful than the works of God's own hand; and of the innumerable company of fair artistes, so brilliantly represented here to night, who have devoted their talents and their lives to the palpable reproduction of the dreams of the dramatic poets. The life of the artiste is a life of toil and temptation. If it lead to honor, fame, and fortune, it is up a steep and thorny path; and few who essay to climb it, ever reach the summit of their hopes. These fair and radiant heroines of the stage, whom we see nightly arrayed in robes of beauty, and floating through flowery realms of romance, often carry tragedy in their hearts, while comedy is laughing on their faces.

And, Mr. President, it is for this toiling sisterhood of artistes that your noble institution makes its most touching appeal to the universal heart of Charity. When sickness, or "Time's effacing fingers" have "sunk her beauties in decay," your generous Association invites the destitute sufferer to a comfortable bed; smooths her dying pillow; and, in the last act of the solemn tragedy of life, the heart of the dying artiste beats gratefully to the music of fraternal sympathy, as the curtain falls kindly upon the closing scene. It is expected, Mr. President, that I should give you a sentiment—it shall be:

"Woman, whom God created with a smile of grace,
And left the smile that made her on her face."

The President Invested with the Jewel.—Previous to the dinner a very interesting ceremony took place in one of the parlors of the hotel, when Mr. W. R. Blake, in the name of the association, invested the President, James T. Brady, Esq., with the jewel, which is to be worn by that officer on all public occasions. The speech of Mr. Blake was brief and to the point; and Mr. Brady responded in a few neat and graceful remarks.

A writer in the Alexandria Gazette says that Mr. Washington will sell the Mount Vernon estate to the State of Virginia, but to none else. The Gazette expresses the belief that the writer states accurately Mr. Washington's views on the subject.

American News.

Paper Making from the Bark of Cotton Plants—An Important Discovery.—Specimens of the bark stripped from cotton stalks have been exhibited to paper manufacturers at the North, which is found to be of a fibrous character, and is considered to be well adapted for the manufacture of good paper. The importance of an abundant and cheap material as a substitute for rags from which good and cheap paper can be made, may be judged of from the fact that the United States consume as much as France and England combined. The magnitude of the paper business may be conceived when we take into consideration that there are 750 paper mills in the United States, employing 3,000 engines, and which produce annually at 10 cents per lb. $27,000,000 worth of paper. To manufacture this amount of paper requires 405,000,000 lbs. of rags, 1½ lbs. of rags being necessary to produce 1 lb. of paper. The value of the rags at the average of 4 cts. per lb. amounts to $16,000,000, to which, if the cost of making them into paper, including 1½ cents to each lb. of paper in labor, with wastage, chemicals, &c., be added, would swell the amount to $23,625,000 to produce $27,000,000 of paper, leaving nett profits on the total manufacture of $3,375,000. For the year ending the 30th June, 1855, we imported 40,013,516 lbs. of foreign rags from 26 different countries. Of this amount Tuscany, in Italy, supplied 14,000,000 lbs. Two Sicilys 6,000,000, Austria 4,000,000, Egypt 2,466,928, Turkey 2,466,928, England 2,591,178. The total value of the 40,013,516 lbs. imported was $1,225,150. The manufacture of paper has outstripped the supply of materials, and rope cuttings, hemp waste, and other articles have been resorted to, but the supplies of all have been insufficient to meet the demand, and prices have been steadily on the advance. It is possible that the cotton fields of the South may supply an almost inexhaustible supply of hemp, so as hereafter we will reach the great desideratum in modern civilization, an abundant and cheap supply of paper.

A Man on a Cake of Ice in the River.—There was a great excitement caused in the city this morning, says the Rochester Union, of the 8th, by a report that a man was on a cake of ice in the river near the Falls, beyond reach from the shore. He was on a small cake of ice grounded in the river, a short distance below the Falls, about one hundred feet from the shore. The water was rushing swiftly by him on either side towards the Rapids and Lower Falls, over which he would speedily pass, if the ice on which he stood should become dislodged. His perilous position, and the imminent danger of being carried away, caused intense excitement among the people upon shore. It was discovered that the unfortunate man had but one arm, which, of course, prevented him from swimming to the shore as a strong man might have done. Liberal sums were offered by citizens for a boat, or any person who would rescue the man. After an hour and a quarter of intense anxiety, the man was rescued by means of a rope which was carried to him from the shore by a plank pushed into the stream from the shore above. He was drawn ashore amidst the cheers of the multitude. He proved to be Jacob Suiter, who resides on North Clinton street. He says he was gathering drift wood, and stepped upon the ice beside the water to seize a stick, when the ice broke away and floated him into the stream.

Hung in Spite of a Reprieve.—We see in the papers an account of the execution of the convict, by the Sheriff of Franklin county, in this State, after the receipt by him of a respite from Gov. Winston. He is said to have pronounced the document a forgery.—Montgomery, Alabama, Mail.

Fire in Philadelphia—Loss 200,000.—The Artisan Building, back of Chestnut and Fourth streets, was destroyed by fire on the night of the 10th. It was five stories in hight, built in the form of a hollow square, and every portion occupied by workshops, the machinery being driven by an engine in the basement. The losses are estimated as follows: Hulings & Cowperthwaite, owners of building, $60,000, covered by insurance; Mr. Duval, lithographer, $100,000, insurance, $80,000; G. W. Simons & Brother, jewelers, $20,000, insurance, $8,000; C. & C. P. Warner, watchcase makers, $15,000, insurance $5,000; Messrs. Undyke & Heppard, jewelers, $15,000, insurance, $5,000; Moss & Brothers, blankbook, cloth and satinet printers, $30,000, insurance $10,000; J. A. Camp, lithographer, $8,000, insurance $2,000; Mr. Watts, silversmith, $3,000, no insurance; Cowperthwaite & Co., booksellers, had $12,000 worth of stock in the hands of printers in the building, and mostly covered by insurance.

The amount of loss sustained by the following named occupants is not yet known: Mr. Gaskill, bookbinder, loss very heavy; Mr. Samuel Eakins, electro-plater, partly insured; Mr. Williams, paper-stainer; Mr. Morgan, spectacles-maker; Messrs. Mehem & Thompson, printers; Mr. Ross, stair rod manufacturer; Messrs. Robb, Pile & McElroy, printers. The aggregate loss is supposed to be $200,000; Mr. Duval, lithographer, had forty steam presses, and an immense stock of stones. Among the stock in his establishment, were the lithographs for Commodore Perry's work on the Japan Expedition. The plates belonging to the Government—value about $6,000. They were all complete, and ready to be sent off. The fire spread so rapidly that scarcely anything was saved from the lower floors.

The United States Hotel, near the scene of conflagration, was slightly damaged by fire, but more by water. The boarders fled, and the house was flooded by the engines. Mrs. Margaret Christie, an invalid lady in a house adjoining the Hotel, died of fright. The roof of the old Masonic Hall, in Third street, ignited, but the damage is slight.

Corruption in the Election.—We were all along aware of the tremendous efforts of the Know Nothings and their allies, to defeat, at all hazards, the Democracy of the City, but were not prepared for the exhibition of recklessness which characterized their proceedings at the polls. New instances of their outrages on the purity of the ballot are constantly being brought to light, with the evidence of an organized band of illegal voters, ready and willing to aid them. Mr. Henry Wiltsie, A Member of Assembly from New York, was yesterday arrested on a complaint of illegal voting, in the Eastern Election District of the Ninth Ward. After examination of witnesses, before John O. Cole, Esq., Police Justice. Mr. Wiltsie waived an examination, and was held to bail in the sum of $1,000.

From the evidence at the Police Office, it appears that Mr. Wiltsie, previous to voting, was challenged, and took the oath administered by the inspectors.

He voted for Perry and the Know Nothing ticket, and is a "Hard" representative of the City of New York.—Albany Atlas and Argus 10th.

Abolition of the Neutrality Laws.—Hon. P. H. Bell, of Texas, in pursuance of the resolutions of the Texas Legislature on the subject of British interference at the Bay Islands in Central America, and with the Cazneau treaty at St. Domingo, is preparing to bring before Congress a bill providing for the suspension of the neutrality law of 1818, until that power shall have given satisfaction for past offences against the honor and security of American interests on American soil and in American waters, and shall give sufficient pledges of an intention to abstain for the future from the habits of dictation in American matters. What will the "Tories of '56" say to this novel assertion of national self-respect? In what way will they manage to assist Europe in opposing this necessary act of self-defence?—Sun.

Rice Planting.—We learn from planters that the recent freshets and cold weather have interfered materially with the planting of the rice crop on the Ogeechee and Altamaha rivers, especially on the upper and inland plantations. Thus far but a small proportion of the upper rice lands on the streams above-mentioned has been planted. We hear of some complaints on the Savannah, but not to the same extent. It is probable, though we have no information to that effect, that the same causes have conspired to retard the operations of the planters on the California rivers. We understand that there was ice at this place last week.—Savannah Republican, April 1.

The Ohio River at Wheeling rose rapidly all day on Friday, with about 16 1-2 feet of water in the channel at dark. The Wheeling Intelligencer says the mountain streams are very high, and the snow is melting freely. A heavy rain at this time would be disastrous, and even without it there may be more than an ordinary spring freshet.

The Boston Traveller is informed that milk is now adulterated in this country by a chemical, of French invention, of the consistence of tar, giving the milk a color and body of which it had been deprived by the free use of water, and adds that a person has lately visited that city from New York, offering to teach the milkmen, for a "consideration," how to use this new adulterer.

Reward for Live Indians.—We find the following announcement in the Tampa (Florida) Peninsular:—Captain Casey, the agent for Indian affairs in Florida, is authorized to offer a per capita reward or premium for Indians who may be captured or induced to come in for emigration to the West. The following rates will be paid by him for Indians delivered at Fort Brooke or Fort Myers, viz:—

For each warrior, from	£250 to £500
For each woman, from	150 to 200
For each boy over ten years, from	100 to 200

The highest rate, as above, will be paid for all except the infirm, bed-ridden and helpless, in which cases, the rate (not less than the minimum above) will be fixed by the agent of the board.

Advices from the Plains state that Gen. Harney had met all the representatives of the Indian tribes in the Sioux country, with the exception of two, and that definite terms of peace had been agreed upon.

The recent protest (in behalf of Col. Sloo) against payment to Messrs. Law, Roberts & Co., for carrying the mails across the Isthmus of Panama will have no effect on the transportation of mails by the usual mode of conveyance. The quarterly compensation has been paid as heretofore.

Dispatches from the American Minister at Naples mention in terms of high commendation the eminent services of Vincenzo d'Abundo and Capt. Gonzales in rescuing from shipwreck the American vessels Parana and Golden Rule. He suggests that small gold medals, with suitable inscriptions, be presented to them, and says that such testimonials will be valued by these officers beyond the decorations so commonly bestowed by royalty, and not only strengthen the relations of good understanding between the two countries, but, what is of more importance, might, by encouraging similar acts, prove the means of saving the lives and property of American citizens.

The New York Sun presents, in its columns, a wood engraving of the flag adopted by the Republic of Nicaragua—the banner under which Costa Rica is to be humbled. The following is the description of it: The flag consists of three stripes, two of blue, with one of white in the centre. The device in the centre is that of the Seal of the State, showing the sun rising over the five volcanoes, which give to Nicaragua the name of "The State of the Five Volcanoes." The words abbreviated in the device are, "Republic de Nicaragua," and the letter "W" underneath, is Gen. Walker's initial.

Noah's Ark in Illinois.—The Beardstown Illinoisan says: While visiting a friend in Sangamon Bottom, in this county, a short time since, we were called to examine a specimen of stone which he had lately taken from a neighboring quarry. The curiosity consisted of two sandstone rocks, which were found joining each other in contextural form, which, when separated, the face of one presented the appearance of having been a part of the side of a vessel near the gunwale. There seems to have been an over-lapping of the timbers, in the form of moulding, around the vessel.

Greenwood Cemetery.—The whole number of interments in this enclosure since it was laid out in 1840 was 47,223, up to April 9th, 1856. The first interment was the body of Mrs. Susan Hannah, which was removed from New York Sept. 5, 1840. The first funeral was over the body of Tobias M. Miller, Sept. 10, 1840. The number of interments since Sept 23d, 1854, have been 10,064.

New Wheat.—A clergyman of Hillsboro', Oregon Territory writing to the Commissioner of Patents, states that he has discovered a new kind of grain, resembling wheat, which, if it will not make bread, will make excellent food for cattle. The grain is said to be very heavy—the heads yielding a hundred fold each. Samples were received in Washington.

A fire broke out in the northwestern tower of the Louisiana State House at Baton Rouge, on the 30th ult., which was extinguished without doing any material damage to the main building. The tower was considerably burnt. The floor of the Hall of Representatives was flooded with water, and much damage was done to the furniture.

"Mr. Beecher pledged Plymouth Church for twenty-five Sharp's rifles."—New Haven Paper.

It has happened of old, for political jobs,
That churches were rifled by fanatic mobs;
But the tables are turned by the strangest of lurches,
And the mobs are now rifled by fanatic churches,
—The Commissionaire.

A man was recently taken out of his bed, in Canton, Miss., and tarred and feathered, on suspicion, or pretended suspicion of his being an abolitionist. The Canton Citizen speaks of him as having borne a good character, and as having, during the yellow fever of last year, deported himself as a truly benevolent man and a gentleman. It evidently disbelieves the charge against him.

The Iowa Know-Nothing State Convention met at Iowa City on the 5th to the number of forty-five delegates, endorsed Fillmore and Donelson, approved of Thorington, the Abolition Representative in Congress, endorsed the Maine law and ratified the "Republican" State Ticket!

The Lake Superior Fisheries.—The citizens of Superior have resolved upon organizing an association having for its object a more complete and extensive development of the fish trade on Lake Superior. She company goes under the name of "The Lake Superior White Fish, Salmon, Trout, Siscowitz and Herring Fishing Company," with a capital of $100,000.

Piermont is to become a great coal depot. The Erie Railroad has just contracted with a Pennsylvania mine to transport 300,000 tons during the coming season. It is supposed that this new source of supply will have a favorable effect on the market of Albany. It will doubtless add considerably to our barge and sloop business.

The Governor's proclamation for a fast was almost universally observed in Boston on the 10th, and in quite a variety of ways, the churches and theatres being open and many places of business closed. The houses of public worship were respectably attended, and the various places of amusement liberally patronized, both afternoon and evening.

A few days since, the Mirror says, a boy who had committed some act requiring punishment, was put in a cell with a crazy man, at Mount Holly, N. J. Soon after, a wild fit came upon the man, and he siezed the boy and killed him in a very short time—mangling him in a shocking manner.

Trumping the Elephant.—For the benefit of American readers, we may remark that Scinde was annexed during the Indian Administration of Lord Ellenborough, as Oude has been by Lord Dalhousie. For the rest, the first-named enjoyed the nick-name of the "Elephant."

"Peccavi—I've Scinde," wrote Lord Ellen, so proud.
More briefly Dalhousie wrote—"Vovi—I've Oude."

Fall of a Meteor.—At nine o'clock on the morning of the 11th, a large meteor fell south of Belfast (N.Y.) shaking the buildings in the vicinity, and being distinctly heard in Rockland and neighboring towns. The sound resembled the explosion of a powder mill. It is not known exactly where it fell.

The Riot Quelled at Demerara.—By the arrival of the bark Montezuma, we have news from Demerara to 22d March. We learn that the difficulty between the blacks and the Government has been quelled, and the Governor has appointed Commissioners to ascertain the damage done by the blacks.

A fire on Lewis wharf, Boston, on the 10th, destroyed four hundred bales of cotton and damaged several wooden buildings. The cotton was owned by Messrs. Goddard and Pritchard, whose loss is about $15,000.

A telegraph from New Orleans, dated April 10th, says: Two hundred recruits left here this morning on the steamship Charles Morgan, for San Juan, to join General Walker's forces. Gen. Hornsby was among the passengers.

The ladies of Greensburg, Ind., have voted to appoint a committee of one hundred, selecting of course, the prettiest, to visit the liquor shops in the town, and try by kindness and affection to influence sellers to quit the business.

Sing Sing and Middletown Silver Mines.

A bill has been introduced into the Senate, granting to Dr. Brandreth a charter to work a silver mine, located on the State Prison grounds, and also a lease of the same for a period of fifty years. He alleges that he has already expended $10,000 in clearing out the mine, and has no more ready money he cares about sinking there—the work to be successfully prosecuted requiring a large additional outlay. About two years since, the Sing Sing Silver Mine, which had remained undisturbed for three-quarters of a century, was re-opened by a company of citizens, but capital proved to be wanting, and a collapse was the result. Dr. Brandreth then purchased the concern and went on with the work all last Summer, and suspended operations upon the approach of Winter. He now proposes to start afresh the present Spring, and infuse new life into the metallic veins by a further liberal supply of aliment, probably through associating with him a number of gentlemen. This mine is situated a few rods north of the State Prison, the entrance being only a few feet from the Hudson, and on a level with the railroad. It consists of a perpendicular shaft 130 feet deep, having as many as nine chambers or galleries branching off in various directions, and severally of 30 to 100 feet in length. The traditional reminiscences of this mine possesses considerable interest.

About the year 1770, a fisherman found near the mouth of the present shaft what proved to be a lump of silver cropping out from a limestone rock. He subsequently tried to explore further by means of a powder blast, but, unfortunately, his hopes themselves were blasted, as the report spread, and the discovery soon became generally known. The poor fisherman received no other reward than what beneficent Nature kindly bestowed,

By silvering o'er his head with age.

The Colonial Government took hold of the matter, and in the end made a very handsome thing of it. About a quarter of a mile distant, by the side of a small stream known as the Kill, a stamping and smelting mill was erected, and turned out large quantities of the silver bullion, in the form of bars nine to twelve inches in length. It is stated that the troubles of the Revolutionary war alone put a stop to the working of this mine; but, from the fact that the doctor dug out very diminutive specimens of argentum last season, it would rather appear that the veins were long since exhausted.

In the town of Middletown, Conn., there is a silver and cobalt mine, which is now producing more tangible results. It seems, a French medical gentleman, formerly attached to the household of Louis Philippe, removed to this country a few years since, and settling at Middletown, learned the fact of the existence at that place of a mine which had been wrought a hundred years before, by a party of Germans. Being something of a mineralogist, he gave personal attention to the subject, and the consequence was the formation of a company, which has been successful far beyond expectation. Cobalt is the largest production, but considerable quantities of silver have been taken out, and the originator of the project has already realized a small fortune.—Daily Times.

Answers to Correspondents.

The cordial welcome given us by the members of the New-York Press, gratefully and deeply gratifies us. Exponents of various and conflicting views, oracles and champions of parties the most opposite, concur in the friendly greeting we acknowledge. Round this new-comer, for whose good conduct we are by parental ties responsible, the old and young of its Fraternity are kindly, generously, hopefully gathered. The Sunday papers—the Times, the Courier, the Mercury, the Dispatch, the Leader—the Weekly Day-Book, the Home Journal, the Albion, with a peculiar manliness and magnanimity; the Daily News; the Mirror, with its genial compliments and graceful comments; the Journal of Commerce, which so liberally devotes a large portion of its space to the sentiments with which we came before the public; the Evening Post, which does the same, and does it with so much good grace and heart; the Courier and Enquirer; the Tribune, ever kind and helpful to all strangers who stand in need; the Times; the Herald, with its good wishes, and wise counsel, and liberal recognition of all that indicates for us a successful effort; our generous and warm-hearted friend, the Irish-American, whose rival some people say we are, but whose coadjutor in the wide republican field of journalism we sincerely wish and aim to be, and whose continued success, mindful of incessant good services on his part in our behalf, we truthfully and earnestly desire and pray for; all and every one of them, and many others we cannot now enumerate, stand round our editorial table, and with brotherly cheers and brimful cups, invoke for us the fullest measure of fair fame and fortune. Happy and proud, indeed, we shall be, if our sayings and doings shall prove us worthy of the brotherhood by whom we have been so sumptuously welcomed.

Our military friends, the Hibernian Greens, of Philadelphia, and the Irish Volunteers, of Charleston, S. C., must forgive the accident which places them elsewhere than in a leading column. The editor designed the Memoirs of Military Companies for the editorial page, and the correspondence, relative to current events connected with the military, for another part of the paper. But this week the memoirs and correspondence are jumbled up and confused together, just as badly as the different English regiments in the storming of the Redan.

It is an ungracious thing to have to apologize for the defects of paper, press-work, &c., &c., since the apology reflects upon parties whom we would rather commend than find fault with. But we owe it to our readers to express our regret for the somewhat inartistic and impoverished appearance of our first number. The disappointment thereby occasioned to the public, great as it must have been, fell infinitely short of our vexation. We think, however, we have improved a little this week; and to the defects which are still perceptible, we reconcile ourselves with the certainty of a decided improvement in the third number.

Publishers who have sent us copies of new books, periodicals, &c., &c., may rest assured we shall in good time notice their valuable favors. In the meanwhile, we beg them to accept our friendliest acknowledgments.

"A Claremun from Kilkee."—Did we know Tom Steele? What a question to put? We kew him as well as we did the Metal Man of Tramore, the Duncannon light-house, the Martello Tower of Dalkey Island, or Strongbow's burial-place in Christ's Church, Dublin. We first met him at O'Connell's house, in Merrion Square, one chill morning in the month of May, 1843. The next time, at Enniscorthy, where he commenced his speech—"Men of Wexford!" —Ye Sons of Thunder!" A few weeks after, in Waterford, on the hill of Ballybricken. Then, at the meeting outside Lismore. All through the State-trials we were intimate with him. We shook hands with him in the garden of Richmond prison. At the great Levee held by O'Connell, in the Rotunda, in the city of Dublin, 30th May, 1845, we bowed to him, at the head of the Waterford deputation, in our '82 uniform, and offered him our congratulations. We spoke, immediately after him, on the stage of the old, cob-webbed, salmon-colored, Galway theatre, during O'Flaherties contest for the representation of that borough against Monahan, the Solicitor General, and in denunciation of the Whigs. The last time we saw him, was in the month of May, 1847, at Haye's Hotel, Kingston, when, by the death of O'Connell, he had lost the great idol of his life, and was utterly spiritless and desolate. The Recollections we publish would not be complete without him. Our memory, heart, and conscience, shall do him justice.

"Kilbarry Boy."—What is the use of our repeating it? To be sure, we're fond of Waterford. We remember old Father Dignan, of Clongowes College, shuffling about the play-ground and galleries, with his saffron-colored walking-stick, perpetually quoting in reference to Waterford the saying of some venerable Jesuit of the Elizabethan era—magnorum ingentorem fœcunda parvens. Carew, the sculptor, Charles Kean, the son of the great Edmund; Father Kenny, the first Rector of Clongowes College, for several years Father Provincial of the Irish Jesuits, and the noblest orator that has in this century stood in the Irish pulpit; William Vincent Wallace, whom the World of Music knows, admires, and would crown with bays; Thomas Wyse, whose Scholarship and elegant literary attainments the most eminent statesmen—Guizot among the number—have with high applauses recognized; all these men were born and bred in Waterford. Have no fear. Our recollections of Waterford are not at all as yet exhausted. We have still to sketch the Great Chapel, for instance, with its glorious Corinthian pillars, broad aisles, and sweeping arches; the marble monuments to the good, and gracious, and gifted Bishops which it shadows, especially that dusty one, outside its walls, in memory of Dr. Hussey, the correspondent and friend of Edmund Burke; and the scenes we witnessed there, of which O'Connell was the colossal figure.

"Kildharra."—We give your "Innisfallen."

[The Island of Innisfallen is the largest, but one (Ross Island) of the many which dot the surface of the Lower Lake of Killarney. Spenser calls it "a chosen plot of fertile land, amongst wide waves, set like a little nest." Wright, Smith the historian of Kerry, Arthur Young, and others, speak enthusiastically of its luxurious and beautiful scenery. St. Finian the Leper founded an abbey here in the sixth century. It contains but twenty acres of land.]

Fair Isle of Innisfaithlenn, little jewel of the Lakes,
I never think about thee but this exiled bosom aches;
In green, to greet thy votaries, ere summer sun appears,
To Eire's genial climate true as Irish Volunteers.
I ask thee not—I know thou art as lovely to behold,
As thou wert twenty springs ago, when down thy banks I rolled.
If Heaven gave me Freedom, and that Eden-island farm,
Your prairies, wild and limitless, for me would have no charm.

Like Chieftain of the olden time, in Con or Dathy's reign,
No stranger should be turned away, nor beggar ask in vain,
And for the "good old cause," just won, and for my comrades dear,
The bog-oak finger-post would say, "All true men welcome here."
Oh, then, the Usquebaugh would flow, and tears dim manly eyes,
"God speed the toilsome years we spent beneath the Western skies;"
"May Heaven light their path of life," some loving heart would say,
"Those friends we left may never see, in exile far away."

Old trees, ye're small, compared to those beneath whose cooling shade
St. Finian Lobhar built his church—where monk and layman prayed.
The creed he preached, and fathers heard, away before your birth,
Is rooted deeply in our hearts as ye in Irish earth.
Farewell, Killarney of the Lakes! Killarney of the Isles!
My spirit nightly visits thee, when slumber care beguiles;
But coming back at morning's dawn, she whispers in mine ear—
„ You seek in vain, you'll never see an Innisfallen here."

The Irish News.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, APRIL 19, 1856.

MEMORIES OF THE DAY.

April 19th.

If the voice of Edmund Burke made the nineteenth of April famous, the blood of Lexington and Concord made it immortal!

If the former failed to stay the thunders opening over the head of England, the latter gave the first light by which the clouds were dispelled from that of America.

Upon the ears of British Ministers, the eloquence of the one, as the valor of the others, broke with an indignant vehemence and a scornful warning, worthy alike to denounce and defy a despotism, or to indicate the transfiguration of a colony into a nation.

On the 19th of April, 1774, Burke delivered his famous speech on American Taxation, in the British Commons. On that day twelve-month, the Americans took up the theme at the point of the bayonet. Truly, Burke has said, "Terror is not always the effect of force; and an armament is not a victory." Lexington proved the first; the War succeeding it, illustrated the latter, to the English.

Burke's speech on the occasion has probably never been surpassed, if equalled, as a sustained effort. It is an unbroken stream—now rolling sonorously along, now descending with the force of unity, over mighty chasms—now doubly concentrated in the space allowed it—now expanding from the gorge, ever beautiful, and undivided. For effulgent energy, and pictorial sarcasm, the speech was admitted to be unequalled at the time. He shook out every plea of the Minister. He paraded the stupid policy that kept the tax on tea, by the importation of which, by America, the East Indies were to be kept from crushing England with their burden. The government he stigmatized as being without system, and inventing occasionally "some miserable tale for the day, in order meanly to sneak out of difficulties, into which they had proudly strutted." He reminded them that the previous year they were on the verge of bankruptcy, when, by the operation of the injudicious tax, ten million pounds of tea were rotting in the warehouses, the sale of which would have prevented the distress. Exposing the policy, he condemned the tax on other grounds, as "a tax of sophistry, a tax of pedantry, a tax of disputation, a tax of war and rebellion, a tax for any thing but benefit to the imposers, or satisfaction to the subject."

"What a man is this!" exclaimed Lord Townshend, "how could he acquire such transcendent powers?" And an American in the gallery said to an English friend, "you have a most wonderful man here, he understands more of America than the rest of your house put together."

A year had passed, Burke made another speech in favor of America, and while that voluminous moralist, Sam. Johnson, was replying to him in a pamphlet of ponderous puerilities, entitled "Taxation No Tyranny," the colonial policy of Lord North had driven the "provincials" to casting bullets, to the silent collecting of military stores, and such "treasonable practices."

The government officials scented out a store of artillery and ammunition at Concord; and eight hundred men, led by Major Pitcairn, were dispatched with great secrecy to destroy it. But the ears of rebellion, like the Indians, are tenacious, and hear footsteps through miles of earth. There is an attraction of repulsion that brings the stealthiest step and dullest ears of enemies together. As the royalists approached Lexington on the morning of April 19th, some seventy armed provincials stood in their path. Pitcairn valiantly charged the little band, which retreated, leaving eight dead, the first heroes of the War of Independence, on the field. Concord was reached by the royalists, but Concord had no peace for them. The alarm spreading, their work of demolition was interrupted. There were dead people in Lexington, their blood was on the hands in Concord. The indignant militia assembled—the army of Pitcairn was baffled, beaten, routed! and only saved from utter extermination by the arrival of Lord Percy with two companies of artillery, sixteen of infantry, and a corps of marines. Even with this aid the army barely effected a retreat to Charlestown, leaving in killed, wounded and prisoners, in the hands of the victorious people, two hundred and seventy-three. The "rebels" lost ninety men.

A nation without valor has no history. Literature may be the heart, Science the head, and Art the eye of a country; but Valor is its strong right arm. As it protects the others, it inspires them! As it inspires them, it gives them actual being. Their being is its history. It makes a history they live to chronicle. It makes a peace that gives them life. Thus, these memories must be ever present to us all. Not to cherish them is to be a Vandal. To forget them is to be a Suicide.

To Irish History the day is a necessity also. And on the records of eloquence it is marked with another name not less remarkable, and around which more imaginative splendors radiate than that of Edmund Burke.

On the 19th of April, 1780, Henry Grattan made his celebrated "Declaration of Irish Rights." It was, and is, famous in many respects. Famous for the infamous centuries of wrong it compressed into that day's glowing agony. Famous for the words which gave these wrongs an appalling inhumanity; and for the eloquence with which the Rights were invoked. Famous for the fresh blood it throbbed into Irish politics. And famous, above all, for the success which it initiated. It broke the clouds and let in a comparative burst of sunshine on the land. Any light would be sunshine for a people groping for centuries, now in uncertain gloom—now in unmistakeable darkness. Backed by the arms of the volunteers, the independence of the Irish parliament was guaranteed, such as the British government could guaranty, in 1782. The glory of it was Grattan's. But it was an illusion, like the Fata Morgana. In 1800 it was not. It was granted through fear, exercised with questionable faith, and revoked with unquestionable treachery.

To America, Ireland, and England, the date of this day is an important index. It initiated revolutions in the two former against the latter. That of America was a war of seven years. Ireland, by parading the volunteers, gained her parliament. The end of the latter was a concession which lasted eighteen years. The end of the former, Independence and a Republic which "still lives."

Who will say it was not worth the blood?

BONED TURKEY.

The news telegraphed from the Cambria informs us that the Conference at Paris is about to close with the most amicable solution of the European difficulties. The hesitation which the Washington announced, and which rendered the immediate prospects of peace uncertain, was ascribed to Lord Clarendon's indisposition to admit the claim of Prussia to sign the treaty on equal terms with the other Powers. The Patrie, with the nicest equanimity, tells us that the trifling difficulties, of which some foreign correspondents spoke, have not been attended with any important consequences. We presume that the Patrie meant to intimate that no unpleasant consequences were engendered by the insignificant impediments alluded to. For, surely, there have been results of some importance arrived at by the Conference, which, like a council of Olympian gods, nodded their majestic heads during the last few weeks in the Napoleonic capital.

As was instinctively predicted at the commencement of the war, even before the Coldstream Guards had left off drinking London Stout in Gallipoli, and long before the dainty young lords and gentlemen of England had felt the difference between barrack life in such luxurious quarters as those of Hyde Park and Dublin, and camp life, in mud and winter, on the Crimean steppes—as was predicted, Turkey is to pay the expenses of the fight.

After all, it was not Lord Clarendon's repugnance to the participation of Prussia in the conclusion of the cumbersome tragedy of the Crimea, which delayed the perfecting of the treaty, and caused the breath of the grinning Quilps of the Stock-exchange to stand still these last three weeks. Turkey was the bone of contention—the bone which stuck in the diplomatic throat in the Hotel des Affaires Etrangeres—and Turkey has been boned.

In vain did Djmil Bey—and when he fell ill, in vain did Ali Pasha—protest against the enlightened views of that conspiracy of peace-makers. In vain did they recall the noble professions with which England bid good-bye to her soldiers as they marched past the Queen's balcony, where they lifted their hats upon their bayonets to the gentle Hecuba of Great Britain. In vain did they remind them, that it was in the name of freedom, of the independence of nations, of the integrity of Turkey, that the broad pennant of the English Admiral flew up the Dardanelles. In vain did the swindled children of Mahomet appeal to the chivalry of France, to her romantic love of liberty, to the Oriental imagination and voluptuousness of her sons.

Louis Blanc, in his Histoire des Dix Ans, dates the decline of Turkey from the day on which she substituted the Fez cap for the Turban, and the French style of trowsers for the capacious drawers she used formerly to revel in. The day that shone upon the mingled flags of the Crescent, the Eagle, and the Lion, completed the extinction which the change of wardrobe had prepared.

The Principalities are to be "developed" and "ameliorated" just as another province, not much above one hundred miles from Liverpool, has been "developed" and "ameliorated"—developed into nothing and ameliorated to perdition. Then the entire of the internal administration is to be remodelled. The courts of justice, custom-houses, hospitals and bazaars, are to be purified on English principles and sanctified by France. Russia gains her point about the Christians. Austria gets another lease of her Hungarian spoil, and Prussia goes home merry.

The rubbish of the dock-yards of Sebastapol has been carted into the Mosque of St. Sophia. Turkey is no more.

And thus with all nations who put their faith in princes.

DANISH JEWS.

From time immemorial Denmark has "taken up a collection." She has been "time out of mind" an unfathomable poor-box; and no Jew has ever been more exacting.

In the earlier and barbarous ages of the world, circumstances gave her the power, if not the right, to exact; and now, when she has neither the power, nor the right, she continues the exaction, on the old European ground of hereditary exclusiveness.

The wealth of the Baltic fisheries, and especially of the waters between Zealand and Sweden, on the one hand; and the incursions of the Vikings, the sea robber-gods of the North on the other, freely drew from the fishers who dragged their nets in the former, a tax or due to the Dane for protection against the latter in ancient times. Thus commenced what has since grown into, and is now recognized as, the Sound Dues. Not alone money, but the best fish were yielded to the King of Denmark in lieu of protection and the privilege of fishing.

Herrings belonged to the fisherman, but the Grampus to the King; as also the Sturgeon, Whale, and all the aristocracy of the deep. From time to time improvements were made on the coast in shape of beacons, light-houses, &c., towards the sustainment of which all foreign vessels willingly paid tribute.

Commerce increasing in the Baltic, Denmark also extended its tolls, taxing in proportion as the commodity carried was necessitous to the population, until, by degrees, from being originally the paid sepoy of commerce, she has grown to be its dictator.

After many years of war with the Hanseatic League, Denmark, by conferring on the Netherlands—the rivals of the Hanse Towns—certain privileges of passage, had the right of toll acknowledged by the Dutch, who, for the first time, made mention of it at the treaty of Speyer, May 23d, 1554,

It would be impossible here to recount the numerous diplomatic dodges and alliances entered into by Denmark with rival commercial nations, who, eager to possess the "privileges" exercised by each other, utterly forgot the question of right, in the desire of temporary aggrandizement. Whatever nation wished to push its commerce in the Baltic, backed up the extortions of the Dane on the flags of every other nation, and thus entitled its own to be recognized as "privileged."

The question became one of individual selfishness, instead of universal right; and Denmark ably contriving, by its various alliances at one time or the other, to have its own position acknowledged, kept heightening its tolls, extorting tributes of cargoes as well as vessels, and creating a host of imposts, in the shape of pilot, custom-house, and other fees, the exorbitance of which is unparalleled.

In 1826 the United States entered into a treaty on the basis enjoyed by the "most favored nations." It was to remain in force for ten years, and until one year's (inclusive) notice to close it. Since 1841 the matter has been the subject of much discussion, and several diplomatic attempts for adjustment, all of which have failed. The year's notice was given by President Pierce in his annual message, Dec. 4, 1854, and by the American representative at the Court of Copenhagen on the 14th of April following. Thus, the year is up now, and, virtually, there is no treaty existing on the subject. Denmark has applied for two months to cogitate some amicable arrangement, which has been granted; and the question has been brought before the Senate by Mr. Mason, of the Committee on Foreign relations.

The commercial nations of Europe were startled into a self-protective action when the "year's notice" crossed the Atlantic. A sudden honesty agitated the "favored nations." The President's words, "We can claim exemption therefrom as a matter of right," were adopted and echoed from London to Lubeck. The question was not one of rates now, said the London Times, but of entire abrogation.

"These duties are a great and increasing burden on our trade. They cannot be claimed on any ground of abstract justice or equity. Denmark does not even claim the sovereignty of the Ore Sound, but divides it with Sweden. England might as well assert a right to tax all foreign vessels that sail through the Straits of Dover. In the recent correspondence between the American and Danish Governments, it is admitted by the latter that the Sound Duties cannot be justified on principle."

Such was the exuberant conclusiveness of the Times, on the immediate reception of the notice; but, within the past month, we find that it has changed its tone. It has suddenly discovered that the Dues are the staff of life to Denmark; or, rather, its abrogating enthusiasm has cooled down before the fact, that, as the London Shipping Gazette states in condemning the action of its contemporary, "a great part of the Danish foreign debt has been contracted in this country (England), and assigned to British bondholders.

"Some of the most eminent statesmen of America," writes the Copenhagen correspondent of the London Times of the 20th ult., "as Daniel Webster and the celebrated Henry Wheaton, formerly acknowledged the right of Denmark to levy the Sound Dues, as resting upon 'immemorial usage.'" Even if the writer's statements were exactly true, the conclusions are untenable. The Times' correspondent, no doubt refers to Mr. Webster's note to M. Steen Billé, Danish Charge d'Affaires, dated June 27, 1842, in which the former tendered the latter his "distinguished consideration." The first of the same month, however, Webster, as Secretary of State, transmitted a report to Congress in which he admitted that "the right of Denmark to levy Sound Dues is asserted on the ground of ancient usage, coming down from the period when that power had possession of both shores of the Belt and Sound," and also, that while it is recognized by various treaties, "its origin is uncertain, and its right questionable."

As to the other authority cited by the Times writer, a few lines will suffice. Speaking of the laws of nations as regards the Straits connecting two free Seas, Wheaton says:

"Even if such Strait be bounded on both sides by the territory of the same sovereign, and is at the same time so narrow as to be commanded by cannon-shot from both shores, the exclusive jurisdiction of that sovereign over such Strait is controlled by the right of other nations to communicate with the Seas thus connected."

As to the argument of others, that America should not question that which has satisfied Europe for centuries—it is simply to say, that Old Europe should dictate Young America's foreign policy. It is fitting time that the latter prove to the former the fact that three centuries' toleration of a wrong cannot sanctify it as a right.

THE AMERICAN FLAG IN MEXICO.

A very interesting report of the Military Committee of the Senate has just been handed us. From the letters appended to it, we have a minute and picturesque account of the planting of the American flags on the different approaches to the city of Mexico, and on the National Palace of the city itself.

At the base of the huge fortress of Chepultepec stood a five-gun battery, defended with desperate obstinacy by some of the best Mexican troops under General Bravo. It was gallantly carried by a party of stormers under the command of Major Levi Twiggs, who was killed in the attack. Captain Casey, with two hundred and fifty men and thirteen officers from General Twiggs' division, supported the Major, carrying a small stand of American colors, the property of General Twiggs, which Captain Roberts, of the Rifles, had received from his hands. No flag was planted on this battery—the troops sweeping over it the moment it was carried. As they swept by, Col. Geary, of the Second Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers, mentions he saw General Shields, who was severely wounded at the battery, cheering them on to victory.

But there was the Garita de Belen, or gate of the city, defended by the citadel of Mexico, and other works, mounting altogether twenty-four pieces of artillery, and manned by a vast Mexican force. Three-quarters of a mile from the city, General Quitman reorganized his column, the Rifles and South Carolina regiments heading the attack. Soiled with dust and smoke, begrimed with blood, the officers on foot with the men, they moved on to the charge with banners furled, and no music but the roar of cannon, and the rattling roll of small arms.

The Garita was taken on a charge at full run. Immediately upon its capture, Quitman was seen waving a handkerchief, fastened to a rifle, from the parapet of the gate. After this, he called for colors, with the view to announce to the other portions of the Army, the capture of the city. General Persifer F. Smith pulled out his watch at the same time, coolly remarking they were now in Mexico, and mentioning the hour and the minute.

A Lieutenant of the Palmetto regiment brought forward his regimental flag, and with two of his men, and Lieut. Wilcox, of Quitman's staff, now one of the professors at West Point, clambered to the top of a little shed on the right of the captured gate, and there held it in the thick of a tremendous fire. There being no means to secure the flag, the General ordered it down. But before this could be done, the South Carolinian officer received a severe wound, and one of the two men, who had charge of it when this officer was wounded, was himself shot as he leaped from the shed, and fell, with the flag in his hand, by the side of General Quitman, who, in a very exposed position, was quietly smoking a cigar at the moment.

The South Carolina regiment being left at the Garita, and the Second Pennsylvanian in the Citadel, General Quitman, with the balance of his command, marched into the heart of the city, and took possession of the National Palace, the Rifles in advance. Halting in the Grand Plaza, the column wheeling into line, with officers to the front, the General directed Lieut. Lovell to have the American colors run up the flag-staff over the palace, saying to him, "let it be the national colors, the Stars and Stripes, not the particular colors of any regiment." On looking down the line, Lieut. Lovell could observe only two national flags, one of which was with the New-York regiment, the other with Capt Roberts' company of rifles. The latter was displayed by Capt. Roberts, accompanied by a file of men, in obedience to the order of the General. This was the flag which had floated over Fort Brown, on the Rio Grande, while the little garrison were besieged there waiting the return of General Taylor.

Captain Charles Naylor, the Superintendent of the National Palace, finding the flag in a miserable state, nearly worn out, daily diminishing in length, and being obliged, as he plainly writes, to have its "rents sewed up" every night, applied for a new one, and received permission to procure one at his earliest convenience. On the 15th of October he writes the following letter to General Quitman:

"General: The new national flag is finished. It is of the largest size, 40 by 20 English feet, and its proportions are in exact conformity with the regulations of the United States upon the subject. It was made by Mrs. Louisa Baker, an American lady from the United States, now a resident in Mexico; and she has made it in the most substantial and beautiful manner. I propose raising it at once.

"With great respect, I am, very truly, your obedient servant,
"Charles Naylor,
"Captain United States Army,
"Superintendent of National Palace."

Mrs. Louisa Baker assembled at her house all the American ladies of her acquaintance in Mexico, and would not, so it is stated in the report, allow a stitch to enter it but what was put there by the fingers of American women. Captains Davis, Lovell, and Naylor, cut out the stars, the Superintendent informs us, and pinned them in their appropriate places in the field.

The old flag, which had waved over Vera Cruz, Cerro Gordo, Jalapa, and Puebla, was returned to General Worth, whose property it was, the 10th of October, 1847, on the firing of the thirtieth gun of the salute; and on the 12th of June, 1848, the new flag was lowered at sunrise, the entire population of Mexico being congregated in the great square, covering the roofs of the cathedral and neighboring houses.

MILITARY NEWS.

THE EMMET GUARD, NEW-YORK.

This company was founded in 1846, by a few patriotic members of the Montgomery Guard, who had seceded from that company, and entered into an organization, out of which sprung the Emmet Guard, Company E, First Division, of the Tenth Regiment of the New-York State Militia.

Among its early members, Messrs. McGrath, Culhane, Nickinson, Gavin, Smith, and Kelly were prominent, nearly all of whom held the post of Commissioned Officers, at intervals, to the present time.

Mr. James McGrath, its first Captain, was elected January 7th, 1847, and filled that post with marked ability and success, to his demise in 1854. Mr. McGrath was an enthusiastic Irishman, and an esteemed citizen, and will be long remembered by the citizens of New-York for his kindliness of disposition and urbanity of manners, which characterized the earlier Irish emigrants.

Mr. John Kelly, now member of Congress from this city, was the second Captain, and directed the Company with no less ability and no less success, until the duties of his present position caused his resignation in 1855. Warmly attached to the land of his fathers, and an uncompromising advocate of American interests, he was peculiarly adapted to fill the position left vacant by his able predecessor; and although removed from the position he honored, he still holds its interests among the cherished objects of his life, and is still dear to every member of the Company.

To Mr. Kelly succeeded Mr. John Kennedy, who directs the affairs of the Company, with all the ability and enthusiasm that distinguished his predecessor. He is an assiduous and intelligent officer, under whose command it will be able to support the character it has acquired, of being among the most efficient Companies of our City Militia. Captain Kennedy is ably supported by John Donohoe, First Lieutenant, an active and accomplished officer, and by Second Lieutenant James Gallager, an officer of untiring activity.

The present corps of Commissioned Officers are all of Irish birth; and all the men of the Company are Irish, by birth or parentage.

On important occasions, the Company could turn out seventy strong, and has a regular muster of about forty. It is likely to increase in numbers and efficiency under its present management and discipline.

The uniform consists of a blue coatee, with shoulder-knot and buff facings, blue trousers, with a light buff stripe, blue peaked cap, with yellow braiding, white pompon, tipped with green.

The equipments are cross and body-belts, with brass breast-plate, bearing for device the Hands of Friendship, a spread eagle on top; inscribed on a shield is the name of Company; musket, bayonet, cartouch-box, and knapsack, usually borne by infantry soldiers. The old flint muskets, used by the Company at present, are to be replaced by those with the percussion cap and spring bayonet.

The Company holds drill in the Eagle Drill Rooms, corner of Rivington and Delancey streets, on the Thursday evening of every week. Time, two hours, commencing at half-past seven o'clock P. M., in winter, and at eight o'clock P. M., during the summer season. The annual ball is held in January, and is among the most brilliant of the military balls of the city. The Emmet Guards have had their share of the honors conferred on the most favored companies of the city; and the confidence reposed in its firmness and forbearance is known from its being among the detachments selected by the Mayor for the suppression of the unfortunate Astor-House riot—an affair of saddening remembrance to our citizens. This was one of the most delicate duties that could be assigned to any body of our Militia, to be called on to suppress and calm the passions of citizens enjoying so large an amount of personal liberty as that awarded to them under our liberal State Government.

The members of the Emmet Guard are all industrious, respectable citizens, and many of them are among the most prosperous business men and mechanics of the city; all, or nearly all, are property owners to a considerable extent, and therefore have an interest in its order and good government.

Literature.

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS.

RICHARD SHIEL.

In the Library at Clongowes—the one devoted to the boys—there was a copy of Shiel's and O'Connell's speeches. It was a shabby-looking old book. Miserable paper, print, and binding. The leaves all torn and defaced with pencil-marks. The stitching exposed. The title-page depending on a shred for its connection with the preface.

Beggarly as it looked, to me it was beyond all price. It was my favorite book. I loved it. All the more so, because it was in rags. The very pleasantest hours I had in that old college of Clongowes, I spent with this indigent volume. A ricketty casket, full of bruises, and threatening every minute to fall to pieces, it contained for me a heap of the rarest emeralds, the lustre of which, even in the hardest frost, made my eyes melt and water.

Had I it in my power now, it should have a superb book-case for its own special use and benefit. A book-case of the soundest bog-oak—twelve feet high—fashioned like the round tower of Clonmacnoise, the most beautiful of them all. I should dress it up sumptuously in green velvet, and give it an inner vest of white watered silk, and stiffen its aged back with bars of gold.

In the round tower of bog-oak it should with impunity repose for ever, safe from all prying eyes, and the profane pencils of reckless annotators. All this it would well deserve, for the hours of ecstacy of which it was the exhaustless source.

The principal speeches of O'Connell and Shiel, delivered during the days of the great Catholic Association, from 1825 to 1829, were to be found in its disordered pages. The first inserted was one pronounced by O'Connell, in the summer of 1827, in the great chapel in the city of Waterford. In this speech he gives a richly humorous description of a parson of the Established Church; speaks of his coat being sleek and shining with the parish brush; of his wig being redolent with parish pomatum; of his charity beginning at home, but being of so domestic a nature, as never to go abroad. Of the architectural features of the parson's church, the great orator gives us an amusing enumeration. We have, he said, a big barn behind, with a sentry-box in front, and a candle-extinguisher on top.

In this speech I also found that beautiful passage—

"I look at-home, and I am not disheartened. I look abroad, and my spirit is exalted. From the coast of Labrador to where Cape Horn beholds two oceans commingle, Liberty is everywhere extending her dominion. Her voice comes to us across the Atlantic, is heard above the storm, and, like summer music in the heavens, gladdens the ear of seven millions of Irishmen."

And it was in this speech that he spoke of the example which America would be to the young generation springing up about him.

There were not more than a dozen of Shiel's speeches in the volume. All of them, brilliant and exciting to excess, drove the blood burning through my veins, and filled my mind, as by a violent enchantment, with the visions which were the inspiration of whatever strong words fell from me in later years.

There was the contrast—almost maddening, it was so impetuous—he drew between the conduct of the British Government towards Portugal and their conduct towards Ireland. It was immediately after Mr. Canning's memorable speech, in favor of the military interference of England, on behalf of the constitutional liberty of Portugal.

"Portugal is to be free!" he exclaimed, "old, palsied and decrepit Portugal is to be free! and Ireland—young, generous, ardent, enthusiastic Ireland—Ireland is—!"

Here he violently broke off, paused a moment, bowed his head, covered his face with his hands, and looked as if immersed in an agony of despair.

"No! no!" he violently resumed, "it must not be! If tears are to be shed, they should be the steam of burning hearts, and the hand which brushes them away should be clenched!"

Shiel's speeches, denunciatory of the Duke of York, appear also in this volume, as well as the magnificent discourse he delivered on the occasion of his death. The description of the royal funeral, solemnly winding through the aisles of St. George's Chapel of Windsor Castle, and the great officers and dignitaries of the empire descending amid the glare of torches, with their embalmed and coffined burden, into that vault "the silence of which the Archangel alone shall break,"—all this, in coloring and in grouping, is as striking as the grandest battle-scene of Horace Vernet.

"But," he says, "as I have thrust thorns into his pillow, I shall not sow thistles upon his grave;" and then he dismisses the subject with an impressive admonition to all princes and proud ones, who, with the impious pertinacity of the dead Duke, would still stand between them and their rights.

These speeches called forth the fiercest denunciations from the English and Orange press.

This however was of little consequence. Shiel had an imperturbable contempt for all such chastisements. There was something he felt more severely. Something which inconvenienced him much more painfully His phillipics against the Duke of York kept him out of office during the reign of William the Fourth. The King could never be induced to forgive the attack upon his brother. The intercessions even of Lord Melbourne proved unavailing.

It was not until the Reform King had been three or four years in his shroud, that the interdict was removed, and Shiel found the gold dust of the Treasury within an appreciable range. In the summer of 1840, he was appointed one of the Commissioners of Greenwich. Subsequently, Vice-President of the Board of Trade. Still later, Master of the Mint. Last of all, Ambassador to the Court of Tuscany. For some time after her accession to the throne, the Queen herself entertained a strong repugnance to his being invited to share in the royal patronage. To his being Judge Advocate, she peremptorily refused to assent, though his appointment to the post was earnestly urged by Lord Melbourne, the present Earl of Carlisle, and other eminent personages of the Whig party.

I had this from his own lips, as he pleasantly sat one day, in the month of July, 1843, at the table of his old friend, the Rev. John Sheehan, Parish Priest of St. Patrick's, Waterford, and rattled away with jokes, anecdotes, quotations, and epigrams, over the best Blackwater salmon, and the choicest Epernay to be found in any house, lay or clerical, from Innishowen to Hook tower.

At this hospitable house I met Shiel, for the first time in private. Twice before—and only twice—I had seen him in public. The first occasion was that of the great aggregate meeting of Catholics, convened in Dublin, about the middle of January, 1844, by the Lord Mayor—now Sir Timothy O'Brien, Bart., M. P. The object of the meeting was to protest against the exclusion of Catholics from the jury empannelled to try O'Connell and the other Repeal conspirators, as Mr. Ferrand, the Tory member for Knaseborough, boisterously styled them one night, pending the trial, amid tremendous uproar in the House of Commons.

In the Music Hall, in Lower Abbey street, the meeting took place, It was a time of intense excitement. Dublin was full. A formidable garrison—amongst which Lord Cardigan's Hussars, in their scarlet trousers and scarlet cap, with their close-fitting blue embroidered jacket, and devilish air of impudence, were most conspicuous—occupied the city. Not only were the permanent barracks stocked with soldiers, horse and foot, but several deserted mansions had been fitted up, and now echoed, from morning to night, with ringing ramrods, and clanking spurs, and challenges, and pass-words. Aldborough House, for instance, in one of the suburbs on the road to Clontarf, sheltered three or four companies of the 5th Fusileers, in which very dashing regiment an old school-fellow of mine—at present one of the Members for the County Galway—was Lieutenant.

The Earl of Aldborough, from whom the imposing edifice derived its name, had long been an absentee. The public were made aware, for several years running, that his Lordship resided in some villa, with a melifluous name, in the vicinity of Naples. In the illimitable advertisements of Parr's Pills, or the Poor Man's Plaster, or some other invention of fatuitous science, which, day after day, generation after generation, appeared in every paper in Ireland, the public were informed, under his own seal and signature, that his mythical Lordship had been rescued from the jaws of death by the providential use of the Plaster or Pills aforesaid.

Applying the Plaster, or swallowing the Pills, his Lordship had spent so much of his time abroad, that he had become a mere misty memory in Ireland, of which his abandoned house on the road to Clontarf was the only palpable vestige that remained. The spiders and the mice had been undisturbed tenants of it for many winters and summers, until the dashing Fifth Fusileers tramping in there one morning, early in the autumn of 1843, swept them in a panic to retreats, less spacious and illuminated.

Dublin swarmed with soldiers. Officers being plenty, there was a gay time expected. And so the landlords, titled and untitled, opulent and beggared, sent up, or brought up, their dowagers, dames, and pretty-birds to town, and the hotels were crammed. The State-trials were in progress. Splendid arguments and speeches were looked forward to, and so were many sharp and flashing passages of arms in the crimsoned arena of the Queen's Bench. And so there was a prodigious flood of lawyers and attorneys into the beautiful metropolis of Ireland. Every man, in fact, who could raise a wig and gown, or produce a certificate of practice in Petty Sessions, had left his home—in whatever part of Ireland that might be—and had more or less comfortably moored himself for this stormy season to either bank of the languid Liffey.

Many of the old agitators, too, who had achieved a larger or smaller measure of celebrity in the days of the Catholic Association, excited by this recent outrage on the body of which they had been the champions, and ambitious of proving their ancient spirit in a new campaign, had come once more upon the scene of their vigorous eloquence, manhood, and success.

There was Mr. Wyse, the historian of the struggle, as he had been one of the most accomplished actors in the movement, which eventuated in the emancipation of the Catholics. At present British minister at Athens, he resides in a city where the very stones must be dear to him, and where every breeze that ripples the Ægean must wake his congenial mind, already so impressed with the spirit of the past, into harmonies of subdued rapture and delight. There, also, was Sir Thomas Esmonde, one of the oldest, if not the oldest Baronet, in Ireland. A plain, good-natured, conscientious country-gentleman, who if able to say little, brought with his ancient Baronetcy no slight social weight to the meetings and petitions of his Catholic comrades, and, being independent in fortune, was above contempt, suspicion, or intrigue.

He was a patriot, however, with considerable reservations. He was a patriot in the wake of the Whigs, and though occasionally showing a little independent flag of his own—a pocket-handkerchief of home manufacture, with a spunky sentiment barely legible in one corner of it—never had the pluck or the good sense to get out of the track which their passage through politics ambiguously left. Nevertheless he was an excellent man, and a chivalrous Catholic.

Several others of the same rank had been attracted to Dublin; and Dublin, since the epoch of the Parliament and the Volunteers, had never, perhaps, been so crowded, so excited, so brilliant in its social aspect, nor so impressive in its political incidents and attitude.

In this condition of affairs, the great meeting of Catholics in the Music Hall, at which I saw Shiel for the first time, took place.

IRISH REVOLUTIONARY HISTORY.

FIRST ARTICLE—'98.

'98 and '48.—The Modern Revolutionary History and Literature of Ireland: by John Savage. Redfield; New-York.

Behind the vast crowd which filled the Irish Revolutionary stage during the middle months of 1848, and at what, to the public eye seemed a considerable distance from the conspicuous personages of the scene, there stood a picturesque group of young and glowing spirits, who, if the opportunity had been given them, would have shone as radiantly in the fight for freedom as the students of the Ecole Polytecnique did in the Three Days of 1830, or in that nobler revolution which, eight years ago, served as the signal and inspiration of the European Rising. Cultivated, brave, and generous youths, they had come out from the studio, the lecture-hall, the hospital, the library of the University, the picture galleries of the Academy, to stake their fortunes with the people.

Prominent amongst them was the author of this bright volume. Gifted with a quick intellect, full of fancy, full of wit, full of heart, with a love for all that is beautiful in art, in nature, and the destiny of a people, he was one of the brightest of that brilliant brotherhood whose genius made them the poets, as their pure patriotism would have made them the martyrs or the heroes of a revolution. Late in the summer of '48 he might have been seen in the Commeraghs, an armed outlaw, banding the peasantry of Waterford and Tipperary against the foreign garrison who, by sheer force, held their soil; whilst the same season, the year previous, he might have been seen in the great hall of the Royal Dublin Society, in the presence of the most distinguished literary men and artists of the Irish capital, receiving from his Excellency, the Earl of Clarendon, the silver medal for the best painting in oil from nature. The painting contained studies of animals which were well known to the frequenters of the Zoological Garden in the Phœnix Park, and his Excellency, standing on the step of his gilt and scarlet throne, complimented the young artist on his performance, and the admirable likenesses he had made.

And now, with a pen which tells as truthfully, and colors as brightly as his pencil in the schools of the Dublin Society, he comes forward to vindicate the calumniated memories of two epochs, the most generous and chivalrous in the history of his country. His father was the son of a United Irishman of '98, and dedicating the book to his memory, he illustrates the honor and nobility of his parentage. Of Wolfe Tone, Russell, McCracken, McCabe Thomas Addis Emmet, Lord Edward Fitzgerald, and the other eminent republicans of that period, we have grand portraits and fitting eulogies. Now that Ireland appears insensible to the loftier suggestions of the past, it is truly gracious and useful to have these names revived, and the story of the gallant fight repeated, with the plot and incidents of which they are inseparably woven.

The loving care and industry with which he has done his duty to the republican dead of Ireland, may be inferred from the fact, that he has added the names of more than fifty of the leaders of the United Irishmen, which Dr. Madden, in his celebrated work upon the subject, has omitted. In some minute details he corrects Plowden, and other similar authorities. Indeed, considering that he has assiduously read and ransacked all the writings which heretofore threw any light upon the subject, and has added to their statements the results of his own searches, his travels through the country, his conversations with contemporaries of the United Irishmen, and with men of the generation immediately succeeding them, we consider it no exageration to say that it is the best book extant on the last great revolutionary era of the Irish race.

We say the last great revolutionary era. For the insurrectionary proceedings of '48 were too premature and brief to be designated so impressively. In a military point of view, this is strictly true. There was no campaign, like that of Wexford under Bagenal Harvey and the patriot priests; no great project which eventuated in the descent of the French fleet on Bantry, and the disembarkation of the French troops on the Mayo coast; no fierce fight like that which felled Lord Mountjoy at the Three Bullet Gate of Ross, and flung the royal flag of England, torn and riddled, into the red channel of the Barrow. The rebellion of '98, as it is usually called, deserves at least as grand a prominence in history as the rising of the Tyrol under Höfer, or that of Circassia under Scamyl, or that of the Sicilians against the King of the Lazzaroni.

The motives, the courage, the patriotism by which it was impelled and kindled vindicate themselves with strength and beauty, and great glory, in the presence of the best examples of the patriot-soldier which the past, or recent times, introduce to the applauses of the world. John Savage deeply feels the glowing truth of this, and animated by it, tells his story of the period with an eloquence and vigor worthy of the scenes it disclosed, and the spirits by which they were filled with light.

An extract or two will confirm these impressions. On the night of the 26th of May, 1798, the chapel of Boolavogue, the house of the curate, John Murphy, and the dwellings of about twenty farmers in the neighborhood, were burnt by the yeomen.

"Ah!" the young historian exclaims here, "it was not alone walls and rafters they set in flames. It was the fire of revolution they kindled; and such a flame, too, as is not yet extinguished in the rebellious Irish heart. The chapel-house of Boolavogue is still flaming—still crackling and flinging up its bright embers on the dark pages of that year's history."

On the morning of Whit-Sunday, the churchless priest, surrounded by his hunted flock, unsheathed his sword. What follows is well worth reading, word for word:

"In the American Revolution a scene took place which is peculiarly apposite. An eloquent pastor on the frontiers of Virginia gave notice that on a certain Sabbath he would preach his farewell sermon. The day came. The homely temple was crowded with hardy mountaineers. They over-filled the church and crowded the little burial-place. Every one was breathless.

That intuitive knowledge of coming events, which at times agitates the most sluggish intellects, guided by peculiar circumstances, excited the assemblage to a marvellous anxiety. The theme of the day was the subject of the sermon. Peace or war—Liberty or death? He was a plain vigorous speaker was this pastor. Every word fell on the audience like a mallet knocking off their chains He portrayed their sufferings, their wrongs, and dwelt on the sacred character of the War of Independence. 'Aye,' said he in conclusion, 'in the language of Holy Writ, there is a time for all things, a time to preach and a time to pray, but those times have passed away'—and then in a voice of thunder, 'there is also a time to fight. And that time has now come!' Pronouncing the benediction, he deliberately removed his gown, and an armed warrior stood before them. The soldier-priest was the Rev. Peter Muhlenberg, afterwards a Major-General in the Revolutionary Army.

Father John Murphy's last sermon was preached in Boolavogue; the time for preaching and praying was told out by the Orange incendiaries; and the time for fighting had come. 'Better,' said he, 'die courageously in the field, than be butchered in the houses.' Early on this morning, Hawtrey White with two troops left Gorey in search of the insurgents; and on the south side one hundred and ten picked men of the North Cork regiment, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Foote and six officers, marched from Wexford. From opposite directions the royalists were advancing on the people. The rapid movement of the North Cork, now joined by sixteen mounted yeomen, who made a diversion on the side of the hill, for a moment flung indecision amongst the insurgents. A volley from the royalists drove them up the hill, whither they were followed by the North Cork. A rapid movement on the part of the insurgents—an ambuscade—up come the North Cork incited by Foote: the rebels have opened to receive them, and out sprang the pikemen from their ambush, while the great mass of the people, men, women, and children, stood looking on the top of the hill.

'We must conquer or perish,' cried Murphy. A deadly vengeance steadied every pike. Dying groans were in the men's ears, blazing homes had driven them to battle: one wild charge, and the royalist bandits rolled over, as if one monstrous corpse."

The entrance of the victorious peasantry, under Bagenal Harvey, into Wexford, is spiritedly told:

"The town surrendered; Wexford abandoned; officers, yeomen, magistrates, some flying to Duncannon—others crowding the ships, and some, ruffians who never spared a life, begging their own—flinging themselves on the magnanimity of the 'rebels.' Thank heaven, the 'rebels' could afford to be magnanimous!

The united forces entered. On the old walls and towers which silently chronicle the incursions of piratic Dane, and Anglo-Norman robber, the green flag is proudly reared—green ribbons and branches of trees decorate the windows of almost every house—the prisons are unbarred—and there Bagnal Harvey, giving protection to many who would a few hours before have dashed his brains out, is proclaimed, by the victorious 'rebels,' Commander-in-chief of the army of the people."

The description of Vinegar Hill is equally true, beautiful, and touching:

"Vinegar Hill is a beautiful eminence standing directly between Enniscorthy and the river Slaney, which winds round its base to the town. On the top of this hill stands a dilapidated stone building, indicating, as it were, in its shattered strength and ruined prominence, the fortunes of the day which has fixed its name and pictured its figure immortally on the pages of history. Here the forlorn hope of the Wexford Insurgents are collected; a great mass of men and women, with about two thousand arms, and, as Hay tells us, only two charges for cannon, of which they possessed a few disabled pieces.

Against them Lieutenant-General Lake has mustered twenty thousand regular troops.

As day broke, Lake disposed his attack in four regular columns; and with the dawn, bomb-shell and cannon opened on the desperate heroes on the hill. With a cheer of defiance they return the fire. Now streams of shell and grape poured on the four sides of the insurgent position; every volley, like a cataract roaring through the gorges of a mountain side, was answered by a wild mocking echo by the granite-souls it broke upon. Gradually and cautiously the troops advanced up the slopes—nearer and nearer, like a serpent tightening its coils upon its victim. The peasantry maintain their fire until the flint is useless from want of powder. But there is that in these men's souls which is ignited by an immortal spark. The leaders exhort the men, and with that greater eloquence of action, incite them with examples of daring and defiance. Closer and closer the English troops advance—now the women—wives, mothers, daughters, sisters, forgetful of all, save that inherent spirit of heroic guardianship over man, which is their gift from Heaven, and which is ever the purer when the danger is blackest—now these women dash through the insurgent ranks to the sides of those dear relatives whom they are to cheer to victory, or soothe in death.

* * * * * * *

In a torrent of flame and smoke, men and women, the leaves and branches of the insurgent forest are swept down the ruthless currents of devastation and death."

A chapter entitled "The Trail of the Menapii," is a thrilling lyric narrative of the intermittent struggle—now fierce, then faint, at times a whisper of discontent, and at other times a storm of vengeance—which, ever since they first set foot on the Wexford coast, has harassed the adventurers from England, their children, and their descendants, even to the latest hour noted in this book. A succession of gallant spirits leap up, here and there, from the broken outline of the narrative, like mountain pines along the rugged ridges of the Australian Alps, and sprightly anecdotes, like fresh wild flowers, bud from about their roots, and with a profusion of sweets and graces veil the ruggedness of their growth.

For instance, we find it pleasantly told of Kearns, one of the committee for the protection of the town of Wexford, and afterwards conspicuous for his chivalry in the defence of Enniscorthy, that he was actually "strung up" in Paris during the ascendancy of Robespierre; but being a large, heavy man, the lamp-iron from which he was suspended, gave way, till his toes reached the ground. In this state, he was cut down by a physician, under whose care he recovered, to die upon the surer scaffold of the Reign of Terror maintained by Castlereagh, Cornwallis, and Carhampton.

An accurate and graceful memoir is given of William Aylmer, who so ably conducted the campaign in Kildare. "His career at the head of his little army," the author prettily and justly observes, "was a bijou of valor and enterprise." Having been permitted to leave the country, shortly after the battle of Ovidstown, which he fought with singular skill and boldness, Aylmer entered the Austrian service. The distinction he won there secured for him the honor of escorting Maria Louisa, on her return from Paris to Vienna, on the downfall of Napoleon. Accompanying the Emperor of Austria, on the occasion of the visit of the Allied Sovereigns to London, in 1814, the Prince Regent requested him to remain in England, and instruct the British cavalry in the sword exercise. He did so, his immediate pupils being the 10th Hussars; and in token of his admirable services, received from the Prince the present of a handsome sword. All this flows on in a full and sparkling current through the earlier pages of this little history of two epochs of the national life of Ireland, both of which, inspired with the same ideas, differ from each other in their historic aspect—the first being boldly military in its tone, attitude, and action—the latter signalizing itself more by the poetry, rhetoric, and religion of revolution, than by its audacity, martyrdoms, and conflicts.

We have often seen the handsome sword which Aylmer received from his gracious enemy and patron, the Prince Regent. Painstown, the beautiful old home of the Aylmers, is little more than three miles from Clongowes College. The sword is there enshrined. The boys enacted plays at Clongowes every Christmas. The Prince Regent's sword was sent for, whenever any great potentate or brigand was in preparation for the stage. The last time we saw it was at the close of '35, when the "Merchant of Venice" was performed. Enoch Lewis Lowe, recently Governor of the noble little old State of Maryland, sustained the part of Bassanio, and along with a pair of pasteboard buskins, wore the sword in question.

Having thus rapidly glanced at the first epoch learnedly and lovingly treated in this volume, we reserve the second epoch, that of Forty-Eight, for the ensuing number of the News.

EXHIBITION OF THE NATIONAL ACADEMY OF DESIGN.

NO. 1—LANDSCAPE.

The space to which the Academy is at present confined for exhibition purposes is at once a perfect God-send for the eyes of visitors, and an indirect means of reflecting more than the usual credit on the committee of selection. The want of a more spacious gallery has played the critic in a most judicious manner, and excluded, with a very reasonable excuse, many square yards of glare and ghastliness. The consequence is, that in the present exhibition the critical eye is comparatively safe from the rude assault of staring portraits, or the ruder dazzle of stiff, raw and gaudy "draperies," which, from their too usual characteristics of bad drawing, stony rigidity, and solid brick-dustiness of hue, might well be termed fabrics, in any but a dry-goods sense.

We say comparatively safe, for unhappily the eye is not entirely so. There are some as thoroughly execrable, stiff, raw, muddy and glaring combinations of color as ever spoiled canvas, in the present exhibition. Fortunately for both "artists" and visitors, the former (in most of those instances) were clearly not in good standing with the hanging committee, who consigned good and serviceable nails to an obscure altitude to support wretched apologies for art. If the smallness of the rooms is to be commended in having lacked accommodation for "more of the same sort," still an involuntary prayer rises for an extension of the galleries, so that these admitted horrors might be placed where even a telescopic vision could not encounter their agonizing surfaces.

It would be ungenerous to individualize; moreover, it would demand much more of our space to point out the horrors than to pay homage to the beautiful.

The chief failing, as is usual and to be expected, is in the figure school. As it is the highest branch of art, it is the most seldom reached; and too often we find that in the ratio of utter inability to perform, there exists the rampant desire to attempt. But more of the figure hereafter.

Let us for the present take refuge in what the landscape-painters have given us. They never, as a body, so outrage our sense of feeling or love of the beautiful as their less healthy-brained brethren. The landscape-painters generally, even for ever so short a period, once in twelve months seek the rural districts, and give us some reminiscence of the natural. The country air and exercise add to their strength, and clear their vision; and even if they do not sketch at all, they are becoming impressed with the necessities of their art. They see nature, they breathe freely; and dull indeed must the head and heart, and inverted the vision of the man be, whether landscape-painter or otherwise, upon whom the Hudson scenery leaves no life-long memories; whose nature, once shadowed by the Kaatskills, is not for ever enwrapped by the wooded glory of their glens, the rocky passion of their ravines and gorges, the sparkling buoyancy of their flashing cascades. Unfortunate must the wretch be, whose soul is beyond the admonishing influences of the Mohawk valley, the impressive beauty of the Susquehanna, or the eloquence of the Trenton falls.

The landscape-painter, if he but cross to Long-Island, spend a day on the hills between Gowanus and Flatbush, or in Westchester County, or even takes the ferry for Staten Island or Hoboken, finds much to revive his eye, and impress him with fresh lines of beauty, with the groupings of rocks and trees, with the endless exigencies of atmospheric effects. For this reason, we always find something to attract in any, however small, collection of landscapes.

In the present exhibition the landscapes have the chief charm for us. A few are really, to our mind, beautiful; and several very creditable, and full of promise. Kensett, Church, and Cropsey, are not so well represented as they have been in previous years; yet, there is always something to recommend in their works. William Hart has nothing to compare with his fine picture exhibited two years ago, called "Peace and Plenty;" nor Coleman anything so impressive as the "Curfew," exhibited (if we do not err) at the same time. Both, however, are very well represented. The latter, if not so impressive, has improved exceedingly in the handling, and there is a fine vein of poetry running through his productions. Shattuck is justly admired for his clear and truthful effects; and Durand still holds the position which his "June Shower" and "Forest Temple" gave him, in our mind.

Kensett, surely, must be a Hard Shell, if not politically, certainly pictorially—he so delights in both the study and appreciation of rocks. His "Franconia mountains" (125) exhibits his peculiarity in a very bold and characteristic manner. In many respects it is an excellent picture and at all points one that will attract attention. The masses of rock, especially in the light, to the left of the picture, portray a devoted study of the actual, which very actuality gives a character and a poetry to them in distinct condemnation of the popular and vulgar expression of "more poetry than truth," in anything one wishes to decry. The foliage is not so well painted as the rocks. It lacks the force and character of the latter—the study of which it would seem had somewhat stultified the buoyancy of touch so requisite to produce natural effects of the former.

"Landscape" (137), by F. E. Church, N. A., is like a dream. There is a self-satisfied, happy warmth over the scene that insinuates itself into or suffuses the vision of the beholder with a congenial, half-enchanted sensation of calm happiness, which, by degrees, induces a reverie at once anxious and resigned: resigned under the blissful resources of the scene, anxious lest we may not be able to fill at once the extent of peace and joy opened on this small and sunny canvas. We would like to nestle amid those wild-flowers and ferns in the shadow of the old stump and beneath the tangled tapestry of vines and creepers about it, and float on the Falernian pages of Horace—quaff the bubbling syllables of Anacreon, or, mayhap, con some of the crisp, short pastorals of the quaint English tongue, when it was some couple of hundred years younger than it now is. We could the better appreciate Keats, too, in such a nook, and Hood's plea for the Midsummer Fairies would read admirably here. Or, perchance, in the gorges of yon mountains bathed in glory, we might select some spot overlooking the valley; and there, with one of Shakspere's radiant comedies, feel more truthfully the beauty of the scene below us, and the exuberance of the characters in hand. There is some very delicate painting in, and a judicious effect over, this picture.

"Chenango River Scenery" (148), by J. F. Cropsey, N. A., has some fine bits of coloring, and exhibits a marked improvement in the clouds. They are less metalic and more cloudy than is usual with this painter. The land patches on the hill-slopes are good; the brushwood and shrubs in the fore ground admirable, showing evident pains-taking. The out lines of the trees in the fields that flank the river are hard, and their coloring is, if we may use the term, noisy. They hurt the eye from their loud effect; and, moreover, the tone of those which may be supposed at some four or five hundred yards distance is quite as high as that one to the right nearly in the immediate fore-ground. Probably, after the eye has dwelt for some time on the quiet effulgence of Church's landscape (137), the outlines and tints of this picture appear hard and less natural. It is quite possible that one cannot do full justice to either by looking at them alternately.

Cropsey's "Evening at Paestum" (77), has a classic beauty equal to a line of Virgil. The glorious ruins and the brooding marshes have a grand, solitary keeping, and a significant eloquence. All that remains of the Lucanian city of roses—of the city famous, as Virgil tells, for that the roses bloomed twice a year, Biferique rosaria Pœsti—now an expanse of stagnation, weeds, and ruins—this little gem conveys the mute chronicle of decay, in its rich, lonely and ravaged beauty. It is full of simple excellence and suggestiveness.

"The Brook at Idlewild" (113), by T. Addison Richards, has a pleasing effect, though, on examination, the coloring is not sufficiently decided.

No. 79, "Meadows at Glenmary," by the same artist, though but a sketch, is, to our mind, much better. There is a firmer and more artistic touch evident. It is unpretending and truthful.

"Near Squam Lake," New Hampshire (150), by David Johnson, is an elegant and effective picture. Reminding us somewhat of the effects produced by Cropsey, there is a more subdued feeling, and a more reliable sympathy with nature in the color. The picture embraces an expansive scene, in which the lines are very harmoniously disposed of. The handling is clean and artistic, and the general impression one of satisfaction.

"A Symbol" (43), by A. P. Durand, P. N. A., is accompanied, in the catalogue, with the lines from Goldsmith's Deserted Village:

> "As some tall cliff, that lifts its awful form,
> Swells from the vale and midway cleaves the storm,
> Tho' round its breast the rolling clouds are spread,
> Eternal sunshine settles on its head."

This picture, as we have stated, fully sustains the reputation which we feel proud in acknowledging as the merited trust of the President of the Academy. The scene, as may be imagined from the quoted lines, presents the stalwart brow of a mountain towering in sunny solitude above the mantling thunder-clouds about its breast. The landscape under the shadow of those clouds is seen in the lurid obscurity of the rain storm. De Burtin, in his admirable, though somewhat too trite treatise on pictures, says: "I do not condemn absolutely the effects which I call factitious, and of which nature offers no real example, but which the painter has imagined possible to be seen, just as he imagines fabulous beings. Nevertheless, I prefer always that he keep to nature herself, which furnishes him with subjects sufficiently striking." De Burtin, in both instances, would have reason to admire this picture; both as regards what we may term a factitious effect, and a thorough keeping with nature. Any pictorial representation of a storm, must, to a considerable extent, be a factitious effect, in so far as it would be impossible to paint it "from nature." It may be observed, studied—but the actuality cannot be daguerreotyped, as it were, like a tree, a castle, or a group of rocks. The artist must read it as it runs. Mr. Durand has given us a glorious reminiscence of a storm, and a very truthful view of nature under its effects. The clouds, rounded with sunshine at the top, and rugged with thunder underneath; the lurid subjugation of the distant atmosphere; the agitation of the landscape beneath the wild and concentrated anger of the clouds; the character of the lake rippling its disturbed weakness to the shore; the feeling of the foliage in the distance; the resigned character of the valley; and the swaying of the trees in the left of the foreground (for we see and hear them croon and sway); their impotent expostulations, so to speak, elaborately fills up the sensations and necessities of such a moment as the artist has depicted. The few gleams of sunshine that, striding over the limits of the storm, strike upon the rocks in the foreground, gives them an animation which acute observers of nature will thoroughly appreciate. They speak to such as the harbingers of the cessation of the aeriel conflict. The entire feeling of the picture is that of combined grandeur, poetry and truth. There is an elevation of sentiment in it that fixes a lesson in the mind of the beholder, and which may be applied faithfully to the experiences of human existence. How many men, with sunshine on the brow, have the storm within. Mr. Durand has not only given a striking effect, but filled up the details with a deeply appreciative study of nature. There is an Ossianic grandeur in the cavalcade of clouds, proceeding with steps of thunder, that cannot be forgotten. We hear them roll, and tramp, and roar like the gathering of the sons of Fionn. It is really a noble picture.

We cannot praise too much the coloring of William Hart's "Rydal Water" (185)—it is so healthy and natural in tone. It is neither hard, on the one hand, nor as if painted on a blanket, on the other. It seems as though the artist did not attempt to test his powers in the coloring, but could not help being natural. There is a mellow force, a gracefulness of outline, a consistency of atmosphere, and hill, and tree, of lake, and cattle, that is ever paramount in nature.

"Midsummer" (184), by T. Coleman, would almost strike one as being by the painter of the preceding, but that it lacks the force of color. The handling is much alike.

No. 2, "Blossoming—Grass-time," by the same artist, illustrating the lines:

> "Girls, like waders in the surf
> Beyond the brook, waist deep
> In meadow sweet," is a glorious little picture; very careful, rich, elaborate, and perfectly Tennysonian in its feeling.

A "View in Wales" (15), by William G. Wall, of Dublin, is a spirited and bold effort. The old trees and broken ground are very effective; also, the mountains half-wooded, half-cultured, sustain the back-ground well.

The sale of Mr. J. F. Cropsey's Paintings took place on the morning of the 10th instant. We were, unfortunately, unable to attend, and owe the following facts of the sale to the Daily Times:

The room was opened at nine, but as the sale was not to commence untill eleven o'clock, the interval afforded an agreeable opportunity of examining the collection. The largest, and, with a few exceptions, the most attractive pictures were the "Coast of Genoa," the "Spirit of War," and the "Spirit of Peace;" "Niagara Falls," "Catskill Clove," "Recollections of Italy," and the "Nameless River." The admiration expressed of these and a number of sketches in oil, promised a spirited rivalry when they should be under the hammer of the auctioneer, and the promise was fulfilled. The first offering was a modest sketch entitled, "Black Mountains, Lake George," which was sold for $15. "Little Fall, Passaic River," went at $16, and was followed by "Oak Tree," a sketch, at $22 50. The next was a fine painting, 50 by 33, the "Nameless River." This had been a favorite before the sale began, and the bidding was spirited until $245 was reached, at which it was knocked down to Mr. ——. Several smaller pictures were next sold, among them a "Pine Tree" and a "Study of Rocks," which were bought by the Rev. Dr. Bellows, the first at $19 and the second at $30. "Cicero's Tomb," a very good pencil sketch, was sold for $8. The next picture was "Recollections of Italy," 64 by 43, and one of the very best in the collection. It was sold to Mr. Douglas at $370. "Chepstow Castle," 27 by 18, was sold to Mr. Bellows for $165; and "Lake Winnipiseogee—Moon rising," brought $140. "Clove —A Storm Scene in the Catskill Mountains," 48 by 60, went to Mr. Tibbitts, at $391. The next of special interest was "Niagara," 72 by 48, a very desirable painting. The view is taken from below, on the American side, looking down Niagara River, from which the Cave of the Winds is partly visible under the first sheet of water. The bidding for it was lively, and it was finally sold to Major Carney for $510. "Loch Achray and Benvenue" brought $225, and Dr. Bellows gave $39 for a very pretty Newport scene. He also purchased "Hon. Mark Spencer's House" for $28, "A Jewish Captive" for a smaller sum, and a "Scene at Pæstum" for $41. He obtained "Twilight" for $25, a "Study of Foliage in the Forest of Fontainebleau" for $75, a "Scene in Scotland" for $61, and, besides securing a number of others of less value, carried off the artist's pride, the "Coast of Genoa," 72 by 48, for $500, a sum generally esteemed much less than the real value of the painting. In fact, the Rev. Doctor had himself offered $600 for it before the auction sale began. The "Spirit of War" and the "Spirit of Peace," two paintings of rare excellence, were sold to Mr. John Rutherford for $600 each. They are large—67 by 43. The expression and picturesque incidents of the Feudal Times furnish the material for the "Spirit of War." A lurid morning dawns upon a baronial castle and sterile landscape. Beacon fires blaze from the summit of the mountains, announcing the approach of an enemy, and startling from their revelry the baron's vassals. War, which brings in its train unhappiness and carnage, finds an expression in the burning hamlet, the unhappy mother, the frightened flock, and the steel-girt men bent on deeds of blood. In the "Spirit of Peace," the incidents of war finds a place. Palm and olive trees spring up; and in their midst, overlooking all, stands the Temple of Peace; from its altar ascends incense. Commerce, drawing domestic and pastoral happiness, finds suitable expressions in the various figures, cultivated fields, and growing city. Some fifty others, of smaller size and less value, were sold rapidly, at from $10 to $100 each. As a whole, we presume the sale was satisfactory to the artists; for although some of the largest paintings did not sell for their value, many of the smaller ones brought a very good price. The drawings, sketches, and engravings in the portfolios, went at a great sacrifice; but notwithstanding this, about $8,000 was realized from the sales.

THE MESILLA VALLEY.

FROM THE NOTE-BOOK OF AN IRISH SURGEON. NO. II.

The Apache Indians are a numerous tribe, capable of furnishing perhaps 4,000 warriors. They are divided up into various bands, who occupy separate districts, all, however, converging and centering in the mountain district known as the "Copper Mines," lying 40 miles west of the Rio Grande, and embracing the head waters of the Gila. There, in deep and fertile valleys, surrounded by mountains which receive and retain, during many months of the year, the winter snows, the Apaches proper have their head quarters. There they have erected their winter houses, keep their squaws and children, and rarely leave until the spring is well advanced. They plant corn, and raise watermelons, beans, frijoles, and a few simple vegetables. As soon as their labor of spring planting is over, they get them ready for forays, march down in bands southward into Mexico, or eastward into the fertile bottoms of the Rio Grande. The raids in Northern Mexico are annual, and more property is destroyed by them than is removed. A numerous band will enter a frontier town or village of Sonora and seize on all the horses and mules that can be caught, then a Mexican woman or two, and a few children. Corn and beans are the articles of food chosen, and whatever fine wearing apparel that may attract their eye. Whatever male inhabitants they can seize, they kill; but, indeed, few opportunities occur in that way, for, to do the Mexican justice, as soon as he sees an Apache, even a single one, he takes it for granted that a whole band is along, and immediate flight appears his only salvation. Rarely, indeed, is resistance offered, and still more rarely retaliation taken.

The women, taken occasionally, escape, but more usually become squaws; while the children are brought up as slaves, and afterwards sometimes incorporated into the tribe. The villages of Sonora, and indeed of all north Mexico, are of a mixed class, two-third Indian tribes domesticated or enslaved, and one-third Mexican, i. e., mixed Spanish and Indian. The Papago Indians, who have several villages in Chihuahua, suffer considerably from the depredations of Texan and New Mexican tribes, especially from the Lipans and Camanches. It is rarely, indeed, that they suffer from the Apaches, for the Apaches and the State of Chihuahua have treaties of amity, and the inroads and robberies of the former are now confined to the State of Sonora. When committing their depredations they show some cunning, for they scarcely ever so utterly pillage a town as to leave it uninhabitable; nor so destroy every improvement as to check enterprise next year. They appear to take all the surplus produce, and leave the poor villagers to hope that next year they may be better off. The waste of property at times, however, is immense, for the Indians, not satisfied with running off horses and stealing what they want, kill and wound with their arrows, as many cattle as they can, to show their hatred and contempt for the Mexicans, for whom they show no sort of fear, and contemplate with pleasure every opportunity afforded for taking the life of a Mexican. This hatred is inherent and hereditary, and not easy to be accounted for. Old tradition hints, that when the Spanish Viceroys held sway in New Mexico they conquered the Apache tribes and brought the majority of them into servitude—a condition galling to them, inasmuch as they were scattered about among the villages on the Rio Bravo. After repeated revolts, they succeeded in gaining their freedom, and retreated into their mountain fastnesses, breathing eternal vengeance upon their ancient bond-masters. They cling with wonderful tenacity to the district of the Copper Mine Mountain. After the cession of New Mexico to this country, and the establishment of military posts on the Rio Grande, it was found necessary to check the Apache depredations, for which purpose Fort Webster was established in the very heart of their country. This kept them in awe for some years. The old copper mines, rich not only in copper, but, it is said, also in silver and gold, which were two hundred years ago worked by the Spaniards, were now re-opened by American enterprise, and for a while was an undertaking crowned by moderate profits, and would have been no doubt an ultimate source of wealth to the miners and the territory; but the alteration of military rulers in New Mexico, and the consequent removal of Fort Webster, nipped the undertaking in the bud. As soon as the troops occupying Fort Webster were removed, the Apaches took possession and demolished the buildings, lest the place might be re-occupied. They then intercepted the supplies of provisions destined for the mining district, and gave notice to those working the mines that they, the Indians, did not wish their territory to be occupied by Americans; told them they should leave, and gave them three weeks' time to close up the concern, at the end of which time they again notified them, and helped them to depart by lending them mules to carry away their goods and chattels. Since then the mines have been deserted and the region left to the undisturbed possession of the Indians.

In this incident we must admire the conduct and forbearance of the Indians towards intruders; no doubt the proximity of United States forts taught them the policy of humanity—a policy which no amount of experience has ever taught American adventurers: for, let the case be reversed—let the American be the occupant, and the Indian the intruder, and the rifle, without previous notice, or help to remove, would be the only remedy thought of. But little, however, can be said in favor of the Apache Indian. The love of freedom is his only virtue; in all else he is vicious and degraded. Cultivating the ground only as a necessity, and not from choice, the tribe is dependant mostly for support upon the number and extent of robberies they commit; their wars are wars of theft, when offensive; and in consequence of their thefts; when defensive. The horse is their great prize, to which every thing else is secondary. To obtain a horse, to sell a horse, and to eat horse, is about their sole occupation, and their whole livelihood and occupation may be summed up in the phrase, "they are a nation of horse thieves." The Ticarillo Apaches, the Mescalero Apaches, and the Tonto Apaches, are other branches of the main tribe. The Jicarillos living farther north, the Mesculerios about the Mesilla Valley and Western Texas, and the Tontos on the Gila and Salinas rivers.

The Mescaleros, so called from their living on the roots of the Mescal, a plant of the aloe family which grows in great abundance on the plains, and yields in early spring on its young stalk-bud a great amount of nutriment, having, when baked in the ashes, a taste somewhat resembling cabbage, and which also yields a saccharine juice, from which a coarse sugar is made. These Indians also congregate about villages when the crops begin to ripen, and at night-time may be found treading their silent and cautious way through the rows of corn, robbing the stalks of the finest ears; and, as they are intimidated by the presence of the forts in the valley, they no longer steal with violence, but only by craft. Having started from the valley to make an exploration of the mineral resources of the Organ Mountains, a range lying immediately east of the valley about 14 miles, and towering some 2,500 to 3,000 feet above the valley level, itself being over 4,000 feet above the sea, it was our fortune to encounter a large band of this tribe. It was August, and harvest time along the river; and these Indians had collected from the valleys and plains around, whither they had been on hunting and stealing expeditions, and had encamped at the mouth of a pass in the mountains known as Soldao Cañon. A stream of water and a broad patch of good grass at the mountain slope had determined their position. Returning home after an absence of a few days from our camp at Fort Filmore in the valley, as we debouched from the Cañon, we came suddenly on their watch-fire. Being observed, of course, we had to go onward, and as a treaty existed between the Mescaleros and the military of the Fort, we had little to fear; a couple of hundred yards brought our small party of three into the midst of them. Their camp numbered about 200 men, women and children; there were thirty lodges, or wigwams, spread out. Most of them made by stretching limbs of trees, ten to twelve feet long, upright in the ground, and bringing them together at the top; around the centre of these pillars was stretched, in most instances, a skin, leaving the top open, and, also, the poles bare within a foot of the ground. Instead of skins, some few had cotton or tent canvas, and a few were made of fresh boughs without any covering, the fresh leaves answering the purpose. In these tents were the squaws reclining, for it was in the afternoon and heat of the day. The children, male and female, were bathing promiscuously in the little stream. The younger braves were indulging in their favorite game of pitching the spear through a rolling hoop, and in this exercise they show wonderful expertness—the spear being thrown twenty to thirty-five yards underhand. The older men lounged in the sun. We were stopped and questioned in Spanish, by the Chief, as to where we came from, whither going, and what were about. This being answered satisfactorily, and learning we were returning to the Fort, we were enjoined to tell the "Señor Commandante," as the Colonel of the Fort was styled, that they were very good friends to the Americans, had not stolen, or done any wrong, and then left us to pursue our way. In a few days after a deputation from their camp was at the Fort, to receive the stipulated allowances of corn and pork, granted in consideration of the alliance. Some of these young men were beautiful specimens of physical health and strength—none of them very tall, nor thick set—but well proportioned and round-limbed. The only dress worn was the breech-cloth and the sandal, but few indulged in moccasins, and the blanket is never is never worn by the Indian at home. The features of the face are not good: the nose narrow and flat, the chin usually prominent, and the whole expression anxious and sinister. The hair thick, black, and generally cropped in front, leaving a band on each side to descend over the ears. The women, unless very young, are uglier than the men, and, as usual among Indian tribes, do all the work of the house and nearly all that of the farm.

We have already alluded to their love of the horse. Next to the Camanches, the Apaches are probably the best Indian horsemen of the continent. The native Californian is the best horseman in North America and probably in the world, and after him come these Indians; many of them ride without saddle or stirrup, a blanket answering for a seat, and they often guiding the beast by a single rein. Mexican bits are much used, which are strongly made, but the effect is cruel to the horse. The bow and arrow is their favorite weapon, although they occasionally use the rifle, and occasionally their services are called into play by our Government to subserve the ends of justice. In the summer of last year, one McElroy left Tucson and the villages of Northern Sonora, where he had been making a livelihood by gambling, and entered the Mesilla Valley, ostensibly to drive a trade in horse and mule purchase; he was accompanied by a couple of Indian youths, apparently of Cherokee descent. They moved about for several months from one town to another, and numberless thefts of mules and horses followed their arrivals at each place. Tired of this slow mode of enrichment, they thought of making a bold strike by robbing the Custom's department, which they had reason to know contained money. They broke into the office at night and cleared it out, taking nearly ten thousand dollars. They immediately "put out" for the West, where they came from. As soon as the theft was known, and their escape, a small detachment from Fort Fillmore was sent after them. Along with the detachment was sent also a small band of Apaches, to hunt up the trail of the robbers and guide them correctly. They overtook McElroy and his associates after three days journey at the small well called Ojo de Inez, a distance more than one hundred miles west of the Rio Grande. Having travelled thus far safely, they had stopped to recruit their animals, and deemed the hilly character of the country a sufficient protection against surprise.

In this they were deceived. The skill of the Indian in tracking a trail is deemed unerring, and in the evening they were surprised; not however sleeping nor wholly unprepared, for the pursued took to the hills which inclose the little glen in which the spring lies. There it may be supposed that they thought to hide, among the numerous small hills and rocky eminences which rise up all round, until night would favor their escape; but hunted up by the Apaches, and knowing that death awaited them, even if taken alive, they resolved to fight it out, and they sold their lives dearly before they parted with them. Five Apaches were killed by their rifles before they fell, and as they resisted all overtures, they met their fate on the spot. Most of the plunder was recovered.

This McElroy was one of whom too many exist in those districts not yet fully civilized. Men of good education and fair manners, totally devoid of any principle—whose life is devoted to the acquisition of riches, without scruple or regard to any law human or divine. In the Mexican towns the love and practice of gambling is so strong that inducements are offered thus to such men to acquire enough to live indolently, yet comfortably; and the outcasts from California and Texas now find a retreat in the frontier towns of Chihuahua and Sonora, where by the stoppage of United States trooops and parties, much money is left among the natives, which speedily changes hands and is found in the pockets of these loafers. Always armed, they are ready for quarrel; and fandangos or dances are occasionally scenes of murder. They may be arrested by the Mexican authorities, but they generally manage to get off or escape, and are some time after found in a neighboring town, carrying on the old occupation.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

A Lady's Second Journey round the World. By Ida Pfeiffer. Harper & Brothers.
The Teacher. Moral Influences for the Instruction and Government of the Young. " "
Life of Napoleon III. By Edward Roth; Boston. Donahoe.
Democratic Review. April. Lloyd & Campbell.
Private Life of an Eastern King. By a Member of the Household of the King of Oude. Redfield.
The Day-Star of American Freedom; or, The Birth and Growth of Toleration in Maryland, &c. By George Lynn Lachlan Davis. Scribner.
Aspen Court: A Story of our own Time. By Shirley Brooks. Stringer & Townsend.
The Inventor. Law, Haskell & Co.

Literary and Artistic News.

There is now in possession of a gentleman residing at Cheviot, near Cincinnati, an English Bible printed in 1594. It is proably either the Geneva or Cranmer's version. It is a "breeches" Bible—so named from the translation of Gen. iii, 7, where the word in our version rendered "aprons" is translated "breeches." It is a polyglot, and is furnished with short notes. A psaltery is prefixed to the volume, and at the end is added a metrical version of the Psalms, with a few other hymns for particular occasions. It is embellished with several initial letters and quaint devices at the end of some of the books. The title-pages of both the Old and New Testaments are similarly bordered with curious figures of lions, scroll-work, flowers, &c., and that of the latter is pasted on.

The title-page of the former reads thus:—"The Bible, translated according to the Ebrew and Greeke, and conferred with the best translations in divers languages. With most profitable annotations upon all the hard places, and other things of great importance, as may appeare in the Epistle to the Reader. And also a most profitable Concordance for the readie finding out of anything in the same contained. [Then follows a text from Joshua i, 8.] Imprinted at London by the Deputies of Christopher Barker, Printer to the Queen," &c.

A correspondent of the Newark Advertiser, writing to the American artists of Dusseldorf, informs us, that Leutze has just finished a reduced copy of his great celebration of Milton, and is now engaged in studies for a picture of the battle of Bunker Hill. Mr. Washington—a grandson of a brother of the Pater Patriæ, Mr. Irving, of North Carolina—Mr. Philippe, of Brooklyn, Mr. Whitridge, a most successful landscape painter from Cincinnati, and three or four others, are there. Among the most promising pupils in sculpture is a step-son of Willis Hall. It is only fair to mention that Tioleman, a Swede, enjoys the first distinction among the European artists. He received one of the highest rewards for a celebrated historic painting, at the late Paris exhibition. The professors of the Academy are paid by the Prussian Government, and are held in high esteem. The artists live together, and their Club House, with its news, music, and refreshment rooms, is one of the most agreeable resorts in Germany.

The Union Observer says:—"The construction of the magnificent Hamilton College Telescope is nearly completed. It has been made under the charge and manipulation of Charles A. Spencer, of Canastota, who has already outstripped the world in the perfection of his microscopic glasses. This is Mr. Spencer's first attempt upon the enlarged surface of a thirteen-and-a-half-inch disc. England has no refractor mounted that equals it, nor is its equal to be found even in France, nor yet elsewhere in Europe, save only at Pulkova, in Russia. This latter telescope, and that at Cambridge, Mass., are its only superiors. "Twenty years ago," says Prof. Mitchell, "if it had been announced that a thirteen-and-a-half-inch glass was to be set up in America, it would have startled the whole scientific world."

Since Mr. Everet's speech acquired so large a hold upon the public mind, that gentleman has received a proposition from a rhetorician of some note to relieve him of the task of delivering it. This unassuming gentleman represented that he was perfect in his oratorical acquisitions—voice, gesture, intonation, "good emphasis and good discretion," and could impart to the eulogy that grace and effect in which he thought Mr. Everett was deficient. He only stipulated for one-half of the proceeds as a reward for his disinterested services, Mr. Everett to receive the other half, and the whole of the accumulating fame.

The Sultan has authorized the publication of a journal in the Arabic language, in order to supply the intellectual wants of the tribes inhabiting Syria, Egypt, and all that part of the empire where Arabic alone is spoken. This journal which is to be called Mirat ul Ahval, (the Mirror of the People,) will appear once a week, and will be conducted after the manner of the Turkish journal, Djéridéi Havadis.

Cornelius, the German artist, has completed a picture, "The Last Judgment," the total height of which is ninety-six feet, and that of the principal figures seventeen feet. The artist is said to have treated the subject with great skill, and has introduced 128 figures in every possible variety of grouping.

Wm. Gilmore Simms has been lecturing in Savannah on the "Ante-Colonial History of the South." He holds that a race whose origin was to be traced either to the Northmen, Irish, or Welsh, had inhabited Georgia and Carolina several centuries before the advent of Columbus.

The friends of Col. T. B. Thorpe, well known as the author of "The Bee Hunter," will regret to learn that he now lies dangerously ill at his residence in Brooklyn. The Times says, it is not probable that he will be able to leave his house in some time, even though he should recover from his illness.

The most noticeable article in the last Blackwood is one called "Biography Gone Mad," in which the recent Memoirs of Horace Greeley and James Gordon Bennett are reviewed with bitter personality.

A number of artists headed by Mr. Elliott, have tendered Mr. Keller—proprietor of the Tableaux Vivants—a complimentary benefit which will come off an Saturday.

Miss Bremer writes that her new work, "Hertha," will not be ready for publication until about the 1st of May. The American edition will be issued simultaneously with the English and Swedish editions.

Bibles printed in China will shortly reach Amoy, in the neighborhood of which they will be prudently disposed of by two native colporteurs employed by the Glasgow Bible Society.

In 1854, there were printed in Russia 861 works in Russian, and 451 in foreign languages. There are 85 printing offices; 45 of them in St. Petersburgh.

By request of the Synod of Illinois, Rev. Dr. Bergen, the oldest minister of the Synod, is now engaged in writing a history of the Presbyterian Church in that State.

Lamartine will presently be delivered of a new volume of Lyrics; also Victor Hugo of his "Contemplations."

Hepworth Dixon, the biographer of William Penn, has a life of Robert Blake in hand.

The English translation of Heinrich Heine's "Book of Song" is nearly ready.

Arago's Scientific Biographies are to be translated into English.

American Miscellany.

The New-York Post-Office.—When Mr. Postmaster Fowler came into office, about three years ago, there were but 43 city letter-carriers, and if the up-town resident got a letter from his down-town friend, in two days after it was posted, he was considered fortunate. Since that time the city post-office has been improving; although not so rapidly as the exigencies of the public required. Mr. Fowler is now about to inaugurate a new feature in the system, and to improve the business of letter collection and delivery in New York, very materially. At present there are four deliveries daily below Canal street; on and after the 15th of May there will be four deliveries and four collections daily to 54th street. At the same time, four Branch Post-Offices will be established, in the following locations: No. 129 Spring street, No. 439 Grand, No. 368 Eighth avenue, and No. 408 Third avenue. At these offices the carriers of the upper districts will assemble, receive their packages, and depart. Citizens may also there deposit letters for the mails of the city. Two express wagons will be employed to carry letters from the Office in Nassau street to the Branch Office, and to convey to the Main Office mail letters collected by the Branch Offices. The working force will be increased to 90 Letter Carriers and 20 Collectors, and 1,000 letter-boxes will be placed in safe and reliable places throughout the city. North of Maiden lane and Courtlandt street, the following rules are to be pasted upon each box:

NOTICE.

Letters deposited in this Box for the Mails, will be taken to the Post-Office without charge.

The Postage on Mail Letters to be delivered within the United States, must be pre-paid by stamps.

Letters for delivery in this city, south of 54th street, are charged TWO CENTS each, which includes the Carrier's fee, and may be pre-paid or not.

No Loose Money must be put in this Box. Money to pre-pay a Letter for city delivery, or for a foreign country, must be enclosed with the Letter in a sealed envelope and marked "Paid Letter."

This Box will be opened four times each day, viz:

Between 8½ and 10 A. M.	Between 1½ and 3 P. M.
Between 10½ and 12 A. M.	Between 7 and 8½ P. M.

And the Letters taken immediately to the Post-Office.

City Letters will be sent out by the Carriers which leave the Post-Office at 8 A. M., 1 P. M. and 4 P. M.

No Collection on Sundays. ISAAC V. FOWLER, P. M.

South of Maiden lane and Courtlandt street, the same notice is affixed to the letter-boxes, with the exception that the hours of the last collection are "between 5 and 6 1-2 P. M." instead of "between 7 and 8 1-2." This difference in time is necessary from the fact that in this locality but few stores are open after those hours.—N. Y. Tribune.

Mr. Joseph Curtis.—Another distingnished and venerable friend of education, Mr. Joseph Curtis, died on the 12th inst., aged 73 years 6 months and 7 days. He was a native of Newtown, Conn. He came to this city when 16 years old, and has resided here ever since. In 1820, he established the first Sabbath School ever instituted for free blacks; it was at Flatbush, Long Island. For twenty years of his prime he was an active fireman, and was the first to introduce the firemen's torch. He first introduced hose carriages to our city. He, too, first proposed and secured the use of our present ventilators for sewers.

For 33 years Mr. Curtis was a trustee of the Public School Society. Two years ago Mr. and Mrs. Curtis celebrated their golden wedding. Mrs. Curtis survives her partner. One of their daughters is the wife of Knickerbocker Clarke; another is the wife of Mr. Tellfair, of New Orleans. Another remains mains at home. Mr. Joseph Curtis, Jr., of Hyde Park, is his only son.

The Clay Festival Association celebrated on last Saturday night, in the Metropolitan Hotel, the eleventh of their annual fetes, and the seventy-eighth anniversary of the birth-day of Henry Clay. It was a brilliant affair. Hon. Erastus Brooks filled the chair. Among the invited guests seated on either side of him, were Ex-Governor Washington Hunt, Senator Putnam, Rev. E. H. Chapin, Henry Grinnell, Judge Greene, Joseph L. White, and several others.

A mass meeting of the citizens of New-Jersey has been held in Newark. The immediate object of the gathering was to effect a permanent State organization of the Republican Party. The attendance was large. The address and resolutions adopted declare that the people of New-Jersey will insist upon the admission of Kansas as a Free State. A State Convention for the election of Delegates to the Philadelphia Convention, is called to meet at Trentou on the 22d of May.

Almost a Duel.—The Daily News is responsible for the following story:—Some time since Mr. John McLeod Murphy became an applicant for the appointment of a United States Engineership from the General Government; and in order to procure the situation, he obtained letters of recommendation from most of the prominent "Softs" in this State. Thus armed he started for Washington, presented his credentials, and was on the eve of success, when Mr. Cochrane, Surveyor of the Port of New York, sent a telegraphic dispatch to the President, to the effect that: "Upon no consideration must Mr. Murphy be appointed until explanations could be made by mail." The next morning every member of the Cabinet received an autograph letter from Mr. Cochrane, making the strongest and most violent personal and political accusations against Mr. Murphy. This was followed up by a flying visit of the Surveyor to Washington, for the same purpose, it is supposed. Mr. Murphy, however, getting information of this attempt to "take the President in his arms," procured the assistance of a Southern friend, and wrote a note to Mr. Cochrane, in which he demanded that a "thorough and absolute retraction in writing should be made," or Mr. Cochrane must give that "satisfaction which one gentleman demands of another!" The Hon. John Kelly, from this city, as Mr. Cochrane's friend, took the letter of explanation to Mr. Murphy, in which every thing that reflected upon that gentleman was retracted. Subsequently, we understand, a similar letter was sent to every member of the Cabinet, also to the President; this it appears had the desired effect, and Mr. Murphy has received his appointment.

Mail Robberies in the West.—A regular system of mail robberies seem to have been planned and put into successful execution between this city and those of the Atlantic. We learn from Col. Armstrong, Postmaster at St. Louis, that the mail made up for Boston on the 26th January, the mail of the 27th of same month for Washington, and the mail of the 7th of March for Philadelphia, are all missing, and have fallen into the hands of robbers. The matter is one requiring instant investigation by the Post Office Department. These mails contained money and large amounts of drafts, and it seems strange that they should have been stolen without discovery by those having them in charge. From the moment that they leave the St. Louis Post Office they are in the charge of a mail agent. The agent from this city goes to Vincennes, where the mails are entrusted to another messenger, and so on until they reach their ultimate destination. These agents are employed for the special purpose of guarding and safely delivering the mails, and if the brass-lock bag, always containing the valuables and money, is missing, they ought to know what becomes of it. If they do not, the special agents appointed to watch over this department ought to set themselves to work to detect the depredators. These mails, all lost within the space of six weeks, shows a degree of negligence which is inexcusable. If the Department cannot rely upon either of these agents, we suggest the employment of some man who will find out the depredators. Our mails, ordinarily, pass from this city to Philadelphia and New York in three days, and the robbers, whoever they may be, must be pretty well posted up in order to accomplish their object so successfully.—St. Louis Republican.

Case of Wells.—In April, 1852, a man named Wells was convicted of murder in Washington city, and sentenced to be hanged. He was pardoned by President Fillmore, with the condition that he be imprisoned for life. A year ago an application was made to the Circuit Court for his discharge under a writ of habeas corpus, the prisoner's counsel, Charles L. Jones, Esq., assuming the broad ground that the pardon was absolute and the condition void. The Court refused the application and remanded Wells to the Penitentiary.

The case came before the Supreme Court on appeal. Justice Catron delivered an opinion sustaining the inferior Court, and saying the condition of the pardon was not the exercise of a new power, but merely the substitution of one punishment for another, and arguing that the pardoning power must be understood as it existed in England and in these Colonies prior to the formation of the Constitution.

Justice Curtis and Campbell concurring, were understood as assuming the writs of Error in criminal cases, not being permissible to the Supreme Court, it has no Jurisdiction in the premeses, and teerefore the case should be dismissed.

Justice M'Clean dissenting, argued that the example of England in matters of prerogative were not applicable to this country, the Executive being confined to positive law—in the absence of which, in this case, the conditional pardon was not sustainable.

Mr. S. M. Newson writes a letter to the N.Y. Herald a-propos of an article in the latter on Miunesota. He says: You give to Minnesota only 48,000 inhabitants, and place its property at $3,000,000. In this you are mistaken. Gov. Gorman, in his recent message, stated officially that the Territory contained 75,000 inhabitants, and that this information was derived from sources he knew to be correct. Eight months ago the census taken made a return of over 50,000, and since then there has been a rapid increase. Instead of putting down the amount of property in Minnesota at $3.000,000, it should be at least $8,000,000. In St. Paul alone, I doubt not, there is upwards of $3,000,000 of property.

Well Forgotten.—The Binghamton Democrat says:—"The London Telegraph, enumerating the American cities which the Britishers could take 'just as easy,' in case of war between the two countries, leaves out New Orleans altogether! We can't account for the omission, except on the ground that they took it in 1814, and do not think it necessary to take it over again.'

More About the Fruit.—The Peoria Republican of Saturday evening states that at the lowest calculation, one-third, and many think one-half, of the fruit trees in that section of the country, have been killed by the severe cold of the past winter.

A suit has been commenced at the St. Louis Common Pleas of Mrs. Mary A. Brand, widow, against Robert M. O'Blennis, for damage sustained by the murder of her husband, which she lays at 20,000.

The Ohio Legislature adjourned on the 11th, till the first Monday in January. The adjournment was to have taken place on the 9th, but was postponed in consequence of the press of business.

The County Poor-House and a number of barns and stables at Lancaster, Pa., were destroyed by fire on the 10th. Thirty-six horned cattle and four horses were consumed. The loss is heavy.

The Legislature of Ohio has just passed a law limiting the taxes levied by incorporated towns and cities for local purposes, to five mills on the dollar.

Flocks of wild geese are frequently noticed flying northward, showing that the climate at the south is getting too warm for them.

The New Orleans Picayune, giving a health report of the last week of March, says that the city continues excellently healthy,

MILITARY CORRESPONDENCE.

PREFATORY.

"War," says a modern military writer, "is the condition of this world. From man, to the smallest insect, all are at strife; and the glory of arms, which cannot be obtained without the exercise of honor, fortitude, courage, obedience, modesty and temperance, excites the brave man's patriotism, and is a chastening corrective for the rich man's pride."

If these qualities enter into the composition of the true soldier, which of them can we dispense from our estimate of the good citizen? Epaminondas, the citizen, gracefully accepting the civic office of Chief Scavenger of his native city, conferred on him by enemies jealous of his fame, is the same Epaminondas, who as the first soldier of his country, had signalized her prowess in arms by a series of triumphs unparalleled in her history before or after his epoch. "It is not," said he, "the office which confers lustre on the man, but the man who confers dignity on the office." Almost every condition of life has its peculiar difficulties and trials, which challenge in him who would surmount them, elements of character nearly allied to those which conduct to success in the "tented field." Courage! modesty! intelligence! perseverance!—words to conjure by. If such qualities are inculcated in the "school of the soldier," are they not eminently required in the school of the citizen also?

Besides, we do not find that in this world of the vaunted Nineteenth century, the propensity of the strong to crush and absorb the feeble is much "ameliorated," notwithstanding the periodical platitudes of "Peace Congresses," the sordid logic of Cottonocracy, or, though last not least, the soothing doctrines of "Moral force." Wars of aggrandizement, of ambition, of fierce rivalry are still made, as in the days of imperial Rome. Only, a flimsy pretense of vindicating the "interests of civilization" is now put forward to conceal the real purpose. Thus the deadly rivals of centuries unite with generous promptitude to stay the march of Russian "barbarism" over the arts and sciences, which have had their genial home in Constantinople! So, too, one of these allied powers continues her "civilizing" career in the East, by ousting, the other day, the King of Oude from his hereditary dominions. That monarch had been abusing, as we are informed, the confidence of his subjects and the responsibilities of his position by a long continued aberration from the paths of virtue; until England, in the "interests of civilization," exacted from him a pledge that he would reform. But, of course, he violated his pledge—to that degree that the "pledgee," mortified and disgusted by his want of principle, found herself once more compelled to interfere, which she did by turning him adrift, and summarily "annexing" his territories. A warning to Eastern Kings generally—what there is left of them—to keep on their good behavior.

Here is epitomized the histories of Poland, Hungary, Italy, Ireland. These several nationalities were trampled down, plundered, bound and gagged, because such was the stern requirement of "Civilization!" At least, if the statements of the London press are to be believed. And the grim dungeons of Spielburg, and fever swamps of Cayenne, are a practical proof of the danger of contradicting their assertions—except at a safe distance. So, with foul murder at its heart, and a ghastly lie on its lips, the crowned Despotism of Europe wages immemorial war on Freedom. Væ Victis!

But here, in this Republic, we may despise its falsehood and defy its hostility; here, where the possession of arms is one of the privileges of every citizen. To cultivate their use is not only our privilege but our sacred duty, if we would worthily fulfil the destiny of the Republic, and perpetuate the advantages we enjoy:

"Rights, cheaply earned with blood."

Thus acting, we may gradually approximate to the highest standard of citizenship at home, and afford such "aid and comfort" to suffering brothers abroad as legitimate opportunities may admit.

To foster the noble spirit which would acquire a knowledge of arms by a self-sacrificing attention to the duties of the drill-room and the parade, will be our ambition. To this task we, the writer intrusted with this department, affectionately devote ourselves, aiming at the motto for our criticism—"nothing extenuate, nor set down aught in malice."

THE SIXTY-NINTH REGIMENT AT THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

A brilliant feature, on the occasion of Mr. Meagher's lecture at the Academy of Music, on the evening of the 8th inst., was the appearance on the stage, in the rear of the proscenium, of the Sixty-ninth Regiment. Happening to arrive not more than half an hour before the time announced for the commencement of the lecture, we were enabled by great ingenuity and enterprise, to secure a couple of chairs and a nook in the second circle, which position being more elevated, commanded a better view of the scene than any which might be enjoyed from the dress-circle or parquette. Colonel Ryan and his officers had exerted themselves with commendable spirit to bring up the entire strength of the regiment; and although not more than four companies were fairly represented—Huston's, Corcoran's, Quinlan's, and the Faughs, under Lieut. Keating—their presence was creditable to the regiment as a body, and lent eclât to the occasion. Their band also—Shelton's—we must not omit to mention. Their performance of appropriate American and Irish national airs, during the evening, enhanced the interest of the scene.

There will be a battalion drill of this regiment on the 29th inst., at the city arsenal, to be conducted by the Colonel personally; the chief feature of which will be the manual of arms.

THE NINTH REGIMENT.

This regiment will receive due attention next week.

HIBERNIAN GREENS, PHILADELPHIA.

This company was organized in the early part of 1829, and made its first parade the following July, on the occasion of the Marquis Lafayette visiting the city. The company, at the time, was under the command of Capt. McKibbin, and contained fifty muskets. Messrs. Loughead, Gray, Mullin, Elsegood and Vandyke have successively held the captaincy. In the summer of 1838, they made their first excursion to Wilmington, Del.; where they were received by the Recorder and civic authorities. In the evening they were entertained in the City Hall, by the municipal government. The ensuing December, they were called into active service by the State, at Harrisburg, on the occasion of the buck-shot war, and composed part of the command of Major-General Patterson. In 1844, they were called out to suppress the riots occasioned by the burning of churches, and in 1849 assisted in quelling what were known as the Negro riots. The Hibernian Greens is the color company of the 2d Regt., 2d Brigade, First Division of the Pennsylvania Volunteers. The uniform of the company consists of a green coat, scarlet and gold facings, grenadier hats, sky-blue pantaloons, with red stripe. It is officered at present by Patrick O'Kean, Captain; David Walker, First Lieutenant; John Collins, Second Lieutenant. All of them have risen from the ranks. The company is in a very prosperous condition, and seems destined to attain an honorable old age.

IRISH VOLUNTEERS OF CHARLESTON, S. C.,

Celebrated their Seventy-Third anniversary on the 17th of March last. The precise time of incorporation we have not been able to discover, having frequently searched in vain their old statutes for that purpose, and no one now living being able to afford any satisfactory information. The company belongs to the 17th Regt. and 2d Division, S. C. Militia.

The names of the officers are—Edward Magrath, Captain, of Charleston, S. C.; William H. Ryan, First Lieutenant, ditto; James M. Mulvay, Second Lieutenant, of county Meath, Ireland; and Bernard O'Neill, Third Lieutenant.

The following is the uniform of the company: Black beaver hat, with two black patent-leather bands; harp in front; green willow feather in brass socket, with green cord; two green tresses on right, and one on left; black stock, blue cloth coat, with green breast, bound with white cassimere, with gold star thereon; three Palmetto buttons in centre of each skirt, bound with white cassimere; standing collar, slashed with gold lace, with Palmetto buttons thereon; green worsted epaulettes, with Palmetto buttons on shoulder, and a band of gold lace across epaulettes; three guilt Palmetto buttons on each arm, bound with white cassimere; white pants in summer; light blue satinet in winter, with white stripe down the side; black patent leather body-belt, with clasp in front. Corporal's dress, the same as privates, except that epaulettes are intermingled with gilt fringe. Sergeant's the same also, except the epaulettes, which are gilt with slender bullion. The company drill at least once a month, according to their rules; the Captain, however, having discretionary power to order drills when he sees proper, provided they do not exceed twice a week. The regular celebration days are—17th of March, the anniversary of the Company, the 8th of January, and excursions and maroons during the Spring.

The company did good service in the Indian war of '35–6, commonly called the Florida war; having volunteered their services as a Company, and conducted themselves most creditably during their term of service. Other service they must, from their length of standing, have rendered; but, unfortunately, we have not been able to learn it, either by "tale or history." Should we, however, learn, we shall publish the intelligence with much pleasure.

The Company's Colors.

Green with gold fringe. Device, mottoes, &c.:

Erin go Bragh.

Gentle when joked, fierce when provoked.

The wolf-dog.

Liberty on each side, supporting flag of United States, with harp between, surrounded by the shamrock.

Reverse:

Erin go Bragh,

American Eagle,

Holding in the beak a band, inscribed,

"Where Liberty dwells—there is my country;"

and connecting the arms and mottoes of South Carolina, with the harp between; the whole encircled with the shamrock.

THE REMAINS OF CAPTAIN KERRIGAN were borne on last Wednesday, the 9th instant, from his residence, corner of Thirty-sixth street and Sixth Avenue, with fitting obsequies, to their final resting-place in Calvary Cemetery. A large body of soldiery marched in the cortege. consisting principally of detachments from the Ninth Regiment, to which the deceased, as Captain of the Cavalry Troop known as Kerrigan's Dragoons, had been formerly attached; among which, we noticed the Irish Grenadiers, Captain Duffy; the Jackson Guard, Captain William O'Murphy, &c.; the whole under the command of Lieut.-Col. Kelly. The Sixty-Ninth were also represented by a strong detachment, under command of Major Robert Nugent. The Engineer Corps of the regiment, or at least a squad of them, were in advance, under command of Captain Lynch. We should not omit to mention the Emmet Guard, who were also in the line of march. The coffin containing the corpse, draped with the American flag, and surmounted with the sword and helmet of the deceased, lay in state in a beautiful hearse drawn by a pair of horses; after which his favorite mare was led in the procession, shrouded in black. Immediately surrounding the hearse, marched the members of his old troop, the Dragoons, (now attached to the Sixty-Ninth Regiment,) dismounted, and acting as pall-bearers; united with whom were the Guyon Cadets of the Ninth Regiment, under Captain Murphy, as the escort selected for that duty. Some few movements might not have been precisely in accordance with the regulations prescribed for such occasions—as, for instance, the position of the escort on the ground, and the manner of its reception of the corpse. The deceased was a captain, and the escort should have been formed in two ranks opposite to, and fronting his quarters, with shouldered arms and bayonets fixed. But the wretched condition of the streets in the vicinity, it is quite likely, disturbed the general regularity which characterized the proceedings. Among the military gentlemen present, we noticed Col. Halsey, of the Tenth, one of whose companies, under Capt. Kennedy, formed a part of the cortege; Lieut.-Col. Butler, of the Sixty-Ninth; Surgeon O'Donnell, Maj. Barry, Capt. Phelan, Capt. Corcoran, and others. The remarkable extent of the civic portion of the procession bore testimony to the popular respect for the memory of the deceased. On arriving at the Cemetery, the funeral service was performed by the Rev. Mr. Hennessy. The coffin was then lowered into the grave, over which three rounds of musketry were fired with creditable precision by Captain Murphy's escort. Thus consigned to his narrow bed, with military pomp and ceremonial, the last honors were fittingly rendered to the deceased by his late companions in arms.

UNITED STATES ARMY.

The following sentences of courts-martial have been just published from the Adjutant-General's Office, Washington:—William A. Newman, military storekeeper at Watertown, Mass., to be dismissed the service for corruption in office.

John V. Dubois, Second-Lieutenant, Regiment Mounted Riflemen, to be suspended from rank and pay one month, and confined to the limits of his post, Carlisle Barracks, Penn., for the same time, for disobedience of orders.

Joseph Plaisted, private, company B, Regiment of Mounted Riflemen, near San Antonio, Texas, convicted of a violation of the ninth article of war, in striking a superior officer, sentenced to be shot; which sentence, by order of the President of the United States confirming the proceedings, dated April 2, 1856, is remitted, for reasons therein stated.

Advices to the 23d of February state that Lieut. Johnson, tried by court-martial, was acquitted, and that the case of Major Blake had been postponed. Lieuts. Clitz and Morrison, of the 3d Infantry, had arirved from the States with recruits. Col. Chandler was still at Fort Craig. Gen. Garland, Col. Grayson, and Major Blake returned to Santa Fe, on February 20, from Albuquerque, where they had been for a few days on official business. The Legislature of the Territory had adjourned.

We are enabled to state that all movements of U. S. troops and proceedings in connection with that branch of the service of sufficient interest, will find the earliest notice in our columns.

City News.

THE ARREST OF HAYDON.—The facts connected with the arrest of Haydon, who carried off over twenty-five thousand dollars' worth of jewelry, from the store of Ball, Black & Co., presents the police in a very efficient light. When these facts were made known to the police, telegraphic communications were sent at once to all points, and officer Robert W. Boyer at once started out to scour the city. Thinking the robber might have applied for passage on board the steamer Emeu, Mr. Boyer proceeded to the office of the Cunard line in Jersey City, and there learned that during the forenoon a young man answering the description of Haydon had applied for passage on board the steamer Emeu, but that he was not permitted to go on board of her. He appeared much agitated when told by the agent that the Emeu would not take any passengers on her present trip. He said that he must be in England at a certain time, and offered to give any sum if only permitted to go in the Emeu. The agent told him that he could arrive in Boston in time to leave by the steamer which sails from there to-day. With this assurance he seemed satisfied and left the office. The officer then proceeded to the office of the New Haven Railroad depot at Canal street, and from there to the one at 31st street, but without seeing anything of the fugitive. He then again returned to the depot in Canal street. While waiting there, and just before the afternoon cars started out, Haydon approached the ticket office. He was much disguised. His hair was cut short, his eyes were covered by a pair of spectacles, and he feigned to be very lame. He had no baggage with him but a carpet bag which he held in his hand. His disguise did not avail him. He was instantly recognized by one of Ball, Black & Co.'s clerks, who accompanied the officer in the pursuit. When tapped on the shoulder by the officer he tried to "play possum," but seeing that that would not aid him, he stood erect and walked to the office of the Chief of Police. The carpet-bag found with Haydon, contained the entire property which he had stolen. Bracelets, rings and all, were thrown together confusedly in the bottom of the bag, but none of the articles were found to be injured. Among the collection was one diamond necklace valued at $6,000. The prisoner was brought before the Mayor, and was by him committed for examination. Haydon is an Englishman, and has been in this country about five years. He drew all the wages due him—about $500—from Messrs. Ball, Black & Co., on Monday last. The wine with which he treated the persons in the store was drugged with laudanum. The clerks say they merely tasted it, because it tasted very bitter. The colored porter, however, was not so fastidious. He helped himself pretty freely. Haydon was confined in the Chief's office until evening, when he was locked up in the Fifth Ward Station-house. He says he had hoped his disguise would have enabled him to elude detection, as at one time during the day he had met and passed Mr. Ball in the street, without detection. The articles having been catalogued, were found to consist of—

97 diamond rings, valued at	$9,000
15 do brooches do	4,000
7 pairs diamond ear-rings	3,500
10 gentlemen's diamond breast pins, valued at	500
8 diamond necklaces, valued at	7,800
2 do crosses, valued at	800
3 diamond bracelets, valued at	1,400
4 pearl necklaces, valued at	600
2 pairs pearl ear-rings, valued at	80
Another article valued at	30
Total,	$27,710

This is the retail valuation. The wholesale value would not probably exceed $25,000. On his examination, the prisoner said he was 23 years old, and that his prime motive for acting as he did was the distress of his mother and family. My mother (he said,) wrote constantly to me for aid, and I was not able to give her the necessary assistance. There was another motive. I was devoted to a young lady, and all that separated us was my want of wealth. I had not sufficient either in the present or in the future. Those were my impelling motives. I state them because they are different from the motives of young men in general.

Nine of the crew of the packet ship Underwriter, were arrested on the 10th, on a charge of mutiny at sea. The names of the parties are Silas B. Phillips, Joseph Smith, James Reiley, John Richmond, Joseph Gilmer, Charles Lester, Michael Mahon, William Rich, and Heman Fisher. They had been kept in irons for some time, and presented a sorry and most emaciated and begrimmed spectacle. They plead in extenuation that the first and third mates of the Underwriter had subjected them to most barbarous and inhuman treatment on their voyage from Liverpool. For the slightest offence, they stated that they were unmercifully flogged; some of the crew, they averred, were whipped over the windlass, with the additional application of the cat-o'nine-tails. Besides this, the stated water was not given them to drink, while four dogs belonging to the third mate received an unlimited supply. One of the crew, they charged, was so severely beaten that he died from the effects of the injuries he received. Upon these statements, combined with the bruises and lash cuts which they showed upon their bodies, warrants of arrest were issued yesterday against Wm. Welch, the first mate, and Thomas Keel, the third mate. The charge made against the former was brutal chastisement and general cruelty. The latter was charged with the murder of one of the crew, named Johnson. These parties were arrested on board the Underwriter, and committed to Eldridge street jail for examination.

Fires.—About 10 o'clock on the night of the 10th inst., a fire broke out in the large five-story brick building No. 40 Gold street, near Fulton, occupied by Messrs. Harnley, Lowry & Co. as a packing-box manufactory. The fire is said to have originated in the basement, but it had gained considerable headway before being discovered. The firemen of the 7th and 8th districts promptly responded to the alarm, but before they could get their apparatus in working order, the fire—owing to the large amount of light and combustible matter about the premises—had communicated to the various floors, and the flames were bursting forth with great fury from the front and rear windows. Notwithstanding the exertions of the firemen, No. 40, with its contents was almost entirely destroyed. The flames communicated to the adjoining building, No. 42, occupied by the same firm, and for the same business. The loss will probably exceed $50,000. We learned that the occupants were uninsured. Two or three of the members of Hose Co. No. 21, while proceeding to the fire, were badly injured in consequence of falling in the street, and a member of Hose Co. No. 25 had his arm broken. The injured firemen were properly cared for by their companions.

At half-past eleven o'clock on the same night, a fire was discovered in the large building No. 489 Broome street. The fire originated in the fifth story, in the workshop of Messrs. Falkner, Pollock & Co., manufacturers of jewelry. Being discovered at an early moment, the flames were extinguished by the insurance patrol, with a few buckets of water. Upon the alarm being given some foolish fellow ran into Wallack's Theatre during the performance and cried out "fire," upon which the audience rose in great haste and rushed toward the doors. The result was that the aisles between the seats were blocked up by the frightened people, and it was only with the greatest difficulty that egress was effected. Ladies and gentlemen, in their haste, leaped over the backs of the seats and jumped down whole flights of stairs. Many of the ladies fainted and had to be carried out. Fortunately, however, no one was seriously injured.

Barnum, writing to a creditor, says:—"I have got about a half bushel of writs and protests, and am compelled nearly every day to swear before some Court that I am not a swindler. It is enough to make any man 'swear,' without any injunction to that effect by legal mandate. All these things involve heavy costs, which creditors must pay, for I cannot do it, my property being taken from me, and being locked up in the hands of receivers, trustees, assignees, &c. If, however, you and the rest of the creditors, choose to take my property, you may 'divide the spoils' as you choose, without let or hindrance from me."

Captain C. Carroll Hicks, of General Walker's army, John Kingsley and J. C. Hemmichs, were seized on Tuesday on board the steamship Orizaba, as she was about sailing for San Juan, Nicaragua, charged with organizing a body of men to proceed to Nicaragua and there fight against Costa Rica.

On a late hour Wednesday evening a young woman named Sarah Connor, was crossing Tompkins square, on her way home, when she was assaulted by eight rowdies, who first stretched a rope before her, and then wound it around her person; after which they robbed her of $4, and some papers, and then fled. One of the rascals named John Sherlock, was arrested and committed for examination.

Jones' Wood, is to be occupied by buildings and streets. A. J. Bleecker & Co. sold ninety-seven lots on 71st, 73d and 74th streets and the 3d and 2d avenue railroads, at the Exchange, on Thursday last, 15th inst. The ground is high and well situated, and must increase rapidly in value with the growth of the city. The Central Park takes out nearly 800 lots, and leaves but a comparatively narrow strip on each side for dwellings.

The Chambers street Bank for Savings has been removed to the very fine new marble structure No. 67 Bleecker street, nearly opposite Crosby. The old granite banking-house is to come down, and be replaced by new and splendid stores, which will extend to the corner of Church street.

The Comptroller has issued a commission to Messrs. Wyckoff, Savage, and another gentleman, directing them to examine into the condition of every Fire Insurance Company in New-York, chartered by the Legislature of the State. This examination is made in response to the request of 54 of the Companies of the city. The Commissioners have proceeded as far as the letter B.

The annual catalogue of the University of the City of New-York is just published. The students connected with this institution are classified as follows:—Under-graduates, 96; Seniors, 18; Juniors, 20; Sophomores, 26; Freshmen, 32; Students in Medical College, 307; Arts of Design, 15; Civil Engineering, 7; Grammar School, 150—Total, 575.

The chapel of the Five Points Mission has been closed for the last five or six weeks, in consequence of alterations and repairs. The ladies now have a chapel after their own plan, different from any other in the city. It presents a neat and tasteful appearance, and will seat about 600 persons.

Joseph McKeen, LL.D., long and favorably known as one of our most energetic and efficient school superintendents, died at 8 o'clock on last Saturday morning, at his residence, in this city.

Last week ten Jurors were fined $25 each for non-attendance in the Court of Common Pleas.

NICARAGUA.

The Herald, of Sunday, publishes a delightfully written letter from its correspondent in Grenada. Describing what he saw so vividly, we "pick our way" with him "over the open beams of the new wharf," and brushing past the hotel-runners, mount and "patter away on our little cat-like horses" towards the town. We turn with him "up the beach into a leafy and umbrageous path," and, by-and-by, catch a glimpse of the city "a mile further on." Dismounting, we find ourselves—the magic of his pen is so complete—in "a drowsy, quaint old Spanish town, of narrow streets, and spacious tiled-roofed houses," over which, in every quarter, "lumbering cathedrals," gray with age, and crumbling, tower and "dominate." After breakfast—a right comfortable breakfast—at Manewill's Hotel, we climb up, on the heels of the Herald correspondent, the tower or one of those old edifices, and we behold the city sitting "in a broad plain, backed by a lofty range of noble mountains, towards the west."

Then comes a vigorous sentence descriptive of the breeze which gives "constant agitation to the grand lake which shares the title of the State, and gives refreshing breath and temperature" to the city of Grenada. We know well what this fresh and fierce breeze is. The first time we crossed the Lake of Nicaragua was on the last night of 1853. It was perfectly, sweetly calm all night. It was so at dawn of day, when the dense mist, slowly rising off the water, gradually disclosed to us the beautiful colossal islands of the Lake of Nicaragua and the dark-green outline, with a scant strip of glittering sand, along the lake to northwards. In about an hour, there came, as it were, from the deep throats of those volcanic islands, an impetuous blast, ripping up the dull waters, lashing them into foam, and, like a tumbling, countless pack of maddened hounds, whose forms were lost and turned to shadows in their speed and rage, beating against our boat, which, with all its might of planking and machinery, seemed with much violent straining to urge its way against them. With still greater difficulty we came to anchor, a mile or so off from the poor shaky wharf at Virgin Bay, and, in a tumult of surf and breakers, landed, by means of a huge iron scow, filled up with air-tight boxes, on that sacred spot.

The Herald correspondent says, that "looking down from where he stood, there was nothing in the town itself." Two features, however, relieve the monotony of tiles and adobes. He points his impatient finger to them so strikingly, we ourselves see them from the belfry in which he pencils down his brisk and flashing notes—"in the broad plaza in the centre, the Nicaraguan flag, near General Walker's quarters, and the brilliant folds of the beloved Stars and Stripes, which wave before the house of the American Minister."

The rattle of a drum brings up to the plaza, where "the entire body of the new recruits, brought by La Virgin, are mustered, in connection with most of the force already stationed in the city." It is an animated spectacle, and the correspondent whispers to us "it is much needed," for—

"The slackened emigration of the two previous steamers had given hope to the Chamoristas, or malcontents, and they had begun not only to persuade themselves that the cause of Walker was declining with his countrymen, but to entertain plans of of resistance and revolt. Accustomed to continual political changes, and the successive overthrow of government after government, these short-sighted people had almost persuaded themselves that the limit of American control had come, and they began to exhibit an insolence of manner to single soldiers passing through the streets, which gave a word of warning, and at the same time severely tested the good sense and patience of the troops. Now, however, everything is changed. The chop-fallen Chamoristas suddenly became pliantly civil, or suddenly respectful, and the glee passed from their faces to those of their brown brethren of the democratic faction."

And, again, it so happens that an Envoy from San Salvador arrives in town, with directions to demand "to what extent Nicaragua intends to increase her standing army." He stands on the Plaza, in the foreground of the crowd, and sees the first company of new recruits march in. But, before the rest take up their positions, he withdraws, shakes his head, and walks reflectively away. The correspondent, from whom we quote, tells us that, since the above spectacle, the Envoy has "so slackened his tone, and shown so much respect to General Walker and his power, that he is, perhaps, afraid to go back; for he has asked for a commission in Gen. Walker's army."

Speaking of Colonel Wheeler, whom he visited immediately after the review on the Plaza, this graphic and dashing writer says:—

"It is hardly necessary for me to say that I find him high in the estimation of the best people of all parties here, and possessed of an influence which renders him efficient, as well with all classes of the native population as with General Walker's government. It would be a fatal mistake for the United States government to remove him from his present useful position, for I am well persuaded that such an insult would not only widen the breach with Nicaragua, but deprive American citizens in this country of that protection which may become so necessary to all men with white faces, during the agitations which are now impending throughout Central America. I am also persuaded that were he removed, no other minister would be received here."

Of Gen. Walker, the correspondent gives us this clear and finely-colored picture:

"I found something in his face that I had not observed before, and I may add, that I never saw him look so well. There was the same genial smile, the same quiet cordiality of manner, the same mild, musical and even tone of voice, the same simple, unostentatious bearing; but his lower face, which had previously been full, had been reduced by thought, and the intellectual portion of the head loomed above it like a globe. His eye, too, which I had always recognized as fine, seemed to have expanded and strengthened under the new responsibilities of mind, and exhibited new grasp as well as the repose of con scious power. Pale blue in color—so pale as, with some, to pass for gray, it is full of limpid light and deep expression. Though penetrating, it cannot be called keen or sharp, but it makes it way to the observer's mind by the slow, steady pressure of unwavering volume. Altogether, for a man so utterly unstudied in display, I never saw one of more impressive presence, and it is difficult to conceive, even while looking at him, that he does not stand more than five feet six."

And here is a truth well worth recording at the bottom of the picture:

"I have learned, also, that while the imagination of an observer does undoubtedly find new graces in a thriving man, that there is really an advance of twenty-five per cent. in the good looks of any man of mark whom success helps to a knowledge of himself."

We close our extracts of this eloquent and delightful letter with this paragraph, to the grand hopes expressed in which we heartily cry out, Amen!

"The apartments which Walker occupies in the Government House are spacious, and the road to them is continually swarmed with young officers, in elegant new uniforms, which, despite the climate, they persist in wearing all the while. I say "young officers," but without necessity for such distinction, for there are no old ones here—the General's age, which is barely thirty-two, being much beyond the average, both of his council and his camp. Indeed, I do not think the average will exceed twenty-five; and yet this swarm of boys are equal to the sound foundation of an empire that will last for ages, and perhaps be the admiration of the world."

MARRIAGES.

John Downes, of Dublin, to Sarah, fourth daughter of Thomas Hall, Ballybeg, county Tyrone.

In Newtown-Forbes church, John Joseph, eldest son of John West, of Chicago, United States, to Francis Victoria, daughter of the Rev. George Beatty Moore, of Newtown-Forbes, county Longford.

In Belfast, William Andrews, to Martha, daughter of the late John Kennedy.

At Antrim church, William Brennan, to Mary, daughter of the late Robert Lennon, of Ballygowan.

At St. George's, Hanover-square, B. Baker, of Duke street, Adelphi, to Mary Ann, daughter of the Rev. T. Roberts, of Dublin.

In the Wesleyan church, Poole, Thomas Elliot of Weymouth, to Jane Hesther, eldest daughter of Frederick Stone, Collector of H. M. Customs, Poole.

In Calcutta, Lt. Col. Richard Baird Smith, Bengal Engineers, son of Richard Smith, Lasswade, to Florence Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas De Quincey, Mavis-bush, Lasswade.

At Monasterevan, J. Pitt Kennedy, of Lower Mount street, barrister-at-law to Margaret, daughter of the Rev. Charles Moore, Monasterevan.

At Monkstown, Edward W. Winder, of Upper Lesson street, to Mary Anne, third daughter of Thomas Evans, of Vesey place, Monkstown.

At St. Peter's Church, Arthur Oswald Richards, Captain in the 9th regiment, son of the Right Hon. Baron Richards, to Maria, eldest daughter of Edward Reeves, of Lower Fitzwilliam street.

At Newcastle, county Wicklow, Captain J. L. R. Stoll, of the Royal Navy, to Mary, second daughter of the late T. Abbott, of Upper Mount street.

At Newcastle, John Barron Stafford, eldest son of the late Pierce Barron Stafford, a magistrate of the county Waterford, to Julie Hill, second daughter of the late Hugh Massy, of Glenville, county Limerick.

At Ballybrood, Charles D. H. Webb, of Woodville, Templemore, county Tipperary, to Eliza Lucy, eldest daughter of the Rev. Michael Lloyd Apjohn, of Ballybrood rectory, county Limerick.

At Manorcunningham, Mr. Robert Porterfield, of Ardagh, to Margaret, fourth daughter of the late James Lewin, of Millview, county Galway, Captain in the 30th regiment.

At Liverpool, Edmond Murphy, of Donnemark Falls, Bantry, county Cork, and Mount Piper, Australia, to Annie, daughter of Robert Barry, of Frogmore Lodge, in the county Cork.

In London, Charles Raleigh Knight, only son of the late Lieutenant-General Henry Raleigh Knight, to Julia Sophia, relict of Robert Hickson, of Ballintaggert, county Kerry.

At Collumpton, Devonshire, Edward Russell Daunt, third son of Richard Daunt, of Knockahowlea, county Cork, to Harriet Georgina, second daughter of the late Captain John Mullen, of the 1st Royal regiment.

At Jersey, Captain Benjamin B. Herrick, of the Royal Marine Light Infantry, third son of Captain Herrick, of the Royal Navy, Shippool, county Cork, to Caroline, youngest daughter of the late Henry Biggs, Captain in the 60th Royal Rifles.

At Calcutta, Richard F. Stack, barrister-at-law, to Mary, youngest daughter of the Rev. Thomas Stack, of Omagh, county Tyrone.

At Heidelberg, Victoria, Hill John, eldest son of John Gillman, of Sandycove House, county Cork, to Sophia, eldest daughter of the late W. P. Woodd, of Richmond, Surrey.

At Melbourne, Victoria, Thomas Kelly, late of Milford, county Cork, to Kate, daughter of the late J. Hunt, of Hunt's Grove, county Tipperary.

At Melbourne, Frederick, son of E. Johnson, of Guernsey, to Emily, fourth daughter of John Morton, of Whitefield, Tinnahely, county Wicklow.

At Kew, Melbourne, John, second son of the late J. M'Kean, of Edinburgh, to Louisa, fourth daughter of the late Francis Drew, of Frogmore, county Cork.

At Norfolk, New South Wales, Joseph Sikes Webb, of Sydney, to Eliza Jane, eldest daughter of John Skottowe Parker, formerly of Waterview, county Cork.

At Melbourne, J. Yabbicom, late of Totness, Devonshire, to Eliza Fanny, fourth daughter; and, at the same time, George John Hastedt, late of Hamburg, to Harriet Georgina, third daughter of the late Lieutenant Cuthbert of the 82d regiment, formerly of Gowran, county Kilkenny.

At Carrigtwohill, Cork, William Hana, M. D., of Tallow, to Jane Anne, second daughter of John Goggin, of Ballyrichard.

In Waterford, William Connolly, M. D., to Maria, only daughter of the late Martin Ryan.

At Bailieborough church, John A. Johnston, Esq., M. D., Tempo, Fermanagh, to Elizabeth, daughter of the late Thomas Chambers.

At Croagh church, Limerick, Wellington Shegog, solicitor, son of Richard Shegog, late of Cottage, Drogheda, to Selina Harriet, daughter of the Rev. William Archer, A. M.

At Hatfield, Yorkshire, Septimus Redhead, late of Swansea, to Clara Georgiana, daughter of George Brown, formerly Major in the 3d Light Dragoons.

In London, A. W. Turner, Assistant Commissary General, to Mary Morgan, daughter of the Hon. Charles Dewey Day, senior Judge of the Court of Queen's Bench, Montreal, Upper Canada.

In Liverpool, John A. Bostock, of the Scots Fusilier Guards, to Harriet Anne, daughter of the late Joseph Brooks Yates.

At Pentridge, Victoria, Alfred C. Harrison, C. E., to Isabel, daughter of James Langton, of Bruree House, county Limerick.

DEATHS.

In Lower Mount street, Richard, eldest son of E. White, of Fort Etna, county Limerick.

At his residence, 12 Heytesbury street, Denis O'Connor, aged 69 years.

In Belvidere place, aged 74 years, George Chomley, of Belcamp.

At Dundrum, Hannah, relict of Doctor Duggan, of Merrion square.

At his residence, 25 Marlborough street, William Bassil Brooke, youngest son of the late Gustavus Brooke, of Dublin.

In Talbot street, Dublin, Ellen, aged 21 years, eldest daughter of Philip Brady.

At 34 Henry street, Dublin, aged 76 years, Miss Anne Callaghan.

At 27 Talbot street, Dublin, the residence of Patrick Byrne, Mary, his dearly beloved wife.

In Upper Leeson street, the Rev. John K. Courtney, rector of Kellistown, county Carlow.

In Wellesley place, Dublin, Henry Tisdall, eldest son of the late Mark Anthony Tisdall.

In Dawson street, Dublin, the Rev. Wm. B. Forde, of Seaforde, county Down.

At Mountjoy place, Dublin, in the 76th year of her age, most sincerely and deservedly regretted, Anastatia, daughter of the late John Roche, of Limerick.

At Mallow, William Neilson, solicitor, of Belgrave avenue, Rathmines.

At Mountainstown, county Dublin, aged 88 years, Sir Francis Cox, Bart.

At Donnybrook, aged 84 years, Mary, relict of Coote Mulloy, of Hughstown, county Roscommon.

At Arranview, county Clare, Marcella, relict of ——— Macnamara.

At Lansdown House, near Limerick, Richard Ievers Wilson.

At Portarlington, aged 81 years, Louisa, relict of Joseph Minchin, of Woodville, county Tipperary.

At Summerhill, in the county Leitrim, William J. Peyton.

At Coolyhanan House, Ellen, daughter of the late Mathew Honan, of Limerick.

At Clonroad House, county Clare, Lucy, wife of William Adams Brew.

At Rathronan glebe, county Limerick, the Rev. W. Curtis, vicar of that parish.

In Limerick, Sarah, wife of Commander W. Ellis, of the Royal Navy.

At Gardenhill, near Tuam, Daniel Smyth, on half-pay of the City of Limerick Militia.

In Cavan, Maria, wife of William Smith.

In Athlone, after a short illness, Captain A. Coope, of the Royal Sherwood Foresters, seventh son of the late John Coope, of Great Cumberland place, London.

At Termoneeny rectory, in the county of Derry, Anna Matilda, third daughter of the Rev. Charles S. Foster.

At Torquay, Devonshire, Charles Fitzgerald John William, eldest surviving son of the Rev. Robert de Burgh, of Dromkeen, county Limerick.

At Glenavon, South Wales, Mrs. Uniacke, wife of Thomas S. Uniacke, and second daughter of the late G. H. Rochfort, Esq. M. P. for Westmeath.

At Crown Point, Norfolk, Lady Annetta Laura Maria Money, wife of Lieutenant Geaeral Money, and eldest daughter of John James, sixth Earl Waldegrave.

Killed at Sebastopol, by an accidental explosion, Major George Ranken, of the Royal Engineers.

At Kandy, Ceylon, aged 68 years, Margaret, relict of Major Garvock, Assistant Adjutant General at the Horse Guards, London.

In Liverpool, Mrs. Molineux.

At Nice, the Hon. Thomas Liddell, second son of the late Lord Ravensworth.

In Dublin, Ellen Teresa, wife of Dr. M'Swiney.

At Castlebar, aged 79 years, the Hon. Frederick Cavendish, son of the Rt. Hon. Sir Henry Cavendish and Sarah, Baroness of Waterpark, proprietor of the Mayo Telegraph.

In Cork, Sarah Jane, daughter of Lieut. Col. Lionel Westropp, late of the 58th regiment.

At Enniscoffey House, Caroline, relict of M. A. Levinge, and daughter of the late John Lyons, of Ladiston, county Westmeath, aged 76 years.

William Parke, of Clogher, county Roscommon.

In Belfast, the wife of Alexander Maguire.

At Southampton, the wife of Capt. Drysdale, of the 42d Highlanders, in the Crimea.

At his residence in Great Britain street, Edward Murphy.

At Henry street, Anne, wife of George Faulkner.

At 62 Capel street, Miss Jane Murphy, in the 58th year of her age.

Stephen Mease, late of Rathmines, son of the late John Meade Thomas, of Limerick.

Julia, wife of David Donnelly, Cabra House; and in the Convent of Mercy, Kells, her daughter Julia—in religion, Sister Mary Agnes.

Mrs. Maryanne Haggarty, wife of Christopher Haggarty.

At Enniskillen, James Ingoldsby.

In Limerick, Hannah, relict of George Parris.

At Castledawson, aged 86 years, T. Henry.

In Belfast, George P. Wood.

In Castlebar, William Larminie, for many years actuary of the Mayo Savings' Bank.

In Waterford, Walter Pelham, Esq., solicitor.

At the Curragh Camp, Captain Lambert, of the 96th regiment.

At Turlough, county Mayo, Charles Semple.

In Limerick, Maurice Roche.

At Omagh, county Tyrone, Alexander Osborne, Esq., surgeon in the Royal Navy. He had resided for several years in Australia, and was a member of the Colonial Legislature.

In London, James Beatty, C. E., eldest son of the late James Beatty, M. D., of Enniskillen.

At Llanddulas, North Wales, aged 82 years, Hester, relict of Joseph Archer, formerly of Killymon, county Wicklow.

In London, J. Black, formerly Comptroller of Customs in Londonderry.

At Bordeaux, Gerard Galwey.

At the Chateau Hunadieres, near Le Mans, aged 75 years, J. Stanley Ireland, formerly of the 87th regiment, and many years resident magistrate for the county Galway.

Special Notices.

PROSPECTUS

OF THE SIXTH VOLUME—NEW SERIES OF THE

UNITED STATES DEMOCRATIC REVIEW,

FOR 1856.

THE United States Democratic Review, established in 1838, entered upon the Sixth Volume of its new series the first January, 1856.

In Politics, the Review will faithfully adhere to the principles recognized by Jefferson and Jackson, and as set forth, from time to time, by the Democratic National Conventions. At the same time, keeping pace with the progress of the age, it will advocate all those measures of public policy calculated to promote the best interests of our common country.

It will be the aim of the Editor to make it not only an efficient advocate of Democratic men and measures, but also

A WELCOME AND USEFUL FAMILY MAGAZINE.

Various causes combined to withdraw from the Review that powerful array of talent which so long placed it foremost amongst its cotemporaries. Those causes have ceased to operate. The most distinguished Statesmen and writers of the Democratic party will again contribute to its pages; and nothing will be omitted to make it worthy of the high vocation it aims at, viz., to be the organ of the United Democracy of the Union. The Democratic Review will be published in the same form as its preceding volumes, and is under the editorial charge of SPENCER W. CONE.

In addition to its political features, no exertions will be spared to make its Literary, Scientific, and Miscellaneous Departments worthy of the old days of its fame.

The urgent demand for something in its character, firm, uniform, and reliable, upon national questions, above the sectional squabbles of individuals, and always true to the great end of the party organization, viz., the dissemination and support of the pure principles of national Democracy—affords a wide field of usefulness; and we rely upon the Democracy of the Union for our support.

TERMS—$5 PER ANNUM, OR $3 STRICTLY IN ADVANCE.

GREAT INDUCEMENTS TO FORM CLUBS.

PREMIUMS.

Any person sending $13 will receive Five copies of the Review for one year, and either of the following works: "Longfellow's Hiawatha," "Songs of the Revolution," "Widow Bedott Papers," "Bayard Taylor's Travels in China and Japan," or "Life of Daniel Boone." Price, $1.25 each.

Any person sending $25 will receive Ten Copies of the Review, and either the whole of the Works above named, or "Dr. Kane's Arctic Explorations," beautifully illustrated. Price, $5.

Any person sending $40 will receive Twenty Copies of the Review, and "Irving's Life of Washington," in three large vols. Price, $6.

Any person sending Five prepaid subscriptions, at $3 each, will receive "Irving's Life of Washington. Price, $6."

Any person sending Ten prepaid subscriptions, at $3 each, will receive "Calhoun's Works," by Kralle, in four large vols. Price, $8; and "Van Santvoord's Lives of the Chief Justices of the United States." Price $2.25.

Any person sending Twenty prepaid subscriptions, at $3 each, will receive "Jefferson's Complete Works," in nine large vols., published, by order of Congress, from original manuscripts. Edited by A. H. Washington. Price, $25.

☞ The books above named are all handsomely bound, and recently published.

Specimen Numbers of the Review will be sent gratis when requested.

☞ TO POSTMASTERS.

POSTMASTERS ARE RESPECTFULLY SOLICITED TO ACT AS AGENTS FOR THE UNITED STATES DEMOCRATIC REVIEW.

All communications to be addressed to Lloyd and Campbell, 252 Broadway, New York.

MARRIED.

At the Cathedral, Franklin street, Boston, on the 10th inst., by the Rev. J. A. Healy, Patrick Brophy, Esq., formerly of St. John, New-Brunswick, to Ellen M., daughter of Mr. M. Coughlin, of Boston.

☞ Post Office Notice.—The MAILS FOR EUROPE, via Southampton and Bremen, per U. S. steamer WASHINGTON, will close at this office on SATURDAY, the 19th day of April, at 10½ o'clock, A. M.

ISAAC V. FOWLER, Postmaster.

The meeting held to provide assistance for the family of the late RICHARD WALSH, on last Monday evening at the Drill Room of the "Edward Fitzgerald Guard," (Eagle Rooms,) concluded to meet again at the same place, at 8 o'clock, P. M., to appoint a Treasurer and Collectors, and to receive subscriptions.

Dr. O. A. Brownson, will Lecture on the Relation of Government to Religion, for the benefit of the N. Y. CATHOLIC LIBRARY ASSOCIATION, at the Broadway Tabernacle, on Tuesday evening, April 22d, at 8 o'clock.

Tickets, 25 cents; to be had at the door on the evening of the Lecture.

Catholic Society for the Promotion of Agricultural Settlements.—Office No. 3 Chamber street, (over East River Bank.) Open from 9 to 4.

3t J. G. MOYLAN, Sec., pro tem.

Emigrant Intelligence Office and Labor Exchange, No. 2 Canal street, corner of Centre street, New-York.—The office is established by the Commissioners of Emigration, where can always be found large numbers of LABORERS and SERVANTS, at very low rates of wages; and persons can have their orders filled by writing to the Superintendent, and sending the amount necessary to pay the passage of the parties required. No fees charged to employers.

JAMES P. FAGAN, Superintendent.

The Irish News—UP TOWN!—at ROBERT CODDINGTON'S Book Store, 366 Bowery, one door above Fourth street, on Every Wednesday morning.

N. B. Papers put up in Wrappers and Mailed at this establishment, free of charge. ap194t

COPARTNERSHIP NOTICE.

THE undersigned have formed a Copartnership, under the name and firm of Fort, Cole & Co., for the transaction of the Paper Commission Business, at 32 Beekman street.

FORT, COLE & CO.

JOEL W. FORT, CHAS. COLE, | C. D. HARMAN, CARLTON LE SAGE.

Mr. H. C. Gordwin, has no further connection with us. ap19

REMOVAL.

McCorville & Murphy, Importers of Wide Silks, Shawls, Vestings, and Linen Goods, have REMOVED to No. 36 LIBERTY STREET, where all orders will be punctually attended to. tf

To Military Companies and Civic Societies.

OLD MONTGOMERY HALL, 76 Prince Street.—The Subscriber, having taken a lease of the above well known popular concern, begs to inform the Members of Military Companies and Civic Trades Bodies, and Managers of Balls, that he is ready to treat for the letting of spacious and well-lighted rooms, suited for meetings, &c.

The Bar attached to the Hall is always supplied with the best imported and domestic Liquors, Brandys, Wines, Ales, Irish and Scotch Whiskey, and choicest brands of Havana Cigars. JOHN DOLAN.

P. HUGHES,

LEMON SYRUP AND CORDIAL REFINER, and Dealer in Foreign Liquors, and French Brandies of different brands, Hollands Gin, Irish and Scotch Whiskey, Scotch Ale and Porter, and other Liquors, returns his sincere thanks to the public for the patronage he has already received, and hopes they will continue the same. No. 88 Cherry street, New-York. tf

JAMES AINSLIE,

NO. 93 BEAVER STREET,

OFFERS for sale from U. S. Bonded Warehouses, of his own importation, Cognac Brandies, also Rochelle Brandies, in half, quarter, and eighth Pipes, pale and dark, of the well known brand of Arzac Seignette.

Gin—Sole importer of the superior Magnolia Brand; also, Cologne and Schnapps Gin.

Wines—Burgundy, Pure Juice, and old Port, Sherry, &c. Jamaica and St. Croix Rums; Stewart's Paisley Whiskey, &c. 3mos

COAL.

COAL of the very best quality both Anthracite and Bituminous, for family and manufacturing purposes, for sale by the subscriber from his Yards, 632 Washington, 128 McDougal, and 146 West Thirty-second streets. Also, Coal by the cargo.

ap191y Thomas Maher.

TO PRINTERS.

COPPER FACED TYPE.—CORTELYOU'S NEW-YORK TYPE FOUNDRY, and PRINTERS' WAREHOUSE, established in 1823, 29 Spruce street, four doors below William street.

The subscriber is prepared to furnish his well-known and superior Book and Newspaper Printing Types, in fonts to suit purchasers. Also, German and Ornamental Types, Greek, Hebrew, Ornaments, Music, Brass Rules, &c., manufactured of metals equal to any in this country, and finished in the most accurate manner. He also furnishes Presses, Chases, Composing Sticks, Stands, Cases, Furniture, Ink, &c.

Business Directory.

MEAGHER & CAMPBELL,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

NO. 82 BROADWAY.

NOTARY PUBLIC,

Commissioner for the U. S. Court of Claims.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, having formed a partnership with MALCOLM CAMPBELL, for the general practice of the law, the firm will continue to devote their attention to such law business as may be intrusted to them, including conveyancing, practice in all the courts of the state of New-York and of the United States, and general collecting business in all parts of the world. Particular attention will be given to the prosecution of claims against the United States in the Court of Claims.

Mr. Meagher may be consulted daily, on law business only, at No. 82 Broadway, from three till five o'clock P. M.

B. S. TREANOR,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

15 MASSACHUSETTS BLOCK, COURT SQUARE, BOSTON.

Particular attention paid to Conveyancing, and the examination of titles to Real Estate.

THOS. H. HURLEY,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 252 BROADWAY.

WILLIAM E. ROBINSON,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR,

HAVING entered into partnership with ISAAC DAYTON, Esq., (author of the work on Surrogates,) and WILLIAM A. COURSEN, Esq., gentlemen long known, and of high standing at the New-York Bar, has removed to their new office at 267 BROADWAY, third door below Chambers street.

☞ All business either in the Criminal or Civil Courts, promptly and faithfully attended to. ap191y

JAMES HARLIN,

WATCH, CLOCK MAKER, AND JEWELER.

236 HENRY STREET, BROOKLYN.

All watches and clocks bought or repaired at my establishment, warranted for twelve months. *

JOHN KENNEDY'S

STEAM MARBLE WORKS,

35TH STREET, NEAR BROADWAY.

Statuary and Marble Mantle-Pieces, Monuments, Grave Stones, Tombs, &c. All orders thankfully received and punctually attended to. *

M. J. CONNELL,

METROPOITAN BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTER,

NO. 39 BEEKMAN STREET, 1 DOOR EAST OF WILLIAM, NEW-YORK, AND 73 GRAND STREET, WILLIAMSBURGH.

All orders intrusted to me will be promptly attended to, and executed with unparalleled dispatch. tf

KNOX'S

OFFICE FURNITURE WAREROOMS,

59 AND 89 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

☞ Desks, Chairs, Cushions, Book-Cases, Lounges, Stools, and every article suitable for counting-rooms, Banks, and Insurance offices.

Desks of every description made to order on short notice.

CABINET FURNITURE AND UPHOLSTERY.

Established in 1827.

THE largest and cheapest assortment in the State of New-York. Every thing, from a Broom to the richest article, may be found, including Carpets, Oil Cloths, Mattrasses, Beds, &c., &c., at

1yr R. J. TODD'S, 88 Fulton street, Brooklyn.

HARDWARE, CUTLERY, MECHANICS' TOOLS, &c.

THE subscriber has constantly for sale, of the best quality, and at the lowest prices, an assortment of the following articles: Tea-Trays, Cooking Utensils, Britannia and Plated Goods, Stair Rods, Table Cutlery, Tin Ware, Wooden Ware, Brushes, Brooms, &c.

Mechanics' Tools.

Also a full supply of Saws, Planes, Braces and Bits, Edge-Tools, Files, Hammers, Squares, Augers, Rules, Bevels, &c.

4t JOHN W. SULLIVAN, 74 Sixth Avenue, corner of Waverley Place.

CHEAP COAL.

I BEG to inform my countrymen and friends and the public in general that I always sell the very best sort of Red and White Ash Coal at the very lowest prices. My object being quick sales and small profits, for cash.

ap193m Richard Clinton, 250 1st Avenue, cor. 15th St.

O'CONNOR & COLLENDER,

BILLIARD TABLE MANUFACTURERS.

53 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

NICHOLAS WALSH.

SEXTON AND UNDERTAKER.

NO. 8 SIXTH AVENUE.

WILLARD, FELT & CO.,

MANUFACTURERS OF ACCOUNT BOOKS,

AND IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER AND STATIONERY,

NO. 14 MAIDEN LANE,

3mos (near Broadway.)

HANNA & BEEBE,

COMMISSION PAPER WAREHOUSE,

No. 27 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW-YORK,

KEEP CONSTANTLY ON HAND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF PAPER SUCH AS

Book, Printing, Flat-cap, Folio, Glazed, colored, (sized and unsized,) Druggists', Hardware, Envelope, Manilla, Palm-leaf, Straw and Shipping, Straw Boards, Box Boards, &c., &c., &c.

ALSO—Cop Waste for Steamboats and Railroad Engines.

They offer to Manufacturers at the lowest market prices,

Rags, Bleaching Powders, Soda Ash, Alum, Rosin, China Clay, Oil Vitriol, Oils, Feltings, Twines, Wire Cloth, Leather Belting.

☞ LIBERAL ALLOWANCES MADE UPON ALL CONSIGNMENTS.

Agents for Hanna, Carpenter & Abbott's Candlewick.

ap193m*

RICH CARPETING.

1856. SPRING IMPORTATION. 1856.

ARTHUR DONNELLY,

98 BOWERY, (West side,) BETWEEN GRAND AND HESTER STREETS.

A complete and choice assortment of

STAIR AND HALL CARPETS, RUGS, MATS, MATTINGS,

and of everything else appertaining to the Carpet Trade.

ARTHUR DONNELLY, 98 Bowery, (West side,)

ap193m Between Grand and Hester sts., N. Y.

Business Directory.

GEORGE B. COOK,

IMPROVED STEAM CYLINDER AND ADAMS PRESSES,

JENKIN'S BUILDING, Nos. 22 AND 24 FRANKFORT STREET, NEW-YORK. tf

MRS. J. McCARTHY,

FASHIONABLE MILLINERY STORE,

44 THIRD AVENUE,

Third door from 10th Street, NEW-YORK.

Cheap Straw Hats, Ribbons, Flowers, Ladies' Straw Goods.

Straw Bonnets cleaned and altered to the newest fashions.

LADIES' OWN MATERIALS MADE UP TO THE LATEST STYLES. tf

MATTHEW WALLACE,

25 CLARK STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.,

WHOLESALE DEALER IN NEWSPAPERS, BOOKS, &c.

☞ "The Irish News," on hand, by the earliest moment, each week. tf

NEWARK, NEW-JERSEY.

J. DONOHUE,

NEWSPAPER AND PERIODICAL DEALER,

149 MARKET STREET,

Will serve "The Irish News," in any part of the city. tf

McLOUGHLIN, McSHANE, & CO.,

(Successors to THOS. ANDREWS,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN

CHOICE TEAS, COFFEES, WINES, BRANDIES, AND GROCERIES,

61 FULTON STREET, near Cliff street,

M. C. McLOUGHLIN, ANDREW McSHANE, JAMES DOWLING. } NEW-YORK.

3m

JOHN J. STAFF'S.

WINES, LIQUORS, SEGARS,
LONDON, DUBLIN, PHILADELPHIA,
PORTER and ALE,
SCOTCH, BURTON, and EAST INDIA ALES,
CHAMPAGNE CIDER, in quantities to suit purchasers,

at 333 Broadway,

tf corner of Anthony street, New-York.

JOHN A. McSORLEY,

CUSTOM HOUSE AND SHIP BROKER, AND NOTARY PUBLIC,

7 BROAD STREET,

Clergymen, importing Vestments, Church Ornaments, &c., will be liberally treated with by calling on the subscriber.

REFERENCES:

Messrs. Thos. McClune & Co., C. Meletta, | Messrs. D. & J. Sadlier & Co., James Cook & Co. 6m

COAL.

THE subscriber respectfully informs his friends and the public generally that he has opened a new Coal Yard, cor. 27th Street and 9th Avenue where he is prepared to sell the best quality of Red and White Ash Coal, at the lowest market price for cash. Weight warranted, or forfeit coal.

6mos* JOHN MACDONALD.

J. MURPHY & SON,

IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN

BRANDIES, WINES, GIN, RUM, IRISH AND SCOTCH WHISKEY, SEGARS, ALE AND PORTER, CORDIALS, &c.

J. M. & SON would call the attention of City and Country Dealers to their EXTENSIVE STOCK OF LIQUORS AND SEGARS under CUSTOM HOUSE LOCK and in STORE.

☞ We do not claim any superiority for our goods over those of any other House, but customers may rely upon being honorably and fairly dealt with, and all Liquors warranted as represented.

J. M. & SON are SOLE AGENTS for this City of Messrs. BUNCHARD & HARRISON'S superior Creaming and Sparkling DOMESTIC CHAMPAGNE, which possesses the same qualities as Imported Wine, and is more agreeable to the palate. It can be sold as low as $7 the basket.

A Superior Quality of IMPORTED ST. JULIAN CLARET, in cases, at $2 50.

Orders from Country Merchants solicited, and shipped with dispatch, at 150 Pearl, and 113 Water streets.

☞ Office 138 Pearl street.

IMPROVED BILLIARD TABLES AND CUSHIONS.

MICHAEL PHELAN'S

MODEL TABLES AND COMBINATION CUSHIONS,

(Patented February 19, 1856,)

CORRECT in principle and perfect in action—so constructed as to insure mathematical correctness of angles when played upon, and warranted to possess the requisite elasticity in all seasons, having been tested by the best players in this country, and by them pronounced the most perfect of any hitherto constructed—are offered to the public as cheap as the ordinary tables of the day. Orders promptly attended to for fitting up private or public Billiard Rooms; new Cushions put on old Tables, &c.

Saloon and Salesroom No. 39 Chambers street, up stairs.

THE GREAT RUSSIAN REMEDY.

Pro Bono Publico.

"EVERY MOTHER SHOULD HAVE A BOX IN THE HOUSE HANDY IN CASE OF ACCIDENTS TO THE CHILDREN."

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE. It is a Boston remedy of thirty years' standing, and is recommended by physicians. It is a sure and speedy cure for Burns, Piles, Boils, Corns, Felons, Chilblains, and old Sores of every kind.

For Fever Sores, Ulcers, Itch, Scald Head, Nettle Rash, Bunions, Sore Nipples, (recommended by nurses); Whitlows, Sties, Fosters, Flea Bites, Spider Stings, Frozen Limbs, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Sore and Cracked Lips, Sore Nose, Warts and Flesh Wounds, it is a most valuable remedy and cure, which can be testified to by thousands who have used it in the city of Boston and vicinity for the last thirty years.

In no instance will this Salve do an injury, or interfere with a physician's prescriptions. It is made from the purest materials, from a recipe brought from Russia, of articles growing in that country, and the proprietors have letters from all classes, clergymen, physicians, sea captains, nurses, and others who have used it themselves and recommend it to others.

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE is put in large tin boxes, stamped on the cover with the picture of a horse and a disabled soldier, which picture is also engraved on the wrapper. PRICE, 25 Cents a Box. Sold at all the stores in town or country, or may be ordered of any wholesale druggist.

ap19tf Redding & Co., Proprietors, No. 8 State st., Boston.

P. H. McGINN,

FURNISHING UNDERTAKER,

No. 193 WEST 42d STREET,

Adjoining the Church of the Holy Cross, New-York.

INTERMENTS procured in any Burial Ground or Cemetery in the vicinity of New-York or elsewhere. All articles for Funerals, furnished on the most reasonable terms and at the shortest notice.

☞ All Orders promptly attended to, at all hours, day or night. ap193m

WRITING INKS.

WE ask the attention of all who wish imperishable records,—a matter of great importance to State, County and Town Offices, Banks, and others, to Dr. Chilton's test of the prominent Inks in use, made with a view to show their different degrees of permanence by exposure. Engraved facsimiles of the test can be seen at our office.

Thaddeus Davids & Co.,

ap196m Manufacturing Stationers, 26 Cliff street.

SAMUEL YATES,

GENERAL NEWS AGENT,

Foreign and Domestic Newspapers supplied to the Trade.

No. 22 Beekman Street.

The Irish News.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, Editor and Proprietor.

Three Dollars per Annum. Single Copies 6 Cents. Publication Office, 29 Ann St., cor. of Nassau.

VOL. I. NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, APRIL 26, 1856. NO. 3.

Publications.

THE IRISH NEWS,

EDITED BY THE PROPRIETOR,

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER,

DEDICATED TO THE SERVICE OF THE

IRISH PEOPLE,

AT HOME AND ABROAD,

Will be published every Saturday, on and after the 12th of April, at 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau, New-York.

TERMS.

For subscribers, $3 per annum: 6 cents a copy.
For wholesale dealers, $3 50 per hundred.
For retailers and carriers, $4 per hundred.
For Clubs, 4 copies to one address, per annum, $10.
" 7 " " " " $17.
" 10 " " " " $20.

For advertising.—Each square of eight lines,

Transient	$1
Monthly	$3
Quarterly	$5
Yearly	$16

N. B. Four lines, or under, constitute half a square.

Agents or Postmasters who interest themselves in procuring and remitting subscriptions, may retain 50 cents out of each annual subscription of $3.

☞ Subscribers, Agents, and Advertisers will please send in their orders early, any observe that our terms are invariably, payments in advance.

Communications of a PRIVATE nature should always be marked so. Those connected with the editorial department are to be addressed to Thomas Francis Meagher, and those on business to Richard J. Lalor, Irish News Office, 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau.

☞ Subscribers, residing in New-York, Brooklyn, and Williamsburgh, who pay in advance, will have their papers neatly enveloped, addressed, and delivered on each Wednesday through Boyd's Express or some similar medium.

Wholesale Dealers.

DEXTER & BROTHERS, 14 Ann Street, New-York.
ROSS & TOUSEY, 108 Nassau Street, New-York.
SAMUEL YATES, 22 Beekman Street, New-York.
MIKE MADDEN, 22 Ann Street, New-York.
HAMILTON & JOHNSON, 30 Ann Street, New-York.
DE WITT & DAVENPORT, 160 & 162 Nassau Street, New-York.
HENRY TAYLOR, Baltimore, Md.
FEDERHEN & CO., 13 Court Street, Boston.
WM. HICKEY, 128 Federal Street, Boston.
REDDING & CO., 8 Court Street, Boston.
THOS. McLOUGHLIN, 42 South 4th Street, Philadelphia.
T. R. CALLENDER, 88 South-Third Street, Philadelphia.
DROVIN & CO., Philadelphia.
A. WINCH, 116 Chestnut street.
J. M. CRAWFORD, 30 and 32 Chestnut Street, St. Louis, Mo.
MATTHEW WALLACE, 25 Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.
McNALLY & CO., 75 Dearborn Street.
J. W. SULLIVAN, Kearney Street, (next Post-Office) San-Francisco, Cal.
ROY'S, Detroit, Mich.

Retail Dealers.

NAGLE, Bangor, Me.
O'CONNELL, Cincinnati, O.
HASTINGS, Albany, N. Y.
McGOWANS, Portland, Me.
ADAMSON, Washington, D. C.
DOWNS, New-Haven, Conn.
MORRISEY, " "
DONOHUE, Newark, N. J.

Printed by J. C. Watters, 29 & 33 Beekman street.

POWER PRESS OF GEO. B. COOK.

A NEW IRISH BOOK.

In 1 vol. 12mo. Price $1.

'98 AND '48:

THE MODERN REVOLUTIONARY HISTORY AND LITERATURE OF IRELAND.

BY JOHN SAVAGE.

There is no one work which gives the spirit of the memorable periods to illustrate which the author has devoted the present volume. It contains vivid and carefully collated descriptions of the principal battles of the United Irishmen of 98, and a clear statement of the circumstances which led to the differences between "Old Ireland" and "Young Ireland," the line of national policy adopted by the latter, with biographical notices and mention of the following (with other) persons:

Theobald Wolfe Tone.
Henry Grattan.
Thomas Addis Emmet.
Robert Emmet.
William Putnam McCabe.
James Hope.
Arthur O'Conner.
Samuel Neilson.
Hamilton Rowan.
Dr. Wm. Drennan.

THE REBEL GENERALS:

Thomas Russell.
Henry J. McCracken.
Henry Munro.
William Aymer.
Bagnal Harvey.
Edward Roche.
Lord Edward Fitzgerald.
Ed. Fitzgerald of Wexford.
Garret Byrne.
John Kealy.
Esmonde Kyan.
Matthew Keugh.
John Devereux.
Anthony Perry.

Dr. Esmonde.

PRIEST-GENERALS WHO LED THE INSURGENTS:

John Murphy.
Michael Murphy.
Philip Roche.
Moses Kearns.
J. Prendergast.
Nicholas Redmond.

Denis Taafe.

Baron Plunket.
Daniel O'Connell.
Thomas Davis.
William Smith O'Brien.
John Mitchel.
Robert Holmes.
Richard Lalor Shell.
Thomas Francis Meagher.
Thomas Devin Reilly.
Tom Steele.
John O'Connell.
Kevin I. O'Doherty.
R. D. Williams.
John B. Dillon.
James Fenton Lalor.
John O'Mahony.
Father Kenyon.
Michael Doheny.
Joseph Brenan.
Dr. Antisell.
C. Gavan Duffy.
Richard O'Gorman.
John Martin.
Lord John Russell.
Lord George Bentinck.
Sir Robert Peel.
Ben. D'Israeli.
T. Bellew McManus.

P. O'Donohue.

And many other Irish and English notables of the period.

"Mr. Savage is a man possessing an excellent taste, a brilliant fancy, and is a vigorous and earnest thinker."—Transcript.

"Mr. Savage is universally known as a writer, and universally popular as a man. He has since early boyhood been engaged in the struggles of his country, and never has been unfaithful to a friend or a principle."—Irish American, Feb., 1854.

"Mr. Savage, himself a poet, was a co-worker with the men of whom he spoke in arousing that spirit of hostility to English rule which was evinced in Ireland in 1848. From his intimate knowledge of the theme, and his well-known literary ability, much was expected of him, and expectation was by no means disappointed. We have rarely listened to a composition combining so many poetical thoughts, beautifully expressed, or images so lucidly and naturally drawn."—N. Y. Daily Times, Dec. 4, 1854.

"Mr. Savage is an able writer and speaker."—Boston Times.

John Mitchel wrote in The Citizen, ... ec., 1854:

"We freely grant that among the survivors of our band there is none so competent to the task of presenting them before the intellectual eye as Mr. Savage. They seemed to live and sing before us, to sing out their souls and die. We who saw what these men saw, who felt as they felt, and lived, must have coarser organizations, thicker souls, heavier and more earthly natures, which, perhaps, is for our advantage, and perhaps not."

☞ Published by J. S. REDFIELD, No. 34 Beekman street.

Publications.

Annals of the Four Masters,

7 VOLUMES QUARTO, IN IRISH, WITH AN ENGLISH TRANSLATION BY O'DONOVAN. $45.

CARTE'S LIFE OF THE DUKE OF ORMONDE, and the Great Affairs of his Time in Ireland. 6 vols. 8vo. Full calf, $20.
GRATTAN'S LIFE AND TIMES: By his Son. 5 vols. 8vo. Cloth, $7.
CROKER'S LIFE OF J. HOLT, General of the '98 Rebels. 2 vols. 8vo. hf. calf, $3 50.
GAZETTEER OF IRELAND. 2 vols., maps. Cloth, $3.
MAXWELL'S HISTORY OF THE REBELLION. Illustrated. 1 vol. 8vo. cloth. $2.
FITZPATRICK'S LIFE OF CLONCURRY. 8vo. cloth. $1 50.
HAY'S BOOK OF IRISH BALLADS. 2 vols., Eng. ed., cloth. $2 25.
FINDEN'S BEAUTIES OF MOORE. Forty-eight portraits, exquisitely engraved. Folio, cloth, gilt edges. $6.
WRIGHT'S HISTORY OF IRELAND. 3 vols. quarto, maps, portraits, and views, $7 50.
BARRINGTON'S SKETCHES. $1.
SAVAGE'S '98 and '48. 1 vol., 12mo. $1.

MRS. HALL'S IRELAND, 3 VOLS., 8VO., FULL OF ILLUSTRATIONS. $12.

Warner's History of Ireland, 4to., $2 50. Warner's Irish Rebellion, 4to., $2 50. Will's Lives of Celebrated Irishmen, 6 volumes, $3. Life of Wolfe Tone, 2 volumes, $3 50. Mitchel's Jail Journal, $1. Mitchel's Hugh O'Neil, 37 1-2 cents. Moore's Life of Lord Edward Fitzgerald, 75 cents. Davis's Poems, with an introduction by John Mitchel, 37 1-2 cents. De Jean's Poems, 37 1-2 cents. Meagher's Speeches, $1. Furlong's Irish Prayer Book, 50 cts. Recollections of Lord Cloncurry, $1. Carleton's Willie Reilley, 75 cents. Mooney's History of Ireland, 2 volumes, $3. O'Connor's History of the Irish Brigade, 1 50. Life of Fighting Fitzgerald, 25 cents. Irish Popular Superstitions, 25 cents. Ellis's Romances and Ballads of Ireland, 75 cents. Curran's Speeches, $1 25. Grattan's Speeches, 1 25. Burke's Speeches, 1 25. Sheil's Speeches, 1 25. For sale by P. M. Haverty, Bookseller, 110 Fulton street, New-York.

With a few exceptions, any of the above will be sent by mail, free.

KEATING'S IRELAND.

A NEW TRANSLATION OF THE

FORAS FEASA AR ERINN;

OR, GENERAL HISTORY OF IRELAND.

From a Manuscript Copy of the Original Irish of the Rev. and Learned GEOFFREY KEATING.

With Notes, Historical, Topographical, and Explanatory,

By JOHN O'MAHONY, Esq.

The work is now in course of preparation, and will be speedily published, in one large octavo volume of about 600 pages, with plates. Price to Subscribers, $2,00.

The book will be got up in superior style, and furnished to the address of Subscribers giving their names to a duly-authorized canvasser, or to

P. M. HAVERTY, Publisher,
tf 110 Fulton street, N. Y.

THE OLD ESTABLISHED CATHOLIC HOUSE OF

EDWARD DUNIGAN & BROTHER,

151 FULTON STREET, NEW-YORK.

Honored with a Gold Medal and letters of approbation from His Holiness

POPE PIUS IX.,

and patronized by the Archbishops, Bishops, Clergy, Colleges, Convents, and Religious orders in the United States,

HAVE JUST PUBLISHED

THE HAMILTON'S, a Catholic Tale, of great beauty and power, price 88 cts.
CONSCIENCE, or the trials of Maybrooke.
BROOKE, a tale, by Mrs. M. H. Dorsey, 2 volumes, cloth, each 38 cents.
HOURS BEFORE THE ALTAR, or MEDITATIONS ON THE BLESSED EUCHARIST, by the Abbe de la Bouilleru, Vicar-General of Paris, translated by a Religeluse of the Visitation. 1 volume, price 25cts.

AND HAVE IN PRESS,

THE LOVE OF MARY, or reading for the month of May, by D. Roberts.
THE YOUNG CRUSADER, a tale. 4t

P. O'SHEA,

739 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK,

Catholic Bookseller and Publisher, Importer of Vestments, Altar Furniture, and Religious Articles generally,

RESPECTFULLY calls the attention of the Catholic Clergy, Religious Orders, Superiors of Schools and Libraries, and his patrons, generally, to his large and varied assortment of Standard and Devotional Books and Religious articles of every description, which he offers for sale on the most reasonable terms, wholesale and retail.

Particular attention is called to his recently published works, viz.,

Bickerton; or, The Immigrant's Daughter. (An anti-Know-Nothing Tale,) 12mo., cloth, ... $0 50
Life of the Princess Borghese; (Daughter of the Earl of Shrewsbury.) Translated by Rev. A. F. Hewit, (of the Redemptorists.) 1 vol., 18mo, cloth, ... 0 37½
Life of St. Francis of Assiscium. By Rev. Titus Jocelin. 1 vol., 18mo, cl., 0 37½
Life of the Egyptian Aloysius. Translated by Rev. A. F. Hewit. 2 vols., 18mo, cloth, each, ... 0 37½
Edma and Marguerite. A Tale; by the Author of the Orphan of Moscow. 2 vols., 18mo, cloth, ... 0 37½

Religious Articles.

Rosaries, per dozen, from 20 cents, to 4 00
" each, on silver chains, from 75 cents, to 12 00
Crucifixes, (brass,) per dozen, from 8 cents, to 12 00
" (silver,) each, from 25 cents, to 25 00

Statuettes, Holy Water Founts, &c., &c., in great varieties. Country Booksellers and travelling dealers, would do well when they come to New-York, to examine this stock before purchasing elsewhere.

3mos P. O'SHEA, 739 Broadway, New-York.

HAMILTON & JOHNSON,

NEWS AGENTS,

30 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

DAILY, weekly and Sunday papers, Magazines, and Cheap Publications. The trade supplied. Orders from the country solicited and promptly filled. JOHN HAMILTON, S. W. JOHNSON.
tf

HANNA & BEEBE,

COMMISSION PAPER WAREHOUSE,

No. 27 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW-YORK,

KEEP CONSTANTLY ON HAND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF PAPER SUCH AS

Book, Printing, Flat-cap, Folio, Glazed, colored, (sized and unsized,) Druggists', Hardware, Envelope, Manilla, Palm-leaf, Straw and Shipping, Papers
Straw Boards, Box Boards, &c., &c., &c.

ALSO—Cop Waste for Steamboats and Railroad Engines.

They offer to Manufacturers at the lowest market prices,

Rags, Bleaching Powders, Soda Ash, Alum, Rosin, China Clay, Oil Vitriol, Oils, Feltings, Twines, Wire Cloth, Leather Belting.

☞ LIBERAL ADVANCES MADE UPON ALL CONSIGNMENTS.

Agents for Hanna, Carpenter & Abbott's Chandlerswick.

ap19tf

Publications.

COMPLETION OF THE SIXTH YEAR.

HARPER'S NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE,

FOR MAY.

CONTENTS.

A VISIT TO THE SILVER MINES OF CENTRAL AMERICA.
Illustrated by Thirteen Engravings.
COMMODORE PERRY'S EXPEDITION TO JAPAN.
Illustrated by Eighteen Engravings.
THE GNAWERS. Illustrated by Twelve Engravings.
MARTHA WYATT'S LIFE.
THE RISE OF THE DUTCH REPUBLIC.
TWO COLLEGE FRIENDS.
THE STORY OF KARS.
THE SENSES.—SIGHT.
RECOLLECTIONS OF SAMUEL ROGERS.
LITTLE DORRIT. By CHARLES DICKENS.
ILLUSTRATIONS.—Mr. and Mrs. Flintwinch.—The Ferry.
CHAPTER XV. Mrs. Flintwinch has another Dream.
CHAPTER XVI. Nobody's Weakness.
CHAPTER XVII. Nobody's Rival.
CHAPTER XVIII. Little Dorritt's Lover.
MONTHLY RECORD OF CURRENT EVENTS.
LITERARY NOTICES.
Books of the Month.
EDITOR'S TABLE.
EDITOR'S EASY CHAIR.
EDITOR'S DRAWER.
MAY DAY IN NEW-YORK.
MAY DAY IN THE COUNTRY.
FASHIONS FOR MAY.
ILLUSTRATIONS.—Promenade Costumes. Mantilla.—Bonnet Shapes.—Bonnet.

This Number closes the TWELFTH VOLUME and the SIXTH YEAR of HARPER'S NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE, with the extraordinary issue of One Hundred and Sixty Thousand Copies. The Publishers have endeavored, by a well-directed use of the abundant resources at their command, to render it not only the cheapest, but the most attractive and most useful Magazine for popular reading in the world; and the extent to which their efforts have been successful is indicated by the fact, that it has attained a greater circulation than any similar periodical ever issued.

Special efforts will be made to render it still more interesting and valuable during the coming year. The new volume will commence with the June number. No labor or expense will be spared to render it in every way, and in all its departments, still more worthy of the unparalleled favor with which it has been received.

HARPER'S NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE owes its success to the fact, that it presents MORE reading matter, of a BETTER quality, in a MORE ELEGANT style and at a CHEAPER rate than any other publication.

It sustains its well-earned reputation, both for the variety and quality of it contents. There is much to instruct, as well as to amuse all classes of readers, and we deem it fortunate for the country that the most popular Magazine of the United States is avowedly an ally in the cause of virtue and morality We have seen no article in this (March) or any past number which a Christian man would not desire his family to read.—N. Y. Christian Advocate and Journal.

It is the foremost Magazine of the day. The fireside never had a more delightful companion, nor the million a more entertaining friend than Harper's Magazine.—Methodist Protestant, (Baltimore).

The most popular monthly in the world. It has become one of the literary wonders of this country. Almost exclusively composed of the works of American authors and artists, it pays its contributors some twenty-five hundred dollars monthly. It is a happy circumstance that it aims at the highest standard of literature and the purest of morals in all its pages.—N. Y. Observer.

TERMS.—The Magazine may be obtained of Booksellers, Periodical Agents, or from the Publishers, at THREE DOLLARS a year, or TWENTY-FIVE CENTS a Number. The Semi-annual Volumes, as completed, neatly bound in Cloth, are sold at TWO DOLLARS each, and Muslin Covers are furnished to those who wish to have their back Numbers uniformly bound, at TWENTY-FIVE CENTS each. Twelve Volumes are now ready, bound.

The Publishers will supply Specimen Numbers gratuitously to Agents and Postmasters, and will make liberal arrangements with them for circulating the Magazine. They will also supply Clubs, of two persons at Five Dollars a year, or five persons at Ten Dollars. Clergymen and Teachers supplied at Two Dollars a year.

ap26tf Harper & Brothers, PUBLISHERS.

IF you would be posted,

If you want mental food, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you want good Pictures, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you want tip-top Stories, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you admire Cobb's Stories, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you like Fanny Fern's Sketches, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you want good Romances, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you want a good, cheap Paper, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you have four cents over, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you are lazy in the morning, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!

You will miss THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!

ap26tf Ross & Tousey, are the Agents for this Paper.

TEACHERS, ATTENTION!!—Perhaps the greatest educational event of this century is the publication of JOHNSON'S PHILOSOPHICAL CHARTS. There are ten Charts in all, each measuring 34 by 52 inches, and the set contains altogether about 300 Diagrams, illustrative of the most important outline principles of the Natural Sciences. Besides the essential diagrams found in the ordinary text-books, these charts contain several original illustrations, and possess the merit, rarely found in school-books, of being entirely original in plan and arrangement. They are, moreover, highly ornamental to a school-room, and obviate the necessity of philosophical apparatus which would cost from $3,000 to $5,000. Price of the set of ten charts, neatly colored and mounted, and accompanied with an explanatory Key, (a bound book,) $15. Ditto, on thick paper, colored and mounted, without cloth, $10. Ditto, plain, in sheets, neatly bound, $5.

Booksellers, Teachers, Agents, and all interested in Education, are respectfully requested to address the publisher,

Adolphus Ranney, No. 195 Broadway, New-York.

Mr. Ranney has also the pleasure to announce that he has purchased from EDWARD H. DIXON, M. D., editor of The Scalpel, and acknowledged to be the first surgeon in America, the copy-right of a work entitled "WOMAN AND HER DISEASES, FROM THE CRADLE TO THE GRAVE;" Adapted exclusively to her instruction in the Physiology of her system, and all the diseases of her critical periods; with an Appendix on the propriety of limiting the increase of family. Price $1. Copies mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price. Address as above. ap26tf

SAMUEL YATES,

GENERAL NEWS AGENT,

Foreign and Domestic Newspapers supplied to the Trade.

No. 22 Beekman Street.

WRITING INKS.

WE ask the attention of all who wish imperishable records,—a matter of great importance to State, County and Town Offices, Banks, and others, to Dr. Chilton's test of the prominent Inks in use, made with a view to show their different degrees of permanence by exposure. Engraved facsimiles of the test can be seen at our office.

Thaddeus Davids & Co.,
ap19tm Manufacturing Stationers, 20 Cliff street.

Shipping.

C. H. MARSHALL & CO.,

Old Black Ball Line of Liverpool Packets.

CERTIFICATES

Furnished for Passage to and from Liverpool, on the 1st and 16th of every Month, by the following splendid ships:

James Foster, Jr.	Capt. J. W. Porter.
Neptune	" E. W. Peabody.
Harvest Queen	" E. Young.
Isaac Webb	" J. M. Bayer.
Great Western	" W. G. Furrier.
Manhattan	" T. Dixon.
Isaac Wright	" E. Abeel.
Columbia	" C. Hutchinson.
Fidelia	" W. A. Macgill.
Yorkshire	" C. A. Marshall.

REMITTANCES.

Drafts, for £1 and upwards, on the Royal Bank of Ireland, and on Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., Bankers, Liverpool and London, payable on sight.

C. H. MARSHALL & CO.,
38 Burling Slip, N. Y.

Agents in Liverpool, Baring Brothers & Co.,
OLD LINE PACKETS,
Pier 23 East River, foot of Beekman street. 6m

WILLIAMS & GUION'S

Old Black Star Line of Packets. 1856.

Passage from any part of Great Britain and Ireland, secured at the lowest possible rates by this old-established line, sailing from Liverpool to New-York every five days, comprising the following magnificent Ships:

Ships.	Captains.	Tonage.
AUSTRALIA,	Smith,	2,000
BRIDGEWATER (new),	Barstow,	2,000
CULTIVATOR (new),	Austin,	2,000
CYNOSURE,	Bray,	2,000
CORNELIA LAWRENCE (new),	Knapp,	2,000
DE WITT CLINTON,	Funk,	1,800
ENTERPRISE,	Davis,	1,200
GUY MANNERING,	Dollard,	2,000
JACOB A. WESTERVELT,	Hoodless,	2,000
IRENE,	Williams,	1,400
JOHN BRIGHT (new),	Cutting,	2,000
MARMION,	Hanley,	1,200
NORTH AMERICAN,	Clark,	1,800
OSWEGO,	Stevens,	1,400
ROBERT KELLY,	Barstow,	1,500
SILAS WRIGHT (new),	Freeman,	2,000
SOUTHAMPTON,	Furlong,	1,600
THORNTON (new),	Collins,	2,000
TICONDEROGA,	Boyle,	1,400
UNIVERSE,	Cave,	2,000
VANGUARD,	Norton,	1,800

The ships of this line are the largest and swiftest in the trade, their accommodations for passengers are unequalled, and the frequency and punctuality of their departure offer advantages to the emigrant not to be had by any Line of Packets. Such passengers as decline coming out, the money paid for them will be promptly refunded without discount.

Provisions of best quality are provided for passengers; rations, consisting of Bread, Flour, Rice, Oatmeal, Tea, Sugar, Molasses, Salt, &c.

The increased patronage received by the proprietors of the Old Black Star Line has induced them to add to the Line several New Ships, which have taken their place this season; no expense has been spared to render the facilities for Emigration equal to the times, and add to the renown of these celebrated Packets.

The regular Sailing days are 1st, 8th, 11th, 18th, 21st, and 26th of each month; this will give passengers opportunity for embarking more frequent than by any other established Line, to which the attention of the public is respectfully called.

No Certificate of Passage will be issued for children under 12 years of age unless accompanied by an adult, who must be paid for on same certificate; for persons over 60 years of age, or with any impediment, without a Permit from Commissioners of Emigration.

REMITTANCES.

Persons wanting to send money to their friends can obtain drafts for any amount, which will be cashed at sight at the following Banks:

Ireland—National Bank of Ireland; Royal Bank of Ireland; Ulster Banking Co., and their Branches.

Scotland—National Bank of Scotland and Branches.

England—Messrs. GLYNN, MILLS & Co, Bankers, London; GUION & Co., Merchants, Liverpool.

For further particulars apply, if by letter post-paid, to

WILLIAMS & GUION,
40 Fulton street, New-York.

GUION & CO.,
115 Waterloo Road, Liverpool.

AGENTS—JOHN WHITNEY, Providence, R. I.
EDWARD RYAN, 2 Albany street, Boston.
THOMAS RATTIGAN, Pittsburgh, Pa.

THOS. C. ROCHE'S
PASSAGE AND DRAFT OFFICE 83 SOUTH ST.

Sole Passenger Agent for GRINNELL'S celebrated

Swallow Tail Line of Liverpool and London Packets.

THOSE sending for their friends in the Old Country can make arrangements at this office to bring them from any part of IRELAND or ENGLAND at the lowest rates.

The ships sail from Liverpool four times a month, and from London twice a month.

Drafts for sale for £1 and upwards, payable in any part of England, Ireland, Scotland or Wales.

Passage Tickets and Drafts sold in this office are GUARANTEED by CORNELIUS GRINNELL, Esq., 87 South street, New-York.

☞ No connection whatever with any other Person or House useing the name of Roche.

For further information apply to THOMAS C. ROCHE, ap263m Old Stand, 83 South street, New-York.

THE NEW-YORK AND LIVERPOOL
United States Mail Line.

The ships composing this line are the following:

The ATLANTIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The ADRIATIC .....Capt. West.
The PACIFIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The BALTIC .....Capt. Comstock.

These ships have been built by contract, expressly for the government service. Every care has been taken in their construction, as also in their engines to insure strength and speed; and their accommodations for passengers are unequalled for elegance and comfort.

Price of passage from New-York to Liverpool in first cabin, $130; in second do., $75. Exclusive use of extra size state rooms, $325. From Liverpool to New-York, 30 and 20 guineas.

An experienced surgeon attached to each ship.

No berth can be secured until paid for.

PROPOSED DATES OF SAILING.

FROM NEW-YORK.	FROM LIVERPOOL.
Saturday, April 26, 1856.	Wednesday, April 16, 1856.
.. May 10, ..	.. April 30, ..
.. May 24, ..	.. May 14, ..
	.. May 28, ..
	.. June 11, ..

For freight or passage, apply to

Edw'd. K. Collins & Co., No. 56 Wall street, New-York.
Brown, Shipley & Co., Liverpool.
Stephen Kennard & Co., 27 Austin Friars, London.
B. G. Wainwright & Co., Paris.

The owners of these ships will not be accountable for gold, silver, bullion, specie, jewelry, precious stones or metals, unless bills of lading are signed therefor, and the value thereof therein expressed.

Shippers will please take notice, that the ships of this line cannot carry any goods contraband of war. ap26 6m.

Emigration.

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,
Office, 51 Chambers street.

NOTICE.—The recent failures, by which a large amount of Bills remitted from this country to friends in Ireland, has been returned unpaid, afford to this Society the opportunity, and at the same time impose upon it the duty of informing the public, that such losses would have been prevented if the parties purchasing Bills had availed themselves of the advantages offered by the Society.

For the purpose of entire protection a fund is constantly kept on deposit in the Bank of Ireland, against which this Society issues its drafts, payable at sight (from sums of £1 sterling and upwards), on the Bank and all its branches, and has thereby for the last Ten Years afforded a mode of remittance perfectly safe and unquestionable.

New-York, December 29, 1851.

ANDREW CARRIGAN, President.

JOHN MANNING, ROBERT J. DILLON, HUGH KELLY, } Vice-Presidents.

EDWARD C. DONNELLY, Corresponding Secretary.
PETER CREBAR, Recording Secretary.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Felix Ingoldsby,	John Nicholson,	William Redmond.
William Watson,	Hugh Kelly,	James Olwell,
John Manning,	Cornel Sheehan,	Daniel Devlin,
Terence Donnelly,	Romaine Dillon,	John McMenomy.

EMIGRANT INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS BANK.

No. 51 CHAMBERS STREET.

THIS Institution has been established for the purpose of affording to Emigrants and others, a safe place of deposit for their funds, to protect them from robbery and fraud.

It is conducted with the strictest economy—neither the Officers and Trustees, receive any compensation for their services. The entire profits belong to the Depositors, and will be divided amongst them, having due regard to the safety of the funds.

The last dividend was six per cent. upon all sums of $500 and under, and and will be continued or increased as the profits may justify.

Bank open to receive Deposits, daily, from 10 A. M., to 2, and from 5 to 7 P. M.

TRUSTEES.

William Watson,	John P. Nesmith,
John Nicholson,	John Milhau,
Andrew Carrigan,	Edward W. Tiers,
James Kelly,	Charles M. Connelly,
James Kerrigan,	Cornelius H. Sheehan,
Hugh Kelly,	Edward Bayer,
Charles O'Connor,	Daniel Devlin.
James Olwell,

JOSEPH STUART, President.
FELIX INGOLDSBY, 1st Vice-President.
JOHN MCMENOMY, 2d Vice-President.
TERENCE DONNELLY, Treasurer.
LOUIS B. BINSSE, Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Accountant.
JOHN MANNING, Comptroller. tf

NATURALIZATION—IMPORTANT NOTICE.

THE subscriber respectfully informs the Foreign Population of New-England that he still attends to the business of preparing first and second papers for those who wish to become citizens of the United States, on very moderate terms, at his old stand, 129 Federal street, Boston.

N.B. First papers every day; last papers every Friday.

THOMAS ROWEAN, Justice of the Peace,
and the Oldest Naturalization Agent in New England.

REMITTANCES TO

ENGLAND, IRELAND AND SCOTLAND.

STERLING BILLS for sale on Messrs. Prescott, Grote & Co., Bankers, London, from £1 upwards, payable on demand, and negotiable in any part of the United Kingdom; also Bank of England Notes and Drafts of any of the English Banks or Bankers, bought and sold.

ap191y Prime & Co., 54 Wall street.

DRAFTS FOR £1 AND UPWARDS,
ON THE ROYAL BANK OF IRELAND,

FOR SALE AT THE BANKING HOUSE OF JOHN B. MURRAY,
No. 44 Wall street, (over Bank of North America,) New-York.

PERSONS wishing to send money to their friends in Europe, can remit it to Mr. Murray, by letter, post-paid, who will, upon receipt, forward a draft on the Royal Bank, without charge, to the person designated. 3m*

☞ To prevent loss, every Draft is registered here, and a copy of the register forwarded to the Bank by every mail steamer.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,

Office, corner of South and Beach Streets, Boston.

THE office of this Society is open from 7 A. M., to 6 P. M., where Emigrants can apply to obtain situations for which they are fitted. Farmers, Mechanics, and others in want of labor, will apply at the office.

Orders from employers in the country, stating the services required, the wages given, and the cheapest mode of conveyance, and giving respectable reference, will meet with prompt attention.

The Society will be thankful for all circumstantial and early information of any fraud, imposition or outrage committed on emigrants, and will endeavor speedily to apply a remedy.

MARTIN GRIFFIN, ARTHUR M'AVOY, } Vice Presidents.

NICHOLAS J. BEAN, Cor. Secretary.
JAMES FERGUSON, Rec. Secretary.
WILLIAM HICKEY, Treasurer.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

John Hughes,	P. Holly,
William Keating,	Christopher Plunkett,
Daniel O'Rourke,	Jeremiah Ford,
Thomas Hughes,	Hugh Duffy,
Owen Lappan,	M. Lennon, Charlestown,
J. Ryder,	James O'Brien, do.,

Patrick C. Boyle, Roxbury.

MICHAEL HUGHES, Agent.

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND, &c.

GEORGE McBRIDE, Jr., No. 14 Broadway, continues to transmit money, in sums large or small, to persons residing in any part of Ireland, in the same manner as he and his predecessor in business have done for the last thirty years, and more; also to any part of England or Scotland.

Money remitted by letter, post paid, to the subscriber, or personally deposited with him, with the name of the person or persons in Ireland, England or Scotland, to whom it is to be sent, and nearest post town, will be immediately transmitted and paid accordingly, and a receipt to that effect given or forwarded to the sender.

3mo GEORGE McBRIDE, Jr., N. N.

WRITING AND BOOK-KEEPING.

FOSTER, DIXON & CO., give Lessons in Writing, Arithmetic, and Book-keeping, at 346 Broadway, where gentlemen are qualified for Mercantile situations, in an expeditious and superior manner.

The "New-York School of Writing and Accounts," is admitted to be the best organized institution of the kind in the United States. The course of instruction is practical, thorough and complete; the terms moderate; the hours of attendance 9 A. M. to 9 P. M., at the student's convenience; and every facility is afforded for the attainment of elegance in PENMANSHIP, expertness in ARITHMETIC, and skill in Book-keeping. 4t*

From the Dublin Tablet.

"Having experienced the benefits which Mr. Foster has bestowed upon the rising generation by his 'Pencilled Copy Books,' we were prepared to expect in his 'Double Eatry Elucidated' a just theory, clearly and forcibly expressed. We are glad to see that the press has done the work justice—that Hood found it 'philosophical;' Friend of India 'scientific;' the Economist considers it the 'perfection of principle;' the Express recommends it for its 'simplicity; and the London Times speaks of it as 'an excellent manual of business.' In all this we have only to add our full agreement. It removes a reproach which has hitherto fallen heavily upon our commercial education. It teaches a science."

STATEN ISLAND

FANCY DYING ESTABLISHMENT.

OFFICE No. 3 John street, (two doors from Broadway,) New-York, solicit orders for dying Broadcloths, Merinoes, Paramattas, De Laines, and Silk, Woolen, and fancy goods of every description; Satin and Taffeta Ribbons, Gimps, Fringes, Galloons, and other trimmings dyed and re-finished with great success.

Also ladies and gentlemens Garments, Shawls, &c., &c.

BARRETT, NEPHEW & CO.,
3mos 3, John st., (2 doors from Broadway,) N. Y.

Special Notices.

DRILL ROOM GUIDE.

NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

COMPANY B, (Fitzgerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MAGUIRE, Capt.
Company D, (Guyon Cadets) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MURPHY, Capt.
Company I, (Jackson Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." W. O. MURPHY, Capt.
Company H, (Erina Guard) drill Thursday Evening at "Military Hall." R. CODDINGTON, Capt.
Company —, (Irish Grenadiers) drill each Thursday Evening at 22 White street. FELIX DUFFY, Capt.

TENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Brookes' Rooms." JOHN KENNEDY, Capt.

ELEVENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Montgomery Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. S. MURPHY, Capt.

SIXTY NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Irish Rifles) drill each Tuesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES QUINLAN, Capt.
Company K, (Brian Boroihme Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES HUSTON, Capt.
Company —, (Fag a Bealac Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." GILBERT RIORDAN, Capt.
Company —, (Mechanic's Guard) drill each second Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." Lieut. WM. MALONE, Com'dt.
Company —, (Emmet Life Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Worth's Military Head Quarters," 22 White street. T. LYNCH, Capt.

70th REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company D, (Napper Tandy Light Artillery) drill each Thursday Evening at Brooklyn City Armory. WM. H. HOGAN, Capt.

SEVENTY FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company A, (State Rifles) drill each Wednesday Evening at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. Lieut. JAS. KELLY, Com'dt.
Company B, (Irish National Guard) drill each Friday Evening at "Centre Market Rooms." JOHN LANE, Capt.
Company C, (Young Ireland Rifles) drill each Friday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JOHN BURKE, Capt.
Company D, (—— ——) drill each —— at ——. —— NUGENT, Capt.
Company E, (T. F. Meagher Rifles) drill each —— at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. J. B. DONNELLY, Capt.
Company F, (Mich'l. Doheny Rifles) drill each —— at ——. J. F. MAGUIRE, Capt.
Company G. (Emmet Rifles) drill each —— at ——. JOHN BEGG, Capt.

INDEPENDENT COMPANIES.

Company —, (Edward Fitzgerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." MICH'L. FLOOD NAGLE, Capt.
Company —, (O'Mahony Guard, E. M. A.,) drill each Tuesday Evening at "North America Rooms," cor. of Bayard and Bowery. JAMES CAVANAGH, Capt.

N. B.—Commandants of Irish-American Military Companies throughout the United States, are respectfully tendered a place in the above "Directory," and requested to send such information as will enable us to represent them in it.

A CIRCULAR.

TO those engaged in Mercantile pursuits, any invention that will facilitate their labors is highly worthy of notice as well as extensive patronage. One of the most important inventions of the present age is that of a pen which possesses the necessary qualities of fineness in mark and durability in use. Those of John Foley, manufacturer Gold Pens and Pencils, 167 Broadway, New-York, stand pre-eminent. Their superior value is tested by the long time he has been engaged in our city in their manufacture.

We, the subscribers who know the value of these pens, from long use of them, cheerfully recommend them to those who wish for the most convenient article in the counting room. Signed by the following and many other parties:

Geo. S. Coe, Vice-President American Exchange Bank.
B. Murray, Assistant Cashier do. do. do.
J. Seymour, Cashier Bank of North America.
F. A. Platt, Cashier Corn Exchange Bank.
B. T. Hoogland, Cashier National Bank.
W. T. Hooker, President Continental Bank.
James McCall, President Metropolitan Bank.
H. Meigs, Jr., Cashier do do.
J. C. Beach, Cashier Marine Bank.
G. R. Conover, Cashier Importers' and Traders' Bank.
R. H. Lowery, Cashier Bank of the Republic.
W. B. Meeker, Assistant Cashier Bank of New-York.
T. D. Meiggs, Teller Bank of America.
Charles Windsor, Teller Mercantile Bank.
D. Randall, do. do. do.
J. M. Crane, Teller Shoe and Leather Bank.
J. E. Southwick, President Atlantic Bank.
George D. Arthur, Cashier do. do.
P. S. Henderson, Cashier Brooklyn Bank.
Constant W. Brown, Merchants' Bank.
Joseph W. Corlies, President St. Nicholas Bank.
George Ellis, Cashier Bank of the Commonwealth.
R. A. Tooker, Cashier Nassau Bank.
Samuel B. White, Cashier Grocers' Bank.
Edwin Ludlow, Cashier Ohio Life Insurance and Trust Co.
H. W. Cheeseman, Teller Market Bank.
Samuel H. Kissam, Teller Bank of Commerce.
William F. Brown, do. do. do.
S. K. Raymond, Teller Mechanics' Bank.
George D. Lyman, Manager New-York Clearing House.
Charles Dennis, Vice-President Atlantic Mutual Insurance Co.
A. B. Neilson, President Sun Mutual Insurance Co.
Elwood Walter, President Mercantile Mutual Insurance Co.
E. Russell Hinckley, President Atlas Mutual Insurance Co.
Daniel Drake Smith, President Commercial Mutual Insurance Co.
John P. Paulison, Vice-President Astor Mutual Insurance Co.
J. F. Cox, Vice-President Great Western Insurance Co.
William Le Coney, Vice-President Pacific Mutual Insurance Co.
William K. Ackerman, Secretary Illinois Central Railroad Co.
Wm. Bement, Treasurer New-York and New-Haven Railroad Co.
E. B. Litchfield, Treasurer Cleveland and Toledo Railroad Co.
R. B. Turner, Register do. do. do.
J. M. Hopkins, Sec'y. Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana R. R. Co.
G. H. Ford, Dep. Treas. do. do. do.
J. F. Davenport, Treasurer Hudson River Railroad Co.
Edward Thompson, Agent Long Island Railroad Co.
James Rowe, Cashier New-York Herald.
A. Gordon, Bookkeeper New-York Herald.
Henry L. Meech, Cashier Daily Times.
Richard B. Connelly, County Clerk.
T. M. Wigham, of Jacob Little & Co.
J. H. Stebbins, of N. R. Cobb & Co.
Jesse Payne, of Wells, Fargo & Co.

Winslow, Lanter & Co.	E. W. Tiers & Co.
R. W. Clarke, Dodge & Co.	Brown & De Rosset.
Carpenter & Vermilye.	Coolidge & Young.
Meigs and Greenleaf.	Shepard & Nelson.
H. T. Morgan & Co.	Spies, Christ & Jay.
Condit, Jenkins & Co.	H. M. Schieffelin & Fowler.
Quick L'Hommedieu.	Fairchild & Fanshawe.
Atwood & Co.	Beale, Melick & De Witt.
G. S. Robbins & Co.	Carhart, Bacon, Clark & Co.
T. Ketcham & Co.	Brewer & Caldwell.
Drake & Bradford.	American Express Co.
E. S. Munro & Co.	Hall, Dana & Co.
Wetmore & Robert.	Gage, Sloans & Dater.
Stevens, Wallace & Morris.	Afwater, Knapp & Woodruff.
Wells, Butterfield & Co.	Richards & McHarg.
S. B. Chittenden & Co.	Johnson & Higgins.
W. Carpenter, Ide & Co.	James & Henry McBride.
C. E. & W. J. Babcock.	Moody and Telfair.
Sheldon, Hoyt & Co.	L. Roberts & Co.
Bird & Neilson.	Waldo, Barey & Co.
Barclay & Livingston.	Jewell, Harrison & Co.

These Pens vary in size and price, viz., $1, $1 25, $2, $3 and $4 each, with complete silver extension cases, new style pencil, &c., attached are $2, $2 50, $3, $3 50, and $4 each. The undersigned is manufacturer of the celebrated "John Foley's bank pen," price $3 and $4 for the large size, including holder. All pens of my manufacture are made of fine gold, finished in the best manner; points warranted not to come0off, and guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction; if not, will exchange them or return the money. Any of the above pens will be sent by mail on receipt of the price. Pens and cases made to order for trade, on the most advantageous terms.

JOHN FOLEY, Gold Pen Manufacturer,
1mo 167 Broadway, New-York.

European News.

PEACE TREATY SIGNED.

The United States Mail Steamer Baltic, from Liverpool, 8 1-2 o'clock A. M. of Wednesday, April 2, arrived here at 12 o'clock on Thursday, the 17th. The Baltic brings the news that Peace was signed at Paris on Sunday, the 30th of March. The event was announced in Paris and London by salvos of artillery. Paris was illuminated, and in England the church bells were pealed. Three or four weeks must elapse ere ratifications of the treaty can be exchanged. Details of adjustment are referred to a Commission. The great event of Peace has swallowed up all minor subjects of news. For details we refer to the following extracts from our European dispatches and files:

SIGNING OF THE TREATY.

The London Times Paris correspondence says:—"A Council of Ministers was held at the Tuileries at 11 1-2 and remained sitting till 12 1-4. The Emperor presided, and gave his last instructions, and Count Walewski returned to his official residence to receive the Plenipotentiaries. They appeared in full uniform, and wore all their orders and decorations. They assembled in the Salle de Conferences before half-past twelve, and after the Treaty was read over proceeded to sign it in the same alphabetical order in which they have been wont to take their places during the Conferences. Crowds of people had been out from an early hour, as it was known that something important was to occur, and numerous groups of spectators gathered on the quays opposite and close to the Foreign Office to see the Plenipotentiaries pass. These were received, both on going and returning, with marks of great respect from the people. Everything took place as mentioned.

"The moment the signatures were completed the expected signal was given, and the cannon from the esplanade of the Invalides proclaimed the news before the Plenipotentiaries had quitted the hall. Soon after the following notice was posted up on the walls of Paris:

"'CONGRESS OF PARIS, March 30, 1856.

"'Peace has been signed this day at 1 o'clock, at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. The Plenipotentiaries of France, Austria, Great Britain, Prussia, Russia, Sardinia and Turkey, have affixed their signatures to the treaty which puts an end to the present war, and which, by settling the question of the East, establishes the repose of Europe on solid and durable bases.

"'PIETRE, Prefect of Police.'

"This notice was read by thousands with intense curiosity and with great satisfaction. Soon after appeared a supplement to the Moniteur containing the same announcement. The effect produced is of course all that could be imagined, and the feeling would very probably have been much more strongly expressed, had it not been that for two or three days past the conclusion was confidently expected for this day.

"The weather is fine, the sky serene, the sun warm and undimmed, and all the thoroughfares are thronged with people. Already preparations are made for the illumination of to-night, which, it is expected, will rival the display on the birth of the Imperial prince. I should not omit the coincidence that the Countess Walewski, wife of the Minister for Foreign Affairs and President of the Congress, was delivered of a girl this morning at 9 o'clock, only three or four hours before her husband affixed his signature to the treaty of peace.

"The Plenipotentiaries will continue to meet during the present week, as before, for the settlement of other matters not of a light or unimportant character, which have not yet been settled. They and the resident members of the diplomatic corps dine, in full uniform, with the Minister of Foreign Affairs tomorrow. The treaty will not be made public until the exchange of the ratifications, and, as Constantinople and St. Petersburg are distant from Paris, the Plenipotentiaries remain still bound by their obligation of silence for two or three weeks to come."

Le Nord says that the organization of the Principalities is one of these reserved subjects, and the Debats points out as another the special regulations necessary for assuring the free navigation of the Danube.

The Moniteur of April 1, announced that by especial decrees the award of Grand Cross of the Legion of HONOR is conferred on Count Walewski, and Baron de Bourqueney is raised to the dignity of a Senator. Official journals also announce the Emperor's decision that the soldiers of the class of 1848, who have been retained until this time under the military banners, shall be restored to their homes. Orders for the immediate execution of the will of the Emperor have already been issued by the Ministry of War. The ceremonial announcement of the conclusion of peace was made to the Senate and Corps Legislatif on Monday, in the words previously employed to announce the fact in the Moniteur. To this proclamation the Minister of State added:—"The Emperor has charged that on bringing the fact to your knowledge I should thank you for the patriotic support which you have always afforded him, and which, with the admirable devotion of the allied fleets and armies, have so powerfully contributed to the happy issue of the war."

Proclamation of the Peace in London.

On Monday, the 31st, the Lord Mayor of London, accompanied by the civic officers, appeared in citizen's costume on the portico of the Mansion-House, and read the following letter:

"HOME OFFICE, March 31, 1856.

"MY LORD MAYOR: I have the honor to acquaint you that a dispatch has this morning been received from the Earl of Clarendon, dated Paris, March 30, announcing that a definitive treaty for the restoration of peace, and for the maintenance of the integrity and independence of the Ottoman Power, was yesterday signed at Paris by the Plenipotentiaries of her Majesty, of the Emperor of the French, of the King of Sardinia, and of the Sultan, and also of the Emperor of Austria and the King of Prussia, on the one part, and the Emperor of all the Russias, on the other. "(Signed) G. GREY."

After cheers for the Queen, Army, and Navy, and the Allies, the spectators dispersed.

At noon, a large crowd assembled at the Exchange, in expectation that the heralds would appear in full pageantry, as in days of old, to proclaim peace. No one appeared, however, except the Mayor, who again read the above letter. At one o'clock, the Tower and Park guns fired a salute of 101. Flags were generally displayed in the city, and from the shipping. In other cities, the same displays were made, quietly, and without enthusiasm.

Parliament re-assembled on Monday evening, March 31, and proceeded with ordinary routine business. After the lapse of some time,

Mr. French said it was without precedent that the war should be concluded without her Majesty's ministers condescending to inform the House of the fact.

Lord Palmerston replied: The House is perfectly aware from The Gazette, that yesterday, at two o'clock, a treaty of peace was signed at Paris (cheers). The House will have seen by the announcement in The Gazette, that it was determined by the Congress that the particular conditions of the treaty should not be made public until the ratifications had been exchanged. And that, indeed, is the usual course, for it is a mark of obvious deference to the Powers who are parties to the treaty. At the same time, without going into any details of the conditions, the main substance of which is already known to all the world, because it has been embodied in protocols, and published in every country of Europe, I may say at least, that my conviction is, that the treaty of peace will be deemed satisfactory by this country, and by Europe (cheers). Sir, it will be found that the objects for which the war was undertaken, have been fully accomplished. It will be found that by the stipulations of that treaty the integrity and independence of the Turkish Empire will be secured, as far as human arrangement can effect that purpose (cheers). It will be found that that treaty is honorable to all the powers who are contracting parties to it, and I trust that while, on the one hand, it has put an end to a war which every friend of humanity must naturally have wished to see concluded, on the other hand, it will lay the foundations of a peace which I trust at least, as regards the circumstances out of which the war began, will be lasting and enduring (hear, hear). Sir, during the negotiations which have led to this peace, I am happy to say that the same cordiality which has prevailed among the Allies in carrying on the war, has also mainly contributed to the conclusion of peace, and that we shall leave off at the conclusion of this war in a stricter and closer alliance with them—and in a more extended alliance—than existed during the continuance of the war; and that, therefore, the future permanence not only of a good understanding, but of an intimate connection of the great powers of Europe will have been cemented and strengthened by the communications that have taken place during the negotiations (hear, hear). Sir, I have nothing more to say, except that it must be gratifying to the country to know that nothing could exceed the ability with which the British negotiators have performed their arduous and difficult task during the negotiations, and that Lord Clarendon and Lord Cowley have not only maintained the honor, dignity, and interests of the country they represented, but by their conciliatory conduct have secured for themselves and their country the respect, esteem, and good-will of those with whom they had to do. The ratifications are to be exchanged as soon as they can be received at Constantinople and St. Petersburg. The limitation of time has been four weeks, but I should hope that within three weeks the ratifications will be exchanged at Paris (cheers).

England's Revenue.

There is a net increase on the returns for the quarter, as compared with the corresponding quarter of 1855, of £1,477 625; and a net increase on returns for the year ended 31st March, 1856, as compared with those for the year ended 31st March, 1855, of £4,497,672. The returns for the quarter show an increase under every head of revenue, except Stamps and Post-Office; those for the year show a similar increase, except under the heads Stamps, Taxes, and Post-Offices. The increase in the Property Tax returns is attributable, no doubt, to the augmented percentage of that impost; that in the Customs and Excise must probably be ascribed mainly to the war taxes in those departments. It has also to be noted that in addition to the increased returns of ordinary revenue, Government have raised, during the quarter just ended, nearly three millions and a half by the issue of Exchequer Bills and Bonds, and have received a trifle more than three million and a half in instalments of the Loan of £5,000,000. There will also have to be issued, in the course of the quarter which has just commenced, Deficiency Bills to the amount of about two million and a half. This assuredly is no very alarming state of our financial affairs at the close of a two years' war. We cannot look for an immediate abatement in the rates of war taxation; there are outstanding bills still to be provided for, and our military and naval establishments cannot be reduced from a war footing in a day. But it is a striking exemplification of the power and resources of Great Britain, that a war which has exhausted Russia, and made even France stagger, appears likely to impose upon us burdens scarcely greater than we have ere now incurred to relieve an Irish famine—certainly less than we voluntarily imposed upon ourselves to put down the slave trade and emancipate the negroes in our colonies.

The London Times lately addressed itself to the French ministry of war to obtain the biographies of some of the principal French generals, the history of the campaigns of some of the African regiments, and some general information about the principal military institutions in France, with a view to a reform of the military system of Great Britain. This application was, it is said, supported by the English cabinet.

Important Reforms in Russian Poland.

Paris (March 20) Correspondent of the London Post.

I have received communications from St. Petersburgh dated the 19th. If my informant be correct, very important reforms are to take place in Russian Poland. The following, it is said, are the concessions about to be accorded:

1. A general amnesty for all political offences.
2. The introduction of the Polish language into the universities.
3. A new division of provinces and revision of frontier.
4. Permission to wear the Polish uniform.

It is thought by this means to attach all Poles to the cause of Russia, and forever obliterate the idea of independence. It remains to observe that reports like the above have frequently found circulation without meaning anything whatever. The police of Warsaw occasionally set such gossip going for ascertaining political opinion. But on the present occasion I am assured that the Russian Government is sincere, and the specified boons will be accorded.

SERFAGE IN RUSSIA.—The Independence Belge of the 30th March says: "A project for the abolition of slavery in Russia has been much talked of for the last few days. A St. Petersburg correspondent assures us that the plan has been submitted to the examination of the Emperor Alexander, and that before he left the capital for Finland, the Czar issued a ukase, by which, hereafter, the serfs will have the privilege of suing their masters for their freedom, before the tribunals of the realm. Former laws granted the serf this power, but it was almost always impossible for him to make a practical use of it. Henceforward the nobles can no longer transfer their serfs to another district, or incorporate them into the army, without being authorized to do so by the decision of a competent tribunal."

Spain.

A telegraphic dispatch foom Madrid of the 29th ult. announces that the financial project of M. Santa Cruz was adopted on the 28th by the Cortes by a mojority of 184 to 27. The solution of this question occurs very favorably for the Government; it prevents or postpones a conflict between the Constituent Cortes, the result of which might be disastrous to all parties.

Italy.

The latest accounts from Parma represent the state of siege as having been carried out with the utmost vigor. Everything was subjected to military dictation, and the Austrian General Greneville, appears as the real Governor of the city, issuing orders and notifications with all the confidence of constituted authority.

It was calculated that upward of three hundred persons had been arrested since martial law had been put in force; between twenty and thirty prisoners, condemned to various terms of punishment for political offenses had been removed from the jail of Parma to Mantuy under an Austrian escort; and fresh articles had been added to the provisions of the state of siege by the Military Commandant, making it more onerous and vexatious than ever. The Auditore Bordi, who was supposed at first to have been wounded beyond all hope of recovery, was still alive on the 22d, though with little chance of life.

Accounts from Genoa state that the enlistments for the Anglo-Italian legion had been suspended by official orders from England.

DREADFUL MORTALITY FROM CHOLERA AT ZANTE, IONIAN ISLANDS.—Recent advices from Zante, at the State Department, inform us that the cholera has ceased to rage at that place; but, while we are disposed to rejoice at this cheering news, we must not overlook the fact, that quite a large number of persons were carried off by this fatal disease. The statistical report exhibits the startling fact, that from the 8th of October to the 26th of December, 1855, out of a meagre population, there were 1,082 cases of cholera, and 611 deaths.—Union.

A memorial has just been presented to the Sultan, in which his ministers are accused of having sacrificed the national honor and the interests of religion, on the occasion of the late concessions made to his Christian subjects. They are accused of having granted to the Allies the same privileges which were demanded by Russia, and the withholding of which was one of the chief causes of the war. The memorial (the authors of which are said to be known,) was presented to the Sultan by his Grand Chamberlain, Jezzet Bey. As to the effect it produced upon the monarch, nothing is known further than the fact, that Jezzet Bey has just been dismissed from office, Nichet Bey, an inferior chamberlain, having been promoted to his post.

"Commandant Fave, the orderly officer to the Emperor," says the Journal Du Havre, "who was charged with the mission of announcing to the Municipal Commission of Paris the birth of the Prince Imperial, has been gratified with a pension for life of 10,000 francs a year."

THE MORAL ANGLO-SAXONS.—We do not forget that some time since the Times declared that of all the races under heaven, the Anglo-Saxon was the only one sustaining and recruiting the "Institution of Mormonism." We take the latest corroboration from the columns of the Birmingham Journal: "On Wednesday last, an extraordinary scene was witnessed at the New-street railway station, Birmingham. A fine ship, the "Enoch Trail," having been chartered to convey a cargo of Mormons to the United States, en route to their settlement in Utah territory, three hundred men and women, boys and girls, formed the contingent supplied by the Birmingham district. They left by the half-past ten train. All seemed to belong to the working classes, and the proportion of the sexes was about equal. Many hundreds of their relatives and fellow-saints assembled at the station to bid them farewell; and, in spite of the efforts of an instrumental band to cheer the spirit of the females, some very affecting scenes were witnessed. There were 900 on board."

India and China.

The steamer Bombay arrived at Trieste March 29th 1:45 a.m., in 139 hours from Alexandria, which port she left on the 23d of March. The India and China Mails were to leave Alexandria on the 24th of March, with advices from Calcutta of the 23d of February; Bombay the 6th of March; Hong-Kong, the 15th of February; Shanghae, the 7th of February; and Canton, the 13th of February.

The annexation of Oude had been continued without disturbance. Lord Canning reached Calcutta on the 29th of February, and was sworn in as Governor-General on the 1st of March. Lord Dalhousie was to have left Calcutta for Suez on the 6th of March. The Santal districts are quiet for the present. From the scarcity of rain, a scarcity is apprehended throughout India. At Bombay trade has improved. The Insurrection in China is subsiding.

THE CAVE OF THE NATIVITY AT BETHLEHEM.—I slept last night in the Convent at Bethlehem, the guest of the Latin Monks, whom I had heard once or oftener during the night, chaunting the office. The Convent covers the cave, which is the supposed place of our Lord's nativity; and, this morning, a grave man, under the conduct of one of the monks, with a mortified air, as who would be otherwise on the site where mysteries higher than earth have been enacted? I went on a pilgrimage to the place. The cave, which is approached through the beautiful church built here by Helena, with its wide nave, four aisles, and more than forty marble columns, is a small chamber in the natural rock, not more than six yards square, now fitted up as a chapel, where numbers of silver lamps, suspended from the roof, make a dim, religious light. It has two altars—one over the nativity, the other over the place where the infant Redeemer lay in the manger, and over the altar is a good picture, in a silver frame. Under the altar of the manger is a rayed silver star let into the floor, upon which the pilgrims kneel and devoutly kiss. In the chapel, I met two missionaries from Damascus, both of whom I knew, but the place seemed too solemn for speech; not a word was spoken, and no useless doubt crossed our still thoughts whether this was the real scene of the Incarnation, but we gave ourselves up to the associations of the place, and came away solemnized and impressed with the affecting memories which hung around it.—Beaumont's Diary of a Journey to the East.

THE STATE OF PERSIA.—We read in a letter from St. Petersburg of the 12th: "Colonel Bartolomei, who was sent by General Mouravieff to the Shah of Persia, in company with the Ambassador charged to announce to the Persian Prince the accession of the Emperor to the throne, has returned here from Teheran, by Tiflis, where he stayed some time. He has been received by the Emperor. According to this officer, Persia is in such a state of disorganization that it cannot in any way be relied upon, and there only remains to urge it to the promptest possible reconciliation with England."

By the Africa.

The Cunard steamship Africa, Captain Shannon, from Liverpool, about 10 A. M. of Saturday, April 5, arrived on the 19th

Tho following from Lloyd's List may or may not have reference to the Pacific :

FIGUEIRA, March 24, 1856.

The Skipwith, Capt. Ryan, arrived here. In coming, off the Newfoundland coast, fell in with ice to the distance of two hundred miles from the land, and saw the lights of a steamer in the ice.

[The above vessel left St. Johns, Newfoundland, 13th of February.]

The Peace Plenipotentiaries have had one or two informal meetings to settle details.

The business in the British Parliament had been mostly of home interest. Papers were laid before the House of Lords on the subject of torture exercised in Madras to compel the payment of taxes.

Among the notices of motion was the following, by Lord Goderich :—To ask whether a document, which has recently appeared, purporting to be a despatch written by the British Minister at Washington to the Secretary of State of the United States, on the 27th of February last, with reference to the disputes between Great Britain and the United States on the subject of Central America, is authentic ?

The English Military Board of Inquiry into the allegations contained in the Report of the Crimean Commissioners, Sir John McNeil and Colonel Tulloch, against the Earls of Lucan, Cardigan, Gen. Airey and Col. Gordon, have held their first meeting in the hall of Chelsea Hospital. Preliminary formalities were gone through. The public were admitted. The next meeting was to be held on the 7th instant, when Lord Lucan would be put under examination.

The Paris correspondent of the London Standard, writing on April 4, says :

"Lord Cowley, the British Ambassador, had the honor of being received by the Emperor yesterday, and delivered to his Majesty the reply of his sovereign to the notification of the birth of the Prince Imperial. Count Buol Schauenstein, Austrian Plenipotentiary at the Congress, was also received by the Emperor, to deliver a similar reply, as well as a private and autograph letter from the Emperor of Austria. Baron de Manderstrom, the Swedish Minister, was afterwards honored with an audience, to present an autograph letter from his Sovereign, and one from the Prince Royal of Sweden."

The French army will, it seems, return from the Crimea in bodies of 20,000, with corresponding materiel. The Bretagne is capable of transporting 2,000 men at a time, and 150 guns by way of ballast. About six months will be occupied in the evacuation. It will begin in May, and last over October. The 2d, or Gen. Bosquet's corps, as having most suffered, will arrive first ; the 1st, or Gen. D'Autemarre's, next; and then the 3d, or General M'Mahon's. Sailing vessels will be employed for the materiel. A despatch had been received from Marshal Pelissier, which announces an improvement in the health of the army.

Accounts from Cronstadt assert that a squadron was ordered to be got ready for the middle of May, but for what purpose was not publicly known. It was rumored that the object was to convey the Emperor of Russia and one of his brothers on a visit to France and England. This report was strengthened by the fact that orders had been given to engage pilots well acquainted with the coasts of both these countries.

Advices from the Crimea state that the weather had become so intensely cold that the troops found it absolutely necessary to shut themselves up in their tents and huts.

Russia.

The Emperor Alexandria has issued ukases abolishing in several governments the exceptional administrations created with reference to a state of war, and has restored in those districts the ordinary system of government as established before the outbreak of hostilities.

A letter from St. Petersburg, of the 18th ult., in the Debats, says : "The Emperor has published a ukase which permits serfs to demand their liberty of their masters before the law courts. Previous laws endowed the serfs with this faculty, but it was almost impossible for them to make use of it. In future, nobles can no longer transfer their serfs into another district without being authorised at least by a civil tribunal. Up to this date, 387,325 silver roubles have been collected for the wounded soldiers of the Crimea. General de Brinn, who has been reprimanded, with other Generals, in the last order of the day, enjoyed hitherto the particular favor of the Emperor."

A letter from Odessa, of the 14th March, in the Austrian Correspondence, says: "The typhus fever continues its ravages here. Gen. Engelhardt has fallen a victim. It is affirmed that the disease is still more violent at Nicolaieff, and it is even said that the army of the South is losing 1,000 men a day, but this is most likely an exaggeration. Out of 300 sick militia men who were sent off to this place from Otchakoff, 20 died on the road, and 30 soon after their arrival."

TURKEY.—A dispatch dated Constantinople, the 25th ult., received via Marseilles, informs us that a Te Deum was chaunted in that city on the receipt of the gladsome intelligence of the birth of an Imperial Prince of France. On the same evening a grand banquet took place in honor of the event at the French embassy. Our Envoy at the Ottoman Porte, Sir Stratford de Redcliffe, was present, and delivered a speech bearing upon the subject which had created the hospitality. The quarters at Pera were brilliantly illuminated in honor of the occasion. Omar Pacha was about to proceed to the command of the army in Asia.

SPAIN.—In the sitting of the Cortes on Saturday, March 29, the bill on the receipts of the state, presented by the finance minister, was taken into consideration by a majority of 184 against 27. Thus the difficult question which threatened to produce a collision between the Government and the Cortes is happily solved.

Madrid, April 1.—The committee of 116 deputies of the pure progressista party has published its programme. It recognizes Marshal Espartero as chief, and expresses its sentiments in favor of the Queen and the present dynasty. The arming of the national guard throughout the country is advocated.

PORTUGAL.—We have seen accounts from Lisbon to the 29th ult. Ribiero has presented to the Portuguese Cortes, on the part of the Finance Committee, the report of that body on the Thornton contract, and on the authorization of the Government to negotiate the loan of three million in bonds, at three per cent., to be applied to the construction of railways and public works. The report was passed with some modifications in favor of Fontes, by a majority of seven to three. The discussion of these measures has not yet commenced ; a vigorous opposition to them is expected in the Chamber of Peers, from the reason that the proposed tax will chiefly affect members of that body. Bad weather still prevails in Portugal. Exchange on London 53 3-4.

PRUSSIA.—For their participation in the late Hinckledy duel, Herr Von Rochow and Herr Von der Marwitz, (as umpire,) are to be tried by court-martial, the Herrenhaus having assented thereto. The penalty affixed by the penal code of Prussia to the survivor of a duel which has ended fatally to one of the parties is imprisonment in a fortress for a term varying from two to twelve years. Hinckeldy's second, Herr Von Munchausen, has been suspended from his functions in the Ministry of the Interior.

News from India.

PROGRESS OF THE ANNEXATION OF OUDE—DESPERATE FIGHT BETWEEN ROHILLAS AND ARABS—MOVEMENTS OF DOST MAHOMMED.

Bombay (March 5,) Correspondence of the London Times.

There is every reason to believe that the annexation of Oude is proceeding quietly. The contrary, indeed, has been vehemently and repeatedly asserted by a portion of the Indian press, but a majority of the statements thus put forward are already proved to be unfounded. The King has abandoned, if he ever entertained, the idea of proceeding to England ; our Government is paying his troops ; the country is perfectly quiet ; and not a word has been heard of movements on the part of the Nepaulese. The country has been divided into four districts—Khyrabad, Lucknow, Gonda, Bareytch, and Fyzabad, each presided over by a commissioner, with three deputies. The military appointments are all filled up. Several officers of the army of this, his own presidency, will serve under General Outram in the new province. These are Captain Gell, who last year conducted the passage through Egypt of the cavalry for the Crimea ; Captain Daly, of the European Fusiliers, who has seen service and commanded irregulars in the Punjaub, Lieutenants Johnson (present with one of the regiments of the line at Alma and Inkermann,) Robert Hope Johnstone, and three others.

From the Nizam's country we have lately heard of something more than the usual amount of disorder. Gang robberies, attended with violence are reported to be frequent both in the city and camp of Hyderabad ; and those pests of the country, the Rohilla mercenaries, have again been giving trouble, though this time our soldiers have not been called on to interfere further than for the protection of their own cantonment. On the 23d of February, a party of Rohillas, closely pursued by some Arab horsemen, took refuge in the inclosure of a large tomb near the town of Jaulnah, and less than half a mile from the general bazaar of the station, from which it was separated by the river, now nearly dry, and a strip of open ground. It afterwards turned out that the Rohillas had been in the service of a neighboring Newab, one of the Nizam's feudatories, who had dismissed them two months before, without making good to them their arrears of pay. In their extremity, they betook themselves to plundering for their support, and levied contributions upon the towns and villages. The Newab dispatched his Arab horse to extirpate the body of men whom his injustice had made a band of robbers, and for two months had the chase continued, varied only by one slight skirmish, in which the Arabs were worsted. This time the pursuers had their revenge. When night fell the Rohillas broke from their covers, and were immediately set upon by the Arabs. The contending parties straggled across the river and the open ground, the Rohillas retreating towards the main street of the bazaar ; but here they found the passage barred by a party of the 2d Madras Cavalry, and being thus placed between two fires, they made a feeble attempt to get through the troopers, during which the officer in command was slightly wounded, and then dispersed in all directions. Thirteen of them were killed and many wounded, while one man only fell on the side of the Arabs. He was slain in a hand-to-hand fight with a Rohilla, who himself bore many marks of his adversary's skill. My informant—one of the officers of the station—like all who have witnessed the effects of similar affrays, in the Deccan and elsewhere in India, expresses himself as much surprised by the proofs of the exceeding sharpness of the swords and the dexterity of the hands that wield them. The next day the Arabs went away after the survivors. The dead were disposed of, the wounded tended, and the station resumed its wonted quiet. But there are always Robillas in the neighborhood ; and under the present feeble government petty outbreaks are continually to be anticipated. "Oude," continues my correspondent, "was not in a worse state than this wretched Hyderabad country."

The latest communications from Cabul chronicle at some length the events of Dost Mahomed's march to Candahar, and of his stay at that capital. Before he himself appeared on the scene, things had not gone on favorably for his cause. While he was yet one the march, one of his younger sons preceded him to Candahar, where his arrogance brought on a quarrel with the inhabitants, in the course of which he was driven out of the city, inflicting, however, more loss than he sustained. The Dost, on receiving a deputation from the city, complaining of his son's conduct, hastened to send for the young man, Shere Ali Khan by name, patched up a reconciliation between the parties, and dismissed them, himself following with all speed.

Within Candahar there was dissension between the Dost's brother and his nephew, Rahumdil Khan and Mahomed Sadeek, of which Shere Ali, encamped without the walls, took advantage to surprise and retain possession of one of the gates as soon as the near approach of the Ameer was announced. Mahomed Sadeek fled, and the Dost entered the city, and obtaining from his old and feeble brother, Bahumdil, all the property of the late chief, he became virtually, if not ostensibly, master of the place. Mahomed Sadeek, his nephew was still at large however, and to induce him to come in the Dost sent to him his son, Hyder Khan, (his envoy to us last year,) whom Mahomed eluded, first by excuses, and finally by precipitate flight to Persia. Though concerned that this member of his late brother's family should have escaped him, the Dost has not slackened in his arrangements for the portioning out and government of his new territory, which may probably be now considered as attached to Cabul, for the life at least of the present ruler.

China.

The following summary of intelligence is furnished by the Hong Kong correspondent of the Times, in a letter dated the 15th February :—"Mr. Chisholm Anstey arrived per Cadiz, and has been sworn in as her Majesty's Attorney-General for this colony. Political events have been unimportant.

Cape of Good Hope.

Advices from the Cape of Good Hope show that the anticipated export of wool in the year 1855 (namely 10,000,000 pounds) had been exceeded from the port of Algoa Bay alone, whence, however nearly the whole of the wool produced in the colony is shipped. The excess over the previous year was 3,700,000 lb., nearly equal to the whole quantity shipped from that port in 1852. The total value was upwards of £500,000, and, supposing existing prices to be maintained and peace preserved, the estimate was that the value for the present year will not fall short of £750,000. Twenty years ago wool figured as a colonial export in the Custom-house returns. Wine was then the principal article, but it is now of minor importance. The accounts from Namaqualand as to copper mining are very discouraging.

Australia.

Accounts from Sydney have been received to the 6th January. The news is of minor interest. The news of the fall of Sebastopol had been celebrated in grand style.

Advices from Sydney, of the 15th February, state that the Australian markets are dull and provisions heavy. Flour is falling at Sydney ; stocks were very heavy. In Melbourne 8000 tons of flour and wheat had been stored for want of sales.

Sir Charles Hotham, Governor of Victoria, died at Toorak on the 13th December.

English News.

The Clayton-Bulwer Treaty in the British Parliament.

Lord Goderich wished to know whether a document which had recently appeared, purporting to be a dispatch written by the British Minister at Washington, to the Secretary of State of the United States, on the 27th of February last, with reference to the disputes between this country and the United States, had been received. The dispatch had reference to the arbitration of the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty. Mr. Gladstone wished before the question was answered, to call the attention of the House to the position in which the Government was placed in reference to the Central American question. It appeared by the letters of Lord Clarendon to Mr. Buchanan, that on both sides the correspondence had ceased, and the noble lord had promised that the papers should be laid before the House in February last, but they had not yet been produced.

The reason given for the delay was that the Foreign office was occupied with other matters ; but he appealed to the House whether a mere mechanical obstacle should be allowed to interfere in so important a question. He did not wish to interfere with the discretion of the Government as to the production of the papers, or even to bind the noble lord to any pledge he had made on the subject ; but, as he understood the question to be settled, he held that they should be put in the possession of the facts of the case ; for there the responsibility of the Government ceased, and the responsibility of the House of Commons began.

Lord Palmerston charged Mr. Gladstone with speaking lightly of the important business with which the Foreign office was occupied, and repeated the reasons that had been before assigned in the production of the papers. With regard to the question put by Lord Goderich, he said that the papers on the American question would be laid on the table in a few days, and he believed the noble lord would therein find a satisfactory reply.

After some further conversation as to the course of proceedings on Thursday next, in reference to the resolutions of Lord John Russell, on education, and the amendment of Sir J. Packington, the motion for adjournment over Saturday was agreed to.

The total number of passengers who have sailed from Liverpool for the United States and the Australian colonies during the past month has been 6,618, a less number than in any corresponding month for the past four years—5,228 proceeded to the United States, in eleven ships, 16 of whom were cabin and 5,212 steerage passengers. Of these 1,600 were English, 269 Scotch, 3,119 Irish, and 224 natives of other countries, chiefly Germans. Only four ships of an aggregate tonnage of 5,777 have sailed for the Australian colonies carrying in all 1,390 passengers, of whom 22 were cabin and 1,368 steerage passengers ; 759 being English, 126 Scotch, 459 Irish and 24 natives of other countries. The names of the vessels proceeding to Australia, with destination and number of passengers were as follows :—"Champion of the Seas," Melbourne, 324 passengers ; "Shalimar," do., 244 ; "Atalanta [G]," do., 379 ; "Ben Nevis [G]," Sydney, 333 passengers.

The London evening paper the Sun was seized at the French post-office, in consequence of its appearing with a black border as a token of mourning for the peace, which it considers disastrous and disgraceful for England. The Daily News and Morning Advertiser were also seized.

A project for a submarine tunnel, from Birkenhead to Liverpool, under the river Mersey, has received encouragement, sufficient to induce the projector to bring the subject as early as possible more fully before the notice of the inhabitants of Liverpool and Birkenhead, for whose benefit particularly the project is intended, by affording a safe and easy communication from town to town, through a treble-arched tunnel beneath the Mersey ; one arch being for a double line of railway ; one arch for wagons, carts, and commercial carriages, and one arch for quick moving vehicles, equestrians and pedestrians.

The plan is a modification of the tunnel proposed by Mr. W. Austin for a passage under the sea from Dover to Calais. The Mersey tunnel would, as at present proposed and arranged, be about two miles in length, of which about three-quarters of a mile would be made under the river. The whole of the tunnel thoroughly dry, ventilated, lighted with gas, under surveillance, and easy of access at all times and seasons.

Considerable sensation was created on Monday, April 1, in the eastern district of Glasgow, in consequence of the suicide of a clergyman. The deceased conducted the services in the church on Sabbath forenoon in a very excited manner. At the conclusion of the forenoon service, he imtimated aloud, that "he who now addressed them would never address them again." When he reached home, he was very much excited. His landlady entering his bedroom, shortly after eight o'clock on Monday, discovered that he had hanged himself. Deceased's name is C. F. R. Smith.

Covent Garden Theatre stood in the parish of St. Paul, Covent Garden. The parish is a small one, and the theatre was very highly rated. The consequence is, the parochial rates have been increased upon the other inhabitants, and the new assessment is nearly double the old one. A host of small tradespeople, carpenters, machinists, semptresses, and others, have been thrown out of employment by the conflagration, and their distress increases the rates.

Thomas Needham was found guilty at Derby of attempting to blow up the spindle manufactory of Messrs. Ward and Kamm, at Dronfield. He was sentenced to four years' penal servitude,

A Metropolitan Milk and Butter Company, a Photographic Association, and a London Unadulterated Food League Company, all limited, are announced.

The Forrest Gazette states that on the farm of Easter Goldford, on the Cawdor estate, there was lately an ancient cairn or tumulus of stones raised over the graves of some aboriginal warriors. The cairn was 150 to 180 feet in circumference. In the centre were stone coffins containing bones and clay urns. In order to turn the place to some account for agricultural purposes, the whole of the stones have been removed, the boulders surrounding them blasted with gunpowder, and the ashes of the dead scattered like bone-dust on the field!

At the Liverpool assizes (being holden when the steamer left), the three presiding Judges were Irishmen—Baron Martin and Sir J. S. Willes in the Crown and Nisi Prius Courts, and Mr. Pollock in the County Court. The Daily Post remarks, that "this is reversing the old Repeal war-cry, and giving justice from, instead of for, Ireland."

It has been determined to appoint, under royal authority, a day of public thanksgiving for the conclusion of the peace.

Edward Darby, a tide-waiter in the Customs, has brought an action to recover from Thomas John Ouseley, editor, proprietor, and publisher of the Liverpool Herald, damages for a libel published in that paper of the 26th January. The first count charged the defendant with having published a libel in the newspaper, and the second count with having published a libel in the placard. The trial was exciting considerable interest.

Foreign Miscellany.

A Monster Canard.—The Presse Grayloise relates that a discovery of great scientific importance has just been made at Culmont Haute Marne). Some men employed in cutting a tunnel which is to unite the St. Dizier and Nancy railways, had just thrown down an enormous block of stone by means of gunpowder, and were in the act of breaking it in pieces, when from a cavity in it they suddenly saw emerge a living being of a monstrous form. This animal, which belongs to the class of animals hitherto considered to be extinct, has a very long neck, and a mouth filled with sharp teeth. It stands on four long legs, which are united together by two membranes, doubtless intended to support the animal in the air, and are armed with four claws terminated by long and crooked talons. Its general form resembles that of a bat, differing only in its size, which is that of a large goose. Its membranous wings, when spread out, measure from tip to tip 3 metres 22 centimetres (nearly 10 feet 7 inches). Its colour is a livid black; its skin is naked, thick, and oily; intestines only contained a colorless liquid, like clear water. On reaching the light this monster gave some slight signs of life, by shaking its wings, but soon after expired, uttering a hoarse cry. This strange creature, to which may be given the name of 'living fossil," has been brought to Gray, where a naturalist well versed in the study of paleontology immediately recognized it as belonging to the genus Pterodactylus anas, fossil remains of which have been found among the strata which geologists have designated by the name of lias. The rock in which this monster was discovered belongs precisely to that formation the deposit of which is so old that geologists date it more than a million of years back. The cavity in which the animal was lodged forms an exact hollow mould of its body, which indicates that it was completely enveloped with the sedimentary deposit.

Mr. Daniel Cameron, who was elected representative for the digging district of Woolshed, Australia, had the compliment paid to him by his supporters of having the horse he rode on at the time of the contest shod with shoes of solid gold. He was also presented with the sum of £1500.

The colony of New South Wales is about to be made a station for the royal regiment of artillery for the first time, and the first company for that service has now been placed under orders to hold themselves in readiness to embark for Sydney, New South Wales. The company ordered is Capt. Romer's, No. 3, of the 7th battalion, and will consist of one first captain, two second captains, three lieutenants, one medical officer, five sergeants, four corporals, four bombardiers, 100 gunners and drivers, and two trumpeters.

Intelligence had been received in England that the Thames sailed from Geelong on the 25th of January, with 41,788 ounces of gold, valued at £167,152. The Anglesey and the Red Jacket had also left Melbourne with considerable amounts.

It is said, in the correspondence from Constantinople, that Schamyl, the Circassian Chief, is about to transform himself into a simple vassal of the Czar. He is already in receipt of a pension from Russia, which commehced last September.

The Corriere Mercantile, of Genoa, states, on the faith of private correspondents, that 15 political arrests have just been made at Padua.

A Brussels journal says that the coronation of the Czar will take place about the 31st of August, and with great pomp.

An English church is to be built at Constantinople, by subscription, as a memorial of the British who perished in the war.

Le Nord denounces the annexation of Oude as an abominable spoliation attempted to be justified by "lying pretexts."

British and American Clippers.—The Boston Atlas alludes to the loss of the clipper ship Schomberg, intelligence of which disaster was brought by the Africa, and adds: "This vessel was built by one of the most eminent shipbuilders in Great Britain, and was designed to beat all the ships which had been built for the same owners by Mr. Donald McKay, of East Boston; but, the result, reckoning her passage up to the time she was wrecked, shows that she had been beaten by the Lightning, Champion of the Seas, James Baines and Donald M'Kay. All these, built by Mr. M'Kay, made their first passage inside of 80 days. The James Baines made it in 63 days."

News from Fort Laramie.

We are in receipt of advices from Fort Laramie to the 14th March. The intelligence is of a very gratifying character, and will do much to encourage trade during this season. General Harney has been heard from directly, and the news received that he has made peace with the Sioux Indians, excepting one band of the Sanctiona's, numbering 800 Lodges. That band ranges on the borders of the Scovonters and Mandans. The Pawnees and Sioux are to make peace immediately. The Cheyennes, Arrapahoes and Pawnees are also soon to smoke the pipe of peace. This will ensure a general pacification of almost all the tribes east of the mountains, and south of the Missouri.

Among the provisions in the treaty concluded by General Harney, is one which stipulates that the Indians shall keep off the road.—Missouri Democrat.

Thirty-fourth Congress—First Session—Senate.

April 13.—On the motion of Mr. Seward a resolution was adopted directing the Committee on Post-Offices to inquire into the expediency of establishing uniformity of postage throughout the United States. On the motion of Mr. Sumner a resolution was adopted instructing the Committee on Patents to consider the expediency of amending the Patent laws, to allow neighboring British Provinces to enjoy their benefits. The bill to authorize the Executive to facilitate the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Mississippi River to the Pacific was considered. Mr. Weller maintained that the Government has the constitutional power to construct military roads. Three hundred and forty thousand dollars, he said, had been expended to procure reports and surveys, which show that there are three or four practical railroad routes to the Pacific. He had no preference for either; his main desire was to obtain the construction of a road, from which branches would emanate as the necessities of commerce demanded. The Committee having the subject in charge propose that the Secretary of War, Secretary of the Interior and Postmaster-General shall advertise for bids, with authority, under direction of the President, to select the one most favorable. Sixteen private bills passed.

April 14.—Mr. Harlan presented an affidavit made by Colonel Lane in reference to the Kansas memorial, which was presented to the Senate by General Cass and returned by the Senate. He said that respect for the Senate called upon him to explain why he should present the second time the memorial of the members of the Provisional Legislature of Kansas. He alluded to the charge made on Monday last that the paper was a forgery, because the signatures were all in the same handwriting, and said that it was the same thing to him whether his name was attached to a paper by his authority or in his own handwriting. Again, if the paper is a copy of the orginal memorial, the establishment of that fact is proof of its authenticity. Mr. H. then proceeded to trace the character and career of Mr. Lane, and read the petition which says that the general Assembly of the provisional state of Kansas appointed a committee to draft a memorial asking Congress to admit Kansas into the Union with the Topeka constitution. The committee reported a rough draft, which unanimously passed each house, but, though correct in matter of fact it was deemed by members as crude and prolix in phraseology; and to remedy these defects it was referred to a committee with power to revise, modify and correct it, and to prepare three copies, one for each house of Congress, and one for the people of the United States. Such revision was accordingly made. Mr. Lane prays the Senate to receive the memorial, being the same as that heretofore submitted by Mr. Cass. Mr. Harlan concluded his remarks, in the course of which he alluded to Mr. Butler as being familiar with the names of Hector, Priam and Nestor—heroes of the Trojan war—but seemed more ignorant of heroes who had fought the battles of his own country. Mr. Butler replied that he had sometimes illustrated his remarks by allusions to the Iliad, and did not know but exploits at the battle of Buena Vista would yet be set to verse, and styled the Lane-iad. (Laughter.) Mr. Douglas said he had nothing to say to the Democracy of Colonel Lane, now that he had fallen from grace. Francis P. Blair and Andrew J. Donelson were democrats once. Nobody regarded them as such now, when one is a leader of the Black Republicans and the other the Know-Nothing Candidate for Vice-President. Mr. Wade replied to what he termed the pettifogging arguments of Mr. Douglas. Mr. Pugh said if the General Assembly of Kansas should adopt the report of the Committee of Supervision, and send the memorial prepared by them to the Senate properly signed and authenticated, it would be time enough to receive it. Mr. Hale said Colonel Lane had been accused of fraud, or forgery, and his character assailed by various senators. The question now is, shall a man who is accused be heard in his own defence? Mr. Wilson said Mr. Douglas had indulged in partisan catch-words unworthy of the Senate. The term Black Republicans had been applied to the friends of freedom, but between this and that of Border Ruffian democrat the Republicans were ready to take issue before the country. Mr. Douglas replied, explaining that he had used the word subdue as applicable to the traitors and rebels in Kansas. He had used the word "black" to designate the Republicans, because every clause in their platform relates to the negro question; he had used it also as a substitute for defunct National Republicans. What could be more appropriate. These principles are sectional, and not avowed in the slave states. Mr. Douglas trusted that whenever avowed they will be avowed as boldly and explicitly as in the North. Mr. Wilson alluding to remarks made by Mr. Douglas about amalgamation, said the charge usually comes from men with the odor of amalgamation on themselves. (Laughter.) He, Mr. Wilson, knew no reason why a man because he was feeble should be degraded by unjust and unequal laws. He did not disown the name of Abolitionist. At the instance of Mr. Stuart, the motion to receive Mr. Lane's petition was laid on the table by the following vote: Yeas, 29. Nays, 11.

April 15.—Ocean Steam Navigation.—Mr. Rusk, of Texas, from the Post Office Committee, to which was referred the memorials of Messrs Vanderbilt and Livingston, reported a bill to encourage new steam navigation lines to provide for the transportation of the mails by sea, and for other purposes. In consequence of the illness of Mr. Clay, who had the right to the floor on the bill to admit Kansas as a State, the subject was postponed, and the Senate went into executive session.

April 16.—The bill proposing to remove from circulation the smaller Mexican and Spanish coins, and establishing their value in receipt for government dues; also, providing for the coinage of a new description of cents was passed. Right of Property in Newly Discovered Islands.—Mr. Seward presented joint resolutions providing that uninhabited Islands, lying beyond the maritime jurisdiction of nations, which have been, or may hereafter be discovered and taken possession of by American citizens, whether in the public service or not, shall become part of the territory of the United States of America, whose jurisdiction over the same shall be asserted and maintained; but the right of property in deposits of guano or of any valuable natural products of such islands, and of embayed waters thereof shall be vested in the persons who shall have discovered and taken possession of the same (provided they shall be citizens of the United States, not engaged in the public service) their successors, administrators and assigns with the privilege of entering upon and occupying the grounds and waters for the purpose of preserving, disposing of, or taking away said deposites and productions. Referred to Committee on Foreign Relations. The Bounty Land Bill—The Kansas Question was debated, then laid aside, to enable Mr. Jones, of Iowa, to reply to the speech of Mr. Harlan on Kansas affairs. Mr. Jones addressed the Senate.

April 17.—The Coolie Trade.—Mr. Sumner, of Mass., made a motion that the Committee on Commerce be directed to inquire into the character of the commerce known as the Coolie trade, by which large numbers of the Chinese are transported from their native country in American ships, on alleged contracts for service in distant places. Also, to ascertain if the same is not conducted in violation of an existing treaty with China. The Senate then resumed the consideration of the Bounty Land Bill, but without disposing of it adjourned.

April 21.—Mr. Foot called up the Bounty Land Bill, which was briefly discussed, when the consideration of Mr. Douglas' bill for the admission of Kansas was announced as the special order. Mr. Clay replied to speeches of Messrs. Seward, Sumner, Wilson and Harlan on the bill for the admission of Kansas. He complimented the Executive for his course regarding Kansas matters, and for the firmness and consistency he had exhibited in maintaining the right of the entire country. The President, he said had been abused by Abolitionists and Southern Americans on exactly contrary ground. He had displeased the extemists of both sides by occupying middle ground and pursuing a course consistent with the rights of the North and South. As to the alleged aggressions of the slave power, he said that so far from there being any truth in the charges, the South had ever since the foundation of the Government been gradually yielding to the encroachments and usurpations of the North. He would, on some future occasion, vindicate the Northern and Southern Democrats from the charge of entertaining enmity against either section. The Senate adopted a resolution calling upon the Secretary of War to transmit copies of all the letters not heretofore communicated, which has been addressed to him during the present year by Governor Stephens, of Washington Territory, respecting the existing difficulties with the Indians, together with all correspondence relative to the hostilities in Washington and Oregon. The Naturalization Laws.—Mr. Toombs, from the Judiciary Committee, reported back the bill to amend the Naturalization laws, with the recommendation that it do not pass. On the motion of Mr. Adams the bill was made the special order for May 12. Adjourned.

House of Representatives.

April 13.—Mr. Haven submitted two letters addressed by the Secretary of the Navy to Mr. Benson, chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs, in which he invites members of Congress to visit the war-steamer Merrimac, at Anapolis, saying that the President and himself expect to leave Washington for that city this afternoon, and will wait the arrival there of to-morrow morning's train before going to the steamer.

April 14.—The Committee on Elections were discharged from the further consideration of the memorial of Mr. Faber, of Louisiana, contesting the seat of Mr. Eustis. Mr. Cobb, (Ga.,) asked leave to submit a resolution closing the present session of Congress on the fourth of July, Mr. Washburn, (Me.,) said this movement was intended to smother the Kansas investigation. The House refused to suspend the rules for the purpose of receiving the resolution, by a vote of 85 against 57; two thirds being necessary to suspend the rules.

April 15.—Compensation for a Colored Soldier.—The House passed the Senate bill authorizing payment to Jacob Dobson for services as a volunteer from California in the Mexican war. Being a colored man, and the law not permitting him to enter the army, this special act is necessary for his relief The bill amendatory of the act of 1849, regulating the payment for horses and other property lost in the military service of the United States, was passed. The bill is intended to facilitate the means of obtaining proof in such cases. The deficiency appropriation bill being under consideration, the House rejected the Senate's appropriating $300,000 for continuing the Washington aqueduct, and without final action on the bill, adjourned.

April 16.—The bill allowing a pension of twenty dollors per month for the relief of a lady in South Carolina, who lost her husband and three sons in the Mexican war, was passed. The agricultural portion of the Patent Office was received. Mr. Tyson, of Penn., from the Library Committee, reported a joint resolution for the purchase of 15,000 copies, at $5 each, of Kane's narrative of the Arctic expedition, for distribution among members of Congress, and authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to have appropriate medals struck off and presented to Dr. Kane. his officers and men, expressive of the high esteem in which Congress holds their respective services. Passed under the operation of the previous question, by four majority. Mr. Stanton, of Ohio, moved a reconsideration. He said this system of book publishing was condemned by every intelligent man in the country. He did not want his friends who were in the majority to be responsible for such extravagance. In the Presidential election it would stick to them like the poisoned shirt of Nessus. He expected to arraign the administration, not only for the sins of the Nebraska act for Executive influence and bayonets for propogating slavery, but also for profligate expenditures. Mr. Walker, of Ala., eulogized Dr. Kane for the hardships he had so nobly endured, and for valuable contributions he had furnished to science. Mr. Keitt, of S. C., inquired what party Mr. Stanton represented when he introduced his bill of indictment against the administration. The gentleman from Ohio was a leading member of the Black Republican party. They came here boasting a majority, and elected their leader Speaker; rumor says they dare not now go before the country on those issues. No disreputable dodging, no bolstering up fraud; if the North is Abolitionised, make the issue boldly—no cowardly skulking. Mr. Giddings, of Ohio, appealed to the chivalry of Mr. Keitt to give him the floor. Mr. Keitts said he could not, having promised to renew the motion to lay on the table the motion to reconsider the vote. Clamorous cries for the question followed, and the question being put, was decided in the affirmative.

April 17—Financial Statements called for.—On motion of Mr. Pringle, of New York, the President was requested to have prepared statements showing the appropriations made during each session of the last three Congresses, particularly distinguishing those made on the recommendation of the President, heads of departments and chiefs of bureaus; likewise what expenditures were made during the same period, and whether defalcations have occurred, and if so, to what amount. The Senate's Fortification bill was then tabled by a large majority, on the ground that it improperly originated in that body. The consideration of the Deficiency bill was resumed and debated till the adjournment.

April 21.—Upon assembling the House immediately proceeded to vote upon the action of the committee of the Whole on the Senate's amendments to the appropriation bill. The amendment to appropriate $300,000 for continuing the work on the Washington Aqueduct, was rejected by 27 majority.

Correspondence.

DUBLIN, March 29th, 1856.

A mail goes off to-morrow. I'm greatly tempted to begin with an excuse. But that's the way every letter begins, and as I wish to be original, I had better let the apology alone. Yet the woful dearth of news in the city, throughout the neighborhood, and the country generally, is most distressing. To one who has to make up an interesting letter, to be read by thousands, the calamity is bewildering.

There's the Tenant-right League, holding its meetings on Batchelor's walk, with Lieut. Colonel French in the chair, and a dozen or two inexhaustible patriots about him. But what comes of it? What good can they do? The whole movement is infinitely more flimsy than moonshine. I prefer to see Gallagher the ventriloquist.

An amusing story has been going the round of the papers, for the last fortnight or so, that a confidential person in the employment of Sir Thomas Wilson, Bart., the Lord of the Soil at Hampstead, where Mr. Sadlier drank his "cup of cold pison," has been visiting Caher Castle, the only property, free from incumbrances, which has been left by the miserable suicide. This is a comical invention. The old charter conveying the rights of the Crown to the Lord of the manor of Hampstead, only entitles Sir Thomas to the goods and chattels of the deceased found within the manor. The respectable Baronet, I am sure, would not set up a claim for the clothes, watch-chain, and stray shillings, of the dead swindler. That would be placing himself on an equality with the hangman, who appropriates the boots and breeches of his strangled prey.

The London and Parisian art-journals recently contained most brilliant notices of the great picture painted by Henry McManus, Master of the Government School of Design, illustrating the introduction of Christianity into Ireland. The picture represents St. Patrick, in the act of expounding to the King of Meath and his assembled court, the Druid priests and people, the truths of the Christian faith. The numerous figures are grouped in striking contrast of attitude and expression round the Great Apostle, who with the shamrock in his hand stands in the centre, and seems, as it were, to diffuse a spiritual glory all through the scene. You remember poor Duffy's beautiful house at Merton? You remember the cabinet-likenesses in oil, he had of the original members of the Young Ireland party—those of Davis, McNevin, Barry, Dillon, and John Pigot? McManus it was who painted them. Duffy dearly prized them. Besides being treasures on other accounts, they were treasurers of art. When, after his long imprisonment and harrassing trials, he had to dispose of most of his property—indeed nearly all that was valuable of it—he clung affectionately to these liknesses of his brothers, and the more so the denser the clouds of poverty closed round him.

By-the-bye, the Nation of this morning, in answer to Correspondents, in allusion to the expulsion of the paper from the news-room of the Catholic Young Men's Society by order of Archbishop Cullen, has the following sentence:

"It has been reserved for these stricter latitudes to attempt the application to the Catholic Press of a censorship far more severe than the Church ever contemplated or attempted even in Rome—and, we humbly submit, more suitable to the meridian of Siberia or Cayenne than to the gallant and generous Catholic heart of Ireland."

And then our friend Archdeacon Fitzgerald, the publication of whose speech at the Tenant-right meeting in Rathkeale, was the cause of the Nation's being expelled from the Catholic newsroom, comes out in a spirited letter, vindicates himself, and vindicates the excommunicated paper. He says:—

"The public press is the forum in which the rights of the masses are cared for, and all have a right to appear there. If bishops, who are of course, worthy of all honor elsewhere, descend into that arena, they must take the chances. If I were in the old times—Heaven save the mark!—a mitred abbot, I would, in the House of Lords, encounter, and if possible overthrow, with all the logic, and wisdom, and wit, and sarcasm I could master—though, perhaps, that would not be much—a bishop who was urging measures that I believed in my conscience to be wrong and fatal to my countrymen."

Before I put the Nation aside for the present, I might as well mention, that a very startling communication, headed Historic doubts, has appeared in its last number, the drift and point of which you will at once, and at a glance, fully discern from this bold paragraph:

"I do not hesitate deliberately to declare it my conviction, that reasons of a solid, reliable character existed for believing that Mr. John Sadleir has in reality not committed suicide at all, but has simply been playing us all the slippery trick so well known both in history and romance, of a pretended death, and a suppositious corpse; has, in fact, been merely capping the climax of his forgeries, by a dexterous forgery of himself."

The writer then enumerates several reasons, chiefly scientific, in sustainment of his view of the case, putting forward with telling strength this astounding circumstance:

"The body was not identified at the inquest by any individual whose causa scientiæ consisted in any knowledge of the body by marks or peculiarities of structure. Nay, extraordinary to relate, the sworn identification of the body as that of John Sadleir comes not from any relatives of John Sadleir, although several of them were in London, and appear at the adjourned inquest, but from a servant named Elwyn, who had been in Sadlier's employment but eighteen months. It is upon the evidence of this person, and this person only, that the body was identified for the jury."

But why should I be sickening your readers with speculations about this loathsome business? I often and often do my best to shut my eyes upon it. But it will come up—will float before me—will fill my nostrils with the miasma of the grave, and keep whirling in an inextricable eddy right before, and under me. I'll leap away from it, climb up high over to some other topic, get into purer air, and leave the foul remnant to its rottenness.

In almost every county in Ireland, the Judges have found their duties much lighter, and less arduous than they remember them to have been at any former period. Evidently this diminution of crime is to be attributed to the absence, just now, of that dire poverty which drives men, otherwise kind and warm hearted, to desperation.

Coupled with this, the agricultural prospects continue most cheering. The Waterford News says, that farming operations are being conducted with great vigor. The Roscommon Messenger announces, that the genial sunshine and warmth which has just set in, revives the highest hopes of the farmer. The Waterford Mail declares, that within the memory of the oldest inhabitant there never was a finer season than the present known or recollected. Meadows are far in advance of what they were at a corresponding date last year, according to the Newry Examiner, and a considerable breadth of ground is in preparation for green crops. The Armagh Guardian informs us their potato market is unusually large. The Cork Reporter has equal good tidings to communicate. Altogether, apart from politics, there is a pleasant and promising season to speak of. Suggestive of prosperity, it brings me congenially to a subject which discloses in the grandest light the prosperity of an old friend of your family, Charles Bianconi, of Clonmel.

As you have, no doubt, seen some time since, Bianconi has had a monument erected over the heart of O'Connell, in the Church of St. Agatha, at Rome. By all accounts, it is truly historic and beautiful. I give you, from a Roman journal, dedicated to the illustration of the Fine Arts, a description of it:

"Its height is seventeen feet by seven feet four inches wide, composed of pure carrara marble. It is truly beautiful, and in the style of the 16th century, which was the 'golden age' for the revived arts. It consists of three parts—a large base terminated by a freize and cornice, graceful yet simple, and contains a basso-relievo of fine statuary marble. From this arise two columns to support the cornice of the monument. In the middle, enclosed by these columns, is a niche containing figures in alto-relievo, also of pure statuary marble. A moulding in two light semicircular folds terminates the work, crowned by a cross, and in the middle is seen the crest of O'Connell, the shield of which is encircled with the sublime, and we may say prophetic inscription, in ancient Irish:

'O'Connell watches—Ireland is safe.'

"The basso-relievo represents the British House of Commons. The Chamber is divided across by two partitions united at the "bar," which is only raised for the entrance of the members. At the upper end, in the centre, the Speaker, robed in the costume of the 17th century, reposes in a lofty chair, over which rises the arms of England; before him is a table, on which rests the sceptre, to indicate that the majesty of the throne is inseparable from the representation of the people. On the left and right, on rows of seats, are seen the members of the House—on one side, conspicuous, are Sir Robert Peel, the Prime Minister, Lords Elliott, Lincoln, and Sir James Graham; on the other, Lords Althorpe, Ducannon, Ebrington, and Morpeth, who have taken prominent parts in Irish debates. All appear intent on a scene which is taking place at the bar, at which O'Connell as a new-elected member is presented; but the Usher of the House denies him admittance unless he first swears to the oath taken by Protestant members, of which a printed form has been presented to him. What the reply of O'Connell may be, we can easily infer by his erect position—from his calm but resolute expression—from his solemn look. He promptly refuses to take the oath of heresy—he claims his rights, and demands to put them to proof. We feel indebted to the artist for having thus shown us O'Connell in his position—the most sublime of his life.

At that bar stood three centuries of slavery, trusting in the resolve and words of one man, opposed to the three centuries of oppression, defended by a thousand intellects and a thousand prejudices; but with that solitary man we know that God and right are arrayed. The conflict was terrible as that of Goliah, with the little shepherd of Terebinth. O'Connell's voice spanned the fatal chasm which divivided Catholics from their rights. Challenged to the trial, no one dares to oppose him, and he sits in Parliament, where, denouncing in a voice of thunder the violated treaty of Limerick, he made the descendant of the traitors blush for their ancestors, and so converted and subdued them, that the very ministry itself, hitherto relentless in its hatred of Catholic Ireland, was coerced to propose Catholic Emancipation—parliament to pass it—and George the IV. to ratify it."

The Evening Post, in a biographical notice of Sir Henry Pottinger, who died the other day, wakes up out of its stupid Whiggery, with the following sentences, which bristle and flash like bayonets in an Indian sun. Listen to the old spaniel how briskly he shakes off, in a sudden fit of patriotism, the golden chain and collar that has for half a century kept him fast to the English kennel, and tell me, has not his growl a touch of the Irish wolf-dog in it? One would think it was Davis that was writing. You can't have anything better in a paper which intends to chronicle instead of catechizing, so here it is in full:

"The simple truth is that some of our London contemporaries think that England has a distinct right to appropriate every illustrious Irishman, whilst rigidly banishing all industrous natives of this country—even those who had been settled there from infancy—the moment they are unable to support themselves by their own labor, and become chargeable to the poor-rate. In regard to military commanders, we cannot deny that England, all through the present war, has suffered deeply from the want of Irishmen. Many were her generals, but few of them indeed, were fit to command. One at least of the military chiefs, De Lacy Evans, a thorough Irishman, maintained, all through, the highest reputation, for his manly bearing, and soldier-like qualities; for he had left a bed of sickness to take his part in thick of the fight, and, with a noble generosity, he left the honor of the command, to which he was entitled, to his subordinate officer, another gallant Irishman, General Pennefather. During the present century, the great achievements of the British army have been carried on under Irish leaders, and the military renown of England has been established by Irish soldiers commanded by Irishmen. The Duke of Wellington, Sir C. Napier, of Scinde, Lord Gough, from Tipperay, Lord Keane, from the county of Waterford, and other successful commanders, have become famous in our annals, and have immortalized their names in connection with the victories won under their leadership."

And again, like a brave old Celt of exhausstless bottom, he continues, blow after blow, in this right and left, from head-to-heel fashion:

"We are far from wishing to detract from the high character for stubborn and unflinching courage, which the English soldier has won upon many a hard fought field. But there is a bold and light-hearted spirit to be found in the Irish character—the most dashing bravery united with fertility of expedient—which gives to soldiers confidence in their leaders, and renders them totally indifferent to all danger. It was this intrepid spirit that animated the legions led on to victory by Wellington, Napier, Keane, and Gough. Standing half way between the phlegmatic English soldier and the impetuous ardor of the French, the Irish have long since won in every part of Europe, the character of being the first soldiers in the world, for assault and every daring enterprise requiring the strong hand and the chivalrous spirit."

Having struck right through the foe, tearing down his falsehoods and pretensions, with head uncovered, and sword uplifted, he plants his foot fiercely on the bannered lies, and thus, standing victorious and erect, exclaims:

"In that very battle ground where De Lacy Evans, an Irishman advanced in years, lately displayed all the vigorous courage of youth, united with the skill and foresight of experience, his maternal ancestor, Marshal De Lacy, had long before asserted the supremacy of Irish military genius, by conquering the Crimea for Russia.

It is only necessary to mention such facts as these, illustrative of Irish valor, in order to administer a fitting rebuke to the arrogance of those English writers, who either through ignorance or disregard of truth, attempt to ignore the claims of Ireland to a military reputation unsurpassed by any other country on the face of the globe."

The last number of the Dublin Telegraph reiterates the lie about your being a colleague of Mazzini in his designs upon the Pope. Never mind the rascal. Heretofore, you have treated all such slanders with contempt.

Be silent still. These beggarly teazers would give anything—would pawn their last soapless shirt—their last dull clotted pen—the boards of their workhouse coffin—to wring a syllable, in revenge, palliation, or contrition, from you. Such a syllable would be the fortune of them. Fold your robe and pass them by. History has noted you. The Grave-digger, who shovels the wet earth upon you slanderers will go home, smoke his pipe, and have nothing to say of them.

As for the Dublin Telegraph, never degrade yourself to notice it. Supported by a swindler of the most appalling enormity that has ever clouded and cursed the world—paid by him—instructed by him—circulated on the products of his infernal forgeries, by which the thrift and industry of the country have been cruelly deceived, upset, and overwhelmed — they who write for it are worse than lepers in the public highway, and they who touch them, even with a pen, would be mortally diseased. Be silent still.

I see they have had a splendid meeting in Waterford, for the purpose of raising subscriptions to complete the public park, which has been some time in contemplation. The Mayor presided, and made a very interesting statement. The estimated expenses amount to $6,000. The Treasury contributes something less than one-half. Mr. Joseph Malcomson subscribes $500. On looking over the report of the meeting, I see that a crowd of your old friends were present—Sir Benjamin Morris, Sam. King, Alderman Cooke, W. Marchant Ardagh, Dick Sargent, William Loyd Johnson, Pierce Newport Barron, and so on. It is high time for Waterford to have something of the sort, and I am sure that you will be delighted to hear that a project, talked about for so many years, is at last on the eve of being carried out.

The Paris correspondent of the Illustrated News, speaking of the huge hooped dresses which are now worn, states that the clergy continue their attacks upon them with undiminished fervor. "One of them," he writes, "lately cited in the pulpit a phrase already celebrated as formerly employed under similar circumstances, "that woman forgot, in loading themselves with such voluminous garments, that the gates of Heaven were narrow." There are some queer things told of the French pulpit. I remember Father Esmonde mentioning at a dinner party where I was present, that a distinguished French Jesuit of his acquaintance, undertook one time to preach in English before the congregation in Baker street, London. His text was, "Without faith a man cannot be saved." The imperfect pronunciation of the Reverend gentleman made it be understood thus—"without a face a man cannot be shaved."

Orders have been sent by the government to stop the issue of further clothing to the Irish militia. This indicates the proximate dissolution of that very gallant force. Captain John O'Connell will have to resume his patriotic labors on Burgh quay, and ceasing to be pay-master to the County Dublin Rifles, or whatever else they are called, will be under the necessity of becoming pay-master to himself in the holy and blessed cause of Repeal. Hurrah for Repeal! Ireland forever! and—

KILMAINHAM.

One of the most lamentable occurrences which have happened in Ireland, for many years, took place at an early hour on Sunday, the 30th of March, in the city of Cork. It appears that a large number of persons, fifty at the very least, assembled at a "wake" in a room on the second floor of a miserable house in Penrose square—a kind of lane or court off Duncan street, which forms a portion of that district of the city known as the "Marsh"—when of a sudden, and without any warning, save a slight sound of crackling timber, the floor, with all its living weight, fell with a crash, carrying away the lower floor with its occupants with it, and burying all, including those on the ground floor, in one mass of writhing and shrieking human beings, with dead and dying in awful proportion to the whole.

The Right. Rev. Dr. Delany, the respected Roman Catholic Bishop of Cork, has left for Dublin, en route for Rome. He is to be joined by the Right Rev. Dr. Walsh, Roman Catholic Bishop of Ossory, who will accompany his lordship to the Eternal City.

The total number of passengers who have sailed from Liverpool for the United States and the Australian colonies during the month of March, has been 6618, a less number than in any corresponding month for the past four years—5,228 proceeded to the United States, in eleven ships, 16 of whom were cabin, and 5,212 steerage passengers. Of these 1,600 were English, 269 Scotch, 3,119 Irish, and 224 natives of other conntries, chiefly Germans.

A hundred members of the Catholic Young Men's Society of Dublin have addressed a respectful remonstrance or protest to Archbishop Cullen, against the act of excluding, by his directions, the three Roman Catholic papers, the Tablet, Nation, and Weekly Telegraph, from the reading-room of their society.

Irish News.

The Lord Lieutenant of Ireland has been pleased to exercise the prerogative of mercy in favor of the unfortunate man Conway, convicted at the Waterford Assizes of the murder of a care-taker named Edward Concannon.

A letter from Clonmel, dated the 23d inst., states that the excitement consequent upon the recent disastrous failure of the Tipperary Joint-Stock Bank has calmed down considerably in that neighborhood since the appointment of the official manager, and the depositors are anxiously looking out for the period at which they may expect the first dividend.

All the prisoners in the Irish convict prisons who are of good conduct, and near the time of their discharge, are sent to Smithfield Convict Prison, Dublin, which is kept exclusively for them. They are allowed many additional privileges, are permitted to communicate with any one who they think will give them employment on their liberation, and, among other advantages, have instructive letters delivered to them of an evening.

Letters have been received from Rome, appointing the Right Rev. Dr. Walshe as Roman Catholic Bishop of Kildare and Leighlin, and the consecration will take place on the 30th inst.

A poor fisherman named Kilpatrick, residing at Killyleagh, county Down, has lately become heir to no less a sum than £16,000 by the death of an uncle in America.

Rumors again prevail in Dublin that a speedy dissolution of Parliament is in contemplation.

The harbor of Queenstown presents a crowded appearance. Nearly one hundred vessels, principally corn laden, being now in the bay.

The Diocesan Synod of Armagh will be celebrated in the parochial church of Armagh, with all becoming pomp and ceremony, on the 7th of May. The principal object of the Synod will be to promulgate with greater solemnity the decrees enacted in the Provincial Council of Drogheda. This will be the first assembly of the kind held in the diocese of Armagh for one hundred years.

We sincerely regret to announce the death of the Venerable Archdeacon MacHale, P. P. of Castlebar. This good man and pious priest was born in the parish of Keelogues in the year 1782. In 1806, he entered the College of Maynooth, where, as in after life, he was distinguished for his sound ability, solid scholarship, and sterling virtues.

The bazaar in aid of the Catholic Ragged Schools of Dublin took place on the 24th and 25th of last month, at the Rotundo. Not alone the Round Room, but also the other spacious apartments adjoining, were filled with a rich and varied array of rare and costly articles, including paintings by eminent artists, beautiful statuettes, and other gems of sculptural art; specimens of embroidery in velvet, satin, and wrought gold. The bazaar opened to the public shortly after mid-day, and in a very brief space of time the Round Room and the adjoining apartments were thronged with fashionables of both sexes. The fine band of the 15th Regiment was in attendance in the orchestra, under the direction of the bandmaster, Herr Koessl, and performed during the day a selection of brilliant pieces of music.

The anniversary ball in honor of the Patron Saint of Ireland took place on the evening of March 27, at Dublin Castle, it being postponed in consequence of the birthday of St. Patrick occurring in Passion Week.

The Foynes Railway from Limerick will open to Rathkeale on the 1st or 2d of May. His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant will inaugurate the ceremony, which will be a gratifying indication of future prosperity, and an omen of the Shannon being selected as a Transatlantic packet station. So says the Limerick Chronicle.

On Tuesday, March 25th, the splendid American clipper ship Samuel Moxley, jun., under the command of Captain A. B. Parker, sailed from Belfast to New-York, with eighty passengers on board, belonging principally to Belfast.

Amongst the various works erected for the defence of the west coast, and particularly of the noble estuary of Bantry Bay, the most important are those on the Whiddy island. They consist of three circular redoubts crowning three separate eminences, each surrounded by a fosse thirty feet wide and thirty feet deep, with scarp and counterscarp walls, beyond which is a glacis running down to the sea. The only mode of reaching the redoubt, therefore, is by a portcullis and drawbridge. These redoubts are sufficiently large to afford barrack accommodation to to 500 men.

Cardinal Wiseman, having been invited to become a life member of the Waterford Mechanics' Institute, has declined the compliment, observing: "If I could make any exception to this rule, it would be in favor of Waterford, the city in which I learned the rudiments of the language in which I now write, and received my earliest education. This recollection of early years gives, at any rate, a warmer glow to the good wishes for success and prosperity, by which alone I regret that I can answer to the honorable mention of my name in your committee."

Some annoyance having been given, by the Donegal militia, to civilians, at Charlemont, Armagh, on Easter Monday, the latter retorted. The militia afterwards repaired to the barracks, and came out to the number of hundreds, with fixed bayonets, and pursued the civilians a mile into the country. Several persons were stabbed.

Intelligence was received in Dublin, on the 4th of April, of the death of Mr. Justice Torrens, which took place at his country seat near Londonderry. The event was rather sudden, as the venerable Judge had gone through the North West Circuit, apparently in good health, and his illness, after the circuit, was only of four days' duration. The local account mentions that he was in his 81st year. He had been called to the Bar in 1798, and was raised to the Bench, when one of the Sergeants-at-law, in 1823.

Free Flow of Liquor—The Ladies in the Fight.—A few days since, in Farmington, Fulton county, Illinois, there was a very marked demonstration of the ladies on the liquor shops in that place. One lady's husband was in the habit of visiting those places; she went to remonstrate with the keepers and was told to "go away and mind her own business." From this and other similar cases the whole female portion of the village became aroused. Some 25 or 30 ladies, headed by a Mrs. Moore, armed with hatchets, proceeded to the obnoxious shops, (four in number,) and in a cool and business-like manner cut the hoops from every cask that could be found, letting the liquor out upon the floor. The bottles were emptied, and a clean sweep made of the whole business. They were threatened by some of the owners, but were not to be thus deterred from effecting their object. A crowd of men and boys followed as spectators, but no one attempted to interfere.—Rushville Repub

MEXICAN NEWS:

By the arrival of the steamship Texas, Capt. Forbes, at New Orleans, on the 11th, news was brought of the defeat of the Puebla Volunteers. President Comonfort took Puebla by storm and entered it on the 3rd. It is thought expedient to represent the surrender as a capitulation on the part of the garrison. The Mexican correspondent of the Herald says:—"On examination it will be found that the terms of the convenio are all on one side. The fact is, he (Comonfort) had them surrounded and in his power, but to save the further effusion of blood, or rather the difficulty to decide what was to be done with so many prisoners when taken, induced him to dictate his measures in advance, in the form of a written agreement."

According to a recent exposé of the present able Minister of Finance, it is estimated that the current expenses of the government for this year will be $14,228,324 93. Nor is there in this any calculation for the extraordinary expenses of a revolution such as has just terminated. Consequently it is evident that the sum is too low for the state of things.

The Minister has not yet published his estimate of the probable receipts into the treasury for this year, but, if we may judge from times past, they will not yield more than seven millions of Dollars. Here, then, is a frightful deficit which can only be overcome by a resort to some measures not heretofore tried. The only source of supply now left to the government is to be found in the immense wealth of the church; and the only measure they can adopt is to seize the funds heretofore appropriated to religious purposes. Public opinion here is so nearly unanimous as to the justice and wisdom of this policy, that it cannot be said there is a party in its favor, The whole country demands it.

The correspondent of the N.Y. Times describes the entree of the victor:—"The President was received at a tent erected near the Almeda, by Deputies, Ministers, and the different civic and military bodies of the city. A platform was erected on which he received many of them, and addressed his cogratulations to the thousands around him for the restoration of peace to their country. At 3 o'clock, P. M., the procession commenced moving. In the lead were the school children of the city, with baskets filled with flowers, which they scattered as they passed along. Cargadors followed along with immense baskets of flowers to supply them. Fine bands preceded each of these detachments of children. Then came the Deputies, the students of the military school and several bodies of priests. The President's staff came next, preceded by a band, and with the staff walked the President surrounded by his ministry.

There were over seventeen thousand persons in the procession, and there was not a street near the one through which the procession moved that it was possible to pass through after 22 o'clock. The balconies were crowded with men, women and children. All seemed pleased with what was going on. The President passed on to the Palace, where he was surrounded by his tried friends in trouble.

The city was illuminated at night, and in the Grand Plaza was an extensive display of fireworks. At the theatre Iturbide there was a grand bill in honor of the President, at which he attended, and last night again at the National Theatre."

Northern Mexico.

FORTY LIPAN INDIANS KILLED—ONE HUNDRED TAKEN PRISONERS.

The San Antonio Texan of the 3d inst. publishes instructions from Gen. Vidaurri to the Mexican commanders on the Rio Grande frontier to take strenuous measures against the Lipan Indians in Mexico, to drive them into submission before new difficulties arise with the State of Texas, and also a communication from Gen. Vidaurri to Lieut.-Col. Ruggles, commanding officer at Fort McIntosh, Texas, covering the instructions, and expressing the hope that the friendly disposition evinced by Mexico will not be misunderstood by our government.

A letter dated Laredo, March 25, says: "I know to a certainty that Col. Juan Zuazua has left Lampozos with about 180 men, by the orders of Vidaurri, to pursue the party of the Lipan tribe who had some time since established themselves between the Rio Grand and the Salado, committing numberless depredations on both banks of the river. It is said that the whole force will amount to about 400 men."

The Texan also has the annexed important intelligence: "By favor of Mr. J. B. Riche, a merchant of San Fernando, just arrived in our city, we learn that the Mexican Col. Zuazua, with a force of 400 men, has surprised, at the break of day, a Lipan camp, and taken prisoners the whole party, amounting to about 160 persons of every sex and age. On his way to Monterey, the men having evinced some disposition to mutiny, 40 of them were shot on the spot."

It is assured that Vidaurri has ordered that the prisoners shall be kept in the fortress at Perote and in the castle of San Juan de Ulna.

The civil and military authorities on the frontier of the Rio Bravo have ordered out all the men able to mount on horseback, to watch the passes, and thus effect the extermination of the remains of the Lipan tribe.

"This intelligence," adds the New Orleans Picayune, "if gratifying, as giving evidence of a disposition on the part of the Mexican authorities to do whatever they can to avoid difficulties with us, growing out of Indian incursions from their territory on the peaceable settlers of the Texan frontier."

From Buenos Ayres.—By the arrival of the bark J. T. Hodge, on the 18th ult., we are put in possession of advices from Buenos Ayres to March 1.

The news is not important, politically or commercially. The British Packet says the aspect of public affairs still remains lowering. The dangers from the Pampa Indians and the difficulties with the Argentine Confederation seriously affect all interests, the disastrous consequences being increased by the jealousies and bickerings constantly going on among the citizens of Buenos Ayres.

The difficulties with the Argentine Confederation, arising out of the Invasion of the Territory of Santa Fe, have been aggravated by a warlike proclamation from the Buenos Ayrean General Urquiza.

Troops have been sent to punish Indian depredations on the southern and western frontiers.

Montevideo.—A very exciting Presidential contest is going on for the Presidency, and assumes some of the aspects of a canvass in the United States. It is generally believed Senor Pereyra will be successful. The election was to be held on the 1st of March. Nothing else of importance.

From Perambuco.—A letter from Perambuco, March 15, says: "Cholera is very prevalent in this city, and over 2,000 have died. The Brazilian steamer Marquis De Chinda was recently lost near Coriana, not far from where the ship Shooting Star went ashore. She is a new iron steamer, on her first voyage, and was built in England. She is supposed to be insured for £300,000 sterling."

A Rio de Janeiro letter (dated 26th Feb.,) to the Philadelphia Exchange, apprizes us of the "health and tranquillity of the city and province, and the whole empire. I regret to state that the accounts from our Southern neighbors are anything but satisfactory; disaffection and revolution are the present characteristics of those Southern climes, but hope that ere many years the progress of commerce, agriculture, and arts, coupled with the stability of a well-established government, which we enjoy here, may be imitated and cherished by those whom we heartily desire to grow, prosper, and become happy."

The Suspected Privateer America at Rio de Janeiro—Difficulty between Commodore Salter and a British Admiral—Right of Search Resisted.

The following account from the Washington Organ, of the difficulty at Rio between the English Admiral and American Commodore, at that port, in relation to the suspected privateer America, gives some particulars of interest:

"We have seen a letter from one of the officers of the United States ship Savannah, under date of Feb. 11, at Rio de Janeiro, addressed to a gentleman of this city, giving some important information on this subject. It seems that the English squadron, of which Sir Hope Johnson is Admiral, was lying in the harbor of Rio, and that the steamer America, Captain Hudson, belonging to and sailing from the United States, was there also. The English Admiral, on that morning, sent a lieutenant on board the Savannah to inform Commodore Salter that, from late information received, he believed the America to be a Russian Privateer, and that she was loaded with arms and ammunition for the Russian possessions in the Pacific, and that he felt it his duty to search her. To this message Commodore Salter returned answer, that under no condition should he allow an English officer to search a vessel bearing the American flag. Captain Hudson, of the America, came on board the Savannah and denied the charge. He was perfectly willing to be searched by the officers of the Savannah, or the custom-house officers of Rio; but he would not submit to anything of the kind from the English or French, and threatened, if they sent a searching party on board, to throw them overboard. On the morning of the 12th, another message was received from Admiral Johnson, who was not satisfied with Captain Hudson's denial of the charge, but still insisted on the right to search the America. Commodore Salter sent back a warm answer, which was met by a threat on the part of the Admiral to follow, overhaul and search the America at sea. This caused the Commodore to cease all communication with the English, and bend all his energies to prepare his vessel for sea and for action. A letter was sent him from the Admiral by a British lieutenant, but the letter was returned unopened. At the time of writing, the ship was ready for sea, her boats being all hoisted in, and the ship unmoored and riding at single anchor. The America was to sail the next morning, and tow the Savannah to sea with her—the Commodore declaring that, although the British force was treble his own, he would fire upon them at the first attempt to make a forcible search. The officers and crew of the Savannah were excited by the prospect of an engagement with such odds, but hopeful of victory. Such was the certainty of an engagement, that a number of the foreign residents of Rio had chartered a steamboat to accompany the two squadrons to sea, in order that they might witness the engagement. From advices from Rio de Janeiro, we learn that the reason that Admiral Johnson, of the British squadron, insisted on searching the steamship America, which touched at that port on her way from New-York via Pernambuco to San Francisco, was, that he had received an affidavit from Samuel Adams, late second mate of the America, giving intelligence that she had guns concealed in her coal, also ammunition; that she had two sets of papers, and that while she claimed to be an American vessel she was in fact a Russian privateer. Commodore Salter, of the American squadron, called Captain Hudson, of the America, on board the frigate Savannah, and questioned him as to this statement. The charge was strenuously denied, and accompanied with a request that a searching party should be sent on board. This request the Commodore granted. The result was, that Lieutenant Le Roy and boatswain Whitaker, who led the searching party, reported in writing that they had examined every part of the America possible, and that no vestige of the alleged ammunition was found. Captain Hudson was once connected with the United States Navy. The man Edwards was shipped at Rio as second mate of the America, but was discharged the same day as incapable of doing the duty of that office.

The Pitch Lake of Trinidad, W. I.

The United States Mining Journal, lately published the particulars of an attempt in London, under the management of the Earl of Dundonald, to get up a Joint Stock Company for the purpose of manufacturing a patent fuel fitted for steam and other purposes, from the pitch obtained from the Lake in the Island of Trinidad; according to the prospectus, a sum of £6,000, together with a permanent royalty of 2s. 6d. per ton, was to be paid to the proprietor of an estate adjoining the lake, by whom the requisite method had been discovered, and who has obtained from the local Government the exclusive privilege of the manufacture for 14 years. Since this announcement was publicly made, says the Journal of the 9th inst., the value of the patent has been questioned, it being asserted that the process has long been in common use, that there is no necessity for the payment of any royalty, and that no advantage is to be obtained from the privileges said to have been granted.

[Communicated.]

Obituary.

At Newark, New-Jersey, on the 9th inst., from the effects of erysipelas in the head, John D., the beloved only son of Mr. Wm. Sheehan, late a respected merchant in Dungarvan, County of Waterford, Ireland, departed this life and was attended to his grave by a numerous cortege of sorrowing friends, relatives and acquaintances, to whom his amiability and worth had fondly endeared him.

John D. Sheehan was one of those young men—true lovers of their poor old, beautiful native land!—who fell under the ban of the government authorities in '48. After some months confinement within the gray old walls of Kilmainham, he was released and emigrated to this country, where he was since employed in several highly respectable mercantile houses, amongst others in that of the Messrs. Donnelly, of Liberty street, who very highly appreciated his abundant merits.

Answers to Correspondents.

"COLOR-ESCORT."—You are correct in the views communicated in your note as to etiquette to be observed at military funerals. But to render discussions such as you refer to unnecessary, we give the following extract from Cowper, containing all that is pertinent to the subject:

[FUNERAL HONORS.]

The escort will be formed in two ranks opposite to the quarters or tent of the deceased, with shouldered arms and bayonets fixed; the artillery and cavalry on the right of the infantry.

On the appearance of the corpse, the officer commanding the escort will command—Present arms; when the honors due to the deceased will be paid by the drums and trumpets. The music will then play an appropriate air, and the coffin will be taken to the right where it will be halted. The commander will next order—Shoulder arms. By company (or platoon) left wheel—march Column forward—guide, right march.

The column will be marched in common time to appropriate music, and on reaching the grave, will take a direction so as that the guides shall be next to the grave. When the centre of the column is opposite the grave, the commander will order—Column, halt. Right into line—wheel—march.

The coffin is then brought along the front, and the commander then orders—Present arms; and when the coffin reaches the grave, he adds—Shoulder arms. Order arms. Rest.

After the funeral service is performed, and the coffin is lowered into the grave, the commander will order—Attention. Shoulder arms. Load at will. Load, when three rounds of small arms will be fired by the escort, taking care to elevate the pieces.

This being done, the commander will order—By company (or platoon) right wheel, march. Column forward—guide left, quick march.

The music will not begin to play until the escort is clear of the enclosure or burial ground.

The funeral escort of a Major-General Commanding-in-Chief, shall consist of a regiment of infantry, a squadron of cavalry, and six pieces of artillery.

That of a Major-General, a regiment of infantry, a squadron of cavalry, and four pieces of artillery.

That of a Brigadier-General, a regiment of infantry, one company of cavalry, and two pieces of artillery.

That of a Colonel, a regiment.

That of a Lieutenant-Colonel, six companies.

That of a Major, four companies.

That of a Captain, one company.

That of a Subaltern, half a company.

The funeral escort shall always be commanded by one of the same rank with the deceased; or if none such be present, by one of the next inferior grade.

The funeral escort of a Non-commissioned Staff Officer, shall consist of sixteen rank and file, commanded by a sergeant.

That of a Sergeant, of fourteen rank and file, commanded by a sergeant.

That of a Corporal, of twelve rank and file, commanded by a corporal; and

That of a Private, of eight rank and file, commanded by a corporal.

"POMPON."—No. Our intention was to give a sketch of the Ninth, collectively, before noticing any of the companies of which it is composed; but the lateness of the hour in which we procured the necessary statistical information, compels us to defer our notice of the regiment until next week. For the same reason, a notice of the Erina Guard, of this regiment, the Carroll Guard, of the 14th Regiment, Brooklyn; also, a notice of a battalion drill of the latter regiment, must stand over.

We pleasingly add the Sunday Atlas, Express, Courier des Etats Unis, and Criterion, to the lengthened list of generous friends who have so cordially welcomed us to the Press. The kind words of our French contemporary are specially gratifying to us, coming as they do from an accomplished mind, from whose political opinions we are forced to dissent. He writes in a bright and genial language peculiarly adapted for the expression of kindly sentiments and good wishes, and in his pages that language loses none of its natural vivacity, brilliancy, and gracefullness.

We have received a letter from Lieut. Green, attached to the Staff of the Ninth Regiment, stating that the old Troop, of which the late Patk. Kerrigan was Captain, is not attached to the Sixty-ninth Regiment, as mentioned in our account of the funeral of that officer.

CAPTAIN O'KEAN, Hibernian Greens, Philadelphia, calls our attention to a mistake which occurred in the Memoir of this old and distinguished company, published in last week's News. The company was organized in 1824, not in 1829, as incorrectly printed.

"MUNSTER."—Business is transacted in the publication office.

"LITTLE MARY" has evidently bound our correspondent's heart more effectually than did the walls of Newgate in '48. From one prison to another—from "the frying pan into the fire."

LITTLE MARY.

[A new song to an old tune—"Nora Creina."]

Miss Katey hath a glance of fire,
Inspiring love just when she pleases,
Mingling hope and sweet desire,
And all the other thoughts that tease us.
But Mary's eyes, so soft and sweet,
Tender, true, and so confiding,
That in their clear and dreamy depths,
You'd see two little cupids hiding.

Oh, my gentle, Mary dear!
My pretty, bashful little Mary,
To your bright eyes my heart replies,
I love you, dearest, dearest Mary!

My Mary's eyes, so sweet and bright,
With joy and love are always glancing,
While mirth sits laughing in their light,
Like sunbeams in the morning dancing.
And then her pretty little mouth,
Whose dimpled beauty so bewitches;
The fabled Nectar of the gods
Is far less sweet than Mary's kisses!

Oh, my gentle Mary dear,
My graceful, charming, loving Mary!
So full of melting tenderness,
None can compare with little Mary.

Baltimore. JAMES F. LALOR.

"JOHN QUIN, Philadelphia."—Your communication of the 16th inst., asks a question of deep historic interest. The names of the men who sat in the Irish Parliament, which voted the Act of Union, would occupy a considerable space in these short columns. We can't afford it; and those who voted for the Union don't deserve it. Any one desirous of the catalogue you mention, will find it in Sir Jonah Barrington's Rise and Fall of the Irish Nation, commencing at page 461 and ending at page 472. An admirable edition of this invaluable book, published by D. & J. Sadlier, who take rank amongst the most enterprising and successful of the American publishers, can be had at 161 William street, New-York, and every popular Book-store throughout the country. We are very happy to receive such questions as Mr. Quinn submits to us, and shall feel equally happy in answering them as satisfactorily as possible. We place our desk, our pen, our few books, and our undivided time at the service of our race. Every letter, such as Mr. Quin's, shall be gladly received and promptly attended to.

We have received an invitation for Mrs. Luby's lecture on the "Dances of all Nations," which that lady will deliver at the Stuyvesant Institute on the 29th inst. There is every reason to expect that the lecturer will defend the "light fantastic toe" with congenial wit and grace. In her friendly note, Mrs. L. says: "It is, perhaps, no harm to show the glorious nation we live amongst, that Irish people are not only able to dance, but also to give sound reasons for so doing."

MR. MEAGHER,—In noticing the distinguished men born and bred in Waterford, in your last week's issue, (April 19th,) I notice you have omitted one whose name and fame is known all over the world. I mean Hogan, the sculptor. He was born and bred in a place called Cooleeshal, about two and a half miles from Lismore, in the county of Waterford. He afterwards moved to Tallow, (also in the same county,) where he lived for some time with his parents, and from there to Cork, where he showed the first signs of that genius which in after years developed itself, and which is the admiration and the delight of the whole world. LISMORE.

RECEIVED.—"Kildharra." "ENUL."—Next week.

DECLINED.—"L. S.," New Haven. (We would rather not publish your MS. The fact is, friend, privately, it is not worth it.) On Architecture, by a Regular Brick, notwithstanding you lay it on "with a trowel," your style needs a little mortar to hold the sense together. Your architecture is of no order in particular.

The Irish News.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, APRIL 26, 1856.

JUSTICE FOR IRELAND.

When Pierce O'Hara, in the farce of Galway Practice, exclaims in answer to Meldon—Justice, indeed! arrah what has law to do with justice?—there are volumes of bitter truth announced in what at first sounds like a joke.

The appointment of Mr. William Keogh to one of the Judgeships of the Dublin Common Pleas, left vacant by the death of Judge Torrens, confirms the position laid down indirectly in the interrogatory of the Galway attorney. An appointment more strikingly corroborative of the idea that in Ireland law has little to do with justice, or with the interests of the people, could not have been made. It fully justifies the distrust and dread with which the Irish people have long regarded the dispensation of English law in Ireland, and which have been memorably illustrated in that anecdote of the poor Tipperary peasant, who, on being told by some Judge of Assize, not to be alarmed, for he should have ample justice done him, instinctively cried out—"Faith then, my Lord, it's that same I'm afeerd off!"

Heretofore there have been violent partisans on the Bench in Ireland. There have been men of fanaticism and cant, such as Crampton; of implacable bigotry, such as old Pennefather and Lefroy; of sanguinary natures, such as Norbury and Blackburne; and there have been men, such as Doherty, who, underneath a fine presence, a silver flow of words and courtly manners, nourished to the last the rank prejudices of their ambiguous birth and Brunswick catechism.

But all these men were men of erudition, matured judgment, impressive eloquence and address. In politics, most of them were men of proved consistency. In morals, most of them were men of unimpeached propriety. In many instances exciting against themselves the political and religious feeling of the country, they seldom failed to command the respect of the community, the applause of scholars, and, as oracles of the law, the confidence of its clients, where great political considerations did not interpose. If the enemies of the country, they were neither buffoons mimicking it in Parliament, nor loafers living on its simple piety and credulity at home.

Not so with Mr. Justice Keogh, whose public career, from the start to the finish, has been a fraud, a nuisance, a debauch.

Starting as a Repealer, at a dinner in Claremorris to Mr. Dillon Browne in 1840, where he enthusiastically eulogized O'Connell in 1843, he dedicates a pamphlet to Lord De Grey, the Lord Lieutenant, rancorously denunciative of the great progenitor of Repeal. In 1847, returned as Member for Athlone by the money of some English railroad speculators, who desired to have a few paid Members on hand there to push their projects through, he takes his seat in St. Stephen's as a Peelite.

A few days after his election, happening to meet him in Westmoreland street, Dublin, and expressing our surprise at his success, he replied—"Oh, I persuaded them I'd make Athlone a seaport." The reply was but a slight exaggeration of his fraudulent propensities and powers of deceit.

In 1852 he takes an oath, in presence of the Archbishop of Tuam and the leading political personages of that part of the country, to oppose every Ministry in whose programme the repeal of the Ecclesiastical Titles Bill and Tenant-Right were not distinctly inserted. In a few weeks after, he flings into the gutter the Gospel he had kissed, taking office, as a public prosecutor, under the noble author of the Bill he was sworn to war against, and becoming the accomplice of the mortal opponents of the Measure, he was, by the most sacred of invocations, irrevocably bound to promote.

D'Israeli has called him the Mirabeau of Connaught! However this may apply, one thing is true, he has the audacity of Danton, his faithlessness, and success. As Lamartine has written of the orator of the Jacobins, some future McGeoghan or Plowden may write of Judge Keogh—he opened his mouth to have it stuffed with gold.

But it is such men who generally succeed to high places in Ireland. England governs her Irish province by such caitiffs; encourages the breed; multiplies them; feeds them; pets them; makes them her lap-dogs and spaniels; ties the Blue ribbon round their necks; and then gives them a red cushion to lie on, when they have exhausted their faculties and conscience in indecency and mischief.

The election in this Republic of Judges by the people, is spoken of by philosophic strangers as dangerous to its stability. Intelligent citizens—some very eminent Democrats, if we mistake not—entertain a similar opinion, and have opposed the clause in the revised Constitution of this State which referred the Judiciary to the suffrage of the millions.

Whether these apprehensions are wise or otherwise, we shall not presume to say; nor is it at all necessary for us any further to allude to a question no longer before the public. But were the elective power of the people, in this instance of the Judiciary, to produce all the disorders which European statesmen, ignorant of the grand instincts and wisdom of a perfectly free Democracy, solemnly predict, no error more disastrous than that which the English government have committed, in the appointment of Judge Keogh, could possibly eventuate.

Such errors on the part of their rulers drive the tamest nations to rebellion, and make beggars of the proudest Kings.

A WORD ABOUT LEGISLATION.

"Corruptissima in republica plurimæ leges."

This one remark of Tacitus, "In the most corrupt State the laws are most numerous," is enough to establish his character for high political wisdom, and would almost justify his claim to a kind of prophetic inspiration. If there is one thing which a republican people should fear more than another, it is excessive legislation; for it is beyond dispute that a great, if not the greater, portion of the social and political evils with which constitutional governments have been afflicted, have sprung from that source.

Shallow foreign writers, with but little knowledge of the American character, sometimes delight or distress themselves, as the case may be, with a picture of an empire established on the ruins of this republic; at one time, drawing the materials for their fancy sketch from what they consider an encroachment of executive power; at another, from slight indications of a warlike spirit on the part of the people. Others, however, with more sagacity, have discovered the real cause of apprehension. It was De Tocqueville, we think, who noticed "the tyranny of majorities" as constituting an important defect in the character of American institutions. That tyranny naturally evinces itself in oppressive legislation. Among American writers, Jefferson seems to have entertained a sense of the same danger, when he expressed, with such force and justice, the sentiment of his first inaugural address, "That while the will of the majority ought to prevail, that will, to be rightful, must be reasonable; that the minority possess equal rights, which equal laws must protect, and to violate which, would be oppression."

The sentiments just quoted, though somewhat old, have the same truthfulness and vigor as when first uttered, and may with profit be read, conned, and inwardly digested by our modern legislators. The people already entertain a conviction of their truth and applicability. From that conviction springs the indifference of New York citizens to the long time wasted in Congress and in the State Assembly in wearisome attempts to elect a Speaker; it being a common remark at the time, in reference to both those bodies, that they might as well remain without a Speaker, as in that case they would be powerless for mischief.

To that conviction may be attributed the easy and comfortable feelings with which the public has received the announcement that the Legislature adjourned without passing the annual appropriation bills, and other similar measures, usually considered indispensable to grease the wheels of government. To the same conviction is to be ascribed the imperturbable calmness with which they hear the determination of the Governor not to call an extra session. Indeed, it has been rumored that several philanthropic capitalists have expressed their readiness to furnish the funds requisite to carry on the government until the meeting of the next Legislature, and thus avoid the necessity of an extra session.

The people have become tired of special legislation. They are awaking to a consciousness that they are governed too much. Not that this excessive legislation is always to be ascribed to unworthy or corrupt motives. On the contrary, it generally proceeds from an officious over-anxiety on the part of the legislators to do something to improve the condition of the people. To this spirit we owe the Maine liquor law and other similar measures. But it must be remembered—

"For virtue's self may too much zeal be had,
The worst of madmen is a point run mad."

Carlyle, sneering at the American form of governmeht, defines it in his peculiar style as "Anarchy, plus the street-constable." With some few reservations and explanations, the words might be accepted as a concise definition of a perfect government. But, had he noticed the attempt of the late Albany Legislature to meddle with the present police system of the city, Carlyle would probably, in his next edition of his writings, have altered the expression, to suit our prospective condition, and made it "Anarchy, minus the street-constable."

We are startled by no unreal apprehensions. The country is still safe, and will last long enough for our day, legislation or no legislation. Neither do we wish to be understood as including all the members of the late Legislature within the scope of our censure. Among them there are many honorable exceptions. But they, as well as all future Legislatures, may be assured of one fact, that if the people had the opportunity of expressing themselves directly on half of the measures concocted for their particular benefit, they would adopt language similar to that of the French merchants, when asked by their monarch what legislation they desired for the benefit of commerce, and would say: "Gentlemen, we thank you for your kind intentions; but, as you love us, let us alone."

There it much truth yet in the old maxim, rightly understood, "The best government is that which governs least."

An American citizen, whose family has been settled in this country for three generations, has written thus, and submits it to the public.

LIGHT AND SHADE—TWO PICTURES AFTER REMBRANDT.

Within the walls of a sumptuous mansion on the Boulevard des Capucines sits the Count Walewski, Minister of the Emperor Louis Napoleon for Foreign Affairs.

There's a costly banquet spread, and the Minister presides. The band of the Guides, in their ravishing uniforms, inspire the feast. On the right of the Count sits the representative of Russia. On his left, the head-servant of Windsor Castle. Indiscriminately disposed, appear the various Plenipotentiaries, members of the Diplomatic corps, members of the Imperial Cabinet, and other high functionaries of State. The Count Walewski, the dessert being laid, rises with pictorial gravity, and in the midst of all this golden light, this military music, this fragrant profusion of the vineyard and Hyperides, proposes to these dazzling notables and nobles, the durability of the peace they have just signed with the jewelled quill of the Eagle of the Jardin des Plants—the imprisoned bird of his Olympian master.

Bravo, Count Walewski!

Stealing through the city of Berlin in disguise, foot-worn and befouled, with blood-shot eyes roving everywhere like a suspected thief's, with ears erect, watching every syllable uttered in the streets through which, as instinct or genius prompts, he passes with quick or tardy pace, there is an outlawed man, dogged by the police of Monsieur de Manteuffel, the Matsell of the Prussian capital. A Polish rebel, up to his neck in treason, he journeys to Paris, as Ignacio Commonfort came hither, a few months ago, for the sinews of war and sympathy. He gets clear of Prussia; baffles the police of Monsieur de Manteuffel; runs other risks; extricates himself from all; throws off his rags and mask; leaps, with the agility of a Mazzaroni, into the renovated livery of the Empire, and sits there on the Boulevard des Capucines, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, the Count Walewski!

Yet on the police-sheets of Berlin, and many smaller towns from the Vistula to the Elbe, the written instructions of Monsieur de Manteuffel—to arrest "an adventurer styling himself Walewski,"—for these are the precise words—still remain.

Times change. In your old age, look out, Walewski, for the police of Berlin!

JOHN FROST.

We are much gratified that a call has been made on John Frost to deliver a lecture, and we are equally happy that he has consented. Even if Mr. Frost was not a man of force, capacity and eloquence, the simple story of his long years of suffering at the hands, or rather the paws, of the British Lion, would command an interest which could well supply the place of oratory. But in manner as well as matter, our readers, whom we advise to listen to him, will not be disappointed.

Mr. Frost has grown gray in his struggles to flood the breasts of his countrymen with some democratic light. Let us see how the democrats of this city will receive him.

From the peculiarity of Mr. Frost's endeavors in the cause of Freedom—in shaking up the spirit of Englishmen, and as it were bearding the Old Lion in his den, he is certainly entitled to as proud and warm—if, indeed, he does not merit a greater—reception than was accorded to any of us Irish exiles.

NICARAGUA.

Captain William Lyster of the Nicaraguan army, "a fine specimen of a six-footer," as the daily press reported him on his arrest—a man cut out by nature, if not by inclination for a "bold dragoon," will lecture on Nicaragua, at Hope Chapel, on the 28th inst. Since Capt. Lyster's arrest he has visited the theatre of his future fortune, and from his intimacy with the ablest men of the "fillibustering" movement, as well as his notes of what is doing in Nicaragua—the capacity of the country, and its evident destiny, will present such an array of facts as must—dressed in the diction of a forcible, educated and manly mind—prove excessively interesting. He has many things to talk about which should be listened to, and will say them in a manner that will insure their remembrance.

SMITH O'BRIEN'S VISIT TO AMERICA.

We have received private letters by the last mail, informing us it is the intention of our noble friend, whose name we have just written, to pay us a visit very shortly. This intelligence, we are confident, will delight his countrymen in America. Nor will the pleasure excited by it, and still more so by his presence, be confined to them. The purity of purpose, inflexible integrity, and loftiness of bearing, which have so eminently ennobled his public career, are fully estimated by the citizens of this Republic, and they will be prompt to congratulate him on his arrival in a country the freedom and greatness of which have so often inspired his labors and appeals in behalf of Ireland.

MILITARY MEMOIRS.

THE GUYON CADETS, NINTH REG'T N. Y.

Flashing through the smoke of the recent Hungarian struggle for independence, appeared the name of a soldier of fortune, whose exploits attracted a world-wide notice at the time, and won for him an enviable distinction, even among his comrades in the cause, "native and to the manor born." Entering the Hungarian service at an early age, as a subaltern, in 1830, we find him winning his way rapidly to preferment, until the breaking out of the Insurrection in '48 reveals him in his true position, a leader whose capacity and dauntless heroism were adequate to conquer Fortune, even in her most reluctant mood, had they not been foiled by the treachery of native counsels; and whose achievements did yet "light the gloom" of general disaster and defeat. This stalwart fighter in the cause of freedom had been contributed by Ireland to Hungary, her sister in misfortune; and his family name of Quin had been changed into Gahan or more generally GUYON "in the wars."

When the Hungarian cause had sunk irretrievably, Guyon, disdaining to yield to the minions of despotism, cleft his way with dashing intrepidity through the legions of Russia to the dominions of the Sultan, in whose army he now holds high rank, under the title of KURSCHID PACHA.

From this distinguished Irishman, the company whose memoir we enter on record takes its name. It was organized in November, 1849, under the command of Captain Michael Phelan. In connection with other companies composing the regiment, it was chartered on the 29th of May, 1850, by Governor Fish, and is now designated company D, in the Ninth regiment, of which it was the original nucleus.

It may not be out of place to state that, while yet in its infancy, this company had many difficulties to contend with, testing the forbearance of its commandant and the intelligence of its members. Had it not been "armed and equipped" with these qualities amongst others, there is reason to believe that there would be now one Irish-American company the less in the First Division.

Captain Phelan held command with credit to himself and great advantage to the company until some time in the year 1854. To him and to his command belongs the honor of being the first company that inaugurated the military celebration of St. Patrick's Day, on the 17th of March, 1851. The day was excessively inclement, even for that anniversary. But the Captain was not to be deterred. In answer to a remonstrance from one of his officers, against the parade, he replied, "I have paid the band, and will follow it if necessary alone." Considering the purely national and republican spirit of this demonstration, in contradistinction to the sectarian character theretofore associated with the day in the popular mind, this was an important pioneer movement, calculated to disabuse the American community of wrong impressions, and one, therefore, on which every man who bore a part in it may look back with satisfaction.

During his connection with the company, in April, 1851, Captain Phelan visited Ireland on business of moment, and previous to his departure was presented by his command with a splendid sword and belt, suitably engraved, in token of their esteem and affection. We may observe incidentally, that during his stay in that country he was considered a fit subject for the special espionage of her Majesty's detectives, and even of their ESCORT on one notable occasion; so much attention do their employers consider as due to an American citizen! On a later occasion, when starting for California in the year 1852, at a complimentary supper given by the officers of his command, and friends, he received as testimonials of friendship from these gentlemen, a pair of duelling pistols and a beautiful tobacco-box.

On the 22d of November, 1854, Orderly Sergeant Murphy was unanimously elected to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Captain Phelan, then in California. The elegant medal which this officer now wears was presented to him by the company in 1852, as a mark of respect. It bears the inscription:—

"His heart is in the right place!"

It may not be uninteresting to mention, that in his father's house, in Dublin, it was that Lord Edward Fitzgerald was arrested by Sirr and his associate blood-hounds, after his fruitless attempt to free his native land.

On the 11th of April following, Captain Phelan, still residing in California, was unanimously elected an honorary member, being—if we are not misinformed—the only honorary member connected with any company in the regiment.

In this company have graduated several officers, now holding posts of distinction. Among others, Col. Ryan, of the 69th regiment, who, during Capt. Phelan's absence, assisted by request, in the drill, &c.; Captain Burke of the 75th, and others. It is officered at present by Capt. Thomas Murphy; 1st Lieutenant James Halpin. The other offices are vacant, awaiting an order for election from the Colonel. The uniform of the company is as follows:—Light green coat, with yellow facings; light blue pants, with one and-a-half inch buff stripe; green epaulettes with buff fringe; shako hat with brass plate, white cord braid and pompon, cartridge box, brass belt and body belt. The fatigue is a light green jacket with buff trimmings, artillery buttons, a light blue cloth cap with band and grenade. In winte a blue U. S. regulation overcoat is worn.

Among the marks of distinction conferred on this company was the presentation to it of a pair of guide colors, by the regiment, as the strongest company therein; which guide colors, together with a regimental color had been presented by the Corporation of the city of New-York to the Ninth regiment, on the previous 22d day of February, 1855, Washington's birth-day. On a late occasion, it was also selected as the escort to accompany the remains of Captain Kerrigan to Calvary Cemetery, and attracted considerable praise for the soldier-like steadiness of its fire.

ALBANY EMMET GUARDS.

Organized Feb. 22, 1844; belongs to 25th Regiment, 3rd Division. Company roll contains 74 names; 45 on an average at drill; all the members are of Irish birth but three, and these three are of Irish parentage.

P. H. Griffin, Capt.; John Evers, 1st Lieut.; Henry Mulholland, 2nd; James Swift, 3rd; John Gannon, Ensign. Staff—Major, Philip Dunn; Quarter-Master, P. Hanlon; Pay-Master, Richard Bulger; Surgeon, Michael Crummey; Adjutant, James McGinty; Engineer, Thomas O'Malley, who is also Regimental Sergeant-Major; Judge-Advocate, James Dunn; all born in Ireland.

Blue coat and pants, dress coat, red facings, gold lace trimming; bear-skin cap; brass eagle in front; green and red plume; do. worsted tassel; buff belts; large green and red worsted shoulder-knots; German-silver breast-plates, the American eagle surmounting an Irish harp raised thereon; body belt plate with "A. E. G." raised thereon; red stripe on pants; percussion muskets, newest pattern, with spring bayonets for parade; do. without spring bayonets for drill; 2 pieces of cannon, brass: fatigue dress, dark green jacket and pants; green cloth cap; patent leather knapsack, "A. E. G." in German text on the back. Officers' uniform is of the regulation pattern.

Drill every Wednesday night, commencing at half-past seven. Target excursion in September, no stated day. Annual drill for Company's medal, the Wednesday preceding 17th March. Election to fill vacancies for military and civil officers, the Monday preceding 22d February. Ball annually, on 8th January. Flank Company of Artillery; three Lieutenants have commissions. The gun squad of the company entitled to all the regimental firings.

Spent six weeks in Hudson, Columbia Co., N. Y., in the winter of 1844–5, during the Anti-rent riots. First Company in this State which volunteered for the Mexican war, and was accepted. Did not go, in consequence of the law under which they volunteered being changed.

GRATTAN GUARD, BANGOR, ME.

Organized, November 26th, 1853. Belongs to 1st Regiment, 1st Brigade, 9th Division of Volunteer Militia of the State of Maine; officered by Captain John Carroll; 1st Lieutenant, John Dowling; 2d Lieut., Michael Crowley; 3rd Lieut., James Fitzgerald; 4th Lieut., Richard Crowley; Orderly Serg't, Richard Sanders; Secretary, M. K. McGrath.

Uniform, gray broadcloth dress coat, white facings, green braid; white plume, tipped with green; white shoulder and waist belts. Colors, with white silk, gold fringe three inches deep; motto, In hoc signo vinces; on one side, likeness of Washington, with the inscription, Presented by the citizens of Bangor to the Grattan Guard; on the reverse, the Harp entwined with the Shamrock, and title of the Company. The men carry muskets. They drill every Thursday evening. Parade days, last Wednesday in May, and last ditto in October, on occasion of Regimental muster. The Company's flag, presented July 19th, 1854, in the City Hall, by the Hon. Samuel C. Blake. Arms and equipments furnished by the State. Number of members 40. Balls twice a year.

MONTGOMERY GUARD, JERSEY CITY.

Company organized August 6th, 1851; belongs to the 2d Regt., Hudson Brigade; officered by Capt. Farrell, of Co. Westmeath, Ireland; Lieut. McKeon, ditto; Lieut. McDermod, Co. Longford; Orderly Sergeant Smith, Co. Meath, Unform, light green coat, buff facings and yellow braiding; epaulettes, green with white fringe; pantaloons, dark mixed, with inch and-a-half buff Stripe; regulation hat of U. S. Infantry, white plume tipped with green; cross and body belts as worn by U. S. Infantry; Company's colors, American flag, and green flag with likeness of Richard Montgomery.

Drill hours, from September to March, half-past 7 o'clock; rest of the year, at 8 o'clock, Ranks of this Company open to respectable men of every creed and country; Armory, Hudson House, Grand street, Jersey City.

SHIELD'S GUARDS, CHICAGO, ILL.

This splendid young company formed November 25, 1854, belongs to 60th regiment, State Militia. It is officered by Capt. Charles E. Moore, Ireland: 1st Lieutenant, James A. Mulligan, New-York; 2d Lieut., James Quirk, Ireland; 3rd Lieut., B. J. Dolan, Ireland; Ensign B. Quirk, Ireland. The Staff officers are, Surgeon M. Bray, M. D.; Paymaster J. J. O'Shannessy; Commissiariat, James Barry: Quarter-master, William Savoye, all from Ireland.

Uniform—coat, dark blue, trimmed with buff and gold lace; pants, light blue with buff stripe; black patent leather cross and body belts, with breast and body plates; knapsacks and bear-skin caps.

Drill—Thursday evenings, at half-past 7 o'clock. Civil meetings, Monday evenings at half-past 7; Annual Parade, 25th Nov.; Annual Target excursion, 22d May.

On the 22d Feb., 1854, Mr. Brian Warren presented to the company its first flag. And on the 25th Nov., 1855, those estimable ladies Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Quirk presented the company with a richly-wrought American flag, the one which the company now bear.

Annual ball 25th Nov., and Lecture courses during the winter.

Literature.

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS.

DAN CALLAGHAN—THE MEMBER FOR CORK.

Cork was in an uproar. O'Counell had arrived the day before from Dublin, escorted by thousands. Thy had met him at Riversdale, a few miles from Cork, on the Dublin road; and the kingly old Tribune, in the midst of fluttering flags, the gaudiest banners, and a moving forest of oak and laurel branches, and the tumult of two dozen Temperance bands, and troops of mounted farmers, and city merchants in handsome carriages, and hundreds of Catholic priests from far and near, had entered under triumphal arches spanning the lower Glanmire road, and King street to Patrick's bridge, the opulent and ancient city of St. Finbar.

How royal and colossal he looked there, on the box of his big travelling-coach, wrapped up in his large cloak, with his gold-laced cap drawn down tight about his ears, and the dark-brown sable round his neck, kissing hands gently and majestically to the swarming roofs and windows. What humor, what pride, what consciousness of popularity and strength, was in that gray luminous eye! How winningly, yet how exultingly, it seemed to ask—"Am I not the Man of the People?—show me a man to match me—was there ever a human being trusted and loved as I have been?"

His son, Maurice, sat beside him. He, too, wore a cap with a gold band. Tom Steele sat behind. In what a crimson blaze his face shone above the dusty pageant! In his tattered blue military frock, hooked and eyed to the neck; all the frogs and slashings dangling in dingy threads about the breast, and skirts, and sleeves; his big red hands protruding from the shirtless cuffs; the greasy peakless cap, slipping off his poor white locks behind! He was the very image of what Shiel, in his defence of John O'Connell, proclaimed him to be—"The knight-errant against oppression wherever it was to be found."

There were some of the celebrities of the Repeal movement immediately accompanying O'Connell. Insignificant in mind, spirit, and appearance, they were appropriately shut up from public notice in the inside of the big green coach. Dr. Nagle, a cadaverous druggist, librarian of Conciliation-Hall, and physician-in-ordinary to the door-keepers of that propitiatory edifice, was of the number. The Doctor clung to the fortunes of the Hall with a ravenous tenacity. Sitting close behind O'Connell every Monday, he did little more than adjust the cloak of the latter whenever it happened to be disarranged, or the orator resumed it at the conclusion of his "speech of the day." Occasionally, however—perhaps once in six months—the Doctor seconded a resolution, or handed in a remittance; and when this occurred, he invariably quoted Napoleon's speech about the Pyramids and the forty centimes, or recited a page or two from Tacitus. Sitting down intensely pale and exhausted one day, after a violent quotation from his favorite author, Smith O'Brien turns round to him, and in the pleasantest way said—"Doctor, at this rate of quotation, you'll leave nothing original for me."

The day of O'Connell's entering Cork as I have mentioned, was the first Sunday of June, 1845. A few days previous, he had, in the Rotunda of Dublin, in the loftiest state, received the congratulations and homage of the Irish people. The occasion was the first anniversary of his release from the imprisonment to which, on a charge of seditious conspiracy brought against him by the government of Sir Robert Peel, he had been sentenced by Chief Justice Pennefather. Of all the spectacles of popular enthusiasm I have witnessed, that of the 30th of May, 1845, was the most splendid and impressive. It inspired me with the idea of what Ireland could prove herself to be were she ever in the exercise of sovereign power. No haste, no senseless boasting, no excess; there was a composure, a thoughtfulness, a solid dignity in the event, which, in public manifestations, I never observed before nor since. The public mind appeared to have risen with the solemnity of the decision which had restored to freedom the champion of the country, and from a purer and nobler eminence it seemed to have proclaimed, with the voice of an army in order of battle, the triumph that had answered the invocation of the multitude.

With the glory of this incomparable homage fresh upon him, he had come down to Cork, to partake of a public dinner, and share in other festivities, prepared for him by the Mayor, the Common Council, the Trades, and the liberal citizens generally. I broke off from the procession at the foot of the Middle Glanmire Road. The dinner was not to take place until the following evening.

At the appointed hour, I was standing, with other invited guests, in the reading-room of the Imperial Hotel, waiting for O'Connell to arrive. I was talking to Richard Albert Fitzgerald, one of the Members for the County Tipperary. Two years from that time, he was in his grave. The clay never fell upon the coffin of a truer Irish gentleman. Sir Richard Musgrave, also, was one of our little group, and so was my dear noble young friend, Charles Murphy, of Belville. We were all in the best of humor. The aspect of public life was then most cheerful. The famine had not come; nor had a withered leaf yet given an intimation of the disease which was to ravage the food of an entire people, and end in their wholesale devastation. The Whigs were still in opposition. There was no Treasury gold in circulation to tempt the frail, seduce to treason, and breed dissension. Thomas Davis, with his exhaustless wealth of heart and genius, was still on earth, among his people, and hard at work.

The glass folding-doors of the reading-room slowly turned on their hinges. All eyes were fixed upon them. The conversation dropped. There was not a whisper. There was not a breath. O'Connell was surely coming! It was now some minutes past the dinner-hour. The doors still turned on their hinges. It must be him. An immense white waistcoat, a pair of white stockings and glazed pumps, a very white head, a pair of very bushy white whiskers, and a blazing red face appeared. It was old Dan Callaghan—the Member for Cork.

He had been invited to the dinner, and had come with the daintiest arrangement and most affluent abundance of fine linen and broadcloth, to do honor, as he remarked with an unctuous twinkle of the eye and a tightning of the lip, to his friend, the Liberator.

Dan was as jovial a rogue as Falstaff, and with his love of sack, and other still more expensive luxuries, inherited a considerable moiety of his bulk. The venerable gentleman had not seen the tips of his toes for five and twenty years. Standing at the corner of the Tuckey street Club, in the city of Cork, a few days after his election in '38, he was screwing and digging into his waistcoat pocket to get out some change for the carman who had driven him down from Lota. He succeeded. He paid the fare. The carman thanked him, wished him good-bye, and drove off. But as the worthy Member was replacing the rest of the change, he dropped a guinea.

It was out of the question for him to try to pick it up. He excused himself for not going to Mass on the ground that he couldn't kneel down. It was the fact, whatever became of the excuse. To stoop, or think of stooping, was an excess it was impossible for him to be guilty of. What was he to do? There was no one near him. He was utterly alone. He moved to where the guinea lay, put his foot upon it, and steadied himself with his yellow walking-cane. He looked about him. He called out, "waiter," in the direction of an open window of the Club, looking out upon the South Parade. There was no response. His predicament was painful, and his patience nearly exhausted. "Boy!" he cried out with his little voice and the most distinct articulation, seeing a bare-footed, dirty-faced little urchin cutting past him in the wake of a carriage, "boy!" The boy pulled up, and altering his track, made for the Member. "Boy!" said the Member withdrawing his foot, backing a little, and pointing to the gold piece with the ferule of his cane—"boy! hand me my guinea." Another time, he dropped his cane, and recoverd it as, in this instance, he recovered his cash.

He was hugely fat—so fat, you could hardly see his eyes; so fat, his nose was buried in his face, and might be taken for a dimple; so fat, he couldn't turn his head round without turning the rest of the body with it. He adored the gentler sex. He was an insatiable worshipper of beauty. Posting himself in Patrick's street, outside the Chamber of Commerce, every fine day he was in Cork, he gloated over every pretty or splendid face that passed him, frowning, flirting, or flashing as it might be. Some rebuked him for his carniverous glances; others, with sprightly spirits and forgiving hearts, smiled, tossed the head, and tripped away; others again, haughtily stiffened themselves, pursed up ther ruby lips, jerked their head in pert reproof, drew their shawls tight about them, looked at the old idolatar over the shoulder scornfully, and swept in a hurricane of indignation by. The true woman took no notice of him.

One afternoon he was standing at the end of Sackville street, near Carlisle Bridge, on what was called the fashionable side, entertaining himself with his favorite study of the beautiful. A very pretty girl whom he had looked at with special devotion, turned on him sharply, calling out: "Do you know what, sir?"

"Well, my little love," said Dan, benignly.

"I'll have you taken up before the Lord Mayor," the girl said.

"For what, my incomparable angel?" Dan asked the girl with the most delicious suavity imaginable.

"For being blown beef," she replied; and with this she tossed her head, flounced and fumed a moment, and shot off, her beady black eyes sparkling with delight and mischief.

Of the good things of this life Dan was fastidiously fond. He was a sumptuous epicure. He feasted with a costly discrimination, and was as sensitive about the boiling of a potato as he was about the preparation of a salad. One afternoon, in January '47, he was leaning on my arm, and we were walking down Oxford street. Every now and then he would pull up, and look into the window of some Italian warehouse. At first I said nothing. Indeed, I said nothing until he had made half a dozen stoppages in front of similar windows, and with the same rich oleagenous smack of the lips. In a very delicate way, I desired to know what he wanted. "I'm looking for something nice for breakfast," he replied, once again halting, and facing right about in front of a spacious window, the clean white space behind which was piled up with every variety of pickle, compound, and preserve.

That same evening, having accompanied him to the House of Commons, Mr Callaghan introduced me to Charles Phillips on the lobby of the House. The latter skook me warmly by the hand, and accompanied the cordial salute with a profusion of florid congratulations. I offered him my thanks, assuring him that the generation which followed him would be hopeless, indeed, if they did not, "in some measure," profit by "Phillips' specimens of Irish eloquence." At the same time, I couldn't help thinking of the advice given to him by the Edinburgh Reviewer—by Lord Brougham, I believe—to "pluck a few feathers out of the wings of his imagination, and stick them into the tail of his judgment."

The pleasantest recollection I have of Dan Callaghan, the member for Cork, is connected with Killarney. That lubberly, good-natured old gourmand—that helpless heap of lard and sensualism—blends in my memory with the fragrant groves of the arbutus, with the solemn overshadowing yew-tree of Mucruss Abbey, with the crags and mist, and eagle-haunted solitudes of the Reeks, with the very echoes, which are the imprisoned spirits of the mountains. It is not the White Horse of the ancient Lord of Ross Castle, which is to me, the Phantom of the Lakes. It is that white-headed, white-whiskered, punchy, plethoric, rotund, rubicund, jovial old gentleman, the Member for Cork. I never think of Finn's Hotel, close to the edge of the Lower Lake without thinking of him. I never think of Mangerton, that a vast white figure, with an expanding waistcoat of white cassimere and trowsers, does not emerge from the Devil's Punch Bowl on the top of it, and beckon me up to have a tumbler. If I look in at Inpisfallen, he is there, cutting his name in the tough dusty bark of one of the stumpy little crab-trees. If I put in from the middle Lake, to have a look at O'Sullivan's Cascade, he's sure to be talking to the black-haired, brown-cheeked, laughing, handsome girls, who, in bare feet, with red shawls about them, and the wind and the sun playing freely on them, stand at the bottom of the cascade, or on a ledge eighty feet above, with their bottles of potteen, and goat's milk, and cranberries.

It was in the autumn of 1845. A great Repeal meeting had taken place two days before, on the shore of the lower Lake. Twenty thousand of the Kerry-men had assembled to hear O'Connell, and demand with him the restoration of their Parliament. The fishermen of Kinsale, nearly a thousand strong, came upon the ground in compact column, four abreast, each man carrying an ash-pole twelve feet long, with a small red flag flying from it. From the platform, on which I was standing at the time, wheeling from the road into the field where the meeting was to be held, and partially concealed by some intervening trees and bushes, allowing the flags only to be distinctly seen, these fishermen looked like a squadron or two of dismounted Lancers. Altogether, it was a scene of the most varied, the most striking, and exciting beauty. The dark lake in front; the dark-green islands dotting it; the mountains beyond them, walling up to the clouds this dream-like picture of wood, and crumbling stone, and dark lustrous water; the vast gathering of mountaineers and farmers between us and the lake; the banners swaying above the crowd; and then O'Connell himself towering above them all, and pointing to the mountains, and saying, that beyond there his cradle was rocked, and there his grave should be; oh! it was a scene which I prayed that poor Davis, who had been borne to the vault a few weeks before, might be permitted to behold.

The day after the meeting, there was a great dinner. It came off in an immense tent, in a field just opposite to the new Cathedral, which, by-the-bye, happened to be one of Pugins' grandest achievements. Dennis Shine Lawlor presided. His speeches, introducing the different toasts, were very beautiful. Who could live within the magic circle of those glorious lakes and not be filled with poetry?

The morning after the dinner, a stag hunt in the Gag of Dunloe was announced to take place. It was a drenching morning. The rain fell full and black. The lakes, islands, mountains, all were massive shadows, broken here and there, and giving us, through those clefts and fissures, glimpses of pale sun and whitened waves. However, it was decided that the hunt should not defer to the weather. And so, about 8 o'clock, a.m., in the gravelled space before the hall-door of Finn's Victoria Hotel, on the north shore of the lower Lake, there stood two dozen Kerry ponies, saddled and bridled, for the sporting guests of that delightful hospitable house. The gear was ancient. The saddles were made for men of flint. The bridles did more damage to the hands than to the mouths which held them. As we mounted, and then with an uproarious cheer, flung up the gravel and dashed down the avenue to the gateway, and so on out upon the road leading to the Gap, it struck me it would have made a superb picture for Haverty or Maclise—Irish Guerillas on the start for a Raid!

But just one instant before we started, the white shutters of a window, immediately over the hall-door, were folded back, the blind drawn up, the window slowly raised. All eyes were turned in the direction of it. And slowly, inch by inch, there issued from under the ascending sash, the snowy head and crimson face, and ponderous pudding neck and shoulders of Dan Callaghan himself—the Member for Cork. He was in his shirt, and looked like Sir John when emptied from the basket of soiled linen. He was welcomed with a cheer. He kissed hands and smiled. He bid us good morning, and hoped we'd have a fine day. He'd attend to our dinner, and see it was right. Another cheer, and then the broad crimson face smiled benignantly, and the white head slowly and cautiously withdrew from under the crystal guillotine. The window went down, the blind descended, and the shutters closed.

Some other day I shall describe the hunt, or rather the hunt-meeting, in the Gap; John O'Connell, of Grena,, O'Connell's brother, coming up with his noble hounds; our break-neck gallop through the Gap; and then down the Black Valley to the head of the Upper Lake, where the six-oared boats with their crew, boatswains and buglers, were waiting for us.

Passing down the Upper Lake, through the Passage, the Lovers' Leap, under the Eagle's Nest, by Dinnis Island, where Charles Phillips, in one of his very best speeches, once proposed the health of Washington; and then touching at Innisfallen, where we had a brimmer, we swept in with flashing oars to the mooring-place, half a mile below the hotel. We were wet to the marrow. From the time we dashed off, it had been raining like fury. We had to scrub very hard, and then dry thoroughly, and then dress up before we thought of sitting down to dinner. Everything was ready at last, and down we went. On entering the dining-room, the first thing that struck me was a long table, richly laid out with plate and glass, ruby and golden decanters, silver-mounted epergnes, and all the brilliant and dainty accessories of a banquet. The next thing was Dan Callaghan, in full dress, at the head of the table, with an immense napkin stuck in under the lappet of his vast white waistcoat, sitting silent and motionless, with his hair a few feet back from the table looking as if completely suffocated, but smiling in his suffocation.

"Gentlemen, I've been waiting for you. Take your seats," said the small struggling voice above the napkin, and the Member for Cork drew his chair closer to the damasked table. Had it been adequately indented, he might have sat closer.

The company was large, and represented many nationalities. There were Belgians, Scotchmen, Swiss, Americans and English There was wit, gravity, eloquence, wordliness, romance, bound less fun, all the varieties of social life blended at that board. Callaghan, as he presided, seemed to absorb them all. I sat long-side of him. He called for Hermitage, and stuck to it. As was usual with him on all occasions, he was pleasant and genial, and copiously social. His parliamentary anecdotes were fresh and plentiful. His recollections of the great commercial days of Cork—days preceding the peace of 1815—when his father built up his wealth—were deeply interesting and instructive. They were sparkling, too, and in many instances, finely colored. Nor were his descriptions of the election scenes, in which he prominently figured, less delightful and wine-provoking. This Falstaff almost refined and glowed into a Sheridan before me. If the Bacchus, he was also the Apollo of the feast.

Yet it was not until the cloth had been removed, and the bright mahogany reflected the broad-bottomed claret jugs, the steaming pitchers, and the fruits of the Azores and Malaga, that the jovial old gentleman expanded in full glory. Gansey, the renowned piper of the Lakes, was introduced with the whiskey, and handed to a chair immediately contiguous to the right elbow of the Member for Cork. Again it struck me, what a subject for Haverty! What a group for Maclise! Put on canvas by him, it would beat his Actor's reception of the Author, from Gil Blas, for which Sir Robert Peel gave him $5,000. The old blind piper, in his plenteous white rolling locks, with his broad, smooth, beautiful brow, his decent dress, and magnificent pipes mounted in ivory and silver, sitting so calmly and serenely there—a glorious type and relic of the lyric days of the island—and that Sirloin in napkin, ruffles, scent, and snowy whiskers, glistening beside him, breathing ponderously over his huge cups, and with them drinking in the frolic, and the music, the bubbling wit and gay uproar of the feast!

[To the story of this feast, up to midnight, and beyond it, we shall return another day.]

WIFE, OR NO WIFE?

A CHAPTER FROM THE BOOK OF KINGS.

Obstinate, implacable, and tenacious of what he called his rights, as a sovereign, (who can forget,

"The right divine of Kings to govern wrong,")

George III. never forgave the Irish for two things, namely, for having obtained national Independence, after a fashion, in 1782, and for having voted in 1789, that the Prince of Wales should be and was Regent, as a matter of right, during the insanity of his father. In the letters of George III. to Lord North, extending over a space of fifteen years, (and recently published by Lord Brougham,) the very last bearing date the 29th Nov., 1783, he emphatically declares, "By the sad measures we have adopted, Ireland is now, in fact, disunited from this kingdom. [England.]" His authority and the authority of the British Lords and Commons, over Ireland, had been properly and patriotically checked and limited, and "His most gracious Majesty" could not forgive the Irish. The question of the Regency was yet more annoying; for it wounded him personally. No doubt can exist that the contumacy of his Irish "subjects," in this latter matter, added to the "sad measures" of 1782, (when the Volunteers were "to the fore,") induced Pitt and his master to effect the consummation, obtained by promises and perjury, treachery and bribes, commonly known as the parchment Union of 1800, when the Irish Parliament committed an act of political felo de se.

A few sentences to show how Ireland incurred the enmity of George III. in 1789:

The divinity which, Shakespere says, doth hedge a king, has not prevented Royalty from suffering the ordinary penalties of mortality: not death alone, but care, anxiety, bodily ailments, and mental weakness. The present royal family of England have the misfortune to be afflicted with the great evil of hereditary insanity. This dreadful ailment literally runs in their blood, even to the present day—sometimes more, sometimes less apparent, but always existing. In some instances exhibiting itself in eccentricity, in some declining into weakness of intellect, and in some palpable in restlessness and constant desire for the excitement of travel and display; in some falling into an actual madness as ever Bedlamite was infuriated by. "His most gracious Majesty King George the Third," (who was prayed for in the Church liturgy, as "His most sacred Majesty," also,) was foolishly mad in 1764, was furiously mad in 1788–9, was melancholy mad from 1810 to 1820, when he died.

After prolonged debates, in 1788–9, the British Parliament determined to appoint George, Prince of Wales, ruler or Regent of Great Britain, during the continuance of his father's mental malady. The Whigs, led by Fox, asserted the Prince's right to take his father's place, with full authority. The Tories, headed by Pitt, insisted that the Prince, under the circumstances, had no more right to the Regency than any other person: it resting with Parliament to select a Viceroy, and limit his authority at pleasure. Weeks and months passed on in violent debates, but Pitt succeeded, and the Prince of Wales was about to become Regent, with limited semi-sovereign powers, when the King recovered his reason as rapidly as he had lost it.

Meanwhile, the Irish Parliament, impressed with little liking for the mad King, and hoping much for the reported friendship of the Prince of Wales for Ireland—an impression arising mainly out of the representations of Burke—had taken advantage of the opportunity to show their full independence of British legislation. At that time, no doubt, when the sovereign was incapacitated by insanity, from governing Ireland had a strictly legal right, under the concessions of 1782, to appoint whom they pleased as Regent. They had agreed to present an address to the Prince, requesting him to take upon himself the regency of Ireland, as his right. So rapid had been their action that the joint Committee of Irish Lords and Commons, arrived in London on the 25th April, 1789, before the English Regency bill had passed through its last formality, and just one day after the King's recovery had been officially announced.

George III., on recovering his senses, first applied himself to a careful perusal of the debates, in order to mark in his "black book," as personal enemies, every man who had voted for giving unlimited sovereign powers to the Regent. He marked them well, and the result was that the Whigs were on that account kept out of office for seventeen years longer; in fact, until the death of Pitt forced them up into power, for a short time.

On the Irish his "most gracious Majesty" had his revenge also Their offence was rank. In the Commons, the address to the Prince was voted without a division, and in the Lords by a majority of nineteen. Every Ministerial deserter was cashiered by the government, (it was said that by this wholesale punishment, Pitt had made more patriots in one day than patriotism had ever made in a year,) and from that hour Pitt and the King determined to annihilate the Irish Parliament—which they did, eleven years later.

THE COURTSHIP.

It may not be unprofitable to show what manner of man, in one phase, was George Prince of Wales, for whom Ireland was so enthusiastic, and through whom she lost so much. We shall take him in his private life, in the persuasion that a bad man in private cannot be a good man in public.

A certain woman named Mary Ann Smythe, grand-niece of a Baronet in Shropshire, was born in July, 1756; married to Mr. Weld, of Lulworth Castle, at the age of nineteen; widowed within a few months of this union; married again at the age of twenty-two, to Mr. Thomas Fitzherbert; and widowed a second time at the age of twenty-five. Mrs. Fitzherbert had an income of £2,000 a year, as dowry from her two marriages, and, on account of her family connexion, (she was cousin to Lord Stowton,) was received into the best society in London.

She lost her second husband in 1781, and having put off her widow's weeds in due season, as duly resumed her place in the fashionable world. She was well-educated, was graceful in manners, and, though not what one would call regularly beautiful, had a handsome face, with most intelligent expression and fascinating smile, and a fine, full person—somewhat resembling what Byron has spoken of as the "full, voluptuous, but not o'ergrown bulk," of her frolic Grace, the fair Duchess of Fitz-Fulke. Her character was unsullied, and she was much admired.

Born in 1762, six years later than this sprightly and handsome widow, was George Augustus Frederick, eldest son of George III. In 1785, when he was 23 years' old, and Mrs. Fitz-Herbert not yet 30, (and not "fat, fair, and forty," as has been alliteratively reported and remembered,) this young man, Prince of Wales and heir to the British crown, became acquainted with the lady. In later days, he was the—"Who is your fat friend?" of Beau Brummell; but, at this time, albeit one of your "regular Dei Gratia blockheads, Born with three kingdoms in their pockets,"

he was well-looking, agreeable, and, as Byron says—

"The prince of princes at the time,
With fascination on his very brow,
And full of promise, as the spring of time."

The Prince saw and admired the fair widow—admired her as much as he did the bottle, of which he was a constant votary. He paid her very marked attentions, which she endeavored to avoid. Of unbridled passions, he even went the whole extent of wooing her rather roughly—"as the lion woos his bride.' The cooler she was, the more ardent was he. To excite her pity, (Lord Holland says in his Memoirs) he would have himself bled by three surgeons during one night, in order that he might appear before her next morning, looking pale and interesting. One forenoon, two peers, a commoner, and a surgeon arrived, post-haste, at her residence in Richmond, near London—indeed she was the original "lass of Richmond Hill." They declared that her royal lover had stabbed himself, and that she alone could relieve him. Melted with pity, she consented to visit the bleeding swain, and took the Duchess of Devonshire with her to do propriety. At Carlton Palace, she found the Prince in bed—"pale, and covered with blood;" she also found a glass of brandy and water on the table by his side. It was quite a Mantilini scene, this dramatic, make-belief of attempted suicide. Her womanly nature was moved. Then the Prince told her that nothing could induce him to live, unless she promised to become his wife, and permitted him to put a ring round her finger. She allowed him to do so, and retired, leaving him to recover. Some of her friends doubted the reality of the stabbing; but the lady, albeit widow of two husbands, and now in her thirtieth year, gave full credence to it.

She was sharp enough, however, to know that the mere putting a ring round her finger was not a marriage. The Prince (who, truth to say, was not above any trick to gratify his passions,) vainly endeavored to persuade her that the ring made the marriage. She knew better by experience. The Prince had a protocol made, duly witnessed, recording how the ring had been used, as aforesaid, but the widow took alarm and took flight, declared that she had been cajoled, and sought safety on the Continent from her incontinent admirer. He pursued her—with letters. One of them ran to the lover-like length of thirty-seven pages!

All the original MSS. in Mozart's handwriting, of his works, are in the possession of the brothers Andre, of Offenbach; it is proposed that they should be purchased, and placed in the archives of Vienna. A gentleman of Magdeburg has an album, which he inherited from a musician, a relation of his, containing an unpublished fugue, composed by Mozart, and written by himself in this book, on the eve of his departure from Leipsic to Vienna. This is, perhaps, almost the only unpublished melody of the great master.

The Marquis of Trivalzio has just died at Milan. He has left one of the richest private libraries in Italy, and a magnificent collection of medals.

JOHN BULL, BORNEO, AND A BULL-FIGHT.

A Lady's Second Journey round the World, &c., &c., by Ida Pfeiffer, authoress of "The Lady's Journey Round the World," &c., &. Harper & Brothers.

Sketches and Adventures, in Madeira, Portugal, and the Andalusias of Spain; by the author of "Daniel Webster and his Cotemporaries." Harper & Brothers.

Both of the books, the titles of which head this article, are well worth perusal. If Mr. March's sketches have a more sunny tone and fuller expression, in thorough keeping with his subject, Madame Pfeiffer's notes have a universality, also in keeping with her extensively peripatetic character. Our fair friend goes round the world in a sort of literary jog-trot; and not altogether as good a story-teller as Mr. March, she is every whit as attractive from the variety of her outlines. The latter in comparison to the former is often as a tolerably well executed picture to a sketch; and the latter to the former as a very inquiring to a curious, yet satisfied mind.

Nothing less than the seven-league boots of the nursery fable will suit Madame Pfeiffer; while the author of the "Sketches and Adventures" would be well enough suited in a good pair of pegged boots, from Robert Peard's factory in Milford. Mr. March sits down to contemplate, enjoys himself as becomes one who loves to enjoy a few things well. Madame hears, sees, takes note, and hurries on, as one who remembers that she cannot live for ever, and will, with Heaven's aid, hear and see as much as she possibly can.

For over fourteen years of her existence has Madame Pfeiffer wandered—stalked through creation, like the Wandering Jew. Yesterday she stood in the amphitheatres of extinct volcanoes in the frigid regions of Iceland; this morning she is sweltering in the tropics; at noon she is unravelling the jargon of the untameable bipeds of Java and Sumatra, and in the evening is wide awake at Borneo, albeit she is surrounded with as much opium as might lawfully—for it is a matter of London law and Dutch justice—knit the eyelids of a nation full of Pfeiffers, male or female. In evidence that she is not asleep, we must give what she says. "Civilized" people who heed and believe all they hear of foreign missions, will do well to "give ear" to her plain meditation. She writes:—

"Wonderful enough is it to see European governments founding colonies, subjecting whole countries for the sake of diffusing civilization and christianity, and at the same time doing all in their power to encourage their subjects in vices by which every principle of Christianity or civilization is opposed. Why do they not discourage a practice which causes the destruction of thousands—nay, millions—of miserable, infatuated creatures in every country where it prevails? Why, but because of the miserable gain, because this vice is the most productive source of revenue! What shall we say to the war declared by the English against the Emperor of China, who was doing his best to guard his subjects from this poison, by prohibiting the importation of Opium.

"How can we ask uncivilized nations to respect our religion when we let them see that it does not restrain us from the most unprincipled and shameless grasping, and that a sufficient amount of profit will reconcile us to any proceeding, however flagitious?

Here is a group of opium smokers, a glimpse at which will probably form a striking contrast to the "heaven" in the minds of infatuated dreamers over, and listless readers of Coleridge and De Quincey. Madame is on a visit to the Sise houses in the Chinese quarter of Borneo:—

"The smokers sat or lay upon mats, and had at their side small lamps to light their pipes; and I could not help noticing how some, who seemed to have nothing else of sense or consciousness left, were careful to scrape the last atom of opium adhering to the leaf on which it had been placed. That horrible pictures are to be seen at these places, it is scarcely necessary to say. Here is a creature stupified and incapable of speech, making a faint attempt to rise and drag himself home, but sinking powerless on the threshold; another is already lying senseless and lifeless, stretched upon his mat, unconscious that he has any home. There sits one with hollow cheeks, fixed eyes, trembling in every limb, the very picture of misery, for he has now no more money with which to attain this enviable condition, and smoke himself into idiotcy.

Madame Pfeiffer only sketches—she leaves much of the picture to the imagination; still the outline is sufficiently bold to convey the figure in all its horrible reality. "They chatter and laugh under its influence," she says, "till they fall back exhausted." This sentence, like an asterisk, refers us to Dr. Madden's reminiscences of the Theriakis or opium eaters, so forcibly drawn in his "Travels in Turkey." Their frightful gestures, incoherent rhotomontade, flushed grimaces, unnatural and almost demonaic supineness of eye, general "horribly wild" expression and their terrible moral and physical debility, came vividly to mind. How the "civilized" world, including foreign missions, tract diffusers, temperance advocates, and Exeter Hall men could or, can in the very face of that Christianity they all so conjure and adore, allow the wholesale murder carried on under the style, title, and dignity of "Opium trade" to progress, without even raising as much as an indignation meeting, is a matter that will sorely puzzle the "coming man." We shall have to leave the settlement of the question to that individual, Madame Pfeiffer keeps on so, running round this third-rate planet.

We left her in the evening at Borneo; but bless you, while we were going asleep on opium, she has been tramping round the world like a footpad, and delivering every nook and cranny of a note at sight. To-day the good lady has breakfasted at the Cape of Good Hope, and by the way was highly troubled on her voyage thither by her fellow passenger, "an apparently quite uneducated young man, who passed his time in smoking, whistling and bawling, among the sailors, and found his chief recreation in going to see the poultry killed." By noon, our traveller is cooling off in the shadows of some sunless cave, and, after a slight rest, is preparing to ascend ten thousand feet above the level of the sea, to the crater of the volcanic Merape.

She is really a wonderful woman, yet a woman after all. After numerous wanderings, she reaches San Francisco, in September, 1853. She was not so startled at that wonderful place as she ought to have been. The indecent exhibition of the women at the gambling-houses shocked her; the filthiness of the streets, filled with "old clothes, rags, crockery, boots, bottles, boxes, dead dogs and cats," rendered her peregrinations exceedingly dangerous; the rottenness of the docks sent a cold shiver through her; the "enormous rats," roaming with all the untamed liberty of ratocracy on the highways, induced a very natural disgust on the part of our inquisitive Viennoise. For the American gentlemen, however, on the other hand, be they old or young, only fifteen or fifty, she has but one word of gratitude for their courtesy, and one exuberant acknowledgment of their attention to those of the opposite sex. She felt dreadfully shocked at some using their fingers, "though they carried a pocket-handkerchief;" still, however "grievously short" they fell in this respect, "they maintained without any exception the character of gentlemen." Indeed, she compares the American boys of ten years to the old and schooled gentlemen of Europe, in their politeness to ladies.

While in California, Madame Pfeiffer visited Sacramento, which, she discovered, had "risen just as rapidly, and been just as often burned down, as San Francisco;" Marysville, where she was kindly received by General Sutter and family; Brown's Valley, the Yuba river, and the Indians in that and the Oregon Territory, in company with a German sailor. Her notes on the Indians are interesting, and exhibit her adventuresome nature.

How many ladies would put up with pounded acorns and dirty fish, surrounded with savages, who devoured her little stock of bread and cheese, and looked, mayhap, through very kindness, as if they would devour herself? How many ladies are there who would undergo all this, to say nothing of lying in the midst of a wigwam of the ugliest women on record, whose very snoring was enough to remind one of the end of time—making a reverberation like the opening of the seals in the visions of St. John? How many would suffer all this, just to see what the Huna and other Indians were like?

After inspecting the quiet silver mines at San José, the mines of the Temple of the Sun, at Cacamacha, penetrating to Lima, and stalking over Chimborazo to Quito, she returned to Guayaquil, thence to Panama—to New Orleans—up the Mississippi, visiting the chief cities on the way—pushed on to Canada, and ultimately to New-York. To criticise such a woman, who is more than a Mungo Park in petticoats, would be both ungallant and ungenerous. She is a capital voyageur. Nothing deters her; climates have no effect on her; she is a citizen of the world, and makes herself at home everywhere.

As we insinuated, Mr. March is a much better and pleasanter writer than our fair friend. He is picturesque in expression, grouping and effect. We feel thoroughly the atmosphere breathed by the author, whether it be in Madeira, that lazy, self-satisfied and unruffled refuge of those for whom "still waters" and "contentment without distinction" offer the necessities of existence, or gazing at the area of the bull-fight, the pretty little Dolores by his side, and before him that famous Matador, Cuchares, feeling the beauty of a thousand eyes sharpening his knife, and lighting it to the breast of the snorting fury before him.

Talking of bull-fights, we doubt whether if the Peninsula was a republic, the ring would not be the next step to the presidency. The matador is in the mouths of the many; is the beloved, the be-pictured of the people. Reader, do you know who Cuchares is? No. Well, our author has found out for your especial benefit who that mighty individual is:

"I had been but a few hours in Cadiz before I heard there was to be a bull-fight, a week from the next Sunday—and the question that governed all conversation was, if 'Cuchares' would be there. Who is 'Cuchares?' I asked a pretty muchacha of my acquaintance. 'Cuchares,' says she, 'is the greatest man en todos las Espanas.' 'Who is Cuchares?' I inquired of a grave cabalero, as we were smoking at a café. 'Cuchares,' he replied, 'has succeeded Montes, and in some respects is his superior.' 'Who is Cuchares?' I demanded of Juan. 'Cuchares is the greatest bull-fighter in all Spain. He is expected here next week.' If I asked a Spaniard of the lower class what he thought of Queen Christina, 'Puta,' he replied; of Queen Isabella, 'Puta tambien,' but speak to him of Cuchares, and no term of praise was stinted. Montes, the hero of one hundred bull-fights, had died, just before I entered Spain, in consequence of a wound received in one of these contests; and his death was lamented as a national calamity. He had lingered for some time after his wound; and the carriages of the highest nobility at Madrid were daily seen at his house, making inquiries of his condition; among which, it was said, was that of the Countess de Montejo, now Empress of the French. His portrait was stuck up in every barber's shop, café, and bookstore; and his deeds were in every body's mouth."

Although the author believes it is rather a fortunate circumstance that there are more sheep than men in Spain, inasmuch as the "former is the more useful animal of the two," still he gives us some very graphic views and characteristics of the latter. Another extract must suffice, though full justice may not be done to the spirited sketching and brilliant coloring of the author. The scene is in the arena in Seville, where the people were more crazy about the bull-fight and fighters than at Cadiz. The bull has compelled the tauridors to leap over the barrier, but an opposing picador spears the animal in the flank. "Banderillos! banderillos!" shout the multitude; and, amid the flourishing of trumpets, some half-dozen gaily-dressed, active fellows leap into the lists, bearing darts decorated with flowers, and containing fireworks, which they strike into the panting body of the brute, who thus goaded, darts wildly to and fro, "rushing at tauridor, picador, banderillo, and even at the barrier, in his tempestuous fury." Covered with ghastly wounds, his nostrils spirting blood, his lagging tongue black and swollen, he stands at bay—and now comes the matchless Cuchares on the scene:

"And now nothing could satisfy the excited crowd but the immediate death of their noble victim; and with another flourish of Saracenic music, Cuchares springs over the barrier into the arena. A shout arose as loud as, old Homer tells us, the God of War gave forth, when wounded on the plain of Troy, 'Cuchares, Cuchares!' issued from ten thousand throats in simultaneous cry. Acknowledging by a bow or smile the flattering clamor, he approached the Infanta's station, and bending gracefully on one knee, respectfully solicited (so Dolores afterward explained to me) permission to kill the animal, which, of course, the Infanta was graciously pleased to grant. Cuchares immediately sprang to his feet, and whirling his hat round his head in a number of rapid gyrations, threw it violently on the ground, and approached the infuriate beast. And now took place the crisis of the fight. Here superior strength encountered superior skill—ferocity, agility; and ungovernable rage, courageous nerve.

"Awhile, man and beast, as if both conscious this was a struggle for life, stood motionless within a few feet of each other, watching the moment of attack. There was no sound audible in that vast multitude; the breath of the whole crowd appeared suspended on the event.

"Cuchares stood before the bull, no otherwise armed than with a straight two-edged sword, holding in his left hand a scarf of glittering red. He commenced the final contest by shaking this before the face of the animal, who, thereby still more incensed, rushed upon his antagonist. The matador avoided the blow by a sudden spring to one side, and continued teasing, worrying, and exhausting the bull by a series of artistic feints, till the animal, in the act of rushing upon him, lowered his head too near the ground, when Cuchares seized the unguarded moment to thrust the blade two-thirds its length just where the vast neck mingles with the spine. The blood gushed out in streams from the nostrils and mouth of the bull; and after staggering a moment he fell amid the vehement and prolonged shouts, and died on touching the sand. The victor richly merited the applause he received; for he had achieved a feat most dangerous in the attempt, and attended rarely by success—the instantaneous death of the bull on the first thrust. Much indeed is required to form an accomplished matador. Dauntless courage, a vigorous arm, an accurate eye, and an ever active mind. These, with long experience, are absolutely essential. Montes possessed them all; but rash from continued success, he attempted unnecessary perils, and forfeited life."

MAN!

I saw him in his glory,
Bewildered in his bliss,
And every joy that earth could give
And every smile was his.
Mirth spread her wings on the balmy gale,
And laughter stifled the voice of wail;
But his heart still yearned for something more—
For a fairer land, for a happier shore.
Man was not made for this!

I saw him in the battle,
His hand was black with gore,
And his eye flashed fire as the bickern steel
Each beating bosom tore;
And in scenes of slaughter he revelled wild,
Like the frantic mother that's lost her child;
But that demon scowl and that bacchanal rage
Bring not one glow to the breast of the sage.
Man was not made for this!

I saw him court ambition,
I saw him mount her car,
And blast the earth with his noxious breath,
A solitary star.
And o'er vanquished worlds he ruled supreme,
Like the eagle that dares the day-star's beam;
But a mighty void still craved in his breast,
And wild dreams stole o'er his nightly rest.
Man was not made for this!

I saw him scan the Heaven
And pierce through nature's laws,
And read the secrets of the deep
And tell each hidden cause;
But his spirit beat 'gainst its mortal cage,
As eager to scan an ampler page;
And the brightness of each diadem star
Only told of a something lovelier far.
Man was not made for this!

I saw him at the altar,
In sadness and alone,
And his spirit beat
And his lips were moved
In humble orison;
And the thought of his frailties woke a sigh,
And the tears of repentance stole to his eye;
And he bowed him down to the holy sod,
To ask forgiveness of his God.
Oh, man was made for this!

I saw him on his death-bed,
No frantic fear was there;
But seraph hope was throned in his heart,
As he muttered a last fond prayer.
A crucifix was in his hand—
Redeeming pledge of a brighter land—
To clasp his dying Savior he tried,
And in that effort of love he died.
Oh, man was made for this!

A London correspondent of the Manchester Advertiser writes: "Thomas Carlyle is applying himself with vigor to terminate his long-promised biography of the great Frederick, which he more than once has abandoned or suspended. It will be published in four volumes next Christmas. There is some gossip afloat, too, about a new work by Charles Dickens, who, as you will have seen, has returned from Paris, and has been more than usually active of late at literary and dramatic public meetings. The origin of the talked-of work is an attack made upon the eminent novelist by Count Montalembert, the celebrated French writer and politician, who, in a recent publication, with more zeal than knowledge, accused Mr. Dickens of having excited the poor against the rich in his social fictions—in fact, of being an English Eugene Sue. Dickens, it is said, intends to publish a reply to the Count, which will appear simultaneously in French and English, in Paris and London."

POE'S WORKS.

THE WORKS OF THE LATE EDGAR ALLAN POE.—Vol. IV.—Arthur Gordon Pym. Redfield.

The publication of this volume completes the works of the distinguished author—of whose genius, ingenuity, versatility and remarkable style under every phase of inspiration, they remain so wondrous and unique a monument. The lengthiest of Poe's fictions fills nearly one-half of the present volume, the remainder being made up of some nineteen papers—fictitious, factitious, analytical, critical, satirical, quizzical and metaphysical; for no matter what the topic, Poe rarely touched it without deducing from it some addenda for his metaphysical repository, or insinuating into its treatment some reminiscences of the latter. Utterly unconventional, and sometimes outrageously original, his writings have a charm beyond the hour of reading; and in saying this to-day—when books fly from the steam press as quick and thick (if not altogether so pure,) as the snow of the past winter came from heaven—we mean to pay him as high an eulogium as this age will probably allow.

It is a peculiarity with this author, not usual with others, that his most trivial sketch, from the nature of his mind, either conveys palpable instruction, or incites the reader to its attainment. He puts the reader on a train of thinking, (whether for good or evil is with the thinker,) and by this means makes a friend of him to be remembered forever, or an enemy that cannot be forgotten. We say an enemy, for we have known persons under the demoniac delusions and illusions of Poe's horribly imaginative tales, to fling the book out of sight and get a cold shiver, or a swimming of the head, when the "Black Cat" was mentioned. Yet we have known the same individual to take up the book—fly from it—resume the megrims and cold shivers again, and yet again. Indeed, we have no doubt but that the said parties were the first purchasers (for luckily they are not editors,) of "the new volume of Edgar Poe." Of course every one who has ever read a paragraph of the distinguished author, must possess the present book.

LIFE OF ABULCHER BISCIARAH, the "Little Angel of the Copts." By Father Bresciani, author of the "Jew of Verona." Translated from the Italian; with an introduction by Augustine Francis Hewit. 2 vols. P. O'Shea.

These well-printed and neatly-gotten up volumes take their place in the New Catholic Library projected by the publisher. Many of our readers may not be aware that such a series of useful little books are being prepared for them. We, therefore, to some extent, reiterate the prospectus of the publisher, when we say, that the New Catholic Library has been devised to remedy a want in the Catholic literature of America—to wit, the collecting "of edifying narratives and tales, combining amusement and instruction—not above the capacity of the young, nor beneath the attention of the old, and furnishing a substitute for the pernicious novels and other light works of which the press is so prolific." The first and second of the series have been furnished by the translator of the volumes before us, who is a distinguished Redemptorist. Bisciarah is known in the Annals of the Church as the Egyptian Aloysius. He is esteemed a great saint. The subject, the author, and translator demand the attention of the Catholic reader.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Life of George Washington. By Washington Irving. Vols. I and II.	G. P. Putnam & Co.
Confession; or, The Blind Heart. By Gilmore Simms.	Redfield.
Harper's Magazine. May.
The Museum. No. 18 of Harper's Story Books.
Woman and Her Diseases. By Ed. H. Dixon, M. D.	Ramsey.
Key to Johnson's Philosophical Charts for Schools and Academies.	"
The Life of Abulcher Bisciarah. From the Italian of Father Bresciani. By Augustine Francis Hewit. 2 vols.	P. O'Shea.

Literary and Artistic News.

Professor Stahr says:—"It is probable that the statue of the Apollo Belvidere belongs to the time of Nero. The spot where it was found was the favorite residence of this Emperor. Here he was born—here he made his magnificent entrance after his return from his artistic travel in Greece—here he remained during the tremendous conflagration, which laid two-thirds of Rome in ashes: and the Dying Gladiator, which was also found in the ruins of Antium, shows, no less than the Apollo, that the works of art adorned this imperial summer residence. It is a beautiful poetic thought of Fuerback's, that the Fury dispelling god stood in the house of the crowned Orestes, who had ventured with the guilt of matricide resting on his own soul, to act the part of Orestes on the stage. Not seldom, as his most confidential companions admitted, his disturbed senses were shaken by visions of the avenging deities with their whips and torches; and it is quite conceivable that his guilty conscience sought refuge under this image of the protecting god. But even if this was nothing more than an ingenious conjecture, one thing remains certain, namely, that in the expression of the Apollo's head lies the nobleness of that divine indignation which Tacitus felt in the contemplation of that age and its hideous crimes. And if it was really Nero who gave the commission to the artist of the Apollo, one can understand that the great soul of the master, who was capable of producing this work, stamped on the lofty god of light and purity that expression of scornful indignation which every noble heart must experience in the contemplation of a world full of the most debasing iniquity. For every great artist, in his best works, can only embody the mental state which is produced in him or suggested by the subject he undertakes to represent. Thus, Titian, when he was called on to paint the lovely blonde poisoner, Lucrezia Borgia with her husband, opposite to the Holy Family, expressed, in the famous picture in the Dresden Gallery, all the scornful reprobation of hypocritical vice which he felt in his own soul."

The Independent, speaking of the unfortunate failure of Bunce & Brother, book publishers, says: "They are men of high standing. An unfortunate connection with another house, as endorsers, is said to be the cause of the failure. They will undoubtedly soon resume, through the influence of strong friends." We sincerely hope they may.

The "boys" of the Boston Post office presented Mr. Shillaber (the original "Mrs. Partington") with a silver goblet, on the occasion of his retiring from that paper.

Among reprints, I notice as extraordinary five new editions of the celebrated Memoirs of the Duke de Saint Simon. The commencement of two of these editions is already on sale. One of them, in octavo form, good paper and clear type, will be completed in 20 volumes, and cost 80 francs; the other, by the same publisher, is in larger form, double-columned page, with 600 illustrations of some merit, and will cost, complete, but 20 francs. Another publisher advertises three editions as about to appear, ranging in price from 300 francs to 24, according to form, quality, and style of paper and print. Between these rival booksellers there is a curious quarrel. One of them, Hachette, claims the sole right to publish the Memoirs of St. Simon, because he has bought it of the present Duke St. Simon, who possesses the original manuscript of his ancestor. The other claims full right to publish, on the ground that the Memoirs are long since become common property, as is proved by the fact that eight separate editions of them have been printed between 1784 and 1840. Hachette calls upon the present Duke to maintain him in his right; the Duke commences a suit against the rival bookseller. The whole matter will soon come before the courts, whose decision on this case of literary property, a hundred years old, will be worth attending to. While a very cheap new edition of Rousseau's and Voltaire's whole works is in course of publication, an expurgated edition of the Siecle de Louis XIV., and of Charles XII., is published for the use of schools, under the patronage of Government!

The London Athenœum says: "We are about to enter another controversy. Mr. Hepworth Dixon announces, for next week, an 'Answer to Mr. Macaulay's charges against Penn.' Mr. Macaulay—so rumor has it—is employed upon a rejoinder to his various critics, particularly the Times and the Athenœum. Penn, Dryden, and Marlborough are the chief men whose reputations have been assailed by the historian; and his judgment on these personages stand in the highest need of explanation and defence. Mr. Dixon, we understand, replies upon the entire case as against Penn—Mr. Macaulay's accusations standing in the last edition as they did in the first. We shall be glad to see what Mr. Macaulay can urge in defence of the Taunton charge—of his assertion that Marlborough's letter caused the failure at Brest—that Dryden changed his religion for money—that Jeffreys is buried in the Tower, and Schomberg in Westminster—the two latter, blunders which the Times presses against. Literary controversy is always pleasant; and when conducted with courtesy, and with an earnest desire for the truth, as this controversy most assuredly will be, it is serviceable to history, as well as pleasant to readers."

The Paris correspondent of the Tribune gives some literary items, which we abridge:

Another volume of Michelet's History of France is out; also, Les Guerres de la Religion; the Memoires et Journal de l' Abbe Ledieu, on the Life and Works of Bossuet, published, for the first time, from Ledieu's manuscript, with notes, etc.; Historie de mon Temps, by Beaumont Vassy, ex-Diplomat and ex-Prefect [this history begins with 1830, and has reached, with the close of the second volume, the affair of Strasbourg; it is conservative, inclined toward the power that is, but totally impartial and interesting]; L' Oiseau, a little volume by Michelet, the historian.

A correspondent of the Independence Belge says: "Lamartine, after making great efforts to save the wreck of his shattered fortunes—efforts which have been feebly seconded by his countrymen—is about to assign all his property for the payment of his debts, and seek a home in the United States. The estate given to him several years ago, by the Sultan, has been taken from him by the Turkish government. It turned out to be one of those presents that bring ruin upon the recipient. Lamartine expected that a large subscription list to his Course of Literature would have averted the disaster; but it is asserted that that is not yet large enough to pay the expense of publication."

An "Australian Settler's" Diary of Travels in Three-quarters of the Globe, published in London, in two volumes, gives eloquent pictures of the condition of the Allied armies—the comparisons which the author draws between the English and French hospitals before Sebastopol being decidedly in disparagement of the former. The London journals copy largely, and commend the book.

The first volume of a new edition of Vicomte de Launay (the old ones are exhausted) is just published. Vicomte de Launay was the nom de plume of Madame de Girardin, which she signed to a series of "Parisian Letters" that appeared in the feuilleton of the Presse (her husband's paper) at irregular intervals from 1836 to 1848.

Commodore Perry's Expedition Narrative is compiled by Dr. Hawks, from the Commodore's original notes and journals, and will suffer but little delay in publication from the partial destruction of the plates at the late fire in the Philadelphia establishment, where they were in preparation.

The Bombay Quarterly, in an article on the Indian Civil Service, declares that at the late examination the candidates generally acquitted themselves badly in English history. The reason why they were not better posted is attributed to the defective nature of the text-books.

Eugene Pelletan, a disciple of Lamartine, and one of his most ardent admirers, sorrowfully reproaches Lamartine for his losing faith in the people, in the first of a series of articles in the Presse, which he entitles "Letters to a fallen man" (Lettres à un homme tombé).

Queen Victoria has, we understand, offered to head a subscription list for the re-building of Covent Garden Theatre, with a contribution of £1,000. It appears, however, not to be probable that any parties will be found to undertake the re-erection of the edifice.

M. Duchesne, one of the most celebrated miniature painters in France, and formerly attached in that capacity to the courts of France, England and Belgium, lately died at the advanced age of 85.

The Allgemeine Zeitung says that Thackeray has realized, by his writings and lectures, a sum sufficient to "enrich half a dozen German satirists, and change them from literary vagabonds into steady citizens."

Mr. Edward Hayes, water color draftsman, and portrait painter, has been elected an associate of the Royal Hibernian Academy.

Amyot's elegant edition of the works of the most successful author of the day, Napoleon III., is now completed in four handsome volumes.

Wilkes' Narrative of the United States Exploring Expedition is on the eve of publication in popular form—five volumes octavo.

Rev. Samuel H. Cox, D. D., of Oswego, has accepted an invitation to the Presidency of the Ingham Collegiate Institute at Le Roy, N. Y.

It is regorted that Mrs. Stowe, the author of Uncle Tom's Cabin, will soon put to press a work "illustrating the alleged degradation of the poor white population of the South."

MILITARY CORRESPONDENCE.

"In Time of Peace Prepare for War" is an old maxim, recommended by the sound suggestions of judgment and experience. To-day the political firmament is clear; to-morrow it may be surcharged with the clouds of conflict. The nation, therefore, which lapses into a disuetude of arms, lulled into a fancied security, is a sentinel asleep at his post. And the penalty by which such error is expiated, for the nation as the individual, is the same in kind, though differing in degree. In the one case, moral death is the general consequence, while in the other, it is merely physical.

The policy indicated is further approved by the consideration that its present capacity to meet the contingencies of warfare, is the best guarantee which a nation can have for the continuance of peace. Its power will be understood and respected—its weakness will be scrutinized and despised. This readiness of a State does not imply the appendages of large standing armies, or costly naval armaments. These institutions of the old world are the essential elements of political systems in which the people have no part: the identical machinery by means of which the rights of the many are ignored and trampled on for the aggrandizement of the few. But it does imply a martial spirit in a people, which the State with a liberal foresight, will take care to encourage and develope by all means not inconsistent with constitutional restrictions or individual right. And it is in accordance with this policy that the various States of the Union have made provision for the enrollment and support of National Militia.

A soldiery thus constituted presents itself in admirable contrast with the mere mercenaries whose trade is war. Subject to no master, except such as it has selected of its own choice, its sense of self-respect is the bond of its dicipline. At the call of patriotism, it emerges from the peaceful avocations of civic life for the protection of those laws, in the enactment of which each individual member had a part. And having accomplished its mission—repressed anarchy, or repulsed invasion—it reverts quietly to the retirement whence it came, satisfied with no other reward than the thanks of the community and the proud consciousness of having done its duty.

Yet the Citizen-soldier has important duties to perform, more especially if he fill the post of a commissioned officer. Whatever may be his cares or requirements in the crowded avenues of business life, he must abstract from these considerations a certain amount of time and thought with systematic exactitude to meet the responsibilities of his military office; that is, if he does, or aims to do, his duty. A well conducted regiment, or even a company, is a nice piece of machinery, requiring constant attention to keep up its efficiency. This task devolves on its officers, and the exact measure of their fitness or unfitness will be the condition of the organizations they command. We will return to the subject.

The New Orleans Picayune of the 12th says:—We may expect a large number of these rebel officers soon to visit our city, as it is said some fifty of them have been exiled. It will certainly be a novelty to witness the advent of a band of exiles to our shores, banished from Mexico for religious intolerance and military despotism. They endeavored to triumph by invoking superstition, fanaticism, and the supremacy of the army. But they have signally failed, and they will have an opportunity in our country, we hope, to repent of their rashness and folly.

But the most important decree is that of the 31st of March, dated at Puebla, in which the clergy are accused of having taken part in the revolution, and the ecclesiastical property of that diocese, amounting to thirty or forty millions of dollars, is seized to pay the expenses and damages of the war, and to pension the widows, orphans, and wounded. This is the first blow struck directly at the church property, and as such, is one of the most important acts ever recorded in the history of Mexico. The different States of that Republic seem to be quiet at present. How long this repose may continue is uncertain. The only ripple upon the smooth current of events is the singular movement, amounting almost to a pronunciamento, in Sonora, where the Governor and Commandant-General, recently appointed, were rudely opposed and refused recognition. The Central Government in Mexico had appointed two gentlemen who held the same posts as in the time of Santa Anna, and who were noted for their laudation of that despot, and a blind obedience to his behests.

We have the following communication from our special correspondent: Mexico, Friday, April 4, 1856.

You will be surprised to learn that Haro y Tamariz has been defeated at the city of "Puebla of the Angels," by President Comonfort, with the Government troops. Although Haro and his soldiers were blessed by the priest, although his army consisted of nearly all the well-drilled men in the country, and although the wealth and influence of the church were at his disposal, still all did not avail him in opposition to the popular sentiment of the Republic. There has been, however, some very hard fighting in this affair, which made it imperative upon Comonfort to throw bombs into the Plaza, and even into the Cathedral. Think of the sacrilege of shelling the Cathedral!—which tradition, well authenticated, too, informs us was in part built by more than mortal hands; for in its erection it was discovered that in proportion as the workmen built its walls in the day time, in the same proportion did the angels build its walls in the night. Thus assisted, the job was finished in half the time it would otherwise have taken; and from this circumstance, the good city has received the name of "Puebla of the Angels."

In turning back to some former estimates of ministers, I find that Haro y Tamariz, the aforesaid, while bottle-holder to Santa Anna, calculated the annual expenses at $5,743,000, and the receipts at $15,383,000. But as Santa Anna has gone on his travels once more, and as Haro will soon have an opportunity to consult some foreign guide-books, I may here say, that if you were to reverse the debit and credit sides of these accounts, some approximation might be made to the truth. In fact, in Santa Anna's time, the regular annual receipts were about $8,000,000. It is officially stated that in the twenty-eight months of his last administration the expenses were $39,000,000, while the receipts in the same period, including $7,000,000 from the United, could not have exceeded $27,000,000. I give you these figures as aids to meditations on Mexican finances.

Some of the liberals here were not satisfied with the terms of the capitulation made at Puebla. The fourth article was considered too moderate towards the rebel officers, as it recognized them as belonging to the army. This article says: "The generals, chiefs, and officers who are in the Plaza shall proceed to reside at the places which shall be designated by the Supreme Government, while the same decides the manner in which they shall remain in the army." The practical interpretation which President Comonfort has given to this decree, however, will no doubt be satisfactory to those who are not friends to the military establishment. He has already sent forty of these officers to the South coast, and has prepared passports for as many more with which to leave the country.

The Gale in New-York.

The daily papers are filled with the ravages of the storm which began on Sunday, 20th, and continued through Monday. The items of devastation in all parts of the city and Brooklyn are innumerable. The most noticeable are as follows:

It blew the roof off Burton's Theatre, rolled it up like paper, and sent it off into the Park, a crumpled mass of ruin. It blew a large tree down in the Park, opposite the Hall of Records, snapped it off like a pipe-stem.

The new Congregational Church on Clinton avenue was damaged to the extent of about $1,000.

The roof of a house in the Ninth Ward, owned by James Wheeler, was blown off and carried a great distance. Damage, $1,000.

A very respectable sized house, belonging to Mr. Jas. Clark, on Nostrand avenue, was blown across the street on to another man's lot. Acres of close fence and miles of grape-vine trellises were prostrated.

A large building, three hundred feet long, on the Hunterfly Road, owned by John Schwanwedle, and occupied, the lower part as a stable and shed, and the upper part as a ball room is nearly all down.

An unoccupied five story brick factory, owned by James Weaver, in Dean street, near Vanderbilt avenue, formerly occupied as a top factory, is damaged to the extent of $1,000.

The car-house of the Brooklyn Railroad Company, alluded to above, was about 200 feet long by 40 feet wide, and cost in the vicinity of $1,200.

Several of the boats were torn from their fastenings by the force of the wind, and hurled into the stream in spite of their chains—still they made good time, and the public were not seriously incommoded.

Death of R. L. Stevens.—Robert L. Stevens died at 3 o'clock on the morning of the 20th, at his late residence in River Terrace, Hoboken. He was in the 68th year of his age. He was a man of much inventive genius, and devoted the energies of his practical mind during nearly all of his life to inventions and improvements, mostly appertaining to navigation and to munitions of war.

Mr. Stevens was born in Hoboken, in 1788. His father, John Stevens, was at that time principal owner of the territory now comprised within the boundaries of Hoboken. Some months previous to the first exhibition of Robert Fulton's boat, the John Fitch, Robert L. Stevens and his father constructed and succeeded in driving a small paddle-wheel steamer called the Mary Ann, with which they navigated a large ditch on the upper side of Hoboken. Before James Rumsey and John Fitch succeeded in propelling boats by paddle-wheels or screw propeller, Mr. Stevens, in connection with his father, built a screw propeller with a stern wheel at Hoboken, which has been imitated by Ericsson in the construction of his propeller. He has built a number of steamboats, among others the North America, constructed about 25 years ago, which ran upon the Hudson River from New York to Albany, and was in her day the swiftest steamboat afloat.

Amusements.

TRIUMPH OF ART.

LOUIS KELLER has the honor to announce to the public that his Second Series of

Grand Tableau Soirees

will commence in this city on Monday Evening, April 28th, at EMPIRE HALL, 596 Broadway, two doors above the Metropolitan Hotel, which has been fitted up and beautifully embellished and decorated by him expressly for the purpose. M. Keller also intimates to the intellectual, the refined, and tasteful, as well as the fastidious in matters which refer exclusively to the appropriateness and careful direction of the place where his peculiar and distinctive performances are given, that he has yielded to general and friendly suggestions in his present arrangements, and believes that in all respects the wishes of the community will be met, and that the same approval with which his tableaux have been received by The Courts of Europe, and the enlightened of nearly all the world, will be accorded to the enterprise which he now embarks in here.

☞ Full particulars will be duly announced. ap26 1t

A Lecture will be delivered on Monday Evening, April 28, in Hope Chapel, by Captain Lyster, of the Nicaraguan Army, previous to his return. Subject—Nicaragua and General Walker, and the Future Prospects of Central America.

Tickets, 25 cents; may be had at Jollie's Music Store, Broadway; the St. Charles, corner of Leonard and Broadway; Thompson's Metropolis, next door to Laura Keene's Theatre; of Haverty, Bookseller, 110 Fulton street; and at the Hall on the evening of the Lecture.

Doors open at 7, Lecture at 8 o'clock, P. M.

ALL lovers of Dancing should attend Mrs. Luby's lecture on the Dances of All Nations, at the Stuyvesant Institute, 659 Broadway, on Tuesday Evening, April 29. Messrs. George Christy and Wood have in the kindest manner given the services of the celebrated Masters Eugene and Howard (pupils of George Christy). They will appear immediately after their performance at the Minstrels, 444 Broadway, and, with Mrs. Luby's pupils, perform several favorite national dances. Mr. Wallace's Cornet Band will attend. Tickets, 50 cents—to be had at the Music stores, at Mrs. Luby's Dancing Academy, 275 Bleecker street, or at the door of the Institute. Lecture to commence at 8 o'clock. ap26 1t

P. HUGHES,

LEMON SYRUP AND CORDIAL REFINER, and Dealer in Foreign Liquors, and French Brandies of different brands, Hollands Gin, Irish and Scotch Whiskey, Scotch Ale and Porter, and other Liquors, returns his sincere thanks to the public for the patronage he has already received, and hopes they will continue the same. No. 88 Cherry street, New-York. tf

JAMES AINSLIE,

NO. 93 BEAVER STREET,

OFFERS for sale from U. S. Bonded Warehouses, of his own importation, Cognac Brandies, also Rochelle Brandies, in half, quarter, and eighth Pipes, pale and dark, of the well known brand of Arzac Seignette.

Gin—Sole importer of the superior Magnolia Brand; also, Cologne and Schnapps Gin.

Wines—Burgundy, Pure Juice, and old Port, Sherry, &c. Jamaica and St. Croix Rums; Stewart's Paisley Whiskey, &c. 3mos

COPARTNERSHIP NOTICE.

THE undersigned have formed a Copartnership, under the name and firm of Foot, Cole & Co., for the transaction of the Paper Commission Business, at 82 Beekman street.

FOOT, COLE & CO.

Joel W. Foot, | O. D. Harman,
Chas. Cole, | Carlton Le Sage.

Mr. H. C. Goodwin, has no further connection with us. ap19

American News.

Governor Wise of Virginia has written a letter in which he "goes in" for James Buchanan for the Presidency. He says:

Pennsylvania has always stood by Virginia, from the days of Simon Snyder and Thos. Jefferson down to this day; she is one of the largest and oldest and best of the old thirteen States, and she has claim to give a candidate, and she has a son worthy of a nomination, who is a representative, man and name, of his State's democracy; and if Virginia again prefers him, as she did in 1652, I will go for his nomination might and main.

Virginia offers no candidate, and will not likely vote for any son of her own unless her sister States shall call upon her to prevent her preference to the Convention. If she presents no son of her own in the first instance, my belief is that on the first ballotings in convention her vote will be cast for Mr. Buchanan with an earnest, honest desire to have him nominated. If his name falls, then Virginia will expect Pennsylvania to go along with her for her preference. And I say this without rejecting other States or candidates, for whoever is nominated by the Convintion at Cincinnati, on a sound democratic platform, will be supported by Virginia, and she desires to exclude no candidate from having his name proposed. She will heartily go for Mr. Pierce, Mr. Douglas, or any other sound man of the North, and sets up equal pretensions only for a son of her own or the South. She would, doubtless, looking to men alone, prefer one of her own sons—for, example, Mr. Hunter, of the Senate, or some other; but the proposal of the name of one of her sons she would defer to her sister States, and to none more especially than to Pennsylvania.

The New Mormon State.—On the 18th of January a District Convention was held at Covo, in Beaver County, Utah, to take into consideration the Propriety of a General Convention some time during the Spring to form a constitution and plan of State Government for the Territory. Delegates were present from several counties, some of them having come one hundred and fifty miles. They met in a grove near by. Col. W. H. Dame presided.

The Hon. G. A. Smith spoke strongly in favor of the proposed Convention. He alluded to the immense change which had been effected in the condition of the coontry since its colonization and said that Judge W. W. Drummond estimated the population of the territory at 100,000. Nowhere else was there to be found a population who understood so well the principles of self-government, or made better laws.

The Hon. Jesse N. Smith of Parowan City coincided in the remarks of Mr. Smith.

Judge Lee, of Washington County, as one of the pioneers of civilization in the Southern portion of the Territory, was deeply sensible of their present position. Many cases were continually arising from their intercourse with the Savages which required the speedy and effective arm of a State Government.

Messrs. Philip R. Smith, T. Lewis of Iron, W. Bateman of Cedar, C. W. Dilton of Harmony, J. Hatch of Santa Clara, Carlos Shirts of Hanarrah, James McGuffe of Parowan, Hon. J. C. Haight of Cedar, and several citizens of Beaver County addressed the meeting to the same purpose.

The following resolution will give some idea of the estimation in which Federal officers are held in Utah:

"Resolved, That we, as a people, appreciate the inconveniencies arising from the appointment of Federal officers by the General Government, who generally have no interest in the country, and whose only recommendation is the fact of their having performed some degrading political service or party trickery in some other country, and whose only anxiety is to fill their own pockets, promote their own ease and comfort, regardless of the results of their own official blunders, or criminal neglect to the inhabitants of the Territory."

The Convention closed with a Ball.

Progress of Population.—The following table shows the aggregate result of the Census of 1855 in the States named, and a comparison of the same with the population of 1850:

States.	Pop. 1850.	Pop. 1855.	Inc. in 5 years.
Alabama,	771,623	835,192	8.24 per cent.
Arkansas,	209,897	253,117	20.51 per cent.
Florida,	87,445	110,725	26.62 per cent.
Georgia,	906,185	935,090	3.19 per cent.
Illinois,	851,470	1,242,917	45.97 per cent.
Iowa,	192,214	325,014	69.09 per cent.
Massachusetts,	994,514	1,133,123	13.97 per cent.
Michigan,	397,654	509,374	28.09 per cent.
New-Jersey,	489,555	569,499	16.33 per cent.
New-York,	3,097,394	3,479,059	12.03 per cent.
Wisconsin,	305,301	552,109	80.80 per cent.
Total 11 States,	8,303,842	9,936,129	Av. 19.66 per cent.

Beside the above, the States of California, Ohio, and Virginia, had each a census in 1855; but of these no returns have come to hand. The population of Kansas in 1855 was 8,521, and of Nebraska 4,565. Oregon will take a census immediately, and previous to its applying for admission into the Union; it is supposed to have 60,000 inhabitants.

An attempt is being made to raise a sum of $150,000 for the further advancement of Yale College. The $100,000 necessary to bind the subscriptions have already been secured, and about $15,000 in addition. Rev. William J. Breed, of New-Haven, is still engaged in endeavoring to raise the balance of the contemplated fund. Connecticut has given $56,010—of which New-Haven furnished $40,500; Waterbury, $7,615; Norwich, $2,225; Hartford, $1,210; North Britain, $1,110; Watertown, $1,000; Kent, $750; New-London, $750; Middletown, $700; Lyme, $100; Jewett City, $50. New-York has given $38,240, of which the cities of New York and Brooklyn gave $37,240, and Poughkeepsie gave $1,000. Massachusetts has given $3,300, of which Boston gave $2,800, and the town of Enfield $500. Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, has given $600. Newark, New Jersey, $500. In Paris, France, $1,000 was subscribed, and also $1,000 in Canton, China. The total amount of these donations is $100,640, more than one-half of which has been given in the State of Connecticut, and more than one-third in the cities of New-York and Brooklyn. Twenty-three years ago a similar appeal was made to the graduates and friends of Yale College, which was answered by a contribution of $100,000 to its permanent funds.

Murder in the Family of Mr. Rust, M. C.—On the 17th ult. a difficulty occurred in Camden, Ark., between Mr. Jones, editor of The Ouachita Herald, and Mr. Carrington, editor of The El Dorado Union, in the course of which the latter was shot dead by a friend of the former. The unfortunate man was a brother-in-law of Congressman Rust. At last accounts the friends of the parties were arming for a general row.

Settlement of the Seat of Government Question in Canada.—This long vexed question was settled yesterday: but whether the city chosen to be the final seat of government was Quebec or Toronto appears to be a matter of doubt. The idea of an itinerant government was absurd, costly and ridiculous. The last we heard of the Canadian Parliament was that when the news of the birth of the King of Algeria reached them, champagne was brought into the House of Assembly and the English members sang "God Save the Queen," and the French, "Partant pour la Syrie," the Speaker leading off with his bass, alternately in the two languages; which must have been a very lively and unique scene to witness. However, drunk or sober, singing or talking, these gentlemen had better be fixtures; so we may congratulate the Province on the late decision.—Herald, 19th.

The Hartford Times of the 16th inst. says: "The Rev. Mr. Duffy, a pastor of St. Patrick's Church of this city, received a letter to-day, per the "Cambria," from the brother of Bishop O'Reilly in Ireland, dated March 27, stating that Bishop O'Reilly sailed on board of the "Pacific," and of course his fate is involved in that of the steamer. The Rev. Mr. O'Reilly, reported as a passenger in the "Cambria," is a nephew of the late Father Brady. He was expected by this steamer. Of course, then, the report that it was the Right Rev. Bishop O'Reilly who had arrived, is not correct.

California Olives.—It is said that the olive tree will flourish in all but the mountainous parts of California, as well as the oak. At Lan Louis Obispe, there are some very large olive-trees growing upon the old Mission-grounds. The value of the olive crop in Italy, Spain, Palestine, and other Mediterranean countries, is enormous, and the importations into this country of the fruit and oil is so large, that it should estimate California farmers to obtain a share of the trade of an article that that be so easily produced upon the singularly productive soil of that State.

In Milwaukee, the Democracy have lately achieved a triumph in the election of their whole city ticket. They have done the same in Davenport, Iowa, and in Kenosha, Wis.

In the Massachusetts Legislatnre the Senate Committee on the Prohibitory law have reported that it is inexpedient to alter or modify the existing law.

An attempt was made on the 18th to throw the Boston express train from the track near Port Chester, on the New York and New Haven Railroad, by removing the pilot from the engine.

Its loss was discovered in time to prevent a serious catastrophe.

City News.

The Introduction of Water into Brooklyn.—Various efforts have been made to introduce water to Brooklyn from the streams of Long Island on a plan somewhat similar to the Croton acqueduct, but heretofore without success. The law authorizing its introduction by the city government contains a clause directing that the plan, when agreed upon, shall be submitted to a popular vote, and two plans so brought forward were voted down. A company started some years ago to introduce water, but on opening their subscription books nobody would take the stock Recently a new company was organized called the Nassau Company. The Common Council agreed to subscribe one million of dollars, the Company to raise two millions, and the works to be managed by a joint direction appointed by the company and the city in proportion to the respective amounts of capital invested. Some of the leading property owners not liking this arrangement, held a meeting and appointed a Committee to confer with the Water Committee of the Common Council. The joint committee have made arrangements with the Water Company by which the latter agrees to transfer its charter to the city; and it is probable that the Corporation will now proceed to have the improvement perfected. It is understood that six water commissioners are to be appointed to manage the business, and an engineer appointed to superintend the construction of the works. The Commissioners are to serve without pay. It is expected that a contract can be entered into for completing the entire work at an expense of $4,000,000.—Tribune.

The Fillibusters' Witnesses—Locked Up—Wanting—Sloped.—The trial of the indicted Fillibusters arrested on the Northern Light, set down for the 16th, in the United States District Court. The prolongation of the George Law and Sloo suit, was postponed in consequence of William H. Allen, upon whose affidavit the arrests were effected, having gone to Demerara. Colonel Mace, arrested as a fillibuster, but held as a witness, and dismissed on his own recognizance to appear, has sloped. The last that was seen of him he was drilling recruits in Nicaragua. William Macy, also held as a witness, does not turn up. Lastly, Capt. William Kneass, the leading witness before the Grand Jury, and whose evidence led principally to finding the indictments, is nowhere to be hit upon.

A remonstrance signed by several of the Chinese who are now in the city, indignantly protests against the conduct of their mendicant fellow-countrymen, who crouch in miserable attitudes on the sidewalks. The remonstrants desire most earnestly that the good people of New-York should not form their opinions of the Celestial nation from the beggars now in the city, or take them to be representatives even of the Chinese of their own station in life.

Wall and Nassau streets have recently become a mart for the sale of horses. Almost daily at 1 o'clock horses and carriages intended for sale are driven up and down these crowded streets, with notices of the auction placarded on the flanks of the quadrupeds.

Mr. Hackett, the American Comedian.

While a guest at a splendid entertainment given him some years ago in England, whither he had carried a number of letters of introduction from several of our most distinguished statesmen to various English noblemen and wealthy commoners, in the course of conversation, another guest, a retired merchant of eminence, perhaps somewhat envious of the attention shown to Hackett, while he himself was notorious for the ambition of hanging upon the skirts of the aristocracy, thus addressed him:—

"By the way, Mr. Hackett, is what I read lately in the Court Journal, respecting yourself, true—that by the death, recently, at New Orleans, of the Baron of Hackettstown, Mr. Hackett, the American comedian, succeeds to that title?"

"It is true," replied Mr. Hacket, "that my cousin, Baron Hackett, has died lately, leaving no issue, and that I have become of my name and generation the last."

"Why, then, do you not take up the title."

"Because," was the reply, "it is now merely an honorary one. Though originally derived from Hackett, known as one of the great Norman barons who shared richly with William the First in the conquest of England, according to the roll at Battell Abbey and the Annals of British heraldry, the title is now extinct, and is only recognised by having, through many centuries, lastly and properly belonged to the peerage of a bygone and since disintegrated Irish Parliament. The Lords Hackett shared the misfortunes of their near kinsman, the unhappy Earl of Desmond; their forfeited estates reverted to the crown of England, under which they had been held in capite; and the once formidable castle of those feudal barons, in Ireland, is now only a mound of earth. Hence the title is but the shadow of a departed dignity, and one which could offer no temptation to a native New-Yorker and a republican to parade, either here or there, as an appendage to his name."

"Do you place no value, then, upon the fact that you are thus descended," pursued the Englishman.

"Though it has been affirmed, that 'none were ever known to despise the pride of ancestry excepting such as had no claim to any themselves,' yet, perhaps, I may be allowed here," replied Mr. Hackett, "to observe, that if deeds of chivalry, done by one's ancestors so many years ago, and which gained for them renown and vast estates, and maintained their aristocratic rank through many successive and remote ages, may, at this modern time, found a pretension to any hereditary honor, I suppose I may reasonably claim that of having descended from 'an ancient and honorable family.' But, born as I was, and am proud to have been, under republican institutions, I have taught myself to regard the son of the poorest peasant, or the most humble mechanic, as my equal, in every respect, of birth; and I hold that the chief distinction among my fellow men to which I, or any one, have a right to aspire, is that of achieving a just reputation, as an honest and well-bred man, and to be worthy of associating with educated men of genius and talent, wherever, throughout the world, I may chance to meet them."

"Ah, ay!" rejoined the other, "as a nation, you Americans have claims upon our respect; and when certain of your countrymen have come over here, and as foreigners of distinction, have been taken by the hand by some of our nobility, they have always been admitted, by courtesy, into our best society. But, Mr. Hackett, perhaps you are not aware that, with your attested pedigree, derived from one of the Norman barons, you might claim, by right of direct descent, an equality with our oldest and highest aristocracy."

"The title of baron would tend rather to degrade than elevate me, at home," replied Hackett.

"Indeed! How so?" exclaimed the Englishman, with surprise.

"Because," was the immediate response, "in my country—the United States—I am admitted to be a gentleman, and that is the highest rank acknowledged in society there; whereas a British baron is only the third grade of your nobility, and so ranks, relatively, below our gentleman, whose essential qualification for that title are honesty and good breeding, without reference to his vocation; for, as one of your poets has truly said—

"Honor and shame from no condition rise," and are quite irrespective of the accidental possession of high birth, fortune, or ancestry. In fact, a gentleman in America is allowed a social parity with our nation's president, the compeer of your sovereign. At the same time, so far as manners may make a gentleman, I have often remarked, and in candor now repeat, that I can conceive of no better specimens of social courtesy, good breading, and hospitality, than I have noticed in my intercourse with some of your nobility and gentry."

One of the party, it seems, ventured to commend Mr. Hackett's national pride, republican principles, and logical ingenuity; but such a levelling analogy between the constitutional representative of the sovereign people of the United States and the British people's sovereign, was evidently an overdose of democracy for aristocratic stomachs. At any rate, the conversation was dropped raiher abruptly at this particular point.

Character of Napoleon III.

New-York, April 4, 1856.

To the Editors of the National Intelligencer:

Gentlemen:—My attention has been called to an article in your journal of the 28th ult., in which my name is introduced in connection with the sojourn, in this city, in 1837, of the present Emperor of the French, and statements and opinions of of mine in regard to the character he sustained here placed in antagonism to a prevailing impression on the subject. The publicity thus given to me as a defender of the reputation of this gentleman at that period must be my apology for this communication, and for the request that, in justice to the personage most concerned, the National Intelligencer may become the channel of a brief rehearsal of the opportunities I had of correct knowledge in the case, and of the belief, based upon them, which I entertain.

Louis Napoleon, after having been a prisoner of State for some months on board a French man-of-war, was set at liberty on our shores at Norfolk, in the early spring of 1837. He came immediately to New York, as the point at which he could be put most speedily in communication with his friends in Europe. Either on the day or the day but one after his arrival I was led to call upon him, not as the bearer of an illustrious name, or the inheritor of an imperial title, but as a stranger and an exile without a personal friend in the country or a letter of introduction. I was the more readily induced to this from representations made to me by a near relative, in whose family he had already passed an evening, of the deep interest his appearance and whole manner had excited in those who then met him. The call was reciprocated with a promptness and cordiality I had not anticipated, and in a very brief period led to an intercourse which was almost daily for some two months, and which ended only when we parted from each other off Sandy Hook, on board the packet which returned him to Europe.

The association was not that of hours only, but of days, and on one occasion at least of days in succession, and was characterized by a freedom of conversation on a great variety of topics that could scarce fail, under the ingenuousness and frankness of his manner, to put me in possession of his views, principles, and feelings upon most points that give insight to character. I never heard a sentiment from him and never witnessed a feeling that could detract from his honor and purity as a man or his dignity as a prince; on the contrary, I often had occasion to admire the lofty thoughts and exalted conceptions which seemed most to occupy his mind.

His favorite topics, when we were alone, were his uncle, the Emperor, his mother, and others of his immediate family, in whom he had been deeply interested; his own relations to France by birth and imperial registry; the inducements which led to the attempted revolution at Strasbourgh, the causes of its failure, and his chief support under the mortification of the result: "The will of God," to use his own words, "through a direct interposition of his Providence; the time had not yet come."

He seemed ever to feel that his personal destiny was indissolubly linked with France; or, as his mother, Hortense, expressed it in her will, "to know his position;" and the enthusiasm with which at times he gave utterance to his aspirations for the prosperity, the happiness, and the honor of his country, and to the high purposes which he designed to accomplish for her as a ruler, amounted, in words, voice, and manner, to positive eloquence. Had I taken notes of some of these conversations they would be considered now, when his visions of power and earthly glory are realized, scarcely less epigrammatic and elevated in thought, or, as related to himself, less prophetic than many which have been recorded from the lips of the exile of St. Helena.

He was winning in the invariableness of his amiability, often playful in spirits and manner, and warm in his affections. He was a most fondly attached son, and seemed to idolize his mother. When speaking of her the intonations of his voice and his whole manner were often as gentle and feminine as those of a woman. It had been his purpose to spend a year in making a tour of the United States, that he might have a better knowledge of our institutions, and observe for himself the practical workings of our political system. With this expectation, he consulted me and others as to the arrangement of the route of travel, so as to visit the different sections of the Union at the most desirable seasons. But his plans were suddenly changed by intelligence of the serious illness of Queen Hortense, or, as then styled, the Duchess of St. Leu, at her castle in Switzerland. I was dining with him the day the letter conveying this information was received. Recognizing the writing on the envelope as it was handed to him at table, he hastily broke the seal, and scarce glanced over half a page before he exclaimed, "My mother is ill; I must see her. Instead of a tour of the States, I shall take the next packet for England. I will apply for passports to the continent at every embassy in London, and, if unsuccessful, will make my way to her without them." This he did, and reached Arnenberg in time to console by his presence the dying hours of the ex-Queen, and to receive in his bosom her last sigh.

After such opportunities of knowing much of the mind and heart and general character of Louis Napoleon, it was with great surprise that I for the first time read, in a distant part of the world, when he had become an Emperor, representations in the public journals of his life in New-York, [and New-Orleans, too, though he was never there,] which would induce a belief that he had been when here little better than a vagabond—low in his associations, intemperate in his indulgences and dissipated in his habits. In both eating and drinking he was, so far as I observed, abstemious rather than self-indulgent. I repeatedly breakfasted, dined and supped in his company, and never knew him to partake of anything stronger in drink than the light wines of France and Germany, and of these in great moderation. I have been with him early and late, unexpectedly as well as by appointment, and never saw reason for the slightest suspicion of any irregularity in his habits.

It has been said, notwithstanding, that his character was so notorious that he was not received in society and made no respectable acquaintances. If during his brief stay in the city, at a period of the year when general entertainments are not usual, he was not met in the self-constituted beau monde of the metropolis, it was from his own choice. Within the week of his arrival cards and invitations were left for him at his hotel. As a reason for his declining to accept the last, he told me he had no wish to appear in what is called society, but added:—

"There are, however, individuals resident in New-York whose acquaintance I should be happy to make. Mr. Washington Irving is one. I have read his works, and admire him both as a writer and a man, and would take great pleasure in meeting him. Chancellor Kent is another. I have studied his Commentaries, think highly of them, and regard him as the first of your jurists. I should be happy to know him personally."

He did make the acquaintance of both Mr. Irving and the Chancellor, and enjoyed the hospitality of the one at Sunnyside and of the other at his residence in town. He saw some of the best French society of the city, and, familiar with the historic names of New-York, availed himself of the proffered civilities of such families as the Hamiltons, the Clintons, the Livingstons, and others of like position. It is not true, therefore, that he was not received in society and had no acquaintances of respectability. He visited some of our first families in social position, and was entertained by some of our most distinguished citizens.

It is said that he was without means and lived on loans which he never repaid. This is simply absurd. I am under the impression that his private fortune was then unimpaired, and beyond the reach of the French government; but, if this were not the case, his mother's wealth was ample, and his drafts upon her for any amount would have been promptly honored. I doubt not that funds were waiting his arrival, or, if not, were readily at his command

Louis Napoleon may have had some associations in New-York of which I was ignorant; and he, like Dickens and other distinguished foreigners, may have carried his observations under the protection of the police to scenes in which I would not have accompanied him. If he did, I never heard of it and have now no reason to suppose such was the fact. But that he was an habitue, as has been publicly reported, of drinking saloons and oyster cellars, gambling houses and places of worse repute, I do not believe; I can recall to my recollection no young man of the world whom I have ever met, who, in what seemed an habitual elevation of mind and an invariable dignity of bearing, would have been less at home than he in such associations.

There was, however, in New-York, at the same time and for about the same period, a Prince Bonaparte who was, I have reason to think of a very different character. His antecedents in Europe had not been favorable, and his reputation here was not good. He, too, was in exile, but not for a political offence. He may not have been received in society, and may have had low associations. I met him, but, from this impression, formed no acquaintance with him. For the same reason the intercourse between him and his cousin was infrequent and formal. All that has been said and published of the one may be true of the other; and in search for reminiscences of the sojourn in New-York of Louis Napoleon, on his elevation to a throne fifteen years afterwards, it is not difficult to believe that those ignorant of the presence here at the same time of two persons of the same name and same title may have confounded the acts and character of the one with the other. This, I doubt not, is the fact, and that however general and firmly established the impression to the contrary may be, the reproach of a disreputable life here does not justly attach itself to him, who is now confessedly the most able, the most fortunate, and the most remarkable sovereign in Europe. C. S. STEWART, U. S. Navy.

BIRTHS.

At North King street, Dublin, the wife of John Caffrey, of a daughter.
At 54, Middle Abbey street, Dublin, the wife of Thomas Lockhart, of a son.
At the Grange, county Meath, the wife of James George Murphy, of a daughter.
At Lower Harstonange street, Limerick, the wife of William Goulding, of a son.
At Blackrock, county Dublin, the wife of James B. Pratt, of a son.
At Martello terrace, Holywood, the wife of George A. Carruthers, of a son.
At College square, Belfast, the wife of J. Seaton Reid, M. D., of a son.
At the Mall, Sligo, the wife of Edward Pollock, of a daughter.
At Mullingar, the wife of Dr. Middleton, of a daughter.
At Gleneske, Sligo, the wife of John Taaffe, county Sligo, of a son.
At Tramore, the wife of Richard Ussher, of Rathborough, county Wexford, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

At St. Paul's Church, Auckland, New-Zealand, James Hobb, Eden Crescent, to Elizabeth Eden, daughter of William Connell, of Auckland, formerly of Cork.
At the Church of St. Mary Star of the Sea, Irishtown, Luke Hayden, Pembroke quay, to Martha Josephine, daughter of Samuel Reddy, of Donnybrook.
At the Cathedral, Manchester, by the Rev. G. Huntingdon, Frances Sarah, daughter of John W. Barton, of Manchester, to Joseph B. Fisher, of Dublin.
At St. Thomas's Church, George Ryall, of Knockinglass, county Tipperary, to Adelaide Caroline, daughter of Henry Lahiff, of Cloonmore, county Galway.
At St. Peter's Church, Dillon R. Macnamara, of York street, to Sarah Jane, daughter of Robert Lovely, of Claremont, Sandymount.
At Randalstown, county Antrim, James M'Kee, M. D., to Anne Jane, daughter of the late J. Craig, Randalstown.
At Stoke Newington, Frederic York, son of Robert St. Leger, formerly of Glenview, Limerick, to Christian Emma, daughter of J. Muddell, of Shirley, Hampshire.
At Colombo, William J. Gorman, Lieutenant in the Ceylon Rifle regiment, to Matilda, daughter of Lieutenant Colonel William T. Layard, of the same corps.
At Limerick, William Ellis Burns, of Kilkee, to Sarah Carman, sister-in-law to Mr. M'Clare, Clare street.

DEATHS.

At his residence, Claremorris, Mayo, at an advanced age, widely and deservedly regretted by all who knew him, John Gray, father of Dr. Gray, the much esteemed and respected proprietor of the Freeman's Journal.
At his residence, Leeson street, Thomas Kearney, Assistant Commissary General.
At Waterloo road, Annabella Mary, daughter of the late Rev. Charles George, of Glasnevin.
William M'Kenna, son of the late Arthur M'Kenna, of Dublin.
At Seville-place, aged 85 years, Eliza, relict of the Rev. Andrew O'Callaghan.
At her residence, North Circular Road, Phibsborough, Mrs. Mary Taaffe, aged 70 years.
At the Pigeon House, Lieut. Henry Monck Mason, of the Royal Dublin Artillery, son of Henry Joseph Monck Mason, LL. D., Dargle Cottage, Wicklow.
At Dublin, Charles H. R. M'Clintock, son of the late Captain James M'Clintock, of the 88th Connaught Rangers, and for many years Adjutant of the Londonderry Militia.
At her residence, 42 Lower Stephen street, Catherine, wife of J. Collis.
At Dublin, Mary Anne, wife of Patrick O'Keeffe, No. 4 New Church street.
At Williamstown, Thomas Maguire, late of Eden quay, son of the late Owen Maguire, of Suffolk street.
At Carrickmacross, Frances, relict of the Rev. T. O'Flaherty, of Essexford glebe.
At London, Lady Inglis Cochrane, relict of Admiral the Hon. Sir Alexander Inglis Cochrane.
At the Presentation Convent, Doneraile, Sister Mary F. Borgia, daughter of Richard Laffan, of Eyon House, county Limerick.
At Tabrid House, near Caher, county Tipperary, Mary, wife of Laurence Walsh, and niece to the Rev. Eugene Condon, parish priest of Tallow.
At London, Alicia Maria, daughter of the late Charles Edward Leslie, of Glasslough, in the county Monaghan.
At Southend, Essex, Sarah, widow of Rear Admiral Bingham, and daughter of the late Vice Admiral Sir Willam Parker, Bart.
At Ardalough, the Ven. Archdeacon MacHale, aged 74 years.
At Newton, Margaret Sarah, wife of John C. Walshe, merchant, Waterford.
At Penzance, aged 47 years, Charles Hunt, of Ravenhead Copper Works, near Liverpool.
At Valetta, Malta, Lieutenant General the Right Hon. Sir Henry Pottinger, Bart., G. C. B., in the 67th year of his age.

Special Notices.

PROSPECTUS

OF THE SIXTH VOLUME—NEW SERIES OF THE

UNITED STATES DEMOCRATIC REVIEW,

FOR 1856.

THE United States Democratic Review, established in 1838, entered upon the Sixth Volume of its new series the first January, 1856.

In Politics, the Review will faithfully adhere to the principles recognized by Jefferson and Jackson, and as set forth, from time to time, by the Democratic National Conventions. At the same time, keeping pace with the progress of the age, it will advocate all those measures of public policy calculated to promote the best interests of our common country.

It will be the aim of the Editor to make it not only an efficient advocate of Democratic men and measures, but also

A WELCOME AND USEFUL FAMILY MAGAZINE.

Various causes combined to withdraw from the Review that powerful array of talent which so long placed it foremost amongst its cotemporaries. Those causes have ceased to operate. The most distinguished Statesmen and writers of the Democratic party will again contribute to its pages; and nothing will be omitted to make it worthy of the high vocation it aims at, viz., to be the organ of the United Democracy of the Union. The Democratic Review will be published in the same form as its preceding volumes, and is under the editorial charge of SPENCER W. CONE.

In addition to its political features, no exertions will be spared to make its Literary, Scientific, and Miscellaneous Departments worthy of the old days of its fame.

The urgent demand for something in its character, firm, uniform, and reliable, upon national questions, above the sectional squabbles of individuals, and always true to the great end of the party organization, viz., the dissemination and support of the pure principles of national Democracy—affords a wide field of usefulness; and we rely upon the Democracy of the Union for our support.

TERMS—$5 PER ANNUM, OR $3 STRICTLY IN ADVANCE.

GREAT INDUCEMENTS TO FORM CLUBS.

PREMIUMS.

Any person sending $13 will receive Five copies of the Review for one year, and either of the following works: "Longfellow's Hiawatha," "Songs of the Revolution," "Widow Bedott Papers," "Bayard Taylor's Travels in China and Japan," or "Life of Daniel Boone." Price, $1.25 each.

Any person sending $25 will receive Ten Copies of the Review, and either the whole of the Works above named, or "Dr. Kane's Arctic Explorations," beautifully illustrated. Price, $5.

Any person sending $40 will receive Twenty Copies of the Review, and "Irving's Life of Washington," in three large vols. Price, $6.

Any person sending Five prepaid subscriptions, at $3 each, will receive "Irving's Life of Washington. Price, $6."

Any person sending Ten prepaid subscriptions, at $3 each, will receive "Calhoun's Works," by Kralle, in four large vols. Price, $8; and "Van Santvoord's Lives of the Chief Justices of the United States." Price $2.25.

Any person sending Twenty prepaid subscriptions, at $3 each, will receive "Jefferson's Complete Works," in nine large vols., published, by order of Congress, from original manuscripts. Edited by A. H. Washington. Price, $25.

☞ The books above named are all handsomely bound, and recently published.

Specimen Numbers of the Review will be sent gratis when requested.

☞ TO POSTMASTERS.

POSTMASTERS ARE RESPECTFULLY SOLICITED TO ACT AS AGENTS FOR THE UNITED STATES DEMOCRATIC REVIEW.

All communications to be addressed to Lloyd and Campbell, 252 Broadway, New York.

Genin's Styles for Children—Straw Hats for Spring AND SUMMER.—To-day, will be opened, at GENIN'S Lower Store, No. 214 Broadway, the largest and most beautiful assortment of Straw Hats, Caps, and Flats, for Children and Misses, ever offered at that establishment. The stock consists of more than twenty varieties of Paris Hats, and a still greater number of home designs and manufacture, suitable for children of both sexes and of all ages, from the infant in arms to the young lady of 16 or 17 years of age.

The French artists in straw have produced this season a number of new braids, and have displayed extraordinary taste in the novel and becoming shapes into which they have moulded these delicate materials. The designers employed in the GENIN factory, have also surpassed all their former efforts in the same departments, and it may be confidently asserted that so great a diversity of fabrics and style in Straw Head-gear for Children has never before been introduced in New-York. All these novelties are exhibited for the first time, THIS DAY, at ap262t Genin's, No. 214 Broadway, opposite St. Paul's Church.

City Ladies and Ladies visiting the city can find GAITER and BUTTON BOOTS, from 12s. to 20s.; SLIPPER TIES and BUSKINS, from 6s. to 10s. per pair; INDIA RUBBER SHOES in great variety, with Boys, Misses' and Children's BOOTS and SHOES of all kinds and prices, at ap264t J. B. MILLER & CO.'S, No. 134 Canal street.

Will Close.—National Academy of Design.—The 31st ANNUAL EXHIBITION of Original Works, by Living Artists, now open daily, at 548 Broadway, will close on Saturday night, May 10th.

By order of the Council.

ap262t T. Addison Richards, Cor. Sec'y., N. A.

Special Notices.

PROSPECTUS.

THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC REVIEW is now firmly established in Washington City. Every great question before the present Congress will be elaborately discussed in its columns.

Such subscribers to the "Western Democratic Review," as have overpaid, will be furnished with the "National Democratic Review," which, it is believed, will prove a work of vastly superior merit.

A considerable portion of each number of the REVIEW will be devoted to Literary and Scientific subjects. Several, among the most accomplished scholars and distinguished politicians in the country, will be regular contributors to its columns.

In answer to numerous inquiries of old and new friends, we deem it proper to say, THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC REVIEW will be printed and published at Washington City; is totally unconnected with any political Magazine in the country; is devoted, not to the support of any politician, but to the interests of the National Democracy—that democracy which will ever "carry the flag and keep step to the music of the Union."

The REVIEW is published in pamphlet form, upon beautiful white paper, in solid long primer, 96 pages per month—making two volumes per year, of 576 pages each.

TERMS.—$3 per year, payable invariably in advance.

INDUCEMENTS TO CLUBS.—Five copies for one year—$10; twelve copies for one year—$20. Booksellers ordering the work, will be furnished at the usual magazine rates.

Members of Congress, and postmaters in every part of the Union, are hereby authorized to receive and receipt for subscriptions to the REVIEW.

All moneys may be transmitted by mail at the risk of the editor.

Copies of the REVIEW will be found for sale at the Bookstore of Franck Taylor, 402 Pennsylvania Avenue, and at the office of publication 468 10th street, between D and E.

All communications to be addressed to

GEO. P. BUELL,
Editor National Democratic Review.

☞ Post Office Notice.—The MAILS FOR EUROPE, per U. S. steamer BALTIC, will close at this office on SATURDAY, the 26th day of April, at 10½ o'clock, A. M.

Isaac V. Fowler, Postmaster.

John Frost, Esq.—In reply to a numerously signed requisition, John Frost, the British Exile, will deliver a Lecture on the Incidents in Convict Life, at the Broadway Tabernacle, on Monday, April 28, at 8 o'clock, P. M.

Admittance, 25 cents; reserved seats, 50 cents. Tickets to be had at the door on the evening of the Lecture.

Catholic Society for the Promotion of Agricultural Settlements.—Office No. 8 Chamber street, (over East River Bank. Open from 9 to 4.

8t J. G. MOYLAN, Sec., pro tem.

Life Illustrated; A First-class Family Paper, devoted to ENTERTAINMENT, IMPROVEMENT, AND PROGRESS. Weekly, $2 a year.

The Water-Cure Journal; HYDROPATHY, PHYSIOLOGY, AND LAWS OF LIFE AND HEALTH, $1.

The Phrenological Journal; For the Improvement of Mankind. Illustrated. $1 a year.

FOR THREE DOLLARS—all three will be sent a year. Address
ap262t FOWLER AND WELLS, No. 308 Broadway, New-York.

Emigrant Intelligence Office and Labor Exchange, No. 2 Canal street, corner of Centre street, New-York.—The office is established by the Commissioners of Emigration, where can always be found large numbers of LABORERS and SERVANTS, at very low rates of wages; and persons can have their orders filled by writing to the Superintendent, and sending the amount necessary to pay the passage of the parties required. No fees charged to employers.

JAMES P. FAGAN, Superintendent.

The Irish News—UP TOWN!—at ROBERT CODDINGTON'S Book Store, 366 Bowery, one door above Fourth street, on Every Wednesday morning.

N. B. Papers put up in Wrappers and Mailed at this establishment, free of charge. ap194t

REMOVAL.

McConville & Murphy, Importers of Wide Silks, Shawls, Vestings, and Linen Goods, have REMOVED to No. 36 LIBERTY STREET, where all orders will be punctually attended to. tf

To Military Companies and Civic Societies.

OLD MONTGOMERY HALL, 76 Prince Street.—The Subscriber, having taken a lease of the above well known popular concern, begs to inform the Members of Military Companies and Civic Trades Bodies, and Managers of Balls, that he is ready to treat for the letting of spacious and well-lighted rooms, suited for meetings, &c.

The Bar attached to the Hall is always supplied with the best imported and domestic Liquors, Brandys, Wines, Ales, Irish and Scotch Whiskey, and choicest brands of Havana Cigars. JOHN DOLAN.

TO PRINTERS.

COPPER FACED TYPE.—CORTELYOU'S NEW-YORK TYPE FOUNDRY, and PRINTERS' WAREHOUSE, established in 1823, 29 Spruce street, four doors below William street.

The subscriber is prepared to furnish his well-known and superior Book and Newspaper Printing Types, in fonts to suit purchasers. Also, German and Ornamental Types, Greek, Hebrew, Ornaments, Music, Brass Rules, &c., manufactured of metals equal to any in this country, and finished in the most accurate manner. He also furnishes Presses, Chases, Composing Sticks, Stands, Cases, Furniture, Ink, &c.

WOOD AND METAL TYPES,

from other Foundries, and every article required in a Printing Office, at the lowest prices, for cash or approved paper. Type, copper-faced by the Newton Company, furnished to order. Old Type received at 9 cents per pound in exchange for new. Estimates for Printing Establishments furnished on application.

☞ Printers of newspapers who will insert this advertisement three times before January 1, 1857, sending me one of the papers, will be paid in printing types, when purchasing four times the amount of the bill.

PETER C. CORTELYOU.

PIANOS, MELODEONS AND MUSIC.

The Cash system adopted!—Prices greatly reduced.

HORACE WATERS,

No. 333 BROADWAY, N. Y.,

AGENT FOR THE BEST BOSTON AND NEW-YORK INSTRUMENTS.

THE largest assortment of Pianos, Melodeons, Musical Instruments, and Musical Merchandise of all kinds, in the United States, Pianos from ten different Manufactories, comprising those of every variety of style, from the plain, neat and substantial 6½ octaves, in Walnut or Rosewood Cases, from $150 to $200, to those of the most elegant finish up to $1000. No house in the Union can compete with the above in the number, variety, and celebrity of its instruments, nor in the extremely low prices at which they are sold.

HORACE WATERS' MODERN IMPROVED PIANOS, with or without Iron Frames, possessing in their improvements of over-strings and action, a length of scale, power, and compass of tone equal to the Grand Piano, united with the beauty and durability of structure of the square Piano. They are justly pronounced by the Press and by the first Musical Masters to be equal to those of any other manufacturer. They are built of the best and most thoroughly seasoned material, and guaranteed to stand the action of every climate.

Each Instrument guaranteed to give satisfaction, or purchase money refunded. Second-hand Pianos at great bargains, constantly in store; price from $30 to $140.

HORACE WATERS' MELODEONS, superior instruments in tone, touch and durability of make. (Tuned the equal temperament.) Melodeons of all other styles and makes. Price, $45, $60, $75, $100, $125, $140; double Reeds, $150; double Reeds and two banks of Keys, $200. Less a liberal discount. Clergymen and Churches, an extra discount.

MARTIN'S GUITARS, BROWN'S HARPS, FLUTES, FLUTINAS, ACCORDEONS, VIOLINS, and MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS of all kinds, at lower prices than ever before offered to the public. A large discount to Teachers and Schools. The trade supplied on the most liberal terms.

MUSIC.—One of the largest and best selected catalogues of Music now published, comprising many of the choice and most popular airs of the day, and will be sold at one-third off from the regular prices.

Music sent by mail to all parts of the country, post paid. Particular and personal attention paid to all orders received by mail. Satisfaction guaranteed in every instance. Pianos and Melodeons for rent, and rent allowed on purchase. Pianos and Melodeons for sale on monthly payments. Second-hand Pianos taken in exchange for new. General and select Catalogues and Schedule of prices forwarded to all parts of the country by mail.

☞ Great inducements offered to agents in all parts of the country, to sell the Horace Waters' Pianos, Melodeons, and Catalogue of Music.

PIANOS AND MUSIC.—We learn that Horace Waters, of 333 Broadway, N. Y., agent for the sale of many of the most celebrated makers of Pianos and Melodeons, is offering them at prices which we advise all who desire to purchase to avail themselves of. He is also selling his large and well-known Catalogue of Music at one-third off from the regular prices, and will forward the same free of postage. His offers to the trade, teachers and schools, are of the most favorable character, all of which he will be able to fill to the letter, for having wisely adopted the cash system. The Horace Waters' Pianos are known as among the very best. We are enabled to speak of those instruments with some degree of confidence, from personal knowledge of their excellent tone and durable quality.—N. Y. Evangelist. ap19tf

Business Directory.

RICH CARPETING.

1856. SPRING IMPORTATION. 1856.

ARTHUR DONNELLY,

98 BOWERY, (West side,) BETWEEN GRAND AND HESTER STREETS.

IS now prepared to exhibit his New Spring Styles of

Foreign and Domestic Carpetings,

Comprising every grade and every description, from the Cheapest Fabric to the Richest.

Importing his goods direct and thus saving the commission and interest which most dealers pay, he is enabled to offer them at prices highly favorable to consumers, who will find at his store, among other Carpetings adopted to all varieties of taste, the following elegant descriptions:

Medallions,	at	14s to 18s per yard.
Velvet,	"	10s to 16s "
Tapestry,	"	6s to 12s "
Brussels,	"	7s to 12s "
Three-ply,	"	7s to 10s "
Ingrain,	"	3s to 7s "
Common Ingrain,	"	18d to 3s "

English and American Floor Oil Cloths,

of every imaginable width, pattern and style.

A complete and choice assortment of

STAIR AND HALL CARPETS, RUGS, MATS, MATTINGS,

and of everything else appertaining to the Carpet Trade.

ARTHUR DONNELLY, 98 Bowery, (West side,)
ap193m Between Grand and Hester sts., N. Y.

SMITH, BROTHERS,

ONE PRICE

CLOTHING WAREHOUSES,

122 AND 140 FULTON ST., N. Y.

The PRICE is marked on all the goods in

PLAIN FIGURES.

We have now on hand a splendid assortment of Spring and Summer Clothing, together with our new styles of Spring

RAGLANS,

PELISSIERS,

AND CANROBERTS—

OR, SUMMER OVER-COATS.

ap263m SMITH, BROTHERS, 122 AND 140 FULTON ST.

IRISH, ENGLISH, AND SCOTCH LINEN GOODS.

THE subscribers who are exclusive dealers in LINEN GOODS, would invite the attention of housekeepers and others to their complete stock of

Shirting Linens,	Towelings,
Sheeting Linens,	Diapers,
Pillow-case Linens,	Lawns,
Table Linens,	Linen C. Handkerchiefs;

or, Linen goods of any description, which they offer for sale at very low prices.

J. C. Milliken & Co., 748 Broadway,
ap26 above Astor place.

LATEST FASHIONS.

THE New Hat Company would here lay before their readers a few of the advantages to be derived from their system of doing business, which is ONE QUALITY, ONE PRICE, AND NO ABATEMENT. In the first place, any gentleman, whether he be a judge of the article or not, can rely upon receiving our first and only quality. Secondly, our price is so low, that the man of the most limited means is enabled to procure a fine and fashionable hat, (at the same time we wish it to be distinctly understood that our hats are not to be excelled by those sold at four dollars by any other establishment,) and lastly, we strive to please. If any gentleman desiring a hat differing from the usual style, will call and leave his order, we shall endeavor to suit him in every respect. The inducements which we offer to wholesale purchasers, and the trade in general, are not to be exceeded by those of any other establishment.

Also, a large assortment of CLOTH CAPS, CHILDREN'S FANCY HATS, UMBRELLAS, &c., constantly on hand at the lowest rates. Nos. 146 and 148 Nassau st. ap263m

---

REMOVAL.

THOMAS McLAUGHLIN, Shirt Manufacturer, and dealer in Gentlemen's Furnishing Goods, WHOLESALE AND RETAIL, has removed from his old stand, 292, to 269 Greenwich street, corner of Murray, and invites the attention of buyers generally to his Spring and Summer stock of the above goods. Feeling confident from his long experience in the business and his increased facilities for manufacturing a superior article of Shirts, Bosoms, Collars, Stocks, Ties, &c., to be able to offer for nett cash the cheapest goods to be found in the city. Shirts made to order for the trade or otherwise. We will also receive from auction daily, Under Shirts and Drawers Gloves, Hosiery, Ties, Cravats, &c., worthy the attention of Clothiers, Dry Goods Dealers and others. Our motto is ONE PRICE ONLY. THOMAS McLAUGHLIN, 269 Greenwich street, ap263mos (Corner of Murray street, New-York.)

IMPROVED ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

DR. J. ALLEN, (late Professor in the Ohio College of Dental Surgery,) invites attention to his improved method of constructing Artificial Dentistry, which combine the following advantages:

1st,—There are no seams or crevices for the lodgement of food, to vitiate the saliva, or infect the breath. The interstices are all filled with a silicious compound, which is so applied as to form an artificial gum; this is fused at a high heat, which unites the Teeth firmly to each other, and to the plate upon which tney are set, thus imparting great strength and lifelike appearance to the denture.

2d,—The Teeth for this style of work are made perfectly natural in form and shade, and when properly set with the artificial gum as above, exhibits that harmony with the other features which characterize the natural organs.

3d,—The original form and expression of the mouth and face can be restored. This is done by having the denture so constructed as to bring out the sunken portions and sustain them in their proper position; this is an important feature in this style of work, to which the author devotes special attention.

4th,—A clear and distinct articulation of speech is restored. This is effected by having the inside of the teeth, and artificial gum, of a natural form, to which the tongue is readily adapted; this prevents the hissing or muffled sounds so often observed in speaking or singing, in persons wearing artificial teeth.

The Rooms are at No. 30 BOND STREET, New-York. A Pamphlet containing more full particulars, sent free, to those who desire it. ap261t

---

P. MONAGHAN,

IMPORTER of the various and best brands of HAVANA SEGARS, &c. &c. Country and city merchants supplied in bond or in store. Duties paid or unpaid. 121 PEARL STREET, New-York.

N. B.—Sole Importer of the J. M. Vichot, La Union, and La Primavera brands. ap261y

---

NICHOLAS WALSH.

SEXTON AND UNDERTAKER.

NO. 8 SIXTH AVENUE.

LINEN HALL, 332 BOWERY,

EGAN & CO.,

THE proprietors take leave to inform their customers and the public, that they have moved their entire stock of Linen Goods to the above store, where they will from this time forward continue the wholesale together with the retail, of

Linens and Dry Goods,

of all kinds, at the lowest cash price. They are all of their own importation, and in order to make a permanent trade, they will retail them at the importer's prices. Their stock consists of Linen Sheeting, all widths and qualities; Damask Table Cloths, white and brown; Damask Table Linens, Diapers, Hucks, Back Towelings, Napkins, D'Oylies, White and Brown Drills, Checks and Stripes, all warranted pure linen, together with a large lot of

New Silks,

from 4s. to 12s. per yard; Stripes and Plaids, a splendid lot of Black Silks.

There are no damaged or bankrupt's goods included in this list, and they will sell lower than any other house having the same articles. Having a buyer always in Ireland, they are in a position and determined to sell low, and establish their house on the same principle as the "Old Linen Hall," in Dublin. Ladies are respectfully requested to examine the above stock, as affording a large assortment in variety and value. Amongst them will be found a splendid lot of 5-8 Damask and Snowdrop Napkins, from $1 to $1.50 per dozen, tickings and bleached muslins, cheap by the piece.

Striped Poplins,

A large assortment, from 3s. to 3s. 6d. per yard, with all other kinds of Dry Goods, to meet the wants of Spring and Summer purchasers.

ap261m EGAN & CO., Linen Hall, 332 Bowery.

Business Directory.

MEAGHER & CAMPBELL,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

NO. 82 BROADWAY.

NOTARY PUBLIC,

Commissioner for the U. S. Court of Claims.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, having formed a partnership with MALCOLM CAMPBELL, for the general practice of the law, the firm will continue to devote their attention to such law business as may be intrusted to them, including conveyancing, practice in all the courts of the state of New-York and of the United States, and general collecting business in all parts of the world. Particular attention will be given to the prosecution of claims against the United States in the Court of Claims.

Mr. Meagher may be consulted daily, on law business only, at No. 82 Broadway, from three till five o'clock P. M.

B. S. TREANOR,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

15 MASSACHUSETTS BLOCK, COURT SQUARE, BOSTON.

Particular attention paid to Conveyancing, and the examination of titles to Real Estate.

THOS. H. HURLEY,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 252 BROADWAY.

WILLIAM E. ROBINSON,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR,

HAVING entered into partnership with ISAAC DAYTON, Esq., (author of the work on Surrogates,) and WILLIAM A. COURSEN, Esq., gentlemen long known, and of high standing at the New-York Bar, has removed to their new office at 267 BROADWAY, third door below Chambers street.

☞ All business either in the Criminal or Civil Courts, promptly and faithfully attended to. ap191y

---

JAMES HARLIN,

WATCH, CLOCK MAKER, AND JEWELER.

236 HENRY STREET, BROOKLYN.

All watches and clocks bought or repaired at my establishment, warranted for twelve months.

JOHN KENNEDY'S

STEAM MARBLE WORKS,

35TH STREET, NEAR BROADWAY.

Statuary and Marble Mantle-Pieces, Monuments, Grave Stones, Tombs, &c. All orders thankfully received and punctually attended to.

M. J. CONNELL,

METROPOITAN BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTER,

NO. 39 BEEKMAN STREET, 1 DOOR EAST OF WILLIAM, NEW-YORK, AND 73 GRAND STREET, WILLIAMSBURGH.

All orders intrusted to me will be promptly attended to, and executed with unparalleled dispatch. tf

---

KNOX'S

OFFICE FURNITURE WAREROOMS,

59 AND 89 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

☞ Desks, Chairs, Cushions, Book-Cases, Lounges, Stools, and every article suitable for counting-rooms, Banks, and Insurance offices.

Desks of every description made to order on short notice.

CABINET FURNITURE AND UPHOLSTERY.

Established in 1827.

THE largest and cheapest assortment in the State of New-York. Every thing, from a Broom to the richest article, may be found, including Carpets, Oil Cloths, Mattrasses, Beds, &c., &c., at

1yr R. J. TODD'S, 88 Fulton street, Brooklyn.

HARDWARE, CUTLERY, MECHANICS' TOOLS, &c.

THE subscriber has constantly for sale, of the best quality, and at the lowest prices, an assortment of the following articles: Tea-Trays, Cooking Utensils, Britannia and Plated Goods, Stair Rods, Table Cutlery, Tin Ware, Wooden Ware, Brushes, Brooms, &c.

Mechanics' Tools.

Also a full supply of Saws, Planes, Braces and Bits, Edge-Tools, Files, Hammers, Squares, Augers, Rules, Bevels, &c.

4t JOHN W. SULLIVAN, 74 Sixth Avenue, corner of Waverley Place.

CHEAP COAL.

I BEG to inform my countrymen and friends and the public in general that I always sell the very best sort of Red and White Ash Coal at the very lowest prices. My object being quick sales and small profits, for cash.

ap193m Richard Clinton, 250 1st Avenue, cor. 15th St.

COAL.

COAL of the very best quality both Anthracite and Bituminous, for family and manufacturing purposes, for sale by the subscriber from his Yards, 632 Washington, 123 McDougal, and 146 West Thirty-second streets. Also, Coal by the cargo.

ap191y Thomas Maher.

O'CONNOR & COLLENDER,

BILLIARD TABLE MANUFACTURERS.

53 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

WILLARD, FELT & CO.,

MANUFACTURERS OF ACCOUNT BOOKS,

AND IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER AND STATIONERY,

NO. 14 MAIDEN LANE,

3mos (near Broadway.)

WISE'S IRISH MALT WHISKEY.

IMPORTED by J. & P. Hogan, Nos. 6 and 12 West street, and 257 Third Avenue, corner of 21st street, New-York, and corner of Vanbrunt and Sullivan streets, Brooklyn. J. & P. Hogan wish to inform their friends and the public that they have just received a large quantity of WISE'S CORK MALT WHISKEY, which will be sold at a reduced price, out of bond and at the above establishment. They are the only firm who import the same in New-York. ap261y

---

THE EYE AND EAR!

DR. BIRGE, invites the attention of the afflicted to his practice in treating the Eye and Ear. He has cured more than five hundred persons who were pronounced incurable by other Oculists. He has also restored to sight seventeen persons born blind, and he pledges himself to cure every case that may be presented. That no one need be imposed upon, he warrants a cure in every case.

AMAUROSIS.—This obstinate disease he treats with astonishing success.

CATARACT.—This delicate and important operation, I warrant sight in every case.

ARTIFICIAL EYES inserted perfectly to imitate the Natural Eye.

DEAFNESS.—My treatment for this difficulty I offer as the most successful that has ever been in practice. I have restored to their hearing a large number who had been perfectly deaf more than twenty years.

Letters of inquiry for advice will be promptly attended to. Office 430 Broadway, New-York City. ap263m

---

BURKE & MYLER,

IMPORTED WINES, LIQUORS AND SEGARS,

No. 42 SPRING STREET, NEW-YORK,

ap263m between Mulberry and Mott streets.

Business Directory.

GEORGE B. COOK,

IMPROVED STEAM CYLINDER AND ADAMS PRESSES,

JENKIN'S BUILDING, Nos. 22 AND 24 FRANKFORT STREET, NEW-YORK. tf

---

MRS. J. McCARTHY,

FASHIONABLE MILLINERY STORE,

44 THIRD AVENUE,

Third door from 10th Street, NEW-YORK.

Cheap Straw Hats, Ribbons, Flowers, Ladies' Straw Goods.

Straw Bonnets cleaned and altered to the newest fashions.

LADIES' OWN MATERIALS MADE UP TO THE LATEST STYLES. tf

MATTHEW WALLACE,

25 CLARK STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.,

WHOLESALE DEALER IN NEWSPAPERS, BOOKS, &c.

☞ "The Irish News," on hand, by the earliest moment, each week. tf

---

NEWARK, NEW-JERSEY.

J. DONOHUE,

NEWSPAPER AND PERIODICAL DEALER,

149 MARKET STREET,

Will serve "The Irish News," in any part of the city. tf

McLOUGHLIN, McSHANE, & CO.,

(Successors to THOS. ANDREWS,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN

CHOICE TEAS, COFFEES, WINES, BRANDIES, AND GROCERIES,

61 FULTON STREET, near Cliff street,

M. C. McLOUGHLIN, ANDREW McSHANE, JAMES DOWLING. } NEW-YORK. 3m

---

JOHN J. STAFF'S.

WINES, LIQUORS, SEGARS,
LONDON, DUBLIN, PHILADELPHIA,
PORTER and ALE,
SCOTCH, BURTON, and EAST INDIA ALES,
CHAMPAGNE CIDER, in quantities to suit purchasers,

at 333 Broadway,

tf corner of Anthony street, New-York.

JOHN A. McSORLEY,

CUSTOM HOUSE AND SHIP BROKER, AND NOTARY PUBLIC,

7 BROAD STREET,

Clergymen, importing Vestments, Church Ornaments, &c., will be liberally treated with by calling on the subscriber.

REFERENCES:

Messrs. Thos. McClune & Co., C. Meletta, | Messrs. D. & J. Sadlier & Co., James Cook & Co. 6m

---

COAL.

THE subscriber respectfully informs his friends and the public generally, that he has opened a new Coal Yard, cor. 27th Street and 9th Avenue, where he is prepared to sell the best quality of Red and White Ash Coal, at the lowest market price for cash. Weight warranted, or forfeit coal.

6mos* JOHN MACDONALD.

J. MURPHY & SON,

IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN

BRANDIES, WINES, GIN, RUM, IRISH AND SCOTCH WHISKEY, SEGARS, ALE AND PORTER, CORDIALS, &c.

J. M. & SON would call the attention of City and Country Dealers to their EXTENSIVE STOCK OF LIQUORS AND SEGARS under CUSTOM HOUSE LOCK and in STORE.

☞ We do not claim any superiority for our goods over those of any other House, but customers may rely upon being honorably and fairly dealt with, and all Liquors warranted as represented.

J. M. & SON are SOLE AGENTS for this City of Messrs. BUNCHARD & HARRISON'S superior Creaming and Sparkling DOMESTIC CHAMPAGNE, which possesses the same qualities as Imported Wine, and is more agreeable to the palate. It can be sold as low as $7 the basket.

A Superior Quality of IMPORTED ST. JULIAN CLARET, in cases, at $3 50.

Orders from Country Merchants solicited, and shipped with dispatch, at 150 Pearl, and 118 Water streets.

☞ Office 138 Pearl street.

IMPROVED BILLIARD TABLES AND CUSHIONS.

MICHAEL PHELAN'S

MODEL TABLES AND COMBINATION CUSHIONS,

(Patented February 19, 1856,)

CORRECT in principle and perfect in action—so constructed as to insure mathematical correctness of angles when played upon, and warranted to possess the requisite elasticity in all seasons, having been tested by the best players in this conntry, and by them pronounced the most perfect of any hitherto constructed—are offered to the public as cheap as the ordinary tables of the day. Orders promptly attended to for fitting up private or public Billiard Rooms; new Cushions put on old Tables, &c.

Saloon and Salesroom No. 39 Chambers street, up stairs.

McLOUGHLIN & EVERARD,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL GROCERS,

Keep constantly on hand a select assortment of

GROCERIES, WINES, BRANDIES, TEAS, COFFEES, &c., AT THE OLD ESTABLISHED STAND, ap263m 44 FULTON, between Pearl and Cliff streets, New York.

WILLIAM M. SMITH,

The Public Favorite, and only American Opposition

BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTOR,

THE OLDEST ESTABLISHED IN THE BUSINESS.

Work done promptly and faithfully—cheaper, quicker, and better than any other poster in the city. Work done either in New-York, Brooklyn, Williamsburgh, or Jersey City. Boards lent for concerts, or any kind of work.

OFFICE, 28 SPRUCE STREET, NEW-YORK,

ap26tf (Between William and Gold streets.)

P. H. McGINN,

FURNISHING UNDERTAKER,

No. 193 WEST 42d STREET,

Adjoining the Church of the Holy Cross, New-York.

INTERMENTS procured in any Burial Ground or Cemetery in the vicinity of New-York or elsewhere. All articles for Funerals, furnished on the most reasonable terms and at the shortest notice.

☞ All Orders promptly attended to, at all hours, day or night. ap193m

---

THE GREAT RUSSIAN REMEDY.

Pro Bono Publico.

"EVERY MOTHER SHOULD HAVE A BOX IN THE HOUSE HANDY IN CASE OF ACCIDENTS TO THE CHILDREN."

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE. It is a Boston remedy of thirty years' standing, and is recommended by physicians. It is a sure and speedy cure for Burns, Piles, Boils, Corns, Felons, Chilblains, and old Sores of every kind.

For Fever Sores, Ulcers, Itch, Scald Head, Nettle Rash, Buntons, Sore Nipples, (recommended by nurses); Whitlows, Sties, Festers, Flea Bites, Spider Stings, Frozen Limbs, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Sore and Cracked Lips, Sore Nose, Warts and Flesh Wounds, it is a most valuable remedy and cure, which can be testified to by thousands who have used it in the city of Boston and vicinity for the last thirty years.

In no instance will this Salve do an injury, or interfere with a physician's prescriptions. It is made from the purest materials, from a recipe brought from Russia, of articles growing in that country, and the proprietors have letters from all classes, clergymen, physicians, sea captains, nurses, and others who have used it themselves and recommend it to others.

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE is put in large tin boxes, stamped on the cover with the picture of a horse and a disabled soldier, which picture is also engraved on the wrapper. PRICE, 25 Cents a Box. Sold at all the stores in town or country, or may be ordered of any wholesale druggist.

ap19tf Redding & Co., Proprietors, No. 8 State st., Boston.

The Irish News.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, Editor and Proprietor. | Three Dollars per Annum. Single Copies 6 Cents. Publication Office, 29 Ann St., cor. of Nassau.

VOL. I. NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, MAY 3, 1856. NO. 4.

Publications.

CONTENTS OF NO. IV.

Editorial.

Another Day.
New New-York Police Bill.
Two Faces Under a Hood.
Answers to Correspondents.
Letter from Waterford.
Military Memoirs—Ninth Regiment, N. Y. Meagher Guard, Charleston, S. C. Montgomery Guard, Richmond, Va. National Guard, St. Louis, Mo.

Literature.

Personal Recollections—Glimpses of Irish Cities and Counties.
Wife or No Wife; The Marriage and Desertion.—A Chapter from the Book of Kings.
English and American Lecturing.
The Mesilla Valley.—From the Note-Book of an Irish Surgeon. No. III. Grapes and Grain.
National Academy—Second Article.
Poetry—Good Friday. By "Enul." Spring.
Military Correspondence and News.
Notices of Books—Life of Napoleon III. "Dinks" on the Dog. Abbott's "Teacher," &c., &c.

THE IRISH NEWS,

EDITED BY THE PROPRIETOR,

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER,

DEDICATED TO THE SERVICE OF THE

IRISH PEOPLE,

AT HOME AND ABROAD,

Will be published every Saturday, on and after the 19th of April, at 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau, New-York.

TERMS.

For subscribers, $3 per annum: 6 cents a copy.
For wholesale dealers, $3 50 per hundred.
For retailers and carriers, $4 per hundred.
For Clubs, 4 copies to one address, per annum, $10.
" 7 " " " " $17.
" 10 " " " " $20.

For advertising.—Each square of eight lines,

Transient - - - - - - - - - - - $1
Monthly - - - - - - - - - - - $2
Quarterly - - - - - - - - - - - $5
Yearly - - - - - - - - - - - $16

N. B. Four lines, or under, constitute half a square.

Agents or Postmasters who interest themselves in procuring and remitting subscriptions, may retain 50 cents out of each annual subscription of $3.

☞ Subscribers, Agents, and Advertisers will please send in their orders early, and observe that our terms are invariably, payments in advance.

Communications of a private nature should always be marked so. Those connected with the editorial department are to be addressed to Thomas Francis Meagher, and those on business to Richard J. Lalor, Irish News Office, 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau.

☞ Subscribers, residing in New-York, Brooklyn, and Williamsburgh, who pay in advance, will have their papers neatly enveloped, addressed, and delivered on each Wednesday through Boyd's Express or some similar medium.

Wholesale Dealers.

DEXTER & BROTHERS, 14 Ann Street, New-York.
ROSS & TOUSEY, 108 Nassau Street, New-York.
SAMUEL YATES, 22 Beekman Street, New-York.
MIKE MADDEN, 22 Ann Street, New-York.
HAMILTON & JOHNSON, 30 Ann Street, New-York.
DE WITT & DAVENPORT, 160 & 162 Nassau Street, New-York.
HENRY TAYLOR, Baltimore, Md.
FEDERHEN & CO., 13 Court Street, Boston.
WM. HICKEY, 128 Federal Street, Boston.
REDDING & CO., 8 Court Street, Boston.
THOS. McLOUGHLIN, 42 South 4th Street, Philadelphia.
T. R. CALLENDER, 88 South-Third Street, Philadelphia.
DROVIN & CO., Philadelphia.
A. WINCH, 116 Chestnut street.
J. M. CRAWFORD, 30 and 32 Chestnut Street, St. Louis, Mo.
MATTHEW WALLACE, 25 Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.
McNALLY & CO., 75 Dearborn Street.
J. W. SULLIVAN, Kearney Street, (next Post-Office) San-Francisco, Cal.
ROY'S, Detroit, Mich.

Retail Dealers.

NAGLE, Bangor, Me. — ADAMSON, Washington, D. C.
O'CONNELL, Cincinnati, O. — DOWNS, New-Haven, Conn.
HASTINGS, Albany, N. Y. — MORRISEY, " "
McGOWANS, Portland, Me. — DONOHUE, Newark, N. J.

Printed by Watters Brothers, 47 Ann street.

POWER PRESS OF GEO. B. COOK.

TEACHERS, ATTENTION!!—Perhaps the greatest educational event of this century is the publication of JOHNSON'S PHILOSOPHICAL CHARTS. There are ten Charts in all, each measuring 34 by 52 inches, and the set contains altogether about 300 Diagrams, illustrative of the most important outline principles of the Natural Sciences. Besides the essential diagrams found in the ordinary text-books, these charts contain several original illustrations, and possess the merit, rarely found in school-books, of being entirely original in plan and arrangement. They are, moreover, highly ornamental to a school-room, and obviate the necessity of philosophical apparatus which would cost from $3,000 to $5,000. Price of the set of ten charts, neatly colored and mounted, and accompanied with an explanatory Key, (a bound book,) $15. Ditto, on thick paper, colored and mounted, without cloth, $10. Ditto, plain, in sheets, neatly bound, $5.

Booksellers, Teachers, Agents, and all interested in Education, are respectfully requested to address the publisher,

Adolphus Ranney, No. 195 Broadway, New-York.

Mr. Ranney has also the pleasure to announce that he has purchased from Edward H. Dixon, M. D., editor of The Scalpel, and acknowledged to be the first surgeon in America, the copy-right of a work entitled "WOMAN AND HER DISEASES, From the Cradle to the Grave;" Adapted exclusively to her instruction in the Physiology of her system, and all the diseases of her critical periods; with an Appendix on the propriety of limiting the increase of family. Price $1. Copies mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price. Address as above. ap26tf

SAMUEL YATES,

GENERAL NEWS AGENT,

Foreign and Domestic Newspapers supplied to the Trade.

No. 22 Beekman Street.

WRITING INKS.

WE ask the attention of all who wish imperishable records,—a matter of great importance to State, County and Town Offices, Banks, and others, to Dr. Chilton's test of the prominent Inks in use, made with a view to show their different degrees of permanence by exposure. Engraved facsimiles of the test can be seen at our office.

Thaddeus Davids & Co.,
ap19 6m Manufacturing Stationers, 26 Cliff street.

Publications.

BOOKS RELATING TO IRELAND.

HARDIMAN'S IRISH MINSTRELSY. 2 vols., 8vo, full calf. Scarce.
VALLANCEY'S COLLECTANIA DE REBUS HIBERNICIS. 5 vols., 8vo, full calf; with all the plates. Exceedingly rare.
O'CONNOR'S CHRONICLES OF ERI. 2 vols., 8vo, full calf.
ANCIENT IRISH HISTORIES. By Spencer, Campion, Hanmer and Marleborough. 2 vols., large paper, 4to, full calf.
LEDWICH'S IRISH ANTIQUITIES. 4to, calf, plates.
ANTHOLOGIA HIBERNICA. 4vols., 8vo, half-calf, plates.
IRELAND ILLUSTRATED. By Petrie, Bartlett and Baynes. 4to, morocco, gilt edges.
ANNALS OF THE FOUR MASTERS. 7 vols., quarto, in Irish, with an English translation by O'Donovan. $45.
SAME WORK, translated by Cornelian. 1 vol., quarto, cloth.
CARTE'S LIFE OF THE DUKE OF ORMONDE, and the Great Affairs of his Time in Ireland. 6 vols. 8vo. Full calf, $20.
GRATTAN'S LIFE AND TIMES: By his Son. 5 vols. 8vo. Cloth, $7.
FITZPATRICK'S LIFE OF CLONCURRY. 8vo. cloth. $1 50.
HAY'S BOOK OF IRISH BALLADS. 2 vols., Eng. ed., cloth. $2 25.
FINDEN'S BEAUTIES OF MOORE. Forty-eight portraits, exquisitely engraved. Folio, cloth, gilt edges. $6.
WRIGHT'S HISTORY OF IRELAND. 3 vols. quarto, maps, portraits, and views, $7 50.
BARRINGTON'S SKETCHES. $1. SAVAGE'S '98 and '48. 1 vol., 12mo.
McGEOGHAN'S IRELAND. 8vo, cloth, $1 75.

MRS. HALL'S IRELAND, 3 VOLS., 8VO., FULL OF ILLUSTRATIONS. $12.

Warner's History of Ireland, 4to., $2 50. Warner's Irish Rebellion, 4to., $2 50. Life of Wolfe Tone, 2 volumes, $3 50. Mitchel's Jail Journal, $1. Mitchel's Hugh O'Neil, 37 1-2 cents. Moore's Life of Lord Edward Fitzgerald, 75 cents. Davis's Poems, with an introduction by John Mitchel, 37 1-2 cents. De Jean's Poems, 37 1-2 cents. Meagher's Speeches, $1. Furlong's Irish Prayer Book, 50 cts. Recollections of Lord Cloncurry, $1. Carleton's Willie Reilley, 75 cents. Mooney's History of Ireland, 2 volumes, $3. O'Connor's History of the Irish Brigade, 1 50. Life of Fighting Fitzgerald, 25 cents. Ellis's Romances and Ballads of Ireland, 75 cents. Burke's Speeches, 1 25.
For sale by P. M. Haverty, Bookseller, 110 Fulton street, New-York.

With a few exceptions, any of the above will be sent by mail, free.

KEATING'S IRELAND.

A NEW TRANSLATION OF THE

FORAS FEASA AR ERINN;

OR, GENERAL HISTORY OF IRELAND.

From a Manuscript Copy of the Original Irish of the Rev. and Learned GEOFFREY KEATING.

With Notes, Historical, Topographical, and Explanatory,

By JOHN O'MAHONY, Esq.

The work is now in course of preparation, and will be speedily published, in one large octavo volume of about 600 pages, with plates. Price to Subscribers, $2,00.

The book will be got up in superior style, and furnished to the address of Subscribers giving their names to a duly-authorized canvasser, or to A list of subscribers will be printed in the work.

P. M. HAVERTY, Publisher,
tf 110 Fulton street, N. Y.

THE OLD ESTABLISHED CATHOLIC HOUSE OF

EDWARD DUNIGAN & BROTHER,

151 Fulton Street, New-York.

Honored with a Gold Medal and letters of approbation from His Holiness

POPE PIUS IX.,

and patronized by the Archbishops, Bishops, Clergy, Colleges, Convents, and Religious orders in the United States,

HAVE JUST PUBLISHED

THE HAMILTON'S, a Catholic Tale, of great beauty and power, price 38 cts.
CONSCIENCE, or the trials of Maybrooke.
BROOKE, a tale, by Mrs. M. H. Dorsey, 2 volumes, cloth, each 38 cents.
HOURS BEFORE THE ALTAR, or Meditations on the Blessed Eucharist, by the Abbe de la Bouillerie, Vicar-General of Paris, translated by a Religeuse of the Visitation. 1 volume, price 25cts.

AND HAVE IN PRESS,

THE LOVE OF MARY, or reading for the month of May, by D. Roberts.
THE YOUNG CRUSADER, a tale. 4t

P. O'SHEA,

789 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK,

Catholic Bookseller and Publisher, Importer of Vestments, Altar Furniture, and Religious Articles generally,

Respectfully calls the attention of the Catholic Clergy, Religious Orders, Superiors of Schools and Libraries, and his patrons, generally, to his large and varied assortment of Standard and Devotional Books and Religious articles of every description, which he offers for sale on the most reasonable terms, wholesale and retail.

Particular attention is called to his recently published works, viz.,

Bickerton; or, The Immigrant's Daughter. (An anti-Know-Nothing Tale,) 12mo., cloth, ... $0 50
Life of the Princess Borghese; (Daughter of the Earl of Shrewsbury.) Translated by Rev. A. F. Hewit, (of the Redemptorists.) 1 vol., 18mo, cloth, ... 0 37½
Life of St. Francis of Assisium. By Rev. Titus Jocelin. 1 vol., 18mo, cl., 0 37½
Life of the Egyptian Aloyzius. Translated by Rev. A. F. Hewit. 2 vols., 18mo, cloth, each, ... 0 37½
Edna and Marguerite. A Tale; by the Author of the Orphan of Moscow. 2 vols., 18mo, cloth, ... 0 37½

Religious Articles.

Rosaries, per dozen, from 20 cents, to 4 00
" each, on silver chains, from 75 cents, to 12 00
Crucifixes, (brass,) per dozen, from 8 cents, to 12 00
" (silver,) each, from 25 cents, to 25 00

Statuettes, Holy Water Founts, &c., &c., in great varieties. Country Booksellers and travelling dealers, would do well when they come to New-York, to examine this stock before purchasing elsewhere.

3mos P. O'SHEA, 789 Broadway, New-York.

HAMILTON & JOHNSON,

NEWS AGENTS,

30 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

DAILY, weekly and Sunday papers, Magazines, and Cheap Publications. The trade supplied. Orders from the country solicited and promptly filled.

JOHN HAMILTON,
tf S. W. JOHNSON.

HANNA & BEEBE,

COMMISSION PAPER WAREHOUSE,

No. 27 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW-YORK,

KEEP CONSTANTLY ON HAND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF PAPER SUCH AS

Book, Printing, Flat-cap, Folio, Glazed, colored, (sized and unsized,) Druggists', Hardware, Envelope, Manilla, Palm-leaf, Straw and Shipping, Papers Straw Boards, Box Boards, &c., &c., &c.

Also—Cop Waste for Steamboats and Railroad Engines.

They offer to Manufacturers at the lowest market prices,

Rags, Bleaching Powders, Soda Ash, Alum, Rosin, China Clay, Oil Vitriol, Oils, Feltings, Twines, Wire Cloth, Leather Belting.

☞ Liberal Advances made upon all Consignments.

Agents for Hanna, Carpenter & Abbott's Chandlerswick.
ap19 3m*

Publications.

SHIRLEY BROOKS' GREAT NOVEL.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY OF

ASPEN COURT.

IN 1 vol. of 504 pages, neatly bound in cloth. Price $1 25.

It is the best English novel of society, high and low, I ever read.—Henry W. Herbert.
It is his masterwork.—London Athenæum.
It is a decided success.—London Times.
Written with positive power.—The Criterion.
A brilliant and spirited work.—New-York Albion.
It has made a great hit.—London Globe.
The work abounds with interest.—Home Journal.
A very remarkable work.—London Press.
A great book—a giant among giants.—Newark Daily Advertiser.
It has had a great run.—Hamilton Spectator.
Very lively and entertaining.—Commercial Advertiser.
Full of intense interest.—London Examiner.
Published by Stringer & Townsend, No. 222 Broadway, and for sale by all Booksellers. my3 1t

IF you would be posted,

If you want mental food, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you want good Pictures, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you want tip-top Stories, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you admire Cobb's Stories, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you like Fanny Fern's Sketches, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you want good Romances, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you want a good, cheap Paper, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you have four cents over, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you are lazy in the morning, You will miss THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!

ap26 1t Ross & Tousey, are the Agents for this Paper.

WILLIAM M. SMITH,

The Public Favorite, and only American Opposition

BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTOR,

THE OLDEST ESTABLISHED IN THE BUSINESS.

Work done promptly and faithfully—cheaper, quicker, and better than any other poster in the city. Work done either in New-York, Brooklyn, Williamsburgh, or Jersey City. Boards lent for concerts, or any kind of work.

Office, 23 Spruce street, New-York,
ap26tf (Between William and Gold streets.)

☞ Post Office Notice.—The Mails for Europe, per steamer Africa, will close at this office on Wednesday, April 30, at 10½ o'clock, A. M. my3 Isaac V. Fowler, Postmaster.

☞ Post Office Notice.—The Mails for Europe, via Southampton and Have, per U. S. steamer Arago, will close at this office on Saturday, the 3d day of May, at 10½ o'clock, A. M. my3 1t Isaac V. Fowler, Postmaster.

☞ Post Office Notice.—The Mails for California, per steamer Illinois, will close at this office on Monday, May 5, at 10 o'clock, P. M. my3 Isaac V. Fowler, Postmaster.

FASHIONABLE HATTER, 223 THIRD AVENUE.

COWHY'S Spring style of Hats, now ready, are superior to anything hitherto offered in Beauty of Shape, and Elegance of Finish. Being a practical hatter himself, Cowhy is enabled to sell a Superior Hat at a very Moderate Price.

His young gent's hat is one of great beauty, and his assortment of children's fancy hats and caps cannot be surpassed by any other establishment in the city.

N. B.—Hats and Caps made to order, and warranted to fit, by COWHY, 223 Third Avenue, between 19th and 20th streets. my3 1y

DRY GOODS AND EMBROIDERIES.

H. MAGEE, has removed to 140 Atlantic street, Brooklyn, where he has opened a large stock of Spring and Summer Goods, which he will sell at very low prices. my3 1m

GREENWOOD LAKE HOTEL,

Orange Co., State of New-York.

THE proprietor of the Parquette Saloon, under the Broadway Theatre, respectfully informs the public that he has leased the above fashionable watering place which has been carried on for years by Col. Felter, and trusts from the manner in which he has treated his city friends to the best the market could afford, to merit the continuance of their favors during the Summer months. The Hotel has all the advantages necessary for a summer residence—a copious lake furnishing food for gentlemen addicted to piscatorial pursuits; carriages suitable for invalids; woods and shady groves for lovers—in fact, everything conducing to pleasure and health during the warm days now approaching. The Hotel is easy of access, Stages meeting each train of the New-York and Erie Railroad.

All applications for Rooms, to be addressed to my3 3m George Mellon, 328 Broadway, N. Y.

EMPIRE HALL, 596 BROADWAY.

Two doors above the Metropolitan Hotel.

TRIUMPH OF ART!

LOUIS KELLER, respectfully announces to the Public that he has leased the above place, which has been appropriately fitted up and decorated expressly for the purpose of presenting his Second Series of Grand Tableaux Soirees, exhibiting all that is famous and refined in the arts of Painting and Sculpture, either Sacred, Moral, Mythological or Historical; together with National Subjects of more recent interest, forming at once one of the most beautiful and intellectual entertainments for the approval of an enlightened people.

Mr. Keller also intimates, that in order to render the effect of his pictures more perfect by the aid of music and decorations, independently of the enormous expenditure of his own Troupe of Twenty-seven Artists, he has engaged talented persons in the various departments of scenery, machinery, &c., including a full and superior Orchestra, conducted by Mr. Grille.

The first performance will take place
On WEDNESDAY EVENING, APRIL 30th, and will be continued every evening during the week.

PROGRAMME:

OVERTURE BY THE ORCHESTRA.

PART I.—First Tableau.

THE CHARIOT OF THE SUN—Composed by L. Keller.
Second Tableau.—ARIADNE and BACCHUS—Composed by Mad. Keller.
Third Tableau.—FAMINE—Composed by L. Keller and family.
Fourth Tableau.—SHOWER OF GOLD—Composed by Mad. Keller.

PART II.—First Tableau.—Massacre of the Innocents—After Rubens.
Second Tableau.—L'Esperanza—After Paul Delaroche.
Third Tableau.—True Glory—composed by L. Heller. Finale, the Great National Tableau of the Battle of Bunker Hill, after Turnbull's celebrated Picture.

The Programme will be changed weekly. The repertoire of Mr. Keller consists of upwards of 3,000 pictures, thus enabling him to present an ever varying source of interest and attraction. Doors open at 7 o'clock. Overture will begin at 8 o'clock. Tickets, 50 cents. Private Boxes, $5.

Arrangements can be made for admission of Schools and Societies, by application at the Hall between the hours of 10 and 4. my3 1t

Shipping.

C. H. MARSHALL & CO.,

Old Black Ball Line of Liverpool Packets.

CERTIFICATES

Furnished for Passage to and from Liverpool, on the 1st and 16th of every Month, by the following splendid ships:

James Foster, Jr.	....	Capt. J. W. Porter.
Neptune	....	" E. W. Peabody.
Harvest Queen	....	" E. Young.
Isaac Webb	....	" J. M. Bayer.
Great Western	....	" W. G. Furrier.
Manhattan	....	" T. Dixon.
Isaac Wright	....	" E. Abeel.
Columbia	....	" C. Hutchinson.
Fidelia	....	" W. A. Macgill.
Yorkshire	....	" C. A. Marshall.

REMITTANCES.

Drafts, for £1 and upwards, on the Royal Bank of Ireland, and on Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., Bankers, Liverpool and London, payable on sight.

C. H. MARSHALL & CO.,
88 Burling Slip, N. Y.

Agents in Liverpool, Baring Brothers & Co.,

OLD LINE PACKETS,

Pier 23 East River, foot of Beekman street. 6m

WILLIAMS & GUION'S

Old Black Star Line of Packets. 1856.

Passage from any part of Great Britain and Ireland, secured at the lowest possible rates by this old-established line, sailing from Liverpool to New-York every five days, comprising the following magnificent Ships:

Ships.	Captains.	Tonage.
AUSTRALIA,	Smith,	2,000
BRIDGEWATER (new),	Barstow,	2,000
CULTIVATOR (new),	Austin,	2,000
CYNOSURE,	Bray,	2,000
CORNELIA LAWRENCE (new),	Knapp,	2,000
DE WITT CLINTON,	Funk,	1,800
ENTERPRISE,	Davis,	1,200
GUY MANNERING,	Dollard,	2,000
JACOB A. WESTERVELT,	Hoodless,	2,000
IRENE,	Williams,	1,400
JOHN BRIGHT (new),	Cutting,	2,000
MARMION,	Hanley,	1,200
NORTH AMERICAN,	Clark,	1,800
OSWEGO,	Stevens,	1,400
ROBERT KELLY,	Barstow,	1,500
SILAS WRIGHT (new),	Freeman,	2,000
SOUTHAMPTON,	Furlong,	1,600
THORNTON (new),	Collins,	2,000
TICONDEROGA,	Boyle,	1,400
UNIVERSE,	Cave,	2,000
VANGUARD,	Norton,	1,800

The ships of this line are the largest and swiftest in the trade, their accommodations for passengers are unequalled, and the frequency and punctuality of their departure offer advantages to the emigrant not to be had by any Line of Packets. Such passengers as decline coming out, the money paid for them will be promptly refunded without discount.

Provisions of best quality are provided for passengers; rations, consisting of Bread, Flour, Rice, Oatmeal, Tea, Sugar, Molasses, Salt, &c.

The increased patronage received by the proprietors of the Old Black Star Line has induced them to add to the Line several New Ships, which have taken their place this season; no expense has been spared to render the facilities for Emigration equal to the times, and add to the renown of these celebrated Packets.

The regular Sailing days are 1st, 8th, 11th, 13th, 21st, and 26th of each month; this will give passengers opportunity for embarking more frequent than by any other established Line, to which the attention of the public is respectfully called.

No Certificate of Passage will be issued for children under 12 years of age unless accompanied by an adult, who must be paid for on same certificate; for persons over 60 years of age, or with any impediment, without a Permit from Commissioners of Emigration.

REMITTANCES.

Persons wanting to send money to their friends can obtain drafts for any amount, which will be cashed at sight at the following Banks:

Ireland—National Bank of Ireland; Royal Bank of Ireland; Ulster Banking Co., and their Branches.

Scotland—National Bank of Scotland and Branches.

England—Messrs. GLYNN, MILLS & Co, Bankers, London; GUION & Co., Merchants, Liverpool.

For further particulars apply, if by letter post-paid, to

WILLIAMS & GUION,
40 Fulton street, New-York.

GUION & CO.,
115 Waterloo Road, Liverpool.

AGENTS—JOHN WHITNEY, Providence, R. I.
EDWARD RYAN, 2 Albany street, Boston.
THOMAS RATTIGAN, Pittsburgh, Pa.

THOS. C. ROCHE'S

PASSAGE AND DRAFT OFFICE 83 SOUTH ST.

Sole Passenger Agent for GRINNELL'S celebrated

Swallow Tail Line of Liverpool and London Packets.

THOSE sending for their friends in the Old Country can make arrangements at this office to bring them from any part of IRELAND or ENGLAND at the lowest rates.

The ships sail from Liverpool four times a month, and from London twice a month.

Drafts for sale for £1 and upwards, payable in any part of England, Ireland, Scotland or Wales.

Passage Tickets and Drafts sold in this office are GUARANTEED by CORNELIUS GRINNELL, Esq., 87 South street, New-York.

☞ No connection whatever with any other Person or House useing the name of Roche.

For further information apply to THOMAS C. ROCHE, ap263m Old Stand, 83 South street, New-York.

THE NEW-YORK AND LIVERPOOL

United States Mail Line.

The ships composing this line are the following:

The ATLANTIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The ADRIATIC .....Capt. West.
The PACIFIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The BALTIC .....Capt. Comstock.

These ships have been built by contract, expressly for the government service. Every care has been taken in their construction, as also in their engines to insure strength and speed; and their accommodations for passengers are unequalled for elegance and comfort.

Price of passage from New-York to Liverpool in first cabin, $130; in second do., $75. Exclusive use of extra size state rooms, $325. From Liverpool to New-York, 30 and 20 guineas.

An experienced surgeon attached to each ship.

No berth can be secured until paid for.

PROPOSED DATES OF SAILING.

FROM NEW-YORK.	FROM LIVERPOOL.
Saturday, April 26, 1856.	Wednesday, April 16, 1856.
.. May 10, ..	.. April 30, ..
.. May 24, ..	.. May 14, ..
	.. May 28, ..
	.. June 11, ..

For freight or passage, apply to

Edw'd. K. Collins & Co., No. 56 Wall street, New-York.
Brown, Shipley & Co., Liverpool.
Stephen Kennard & Co., 27 Austin Friars, London.
B. G. Wainwright & Co., Paris.

The owners of these ships will not be accountable for gold, silver, bullion, specie, jewelry, precious stones or metals, unless bills of lading are signed therefor, and the value thereof therein expressed.

Shippers will please take notice, that the ships of this line cannot carry any goods contraband of war. ap26 6m.

Shipping.

BLACK BALL LINE
OF LIVERPOOL PACKETS,

Sailing to and from Liverpool on the 1st and 16th of each Month.

THE following ten magnificent clipper Packet Ships comprise the "Black Ball Line, viz:—

James Foster Jr.,	Manhattan,
Great Western,	Neptune,
Harvest Queen,	Columbia,
Isaac Webb,	Yorkshire,
Isaac Wright,	Fidelia.

DRAFTS AT SIGHT for any amount payable in every town throughout England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

Persons returning to the old country, or those sending for their friends, will find it to their interest to select the "Black Ball Line," as the accommodations in the above clippers for Cabin, Second Cabin, and Steerage Passengers, are well known by the travelling public to be far superior to any other.

☞ Apply or address by letter, post-paid; no letter will be answered unless a postage stamp is enclosed to pre-pay postage.

Jacob Wilson, 108 South street, New York,
Who is the only authorized Passenger Agent for the "Black Ball Line," which lay at Pier 23 East River, opposite this office. my33m

Emigration.

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,
Office, 51 Chambers street.

NOTICE.—The recent failures, by which a large amount of Bills remitted from this country to friends in Ireland, has been returned unpaid, afford to this Society the opportunity, and at the same time impose upon it the duty of informing the public, that such losses would have been prevented if the parties purchasing Bills had availed themselves of the advantages offered by the Society.

For the purpose of entire protection a fund is constantly kept on deposit in the Bank of Ireland, against which this Society issues its drafts, payable at sight (from sums of £1 sterling and upwards), on the Bank and all its branches, and has thereby for the last Ten Years afforded a mode of remittance perfectly safe and unquestionable.

New-York, December 29, 1851.

ANDREW CARRIGAN, President.

JOHN MANNING, ROBERT J. DILLON, HUGH KELLY, } Vice-Presidents.

EDWARD C. DONNELLY, Corresponding Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Recording Secretary.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Felix Ingoldsby,	John Nicholson,	William Redmond.
William Watson,	Hugh Kelly,	James Olwell,
John Manning,	Cornel Sheehan,	Daniel Devlin,
Terence Donnelly,	Romaine Dillon,	John McMenomy.

EMIGRANT INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS BANK.

No. 51 CHAMBERS STREET.

THIS Institution has been established for the purpose of affording to Emigrants and others, a safe place of deposit for their funds, to protect them from robbery and fraud.

It is conducted with the strictest economy—neither the Officers and Trustees, receive any compensation for their services. The entire profits belong to the Depositors, and will be divided amongst them, having due regard to the safety of the funds.

The last dividend was six per cent. upon all sums of $500 and under, and and will be continued or increased as the profits may justify.

Bank open to receive Deposits, daily, from 10 A. M., to 2, and from 5 to 7 P. M.

TRUSTEES.

William Watson,	John P. Nesmith,
John Nicholson,	John Milhau,
Andrew Carrigan,	Edward W. Tiers,
James Kelly,	Charles M. Connelly,
James Kerrigan,	Cornelius H. Sheehan,
Hugh Kelly,	Edward Bayer,
Charles O'Connor,	Daniel Devlin.
James Olwell,

JOSEPH STUART, President.
FELIX INGOLDSBY, 1st Vice-President.
JOHN MCMENOMY, 2d Vice-President.
TERENCE DONNELLY, Treasurer.
LOUIS B. BINSSE, Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Accountant.
JOHN MANNING, Comptroller. tf

NATURALIZATION—IMPORTANT NOTICE.

THE subscriber respectfully informs the Foreign Population of New-England that he still attends to the business of preparing first and second papers for those who wish to become citizens of the United States, on very moderate terms, at his old stand, 129 Federal street, Boston.

N.B. First papers every day; last papers every Friday.

THOMAS ROWEAN, Justice of the Peace,
and the Oldest Naturalization Agent in New England.

REMITTANCES TO

ENGLAND, IRELAND AND SCOTLAND.

STERLING BILLS for sale on Messrs. Prescott, Grote & Co., Bankers, London, from £1 upwards, payable on demand, and negotiable in any part of the United Kingdom; also Bank of England Notes and Drafts of any of the English Banks or Bankers, bought and sold.

ap191y Prime & Co., 54 Wall street.

DRAFTS FOR £1 AND UPWARDS,

ON THE ROYAL BANK OF IRELAND,

(Expressly authorised by the Bank,)

FOR SALE AT THE BANKING HOUSE OF JOHN B. MURRAY,

No. 44 Wall street, (over Bank of North America,) New-York.

PERSONS wishing to send money to their friends in Europe, can remit it as above, by letter, post-paid, and upon receipt, a draft on the Royal Bank, will be forwarded without charge, to the person designated. 3m*

☞ To prevent loss, every Draft is registered here, and a copy of the register forwarded to the Bank by every mail steamer.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,

Office, corner of South and Beach Streets, Boston.

THE office of this Society is open from 7 A. M., to 6 P. M., where Emigrants can apply to obtain situations for which they are fitted. Farmers, Mechanics, and others in want of labor, will apply at the office.

Orders from employers in the country, stating the services required, the wages given, and the cheapest mode of conveyance, and giving respectable reference, will meet with prompt attention.

The Society will be thankful for all circumstantial and early information of any fraud, imposition or outrage committed on emigrants, and will endeavor speedily to apply a remedy.

MARTIN GRIFFIN, ARTHUR M'AVOY, } Vice Presidents.

NICHOLAS J. BEAN, Cor. Secretary.
JAMES FERGUSON, Rec. Secretary.
WILLIAM HICKEY, Treasurer.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

John Hughes,	P. Holly,
William Keating,	Christopher Plunkett,
Daniel O'Rourke,	Jeremiah Ford,
Thomas Hughes,	Hugh Duffy,
Owen Lappan,	M. Lennon, Charlestown,
J. Ryder,	James O'Brien, do.,

Patrick C. Boyle, Roxbury.

MICHAEL HUGHES, Agent.

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND, &c.

GEORGE McBRIDE, Jr., No. 14 Broadway, continues to transmit money, in sums large or small, to persons residing in any part of Ireland, in the same manner as he and his predecessor in business have done for the last thirty years, and more; also to any part of England or Scotland.

Money remitted by letter, post paid, to the subscriber, or personally deposited with him, with the name of the person or persons in Ireland, England or Scotland, to whom it is to be sent, and nearest post town, will be immediately transmitted and paid accordingly, and a receipt to that effect given or forwarded to the sender.

3mo GEORGE McBRIDE, Jr., N. N.

Special Notices.

DRILL ROOM GUIDE.

NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

COMPANY B, (Fitzgerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company D, (Guyon Cadets) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MURPHY, Capt.

Company I, (Jackson Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." W. O. MURPHY, Capt.

Company H, (Erina Guard) drill Thursday Evening at "Military Hall." R. CODDINGTON, Capt.

Company —, (Irish Grenadiers) drill each Thursday Evening at 22 White street. FELIX DUFFY, Capt.

NINTH REGIMENT.

Troop A, (Irish Dragoons,) meet at the "Grape Vine Cottage," 45 Second Avenue, between Second and Third streets, on every Monday evening. JAMES MURPHY, Capt.

TENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Brookes' Rooms." JOHN KENNEDY, Capt.

ELEVENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Montgomery Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. S. MURPHY, Capt.

SIXTY NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Irish Rifles) drill each Tuesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES QUINLAN, Capt.

Company K, (Brian Boroihme Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES HUSTON, Capt.

Company —, (Fag a Bealac Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." GILBERT RIORDAN, Capt.

Company —, (Mechanic's Guard) drill each second Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." Lieut. WM. MALONE, Com'dt.

Company —, (Emmet Life Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Worth's Military Head Quarters," 22 White street. T. LYNCH, Capt.

70th REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company D, (Napper Tandy Light Artillery) drill each Thursday Evening at Brooklyn City Armory. WM. H. HOGAN, Capt.

SEVENTY FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company A, (State Rifles) drill each Wednesday Evening at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. Lieut. JAS. KELLY, Com'dt.

Company B, (Irish National Guard) drill each Friday Evening at "Centre Market Rooms." JOHN LANE, Capt.

Company C, (Young Ireland Rifles) drill each Friday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JOHN BURKE, Capt.

Company D, (—— ——) drill each —— at ——. —— NUGENT, Capt.

Company E, (T. F. Meagher Rifles) drill each —— at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. J. B. DONNELLY, Capt.

Company F, (Mich'l. Doheny Rifles) drill each —— at ——. J. F. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company G. (Emmet Rifles) drill each —— at ——. JOHN BEGG, Capt.

INDEPENDENT COMPANIES.

Company —, (Edward Fitzgerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." MICH'L. FLOOD NAGLE, Capt.

Company —, (O'Mahony Guard, E. M. A.,) drill each Tuesday Evening at "North America Rooms," cor. of Bayard and Bowery. JAMES CAVANAGH, Capt.

Company —, (Sons of '98,) drill each Friday Evening at the corner of 11th street and 1st Avenue, N. Y. M. H. SMITH, Capt.

Company —, (Wolfe Tone Guard,) drill each alternate Monday Evening at the "Second Ward Hotel," cor. of York and Pearl streets, Brooklyn. JOHN J. CLANCY, Com'dt.

Company —, (Irish American Grenadiers,) drill the first and third Thursday of each month at "Montgomery Hall," 76 Prince street, N. Y. MICHAEL DOYLE, Capt.

TWENTY-FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at Albany, N. Y. P. H. GRIFFIN, Capt.

SECOND REGIMENT—HUDSON BRIGADE.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each week at the "Armory," Grand street, Jersey City. —— FARRELL, Capt.

SECOND REGIMENT PA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Hibernian Greens,) drill each Thursday Evening at 83 South Fifth street, Philadelphia. P. O'KEAN, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT ME. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Grattan Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Bangor, Me. JOHN CARROLL, Capt.

SIXTIETH REGIMENT ILL. S. M.

Company —, (Shields Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Chicago, Ill. CHAS. E. MOORE, Capt.

SEVENTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill once a month in Charleston, S. C. EDWARD MAGRATH, Capt.

N. B.—Commandants of Irish-American Military Companies throughout the United States, are respectfully tendered a place in the above "Directory," and requested to send such information as will enable us to represent them in it.

PROSPECTUS

OF THE SIXTH VOLUME—NEW SERIES OF THE

UNITED STATES DEMOCRATIC REVIEW,

FOR 1856.

THE United States Democratic Review, established in 1838, entered upon the Sixth Volume of its new series the first January, 1856.

In Politics, the Review will faithfully adhere to the principles recognized by Jefferson and Jackson, and as set forth, from time to time, by the Democratic National Conventions. At the same time, keeping pace with the progress of the age, it will advocate all those measures of public policy calculated to promote the best interests of our common country.

It will be the aim of the Editor to make it not only an efficient advocate of Democratic men and measures, but also

A WELCOME AND USEFUL FAMILY MAGAZINE.

Various causes combined to withdraw from the Review that powerful array of talent which so long placed it foremost amongst its cotemporaries. Those causes have ceased to operate. The most distinguished Statesmen and writers of the Democratic party will again contribute to its pages; and nothing will be omitted to make it worthy of the high vocation it aims at, viz., to be the organ of the United Democracy of the Union. The Democratic Review will be published in the same form as its preceding volumes, and is under the editorial charge of SPENCER W. CONE.

In addition to its political features, no exertions will be spared to make its Literary, Scientific, and Miscellaneous Departments worthy of the old days of its fame.

The urgent demand for something in its character, firm, uniform, and reliable, upon national questions, above the sectional squabbles of individuals, and always true to the great end of the party organization, viz., the dissemination and support of the pure principles of national Democracy—affords a wide field of usefulness; and we rely upon the Democracy of the Union for our support.

TERMS—$5 PER ANNUM, OR $3 STRICTLY IN ADVANCE.

GREAT INDUCEMENTS TO FORM CLUBS.

PREMIUMS.

Any person sending $13 will receive Five copies of the Review for one year, and either of the following works: "Longfellow's Hiawatha," "Songs of the Revolution," "Widow Bedott Papers," "Bayard Taylor's Travels in China and Japan," or "Life of Daniel Boone." Price, $1.25 each.

Any person sending $25 will receive Ten Copies of the Review, and either the whole of the Works above named, or "Dr. Kane's Arctic Explorations," beautifully illustrated. Price, $5.

Any person sending $40 will receive Twenty Copies of the Review, and "Irving's Life of Washington," in three large vols. Price, $6.

Any person sending Five prepaid subscriptions, at $3 each, will receive "Irving's Life of Washington. Price, $6."

Any person sending Ten prepaid subscriptions, at $3 each, will receive "Calhoun's Works," by Kralle, in four large vols. Price, $8; and "Van Santvoord's Lives of the Chief Justices of the United States." Price $2.25.

Any person sending Twenty prepaid subscriptions, at $3 each, will receive "Jefferson's Complete Works," in nine large vols., published, by order of Congress, from original manuscripts. Edited by A. H. Washington. Price, $25.

☞ The books above named are all handsomely bound, and recently published.

Specimen Numbers of the Review will be sent gratis when requested.

☞ TO POSTMASTERS.

POSTMASTERS ARE RESPECTFULLY SOLICITED TO ACT AS AGENTS FOR THE UNITED STATES DEMOCRATIC REVIEW.

All communications to be addressed to Lloyd and Campbell, 252 Broadway, New York.

European News.

The U. S. mail steamer Arago, Capt. Lewis, arrived at New York, from Havre and Southampton, with English dates to 9th inst.

The English mail steamer Arabia, Capt. Stone, arrived at Halifax, 23d, with dates to 12th.

The proceedings of the Peace Congress were continuing. It was said that the persistence of Austria in refusing to fix a term for the evacuation of the Principalities was giving some trouble, and if persevered in would be the cause of much more A correspondent of the English journals says, that the pretence of Austria was the necessity of protecting the country against disorder until a regular administration was established. This pretext is flimsy. Austria is bound by treaty to quit the Ottoman territory on the conclusion of peace; and though the ratification of the Treaty of Peace was not known, yet, as it was certain that the war was for the present at an end, her conduct would not only justify doubts as to her good faith, but would establish the necessity of the occupation of the Bosphorus by the Allies until after the complete evacuation of Moldo Wallachia. Russia is of course adverse to the Austrian occupation of the Principalities, and the question affords her ample occasion for opposition to a Power she now cordially detests. Later intelligence states that the Austrian army had commenced leaving the Principalities.

A British Order in Council raises the blockade of the Russian ports, and permits the free resumption of commerce in all articles.

The grand naval review by Queen Victoria of all the ships that can be collected together, is postponed to the 22d or 23d inst., by which time the Treaty of Peace will have been signed.

The Crimean Inquiry Commission continues its sittings. Lord Lucan was on trial.

Steamers are being fitted out to bring home the army from the Crimea.

France.

Expeditions against Madagascar and the Kabyles are decided upon. Permission will be sought to send troops through Egypt to the former, and the latter will serve as a cause of the Emperor's visit to Algeria, although he will not himself command the army.

There is some speculation as to who will be sent as Minister to St. Petersburgh. Marshall Vaillant is spoken of for France, also Generals Canrobert and Bosquet, and General Marmora for Sardinia.

The Moniteur contains the following: "In consequence of the unfavorable accounts from Paraguay, relative to the treatment of emigrants, the French Government has suspended the granting of passports thereto, and colonists are recommended to wait until the situation of the foreigners there shall be placed under better regulation."

A considerabe reduction of the French army, as soon as all matters are arranged, is contemplated. There were still in the possession of France 610,000 effective men; this number will be brought down to 400,000 directly the treaty of peace is ratified.

The Paris correspondent of the N. Y. Times says: "A Crimean correspondent of a Paris journal, giving an account of the rejoicings which took place between the French and Russians, on the banks of the Chernaya, when the news of the armistice arrived, says: 'At last they separated, promising each other to meet again. 'Good bye, till we meet in Paris!' were the words they hallooed to each other with enthusaism, as they retired."

Within the last few years the Russian has taken the place of the English milord in Paris, and the famous guineas of 1815 are transformed into roubles. But for two years not a Russian has promenaded the Boulevards des Italiens. Two Winters without a veritable Cossack! Two Winters without these fertile agents of damnation!

The Conferences.

The Italian Question — Moldo-Wallachian Government.—The Paris correspondent of the London Post says the telegraph is constantly employed on the Italian question between Rome, Naples, Vienna, and Paris. Count Cavour's propositions having been referred to those Courts, and an answer received, France and England will make a decision.

Le Nord believes that the exchange of ratifications will be effected by the 20th. The Commission of Austrian and Russian officers to rectify the Moldavian frontier are in Paris, awaiting orders.

It is said that the Russian Plenipotentiaries proposed that Count Buol, Ali Pacha, and M. Bourquenay should compose the Commission to definitely arrange the Moldo-Wallachian Government, but the proposal was rejected, and persons who have not taken an active part in the conference will be selected.

Russia.

Advices from St. Petersburgh state that the prohibition of the export of Russian produce from Russia was repealed.

A Ukase has been issued by the Czar, to the effect that the two fleets hitherto maintained by Russia in the Black Sea and the Sea of Azoff, are not to be reinstated. The whole naval administration for that quarter seemed to be suppressed.

The Russian Minister of Finance notified on the 5th inst., at St. Petersburgh, that a Treaty of Peace having been signed, the merchant vessels of the Western Powers will be admitted to Russian ports. The blockade of the Russian ports has been raised.

An article in the Russian Northern Bee had created a sensation at Berlin, in consequence of its virulence against England. "Albion," it says, "has lost its prestige, but Russia is the most vigorous of all empires. Simply its productive powers are not sufficiently developed, and that makes it poorer than other countries."

The new levy in Poland for the Russian army was stopped at the last moment. A telegraph despatch from St. Petersburg announced it as the first benefit conferred by peace.

The naval armistice was officially published at St. Petersburg, April 7. After rectification, all ships seized will be released.

The energies of the Russian Government are said to be now devoted to three objects, namely: Firstly, alliance with France, secondly, completion of the great railways; thirdly, the manufacture of Russian feelings on the continent, especially in Germany.

It was believed that Russia would send an ambassador to Turin as soon as the ratifications of peace were exchanged. As Russia always looked, or professed to look, upon the active participation of Sardinia in the war as a wanton outrage, this fact was thought to evince a cordial acceptance of the peace.

Turkey.

The dates received from Constantinople are to March 31. The Russian palace there, at present occupied as a French Hospital, was being cleared for the return of the Embassy. The health of the French troops, both in the hospital and the Crimea, had improved.

It is now said that Austria, which has hitherto shown reluctance to evacuate the Principalities, has yielded to the remonstrance of the Congress.

The Turkish Government expresses its anxiety to be relieved of the presence of the Allies, and says it is quite able to maintain internal order and the defences of the frontier, without the aid of foreign troops. The Divan is planning for the erection of permanent garrisons at important points of the Empire.

Lord Stratford de Redcliffe will continue as the British Minister at Constantinople. Omar Pacha is restored to favor, and resumes the command of the army in Anatolia.

Austria.—A grand Council of Bishops will assemble in a few days to discuss the Concordat. The Council represents 29,000,000 of Catholics—Latin, Greek, and Armenian. The principal object of the Council is to restore the Clerical Marriage Courts according to the Canon law, and to reorganize the whole body of the clergy on fundamental church principles. The Concordat abrogates the lower clergy's right of appeal from the Bishop to the Emperor; and hence it is not popular with the inferior priesthood.

Denmark.—Copenhagen advices state that the English Cabinet have officially notified to the Danish Government their refusal to agree to the capitalization of the Sound Dues, and the determination of Great Britain to await other and more acceptable propositions. Russia and Oldenberg set the example a few weeks since. The question of the settlement makes no progress, and will probably stand over till it is seen what action the United States will take.

It was believed at Berlin that at a Cabinet Council held about the middle of last month, the English Government decided on rejecting the proposition for capitalizing the Sound Dues on the terms offered by the Danish Government. England would, however, make a proposition of her own.

Spain.—Disturbances had occurred in Valencia respecting the conscription, and the city and province in consequence had been placed under martial law.

Belgium.—The breadstuffs markets were generally declining.

Italy.—The Sardinian and Piedmontese corn markets generally were lower.

Prussia.—Rumors of Ministerial changes continue.

English News.

The two English Government steamers, the Tartar and Desperate, which were dispatched in search of the Pacific, had returned after a cruise of nine days, without discovering any traces of the missing ship. Captain Dunlop, of the Tartar, had furnished a detailed account of his cruise to the Admiralty. His search was principally directed to the space between the fifty-fifth degree of North latitude and 10° 20′ longitude. The two steamers searched separately. The Tartar having a strong Southeast gale in her favor proceeded as far West as 25° longitude on the parallel of 55°. Guns were fired every two hours during the night, and a vigilant look-out was kept during the day. Unfortunately the search was totally unsuccessful. Nothing whatever was seen or heard of the Pacific. The Tartar passed many outward and homeward bound vessels and spoke two. Capt. Dunlop is confident that the Pacific cannot be South of the latitude of 55° or else she must have been fallen in with. March 29, the Tartar spoke the American ship Jacob Badger, from Calcutta for London, leaking badly. He pumped her out and lent a Midshipman and eight men to navigate her into port. The Tartar has again put to sea to continue the search. The steamers Ericsson and Persia reported nothing of the Pacific.

Desperate Affray with Poachers.—At an early hour on Saturday morning a sanguinary encounter took place on the Estates of the Earl of Ellesmere, near Manchester, between his lordship's gamekeepers and some poachers. Five keepers were in ambush in a preserve, when eight poachers stumbled upon their place of concealment, and a conflict of a most desperate character at once ensued. The keepers were armed with swords, and the poachers with heavy sticks. Four of the poachers were made prisoners, and four escaped. The prisoners were brought for an examination before a magistrate of the county. Three of the prisoners had received wounds on the left temple. They had, besides, cuts and bruises about the crowns and back parts of their heads. Three of the keepers appeared to have suffered severely from blows about the face and head, and blood had flowed freely from their wounds, but the injuries they had received were necessarily of a more superficial character than those of the prisoners. They were committed for trial.

A Court of inquiry into the conduct of Lords Lucan and Cardigan in the Crimean campaign, is at present sitting in the Chelsea Hospital, an asylum for old soldiers, pleasantly placed on the Thames, some seven or eight miles from London. These two Earls are brothers-in-law, the Earl of Lucan having, when as Lord Bingham he commanded the 17th Lancers, married the sister of Lord Cardigan. Though so nearly related, they bear each other a mortal aversion and have not spoken for years. They were both detested in their regiments, being tyrannical, arrogant, and even mean. The case at present is going strongly against them.

Mr. Charlier, a clerk in the Board of Ordnance, Portsmouth, absconded with £1,330 given him to pay weekly wages to clerks and workmen at the Gun Wharf. A pursuit immediately took place, and the prisoner was captured by Superintendent Laggatt, in London, dressed as a widow in "weeds," accompanied by a woman named Jones. £1,100 was found upon the prisoner. He is lodged in Portsmouth goal. He was a married man, and had two children. It appears that Mrs. Charlier had an income in her own right of £130 per annum.

Wool and Woolen Goods.—The total quantity of sheeps' wool imported and retained for home consumption, in 1855, amounted to 69,846,970lbs., of which 24,687,223lbs., came from foreign States, and 74,613, 223lbs., from British possessions. The quantity of goats' hair or wool imported and retained was 2,723,745lbs. The declared value of British woolen manufactures exported in 1855 amounted to £7,712,481, and that of woolen yarn to £2,026,095, making a total of £9,738,576.

Board of Trade Returns.—The Board of Trade returns for February were published on Wednesday. The value of British produce exported in February was as follows during the last three years:—1854, £7,502,912, 1855, £5,032,460; 1856, £7,725,947. The first two months of the three years the returns were as under:—In the year 1854, £14,195,455; in the year 1855, £11,497,212; in the year 1856, £15, 700, 543.

A return has been laid before Parliament, on the motion of Mr. Pallatt, of all persons confined for debt or contempt of court in the prisons of England and Wales. The melancholy list occupies a space of no less than 40 pages, and suggests, in the course of its perusal, many painful reflections. Thus, a man aged 70, has been incarcerated in Chester County Jail nearly five years for the paltry debt of £41 4s. 6d. and £17 14s. 8d. costs; and two others, aged 77 and 75, are immured in the same Jail for debts of £27 and £80.

Some serious affrays have taken place at the Camp near Colchester, between the militia and the line; the most prominent in the affair are the Connaught Rangers; true to their old character, they must have a share in any fighting that's going, and as they cannot call on the Russians now to faugh-a-ballagh, they make up for it by pitching into the men from Essex, who have come off but second best in the rencontre.—Waterford Mail.

The Glasgow Herald announces the death of John Murdoch, the Glasgow hangman. For a period of twenty years he was seen the presiding genius at every scaffold which was erected throughout Scotland, and not a few in the North of England. Murdoch was a baker by trade.

An omnibus company is about starting at Liverpool, similar to those of London and Paris, to consist of a thousand shares of £10 each.

Mr. Bright, M. P., who has been ill, and obliged for a time to suspend attendance on his Parliamentary duties, is rapidly recovering.

Another naval engagement has taken place in the House of Commons, between Sir James Graham and Sir Charles Napier, which has ended in blowing up the Admiral's Acre reputation along with that of the Baltic.

Robert Coombes, the celebrated rower who won the Champion Belt of the Thames, is dead. He trained for many years the Cambridge University crew, in the great eight-oar annual race against Oxford.

Orders have been issued to discharge all men who have completed their 21 years' service in the Infantry, and 24 years' in the Cavalry.

The Daily News says that one of the vacant Garters will be conferred on Lord Palmerston, and that the Earl of Clarendon will be raised to the rank of Marquis.

A new college is to be erected at Landaff, for female orphans of the clergy, at a cost of £30,000.

It is reported that her Majesty will proceed to Portsmouth on the 16th, to review the fleet, and that the Plenipotentiaries now at Paris will be present. There were 111 sail of the fleet to be reviewed already.

Reception of the Peace News at St. Petersburgh.

A letter from St. Petersburg, under date the 31st of March, says as follows:—"A telegraphic dispatch from Paris, received at 11 o'clock last night at the Imperial Chancellerie, brought us the pleasing tidings of the conclusion of peace. The Journal de St. Petersburg published about midnight an extraordinary supplement to this effect: 'A telegraphic dispatch from the Aid-de-Camp General Count Orloff has announced to the Emperor that a treaty of peace was signed at Paris, the 18th (30th) March, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon.'" The clubs, the cafés, the public thoroughfares, were during the whole of the day encumbered by an immense crowd, all anxious to learn particulars. The sensation is immense and profound. All the journals of this morning has published the news in large letters at the head of their columns. At mid-day I assisted at one of the finest military spectacles that could be given to the public. A grand review took place of the whole of the reserve corps and the Guard, the crews of the fleet, and the active divisions of St. Petersburg, to which were added the cadets and the militia. The Emperor arrived on the ground, accompanied by the Grand Dukes, his brothers, and rode slowly along the line of the troops, who amounted to at least 75,000 men. The guns of the fortress and the bells of the churches hailed the official announcement of the treaty of peace. His Majesty and the Grand Dukes were received with real enthusiasm, and when the cortege returned to the Palace the soldiers had much difficulty in keeping back the crowds that gave expression to their joy and gratitude by the loudest cries. This evening there is a reception at the Winter Palace, and to-morrow a Te Deum will be executed in the chapel. You will see then that peace has been hailed by the people of St. Petersburg with great demonstrations of joy."

News from Australia.

Advices from Melbourne to the 12th of January had been received in England, but the news is unimportant, being only five days later. In regard to the political news the Argus in its summary says:—"Although but a very short time has elapsed since the date of our last summary, the political confusion which subsisted then has been worse confounded by the death of our late governor, Sir Charles Hotham: 'We as yet possess but little experience of Sir William Molesworth's appointments, but judging him by his antecedents, we would rather leave the choice of our new Governor to him than to any Colonial Minister who has held office within the scope of our memory. The Council met yesterday, and an explanation was expected. Mr. Haines, however, having moved the appointment of a select committee to prepare an address of condolence to Lady Hotham, moved further, that no other business should be proceeded with till this melancholy duty had been done, and the House adjourned almost immediately, without a word of explanation being given. We believe the most prevalent opinion to be, that Mr. Haines's Ministry will retain office, but this opinion we do not share. At the moment we write we hear that a requisition to the Mayor of Melbourne, to call a meeting to consider the propriety of addressing Her Majesty, praying her to extend to the colonists the privilege of choosing their Governor, has been signed by many influential citizens.'"

From the Cape of Good Hope.

By the arrival of the whaling bark Ellen, at Edgartown, we have a file of the Cape Town Advertiser from February 2 to 16, inclusive, seven numbers. The state of feeling in Caffer-land has caused some uneasiness on the eastern frontier, and it is stated, apparently on good authority, that a considerable number of Caffers who were engaged in the service of the colonists in Albany, Somerset, and Graaff-Reinet, have left their employers and returned to their tribes, without assigning any reasonable cause.—Boston Post.

Correspondence.

Letter From Waterford.

WATERFORD, April 3, 1856.

I fear I can send you very little from Waterford that may interest your American friends, there is so little here in which we seem to take any great interest ourselves. We are, you know, a plain modest people, your native city is such a quiet, homely place, the sayings and doings are really such matter of fact sayings and doings, and all the little ways of place are truly such very little ways, that it is scarcely worth one's while to raise them to that conspicuous position which they necessarily must occupy by getting inserted in your journal.

You have well said that Waterford never changes. The man who came up our river to-day would observe the same objects he should have done had he visited us twenty years ago; and, fifty chances to one, but it will wear the same old happy face twenty years hence. Yet, after all, Waterford has changed, or rather has added some new and important features to the old picture; and it is only the superficial observer who can come amongst us and not perceive these new features.

Probably I cannot better preface the series of letters which I intend sending to the "Irish News" than by giving a hurried outline of what has been done in our good city since 1848, or rather, by drawing a slight sketch of our position to-day, and leaving our exiled friends to compare it with what they knew of us previous to the date of their expatriation.

Come then, old friend, let us ascend "Mount Misery"—"Mount Misery!" Was ever so great a misnomer? That beautiful spot, from which the eye collects into one vast picture such everlasting scenes of loveliness and peace. Far away to the west winds the beautiful Suir, circling like a band of silver the "Golden Vale of Munster," and looking down on which, in the blue distance, the gray giant of the Comeraghs is seen, with the clouds of heaven for his crown and the turretted summit of Clonegam for his footstool. "Mount Misery!" Town and tower, dark groves and distant spires, rich meadows and ripe corn-fields surround thee on every side. Seated on thy bald brow, of a summer evening, with the red sun setting like a globe of gold over Slievenamon, and the quiet moon rising, like a vestal with her silver lamp, over Cromwell's Fort, the music of the vesper-thrush echoing through the groves of Belmont or Newpark, and the mild cuekoo speaking her summer-note from the distant woods of Kilaspy,—miserable must the man be, indeed, who, gazing on those charming scenes, listening to that soft music, and feeling the calm gray mantle of evening stealing its quiet robe round the mild form of nature, would not kneel on that rugged peak, as if on Mount Tabor, and drinking the joy and peace by which he is surrounded, feel the chain of sorrow drop from his heart, the cloud of care fly from his brow, and forgetting earth, imagine the scenes by which he is surrounded to be visions of celestial bliss, and the glory and grandeur of a heavenly world.

From the summit of Mount Misery I can show you many of the innovations of that modern vandal "Progress." Just below us, and facing Bilberry rock, is the terminus of the Limerick and the Kilkenny Railways, looking, for all the world, like a huge double-barrelled gun, or two tubular steam boilers placed side by side. This building is composed of two of the halls of the great Dublin Exhibition, and forms a very grotesque specimen of modern architecture, a science, by-the-bye, most deplorably degenerate. Far away by the river side, and sweeping around and over the "Pill," by great wooden viaducts, is the railway itself, branching off immediately behind the beautiful demesne of Mullabro' to its respective termini at Kilkenny and Limerick. At the other side of our view is the dock-yard of our excellent fellow citizen, Albert White. You know White's dock-yard, where rakish little schooners and clipper brigs were cradled into existence. A huge leviathan is now assuming its ponderous form, and in a few weeks more the gentle Suir will clasp in her embraces the largest vessel ever built in Ireland—two thousand five hundred tons burthen. A little further down, immediately under "Grubb's Mill," is another dock-yard. This is a new concern, and has sent away to-day a splendid vessel to the Mediterranean. She is her first-born. But where is Grubb's Mill, so feelingly alluded to in your "Recollections?" It was a handsome building, looking out on the river with its hundred windows, its white face reflecting back the summer moonbeams, and the hum of its ponderous machinery making the pleasant music of honest industry resound on every side. A terrible fire devoured it on the night of the first of March; it is now a mass of rubbish! On the city side of the river, directly opposite Cromwell's Rock, is the Iron ship building yard of the Messrs. Malsomson, and here a great mountain of iron attracts our attention. The limbs and ligatures of an immense iron steamer is on the stocks, and the rattle, rattle, rattle, crack and crash of the riveters assure us that she is fast assuming bone and form. This vessel is, I understand, one of the line which our spirited fellow citizen intends to run between London and New-York. The first vessel has, I believe, already started.

Not far from the Iron works is the new Court-house, a mass of granite of tolerable construction, but without much pretension to architectural beauty. It is surmounted by a very grim stone Lion and Unicorn, and is situated in a field where an apple orchard existed a few years ago, in Catherine street. Opposite the Court-house, on a slope of the high fields facing the Fever Hospital, is the far-famed model school, erected by the Commissioners of National Education. This is a handsome edifice of blue limestone, with the quoins and parapets of white granite. It is built in what is termed the Elizabethan style—a collection of gables with a monster vinegar bottle on the top of them. The grounds are elegantly arranged. The ascent is cut into terraces, and the slopes planted with valuable pines and rare shrubs. On the whole, this is a very great improvement and forms a very beautiful feature in the outskirts of the city. A most singular and violent controversy arose here when the question of this school was first started. It originated with the committee of the Mechanics' Institute. The clergy of both denominations were nearly unanimous in opposing it. Some few laymen took the other side, amongst whom our present Mayor took a leading position. He was well backed up by others, among the rest, an old friend of yours. Each party had a newspaper, and such a conflict—fierce and fearless—I never witnessed, as was kept up for nearly six months. The result was, the school has been built; ten or twelve thousand pounds have been expended in Waterford, and an institution calculated to do a great amount of practical good is established in our city.

A slight curve will now bring us to the Tramore Railway, that long gridiron that supersedes poor "Larry Dooly and his Irish jaunting-car." The terminus is situated to the rear of the dwelling of your venerable friend, "Old Bell," who, I am glad to say, is still alive. This Railway is a very pleasant thing, although managed by a set of very impudent officials, and in summer time, it bears many a goodly freight of lovely forms and bright eyes to the Doneraile walks and the far-famed strand of Traigh-mor. Tramore, too, is rapidly advancing; each year adds a series of nice nestling cottages. Several very fine houses have been built there lately, and yet very insufficient accomodation can be afforded to the multitudes who visit there in summer time.

You know the Savings Bank, in King street, the handsomest little structure in our city. In the very fine room over the offices of the Bank is our pet institution—our School of Design. We take great and just pride in this School. The idea of establishing it originated altogether with our present Mayor, to carry out which he was ably assisted by the Protestant Dean Hoare, the worthy successor of your ancient friend, Dean Lee. The English government gave a small grant, which they withdrew after the first year. The trustees of the Bank gave the rooms, the citizens subscribed, and that excellent body of men and women, the Society of Friends, patronized it most munificently, and the result is its thorough success. The pupils have already signalized themselves by taking some of the best prizes at the parent institution, Somerset House, London; and some of the drawings have been so highly prized as to be purchased by the Society of Arts; but I regret exceedingly that our artisans do not avail themselves of it much more than they do. The fees are nothing, and the very young mechanics who have attended there proved themselves very quickly to be possessed of capabilities second to no order of the community. I regret, also, that the Catholic clergy show no sympathy with this school. Why, I cannot say, unless it be on the same principle which compelled the students at Stonyhurst to shut their eyes when passing the statue of the Venus de Medicis.

As I wish always to look only on the bright side of the picture, I must now bid you farewell, lest by conducting you farther, that necessity which is the mother of invention, shou'd force me into those shafts and passages which lead to the darker strata of life. I love to visit my friends in sunny nooks, where flowers bloom and waters play. The exile's lot is hard enough to bear without my picturing the sores and sorrows of his cradle home. Let us keep above ground then. The firmament is over us, and though showers may fall, the sun shines through them, and rainbows shed their hopeful light around our path. The bloom of youth has passed and we have done little; manhood may wane, and gray hairs may come, and the doom of Ireland be still the same. Let us hope solemn duties are ours; let us perform them. A wise intelligence directs all; and even should our last hours find our life unprofitable, yet even then, though shorn of all the world's goods, though poverty tore our robes and hunger gnawed our vitals, and though a pallet of straw were our last sad couch, we have still a legacy to leave—rich in its hopes, sacred in its duties, glorious in its consummation—Love for Ireland!

THE METAL MAN.

Irish News.

RIOT AT THE TEMPLEMORE RACES—COLLISION BETWEEN THE MILITARY AND THE PEOPLE.

The races of this town came off on the 8th ult., on a farm of John Lanegan, Esq., J. P., at Aughall, about a mile from the town. All agricultural operations were suspended; and the day being very fine, there was a large assembly of the people. Nearly all the soldiers in garrison not on duty were allowed a holiday and permitted to go the races. The battalion at Templemore is comprised of the depots of four regiments, and our garrison contains on an average 1,300 men. The race-course consisted of three very large fields. In the centre field, and parallel with the ditch, on the top of which was a row of trees, ran a long line of tents, and one side of the race-course was bounded by the Great Southern and Western Railway and the river Suir. The sports went off admirably but I regret to say that a formidable riot between the soldiers and the people took place towards the close of the day. There were several versions of the origin of the riot, but all agree that the military were the agressors. For some time the fighting was confined to a few persons, but a large crowd gradually collected, and as the soldiers arrived on the spot, many of them joined the combatants; and taking off their belts began to strlke the people indiscriminately. For a few minutes the military and the people looked sullenly on each other, and the soldiers distributed themselves in knots of 10 and 20; the people on the other side arranged themselves in like manner. It is stated, at this particular time, a man called the attention of some of the officers to the scene, and the answer he met was, "Let them fight away, we would like to see a Tipperary row." Whether this statement be true or not, I cannot say, but suddenly a body of twenty soldiers rushed upon a knot of men, knocked down several and trampled on them. Before they could retreat, a body of peasantry bounded forward, got between them and the main body of the military, and beat them with sticks, knocking down nearly all.

The field on which the fighting was going on was a new grass field, off which the stones were not picked, and a recourse was now had to stones, which began to fly in all directions. A terrific cry of "murder, murder," was raised by the non-combatants and the excitement became intense. A picquet, having their bayonets, and who were on the field all day, to preserve order, rushed up, and the police, under the command of Sub-Inspector Nolan, came to the ground; the combatants separated, the people scattering away through fear of being identified by the police, and some of the officers coming up seized several of the soldiers and gave them up to the picquet. The soldiers now clustered around the picquet and were formed into a line of two deep for the purpose, it was thought, of being marched home. Mr. Lanigan called on the people to go home, and it is said also called on the officers to march home the soldiers. While the soldiers were forming in and waiting for stragglers, a young man, a civilian, walked up to the military to make a complaint against some of the soldiers, thinking that he could now do so in safety. Five or six of the soldiers broke from the line and beat him severely, knocking him down. A savage yell proceeded from the military, and they all burst from their position. The people, seeing the young man knocked down, and the soldiers bursting from their ranks, let fly a shower of stones at the military, which took dreadful effect. Mr. Lanigan, who all through was exerting himself to the utmost to preserve peace, rode into the people and desired them to cease, when the people ran away and the soldiers ran after them, beating all they could reach. The people kept running away, and instead of taking the Templemore road rushed to the left, up the railway bridge. The military instead of going home rushed up the railway bridge after the people, who, still determined not to fight, if possible, rushed on over the bridge. The people were so crushed together that they could not possibly be out of the way; and as the soldiers came up they were met by the crowd, who very naturally turned to defend themselves. The people seemed bent on acting only on the defensive, and left the soldiers in possession of the railway and Suir bridges. The military, not satisfied, followed them beyond the bridge, shouting that they conquered Tipperary. The people at length could forbear no longer; they became greatly enraged and excited. "Tipperary, Tipperary" was the general cry, "spare no man—not even the officers!" and the people rushed on the military.

The fighting here was terrific, but the military had to give way, though slowly; yet the people beat them over the two bridges, and when they came upon the level, the police, who were standing on one side but could do nothing, rushed between the combatants, and presented a line of fixed bayonets at the crowd. Mr. Lanigan was also on the spot. The people, on seeing the police face them with fixed bayonets, imagined they were going to attack them, and the cry was raised to defend themselves from the police. Mr. Lanigan roared at the top of his voice to the people to desist—that the police dare not touch any one of them against his orders. This calmed them. Mr. Lanigan then addressed the excited crowd, over whom he had great influence, and the people remained back more through his influence than through fear of the bayonets of the police. The soldiers returned home, and at a cross road about three quarters of a mile from the town a large body of the peasantry assembled, and as the soldiers came up they fell upon them, beat and trampled upon them. The police could render no assistance, as they were detained at the bridge keeping back the crowd on that side. Two of the officers were dangerously wounded—one of them while passing the cross road received a blow from a stone on the side of the head which knocked him down, and he lay prostrate for ten minutes until he was mercifully taken up by two civilians. Mr. Kenneally, of the Tipperary Leader, had a narrow escape—he rushed forward to save a soldier, who might have been murdered but for him, and succeeded. The fellows, not recognising him, took him for an officer and rushed at him. Mr. Kenneally cried out, "I am no officer—I am the editor of the Tipperary Leader." This satisfied them, and Mr. Kenneally passed on. The military hospital here is crowded with the beaten men. Several of the people are in custody, and will be brought up before the magistrates at Petty Sessions on Wednesday. The town is since quiet, the soldiers for the most part are confined to barracks, and it is admitted by all parties that the soldiers commenced the riot. One officer had his arm broken, another is in danger of losing his eye, and it is stated that the lives of three men in barracks are in danger.—Correspondent of the Dublin Freeman.

SHAM SORCERY IN THE COUNTY DOWN.—The Belfast News-Letter says: A few days ago, a woman called at the house of a poor old man, upwards of seventy years of age, whose name is Richard Austin, and who ekes out a living by the sale of herrings through the district of Moneyrea in the county Down. She solicited a night's lodging, which was granted, and next morning she told Austin and his sister, who lived with him, that there was a crock full of gold hidden beneath the floor of their dwelling, and that if she had thirty-two shillings in silver, with some mould out of a grave, she could raise the crock, and make them and theirs rich for the rest of their lives. The old fool, believing her story, went to a neighboring publican and borrowed from him £1, which with 5 shillings and 6 pence of his own money, he gave to the spae-woman. She demanded 6s and 6d more, which he also obtained for her. He then told her she could get the earth from the Presbyterian graveyard at Moneyrea, but she replied that the clay from a Presbyterian churchyard would not work the charm, and insisted on obtaining it from another at Ballylesson, The old fool accompanied her thither, where she collected some of the mould from a grave. He then gave her the money, which she pretended to tie up in a white cloth, with a long lock of hair, given to her for the purpose by Austin's sister. She tied the clay up in another cloth, and charged him to preserve both packages, without opening them, until they returned to his house. The dupe, being nearly blind, was conducted by the old witch to Belfast, he wondering all the while at the length of his journey, and she then made off with his money in her possession.

THE LATE JUDGE TORRENS.—Judge Torrens was called to the bar in Michaelmas Term, 1798, and raised to the bench in 1823. Thus he had been for fifty-eight years a member of the bar, and thirty-three a judge. He never filled any of the higher offices of the law, having attained only the rank of sergeant; but, by the influence of his brother, Sir Henry Torrens, who occupied a distinguished position in the army, and was deep in the confidence of George IV., when Prince Regent, he secured the elevation of his brother to the bench. Judge Torrens had far inferior claims to many who had been passed over; but in those days, as indeed in succeeding times, party and interest determined judicial promotions, instead of experience, ability, and judicial fitness. His lordship, however, was a judge of average merit, and made up on the bench for the deficiencies arising from professional inexperience while at the bar. His intellect was clear, though not very comprehensive. He took common sense views of questions, and rarely ventured beyond his depth. In the administration of criminal justice, he was somewhat severe, particularly during his first years on the bench, when the disturbed state of the country, with overflowing assizes and constant commissions, afforded scope for a rigor not always within the law. In his later years, however, the tendency was corrected, and he tried most cases involving life with a tenderness which Mr. Justice Perrin might admire.—Dublin Freeman.

The Waterford News says, that landlordism in Ireland has, perhaps, exhibited few cases so sweeping as the gigantic proceedings which a Mr. Pollock has undertaken in the county Galway. This gentleman some time since purchased a large portion known as the Cregg estate, in the Encumbered Estates Court, and he at once proceeded to exercise his right over the land, and served several hundreds of notices to quit upon the tenantry. These notices were followed up by ejectments, which came on for trial at the ensuing assizes—the summer of 1854, we believe. The tenants, determined to cling, with that tenacity peculiar to their nature, to their homes and the homes of their forefathers, resisted the ejectments, and the result was that Mr. Pollock was then defeated by a legal flaw, an informality in serving the ejectments having been proved. Notwithstanding the hopes entertained to the contrary, Mr. Pollock determined to continue the work he had commenced, and in due course, the Freeman states, five hundred notices, involving the fate of 2,700 individuals, were served a second time, and came on for trial at the present Galway assizes, when the tenants again successfully resisted the sweeping measure—another informality having been discovered, the case failed, and the despondency of 2,700 people whose fate depended upon the issne, was changed into exultation.

The Limerick Chronicle says, that vast improvements have been made and are in progress in that city, viz: that the new docks; the new patent slip; the national schools; the agricultural school at Mungret; the extensive Munster fair-greer, equal to that of Ballinasloe; the capacious additional barrack accommodation for cavalry and infantry; markets; the Protestant Hall; Athenæum; St. John's Chapel; Leamy's music and scientific hall; Monument to O'Connell; Mechanics' Institute; eight fountains for the use of the public; Roche's garden added to the institution; a steamship company from Liverpool to London; a magnificent promenade round King's Island; a monument to Lord Fitzgibbon; the projected railways to Foynes, in the county Limerick, and Ennis, in the county Clare; and we hope to add before the year expires, the opening of a Park for the enjoyment of the citizens, and demolition of the old houses on Merchant's-quay, which will give the public a fine view of the venerable Cathedral.

The Galway papers complain that notwithstanding the "disgraceful and ungrateful" treatment, the result of the machinations of the Know-Nothing party, which Irish emigrants have met of late at the hands of the Americans, emigration from the western province still continues, not in such numbers as heretofore, but still to an extent that may eventually militate very much against the agricultural interests of Ireland. Speaking of the emigration from Ireland, a Galway paper says:—"A stop had been put, as we conceived, to this fearful drain of the most useful of our countrymen; but within the last few weeks the drain has commenced again, and every day almost witnesses crowds of decently-dressed and comfortable-looking emigrants proceeding to what was once regarded, and truly was, the land of freedom and of kindness, to Irishmen in particular. Crowds of these self-banishing, or 'law-exiled' wanderers proceed by train to Liverpool, and the Clarence is about to sail from this port with a full complement for the shores—the once hospitable, but, we fear, now inhospitable shores of America."

The Mayo Constitution says:—"The weather for the past six weeks has been most advantageously employed by the farmers in preparing for and sowing the grain crops. A large proportion of the oats tillage has taken place, and a vast area of land has been sown with potatoes. We think that this crop will be more extensively planted this year than in any since 1844. The recent harsh winds has checked early sowings, but, although accompanied by frost, no perceptible injury has been inflicted. Grass lands are backward, and cattle are much dependent upon artificial feeding."

Murder of Mrs. Sarah Kelly.—On the evening ot the 8th ultimo, Mrs. Sarah Kelly, lately distinguished as the successful suitor in the cause of Kelly vs. Thewles (in which a very large amount of property was litigated), was murdered whilst walking on her grounds, near Moate, in company with her nephew; two men with blackened faces approached, and, desiring the nephew to stand aside, they discharged pistols and shot the unfortunate lady through the head. Her death was instantaneous.

Another report states that the men were dressed in women's clothes, and that some persons holding a respectable position in society have been arrested on suspicion.

There are strong grounds for believing this translation is connected not with agrarian but money matters. All reports of the affair, even the earliest, go to say that the murder is not to be charged on the peasantry, but on persons of a higher rank, influenced by viler motives. Yet, the Evening Packet hysterically shrieks to the Castle, and declaims about agrarian outrage, and the spread of Ribbonism! Thus is every opportunity seized on in our own country to blacken and misrepresent the character of our people. With cause or without it, rightly or wrongfully—no matter—the howl must be kept up.

A forged deed for £2,000 (on which the money had been paid) has been discovered in Cork, and the forger, who is not yet arrested, is a man who held a high position in society. Although the deed came over here from London, the forgery was committed in Dublin, and it bears an Irish stamp. However, those frauds had no connection with the late John Sadleir.—Cork Examiner.

The Belfast spirit-dealers have been all again on the alert to have the foreway of the Chancellor of the Exchequer—one house alone having, during the last two days, paid £10,000 on whiskey, in anticipation of an equalization of the duty between this country and England.—Belfast paper.

At a meeting of the Provincial Bank of Ireland, Mr. T. Chapman was elected a director, in the room of Mr. J. P. Muspratt, deceased. It was stated that the progress of business is satisfactory, and that two new branches have been opened—one at Templemore, the other at Nenagh.

The Redemptorists Fathers in Limerick are about to commence the erection of their new convent and church on Mount St. Alphonsus, the site of their present temporary chapel. The convent will cost £5,000.

A serious conflict took place at Templemore races between the military and the peasantry. The origin of the riot was the rescue from arrest of a female pickpocket. Two soldiers are stated to have died this morning. The bridewell is full of prisoners.

Solicitor-General for Ireland.—Mr. John Christian, Q. C., is appointed Solicitor-General for Ireland, in the room of Mr. John D. Fitzgerald, now Irish Attorney-General.

Mountsandel Woods, Coleraine, have been made another Glen-Tilt or Cave-Hill case, the inhabitants being now precluded from passing through the walk there, which they had frequented, till lately, as long as any of them remembers.

There was a larger market in Roscrea, this week, ending 5th inst., of oats and potatoes than has been for the last five years; oats from 9d. to 13d., and potatoes from 3 1-2d. to 5d. per stone.

The Dublin Freeman last to hand informs us, that John Ennis, Esq., D. L., Governor of the Bank of Ireland, is about to offer himself as a candidate for the borough of Athlone on liberal and independent principles.

Dublin District.—A battery is to be erected on East Pier Head for the better protection of Kingstown Harbor, Dublin Bay, and mouth of the river Liffey.

The Lord Lieutenant has decided upon the establishment of libraries for the benefit of the constabulary force in Ireland.

Additional English News.

Meeting of "Swell Mobsmen."—A meeting was held on Monday evening last at the White Lion Tavern, Fashion street, Brick lane, Spitalfields, where there was an attendance of about 100 persons, principally belonging to the class known as "Swell Mobsmen." The meeting was convened for the purpose of taking the opinion of such characters with respect to the working of an institution which is intended to lend a helping hand to those offenders who may be disposed to "square accounts" with society and to lead an honest life. The room in which the meeting was held was well-lighted and comfortable. A free and easy manner prevailed, but everything was carried on decently, and the cries of "order" and "chair" being immediately followed by attentive silence. A stranger would have had no suspicion that the men there assembled were at war with society. They one and all appeared well fed, well clad, and at ease with themselves. In the course of the evening several showily-dressed youths, who were evidently the "aristocracy" of the class, walked into the room. These were mostly habited as clerks or young men in offices, some wearing gold guard-chains, others with pistol keys dangling from their waistcoat pockets, and having diamond pins in their cravats. They were, however, all "mobsmen," as they are called—men who, in some instances, we are assured, are gaining their £10, or even £20 a week, by light-fingered operations. Indeed several present were pointed out as "tip-top sawyers," "moving in the best society, and doing a heavy business." Besides these there were a few notorious "cracksmen," (housebreakers), and one or two "fences," (receivers of stolen goods), who were said to be worth their weight in gold. On the entry of one who was unknown to the rest, a cry was raised of "Only 'kenobes' there!" "No square men in the room!" which being interpreted meant only "nobs," or first-class thieves—none who are following an honest course of life are to be present; whereupon it was represented to the stranger that the meeting was a private one. At the conclusion a good-looking boy was introduced, who was in the habit of gaining a few pence by reciting scenes from Shakespere in public-house parlors. The men said it was a pity something could not be done for the poor lad, as they believed him to be honest and clever, and they feared, if not rescued from his present courses, he would sooner or later become one of them.

The Prisons in England.—The 17th and 18th reports of the inspectors of prisons for the home district has just been published. The first refers to the year 1851, and shows that the prisoners for trial amounted to 27,914, showing an increase of 5·4 per cent. over 1850; that the summary convictions were 83,052, against 80,608 in 1850; that the number of juvenile offenders for trial was 2,323, against 2,450 in 1850; and the number of those summarily convicted 9.969, against 8,826 in 1850. The recommittals in 1851 showed a decrease of 1·6 per cent. The number of deaths amounted to 161, and the cases of lunacy to 101. The expenditure for maintaining prisoners in 1851 was £428,836, against £408,320 in 1850. The 18th report for 1852 exhibits a considerable decrease in nearly every class of criminals; but the state of educational knowledge does not show any feature of a new or striking character. The general centesimal proportions have already been given in former returns.

The proprietors of the Northern Daily Express have threatened an action for damages against the Electric Telegraph Company, on account of one of the clerks having overslept himself, and failed to give to the messenger of the paper the news of the signing of the treaty of peace.

The Central Association in aid of the Widows and families of soldiers have received £121,704, and disbursed upwards of £90,000; 6,562 wives of soldiers, 8,984 children, and 232 widows whose sons have served in the East, have been aided.

According to an official return just issued, 145,048 judgments have been registered in the county courts during the last four years. The number of petitions for protection from process, registered in part of 1854, and the whole of 1855, was 2,060.

There are 48 banks in the provinces which have ceased to issue their own notes since the Act 7th and 8th of Victoria, chap. 32, and the aggregate amount of their circulation was £735,409.

From a return to Parliament it appears that last year there were 3,840,691 gallons of British spirits exported; whilst in the previous year there were only 680,564 gallons.

Additional European News.

The king of the Netherlands has just authorized the establishment of a gigantic banking institution, with a cash capital of 40,000,000 francs, to be called the Banque Internationale. It will issue eighty millions of paper money, or double the amount of its capital, with the privilege of increasing the amount to one hundred millions. By a new and ingenious contrivance these bills may be issued at the same time, and, as necessity may require, in francs, Prussian thalers, double florins and Low Country florins, so that the circulation of the bank's bills, in the countries where these different kinds of money are in use, would be greatly facilitated. The bank will establish agencies in France, Germany, Belgium, and the Low Countries.

The Hamburg correspondent of the Independence Belge, writing under date of March 20, states that numbers of English merchants are daily passing through that city, on their way to Russia, to establish trading posts, and that an Anglo-Russian-Stock Company, with a large capital, is about to solicit from the imperial government the privilege of developing, on a vast scale, the mineral and other resources of the Russian empire.

The soldier who placed the French flag on the tower of the Malakoff is a native of Averna, near Naples. He has been raised to the rank of captain, decorated with the cross of the Legion of Honor and the Order of St. Maurice and Lazarus, and has received his captaincy.

Lord John Russell's mission to Vienna cost the country £2,382 16s. 4d., and the country has to pay £479 13s. 4d. for decorating Louis Napoleon with the "garter" at Windsor.

Letters from Switzerland state that the weather is extraordinarily fine. The mountains are entirely free from snow, and the passage of the Alps, which, last year, were difficult, even as late as July, are already practicable.

A letter in the Constitutionnel says that on the 30th of March there was a rumor in St. Petersburg of a third State loan for a sum of 50,000,000 of roubles.

A letter from Berlin, of the 4th, in the Bourse Gazette, says: "We learn from a good source that negotiations are already commeaced in Vienna and Berlin for the suppression, or a considerable modification, of the prohibitive system of Russia."

The Spanish Government has conferred the Order of the Golden Fleece on the Imperial Prince of France.

It is believed in Paris that a month will be taken up by the plenipotentiaries in the settlement of different minor points.

The editor of Le Nord, M. Cappelmans, has petitioned the French Government for leave to have his journal circulated in France. There is a chance of this request being granted, as the paper has sensibly modified its politics since the signature of peace.

It is said that all the cafes chantants in Paris have received orders to suppress the anti-Russian songs that they have lately been in the habit of giving.

The Empress Eugenie is entertained every day in her chamber by a concert of the choicest description.

During the month of March, 145 vessels were wrecked. In the month of January, the number was 265, and in February, 174; making a total, in the past three months, of 584.

An article in the Abeille du Nord, preaching up the emancipation of Russian civilization from foreign influence, and violently attacking England, has produced a great sensation in the Russian capital.

The Univers asserts that the question of the Holy Places, the first apparent cause of the war, has not been touched by the Conferences, but will be amicably settled between France and Turkey.

There are said to be 122,000 French soldiers in the Crimea, and upwards of 20,000 at Constantinople.

The regular steampacket communication between Stettin and Sweden will re-open on the 17th inst.

The subscriptions to the Nightingale fund are now about £25,000.

The Patriotic Fund subscriptions now amount to upwards of £1,400,000.

American Citizenship Abroad.

The following extracts from a letter addressed by Wm. Fay, United States Minister to Switzerland to Mr. Anthony Pfund, will explain themselves:

United States Legation, Berne, Dec. 11, 1855.

Sir: I hasten to inform you that, immediately on learning your expulsion from Basle, on the 25th September last, I addressed a note to the Federal Government of Switzerland, communicating your complaint, that you had been expelled without just grounds, although undoubtedly a naturalized American citizen; and requesting that you might be permitted to reside there unless reason could be shown to the contrary.

By a note from the Federal Council, just received, I am informed that, after due examination, permission is granted you to remain, on condition, however, of a close surveillance, and of future expulsion, should you hereafter give just grounds. Upon your direct application to the Government on Basle-Ville, you will receive a permis de sejour in that quarter.

I regret the two conditions annexed to the permission; but it is not for me to dictate to a foreign government, to which I am accredited, terms on which it must allow a stranger to reside within its territory. The American Government may make any law it pleases without consulting that of Switzerland. The right of a State to say who shall and who shall not reside within its limits cannot be disputed.

The report of the Government of the Canton of Basle-Ville upon your affair has been officially communicated to me, and by me to the United States Government. It states that you were not expelled rudely, as the public journals have declared; you were simply informed that, according to existing obligations with regard to the political refugees, entered into between Switzerland and neighboring countries, the police of Basle-Ville was not authorized to grant you a permis de sejour, and that you must address your application either to the Government of the Canton or to the Federal Council. This you omitted to do, but sought redress through the American Consul at Zurich, declaring that you had nothing to do with any other authority.

The conditions of the permission of residence result from the the fact that you were engaged, although not seriously, in the revolution of Baden. Had you been prominently engaged, it is not probable you could have obtained permission at all. You will render a service to those political refugees in America who in 1848, and at other periods, strove in vain to procure for the nations of Europe the rights enjoyed by the people of the United States, by acquainting them with this circumstance, and what the real question is which has been described in your affair. It is not whether Switzerland is a land of liberty. It is not whether she possesses the right to enter into such obligations, which the surrounding countries, as in her wisdom and independence she may deem proper for the perservation of those free institutions which she has founded, and to which she is giving a successful development. No one can justly contest this right. The real question is whether a political refugee, who would not be permitted to reside in Switzerland, if not an American, can acquire that right by being naturalized as a citizen of the United States. Every American statesman will assure you he cannot.

The Swiss nation is fully in possession of its rights. It has established a poor Democratic Republic at the very gates of the most powerful military Governments in the world. Its territory is about as large as a third of the State of New York. It is governed by statesmen who have shown themselves equally brave and prudent, and who are the best judges of the course required under existing circumstances. Their citizens enjoy as large a liberty as those of the United States. There is universal suffrage and an absolutely free press. But there is a condition to the security of Switzerland. Some may dispute the right, but not one will dispute the power of the adjoining Governments to require from her an assurance that certain political refugees, deemed dangerous, and therefore banished from their limits, shall not be permitted to reside within hers upon this frontier.

A political refugee, considered dangerous by France, Austria, or the German Provinces, who demands from her to be, notwithstanding, received upon her soil and protected there, asks her to accept great inconveniences—asks her in fact to declare war against the five great powers.

American News.

Thirty-fourth Congress—First Session—Senate.

April 22.—The bill to alter and amend the Act establishing the Circuit Court of the United States in California, was passed. Bounty Land.—The House bill amendatory of the Bounty-Land Law of 1855, was passed. The object of the bill is to provide for the admission of parole testimony in all cases where no records of evidence exist, and to allow the time occupied in travelling to and from the place of muster to be included in the period of service.

April 23.—Mr. Mallory communicated the invitation of the Secretary of the Navy for the members of the Senate to visit the steamer Merrimac at Annapolis. The $3,000,000 armament bill being under discussion, Mr. Bell of Tenn., expressed doubts as to whether this large amount could be properly expended within the present year. Mr. Weller showed that the whole sum ought to be appropriated forthwith in order to be used advantageously. Mr. Hale opposed the bill. Mr. Cass said the administration ought not to be held responsible for large appropriations; Congress had sometimes made them in opposition to the recommendations of the Executive. Mr. Hale replied that, if the Democratic party had not controlled Congress pretty generally, particularly the Senator, for a good many years past, they were not to be held responsible. These large expenditures—$70,000,000 or $80,000,000 annually—ought to arrest the attention of the people, for they were made at a time when the people were suffering from hard times from one end of the country to the other. Further discussion of the bill was postponed, and the subject of the Naval Board was taken up. Mr. Crittenden stated that Capt. Stribling had claimed the honor of capturing a piratical vessel in 1812, which exploit was, in reality performed by Lieutenant Watson, and upon a correction of the matter being brought to the notice of Capt. Stribling, the latter acknowledged that he had mistaken the name of the vessel, being engaged in a similar capture during the same summer. Mr. Jones, of Tenn., vindicated the character of Lieut. Bartlett, assailed on a former occasion by Mr. Slidell. Mr. Houston made a reply to speeches of Messrs. Clayton and Bayard, in which he referred to the character of Capt. Du Pont and other naval officers in not very complimentary terms. He severely censured the Navy Board, and illustrated his remarks with humorous anecdotes.

April 24.—On motion of Mr. Benton, a resolution was adopted calling on the Secretary of State for information, relative to the extent to which the transportation of laborers is now being carried on from the continent of Asia or any Asiatic Islands to America, whether such laborers be bound laborers, Coolies, or apprentices; also to show the manner in which they are treated on the passage, and after their arrival, together with any statistics he may possess, showing a sacrifice of human life attending this traffic. The three million armament bill was then taken up. Mr. Hale stated that the expenses of the Government, now in a time of profound peace, is $10,000,000 more than during any year of the Mexican war. While it required but two (2) millions annually to keep Washington's Administration, $60,000,000 are necessary to sustain that of Mr. Pierce. He did not know but he was doing wrong to state these facts, as it might encourage the President to go into another war, thinking it might be more economical. [Laughter.] The bill was laid aside, and, Mr. Houston resumed his remarks condemnatory of the action of the Naval Board.

April 25.—On motion of Mr. Toombs a resolution was adopted instructing the Committee on Judiciary to inquire into the expediency of repealing the act of June, 1848, amending the Naturalization Act of 1813. The bill for the relief of Geo. P. Marsh was taken up. Mr. Foot advocated the bill and Mr. Broadhead opposed it. The bill was passed, together with several bills relating to the District of Columbia. Adjourned till Monday.

House of Representatives.

April 22.—Mr. Wheeler presented the memorial of Capt. John Graham and others, for relief in consequence of the injuries resulting from the detention of the steamer United States, charged with being fitted out for the Kinney expedition. The Deficiency appropriation bill was considered, and the greater portion of the Senate's amendments thereto rejected. Among the Amendments adopted was the one appropriating $3000 for the purchase of seeds and cuttings to be distributed throughout the country by the Agricultural Department of the Patent Office. The House passed a joint resolution turning over to Wisconsin the remaining part of the $10,000 heretofore appropriated for the improvement of the Harbor of Sheboygan. Messrs. Washburne (Ill.) and Wade, from the Committees to which the subjects were referred, reported about fifty bills for the improvement of various rivers and harbors, also for Post-Office and Custom-House purposes at Perth Amboy, Toledo, Ogdensburgh and Cleveland. The bills were referred to the Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union. Messrs. Florence and Tyson presented memorials from citizens of Pennsylvania and New-Jersey, praying, in view of the recent calamity on the Delaware, that the provisions of the steamboat law be extended to Ferry boats. Referred to the Committee on Commerce.

April 23.—Mr. Thurston moved a reconsideration of the vote by which the Senate's amendment to the Deficiency bill was adopted. Mr. Haven said that unless this amendment was adhered to, from $20,000 to $100,000 would be annually taken from the treasury for the benefit of the printer. Mr. Cobb, of Ga., defended the votes of the democrats, saying Mr. Haven sought to create an impression on the public mind that the Democrats are in favor of the extra allowance, when he had not an iota of ground to stand upon. Mr. Washburne, of Ill., said the record showed that thirty-eight Republicans, voted for the Senate's amendment, while only twenty-four of that party voted against it. Mr. Giddings remarked that now the European war was over he rejoiced to see the Republican Party taken under the care of gentlemen all around. This was cheering to his heart. Mr. Clingman had no friendship for that party, but in a good cause would rather have the Devil as an ally, than to have no aid at all. (Laughter.) Mr. Giddings: Old friends should never be separated. (Renewed merriment.) At the instance of Humphrey Marshall, Mr. Thurston's motion was reconsidered and tabled by 17 majority. The Indian Appropriation bill was taken up, and Mr. Stanton, of Ohio, in reply to the remarks of Mr. Keitt, continued to speak, at length, in vindication of the position of the Republicans.

April 24.—The House passed the bill creating Columbus, Ky., a port of delivery. Mr. Pelton, from the Committee on Commerce, reported, without amendment, the Senate bill remitting or refunding the duties paid on all goods, wares, or merchandise, in original packages, destroyed by fire. After an ineffectual effort to pass it, the bill was referred to the Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union. The Indian Appropriation bill was considered, and Mr. Ritchie argued the constitutional right of Congress to legislate concerning the Territories, on the subject of slavery, as well as other matters, and that Congress might reject as well as admit new States into the Union.

April 25.—Yesterday, while the bill to remit or refund the duties on all goods or merchandise in original packages destroyed by fire, was before the House, a question was raised, as the bill provided that the Commissioners to settle these claims should issue certificates which should be cashed by the Secretary of the Treasury—that it must necessarily be committed under the rule requiring that all measures making appropriations shall receive their first consideration in Committee of the Whole. The Speaker decided that, as further legislation would be necessary before money could be paid under the bill, the rule did not apply in this case. This decision was overruled by 11 majority. Mr. Watson moved a reconsideration of that vote. Debate followed. Mr. Phelps condemned the hot haste exhibited to pass the bill. Mr. Pelton explained, that, from the most reliable information, the amount of duties to be refunded would not exceed $300,000, or, at the utmost extent, $500,000. Mr. Phelps thought that, including San Francisco, with all other fires for the sixteen years covered by the bill, the amount would be far greater. The New York fire of 1845 involved $350,000. He contended that the bill directed the Secretary of the Treasury to pay the money—being in effect an appropriation for that purpose. Mr. Pelton said the bill was based on a similar act passed in 1838, and was intended to fill the hiatus from that time to 1855, making a continuous law. It would answer the New York merchants to confine its operation to 1845. Mr. Haven thought the decision of the Speaker yesterday was right. The vote overruling the decision was reconsidered—74 to 71. After further debate involving the principle of appropriations and the propriety of the Speaker's decision, the House adjourned till Monday, 28th.

Church Property Confiscated by the State of Connecticut.—Since the fact has been well settled that the Right Rev. Bishop O'Reilly was on board the Pacific, and that he is probably lost, a question of much interest concerning the property of the Roman Catholic Churches in Connecticut, has arisen. He was the Bishop of the Hartford Diocese, and the Roman Catholic Church property in this city, and probably in thisState, stood in his individual name.

At the last session of the Legislature of this State a law was passed, (see pages 71 and 72 of the new pamphlet acts, 1855,) providing that no devise, lease, grant, or conveyance, to or for any person in any ecclesiastical office, shall vest any estate or interest in his successor; that no property appropriated to purposes of religious worship, or for burial, shall vest in any person or persons, unless they be incorporated in accordance with a law of this State; that any church property heretofore devised or conveyed to any individual shall be deemed to be held in trust for the benefit of the society or congregation using the same, and shall, upon the death of such individual, vest in the religious corporation formed by such society, provided such corporation, organized in accordance with the laws of this State, is in existence at the time of the death of such individual. But in case the property is held by an individual, and there be no such corporate body, then it is enacted:

"Section 4. In the event of such congregation or society shall not be incorporated as aforesaid, then, and in that case, the title of such real estate shall vest in the State of Connecticut, in the same manner and with the same effect as if the person holding the title thereto had died intestate, and without heirs capable of inheriting such real estate."

The next section provides that the treasurer shall deed said property to a corporation of such congregation, when it shall be formed in accordance with the laws of Connecticut.

It is now probable that Bishop O'Reilly is dead. He held several churches and other real estate for the use of Roman Catholic congregations; they were not organized into corporate bodies, and this remarkable law confiscates the entire property. —Hartford Times, April 21.

A Woman Married to a Woman.—A person was brought up before the Police Court at Syracuse on Tuesday, on charge of wearing male apparel while being a female, of making love to the Syracuse belles, and marrying a woman, &c, There is no doubt of her feminity, though her counterfeit of a man is said to have been perfect. She is English, is supposed to be about forty years of age, went under the name of Alfred Guelph, and received remittances from England, part of which goes to the support of a sister in Syracuse. In reply to the question, "Are you a male or female?" she answered, "Your officers can tell you," or "have told you." She refused to give any more direct answer to the inquiry in relation to her sex, and was committed for further examination.

The Standard says that a few weeks since she assumed the garb of a man, and made the acquaintance of a young lady named Miss Lewis. After a brief courtship they were married by Rev. Mr. Gregory, of the Episcopal Church, and the parties have since resided together as husband and wife. The marriage ceremony was performed about three weeks since, and the bride's father suspecting there was something wrong about his new son-in-law, obtained a private interview, and informed her of his suspicions that she was not what she pretended to be. At first she claimed that she was a man, but, on closer questioning, finally admitted that she was a female. A partial examination was made at this time by the father-in-law, and he immediately arrested her and placed her in the watch-house, where she has remained since Saturday evening last.

We have not learned the proper name of this singular woman. She is about forty years of age, with marked features, prominent nose, high cheek bones, black hair, worn long, (for a man) and curling at the end, and apparently brushed and oiled with care. She wears a glazed cap, blue coat, blue shirt, dark vest, snuff-colored pants and gaiter boots, and a shawl over her shoulders; speaks with considerable confidence, but is not very communicative.

It is understood that when this eccentric woman first came to the house of the bride's father she was attired in female apparel, and her clothing was changed to man's attire, with the knowledge of the family. The probability is, that the family supposed her woman's dress was a disguise, and that she was assuming the proper habiliments of her sex.

The lady's father was averse to the match, but the bride still clings to her woman husband, and claims that the arrest is a conspiracy against them. They were allowed to meet in one of the ante-rooms of the police office, and embraced each other with the greatest marks of affection.

The Justice, as we have already remarked, remanded her for further examination, as it is understood that other charges will probably be brought against her.

The Baltimore Patriot says: By private letters from fort Laramie of the 16th of March, we learn that an express had just arrived from Fort Pierre with the news that General Harney had concluded a treaty of peace with all the Sioux except three bands. The Minnecouges will be included as soon as they fulfil their promise to deliver up the murderers of young Gibson. The Ogalallies, by their chief, "the man who is afraid of his horses," were not represented at the council, but the band is very anxious for peace; nor were the Yanctou Sioux, who occupy the extreme northwest, and who must either accept the treaty or be subdued, as General Harney has orderep four companies of the 6th infantry from Fort Pierre into their country.

Townsend, the mail robber, who was shot and severely wounded while attempting to escape from Newcastle jail, a few days since, succeeded in scaling the wall on the night of the 22d, but he ran only three miles, when he fell from exhaustion, and was retaken to prison. His escape was discovered about 1 A. M., and his course easily followed by the blood from his wounds, which re-opened in the efforts he made to scale the wall. The physicians dressed his wounds but a few hours previous to his escape.

When M. Boileau, the French Charge d'Affaires, waited upon Mr. Marcy, to notify him officially of the birth of a son to Louis Napoleon, he was received with the Premier's wonted courtesy, and his communication was listened to with all due official respect, but, after it was all over, it is said that Mr. Marcy could not help adding, in a friendly way, "You may think a great deal of importance attaches to this ceremony, sir, but really we don't."

Birth in a Theatre.—On Thursday evening of last week the National Theatre was crowded to excess, and the press, upon opening the door, was very great. In the crowd was a woman somewhat advanced in pregnancy. The jam and squeeze to which she was subjected, while passing from the lower vestibule up the box stairs, produced an instantaneous premature delivery the moment she reached the topmost stairs.—Boston Gazette.

Passengers who arrived at St. Pauls, Minnesota, last week, report the murder of an entire family named Julien, who lived at Travers, a settlement near Lake Travers, 120 miles northwest of St. Pauls. The family consisted of father, mother, and two children; and from the position in which the bodies were found, it is surmised that the father first murdered his family, and then shot himself. It is possible, however, that the deed may have been committed by robbers.

Photography by Lamplight.—Dr. Lover, the eminent lecturer on Natural Philosophy, states that the Oxydate Lamp, invented by Mr. Nibbs, of Bakewell, gives forth such a pure and steady light, from a very thin and perfectly white sheet of flame, that it is applicable to the copying of collodion photographs by night, and is also well suited to the microscope. This is an entirely new feature in the history of artificial light.

A large manufacturer of tobacco in Danville, Va., states that his hands, numbering three hundred, are unemployed now, it being impossible to get tobacco for them, in consequence of the dryness of the season. The Richmond Dispatch says that the amount of tobacco brought to that city is unusually small, owing to this fact.

H. H. Robinson, United States Marshal of Cincinnati, who was committed by Judge Burgoyne for contempt, in refusing to obey an order to bring up the Gaines slaves, and was subsequently brought before Judge Leavitt, of the United States Court, on a writ of habeas corpus, has been discharged by Judge Leavitt.

The extensive Iron Works of the Rochester Novelty Company were destroyed by fire on the 25th. The machinery and a large amount of stock and finished articles were destroyed. The loss on the stock is about $30,000, and on the building about $15,000.

Another large manufactory of starch from Indian corn is about to be established in the Sciota valley. A company at Columbus, Ohio, it is reported, are about to put up buildings and machinery sufficient to work up six hundred bushels of corn a day.

In Rochester, lately, two or three instances of the murder of children by their parents have come to light. In one instance, a child died at 6 P. M., was buried at 7, and the parents started East at 8 o'clock the same night, and have not since been heard of.

Another revolving pistol has been invented. It has a magazine in two sections, each capable of containing seven cartridges, so that the pistol may be fired 14 times. The cartridges are thrown into a revolving block by means of a spiral spring. The pistol is self-capping. It is an Albany invention.

The Mayor of Baltimore has arrested a woman who gives her name as Mrs. Green, on suspicion of having stolen a child from Brooklyn, four years of age, named Charles Wallingford. Further information can be obtained of Mayor Hall of Brooklyn.

The Boston Traveller states that a number of gentlemen in that city, some of whom have before been prominent in the American party, met at Redmond Hall, a few nights ago, and formed an organization which they named the American Republican Association.

A new daily paper has been started in Albany, called the Albany Morning Times. The proprietors are Alfred Stone, David M. Barnes, and Edward H. Boyd. It is "independent" in political matters.

The Boston Daily Mail announces that on Monday next that paper will be discontinued, and be merged in the Evening Ledger, a new penny paper, which will then make its appearance.

The Huntington (Va.) Democrat says the loss to the farming community in that part of the state, from the extensive fires in the woods, is estimated at $100,000.

Ex-President Tyler is about to deliver a lecture at Petersburg, on the "Dead of my Cabinet"—Webster, Calhoun, Upshur, Gilmer, and Legare.

It is said that an effort will soon be made to abolish the Court of Claims—Mr. Greenwood, of the House, having prepared a bill for that purpose.

Attack and Defeat of the Indians in Florida.

The Jacksonville (Florida) correspondent of the Charleston Courier, writing on the 16th inst., gives an account of the pursuit, by a party of volunteers, of the Indians who attacked Dr. Braden's residence on the Manatee. Capt. Addison, with seven men, comprised the attacking party.

When the Indians were discovered, a portion of the men crossed the creek and charged the Indians in the rear, while the remainder halted on the opposite side, thus completely surrounding the enemy. Three Indians did not escape, as before stated; all of the seven, save the two who were shot at the first fire on the party, threw themselves into the creek, and are supposed to have been drowned. The water was reddened for some distance below the place of attack, by the blood oozing from the wounded Indians.

One of the Indians, who was scalped, was not instantly killed, but mortally wounded. He could talk very good English, desired to be taken to a doctor, said that Okchau, the sub-chief who led the attack on the 18th of January, near Fort Denand, met them there; that the Indian pony captured belonged to Okchau, and that he jumped into the creek. He also said that Billy Bowlegs had as many warriors as he wanted—that he (Billy) had sent him to Manatee to capture the negroes.

After sounding the creek—the bottom of which could not be reached with a "ten foot pole"—and burying the Indian baggage, which would have loaded a wagon, the party started for Manatee with the negroes, mules, and wounded Indian. They had not proceeded many paces, however, when the Indian fell, and was unable to proceed further. He was then ordered to be shot, which order was obeyed.

It is mentioned that about forty citizens of Manatee were last week mustered into the service of the State by General Jesse Carter, under command of Capt. John Addison.

Companies are being mustered into the State's service, by which they are not necessarily received into the United States' service at once.

From Nicaragua.

The arrival of the Charles Morgan at New Orleans on the 22d, with San Juan dates to the 16th inst., confirmed the report of Col. Schlessinger's defeat. Fifty men were killed in the engagement. The cause is attributed solely to the gross neglect of Schlessinger. The remnant of his party had arrived at Rivas. Schlessinger had not taken a single usual precaution against surprise, although within the heart of the enemy's country; and on the field his conduct was so cowardly that Captain Thorpe was obliged to face him with pistols and threaten to blow his brains out, but it was all useless. His cowardice had created a panic, and the men could not be reinspirited. The curses vented against Schlessinger by the returned force are loud and deep.

Captain Thorpe is a passenger by the Charles Morgan. He reports that Walker is in a good position and prosperous, receiving large accessions to his force.

Another battle had taken place at Arcopoka, between fourteen of Walker's men, under Captain Baldwin, and two hundred Costa Ricans, in which the latter were defeated, with a loss of thirty killed. Baldwin lost two killed.

Such is the account furnished by the telegraph from New Orleans.

A further telegraph from New Orleans, dated April 22, says that Col. French has left San Juan for Aspinwall, owing to a quarrel with Walker. It is reported that Walker had 700 men marching to meet the Costa Ricans, who were expected to invade Nicaragua. The accounts are meagre and unreliable.

Col. Schlessinger has been court-martialed, on charges of treason and cowardice.

St. George's Day.

The St. George's Society partook of their annual dinner at the Metropolitan Hotel, on the evening of the 23d. The dinner is quoted as having been "more than excellent," and the company as respectable and intellectual. After the usual toasts were drank, the President proposed "the health and happiness of the distinguished Novelist, William M. Thackeray."

Mr. Thackeray arose amid deafening cheers, and when order had been restored, said he could not recollect from which of "Mr. Thackeray's" Works Mr. Fowler had borrowed the sentiment with reference to vanity. He had no recollection of having written such a sentiment, and at any rate it was not "Vanity Fair" for the President to hold him responsible for it on that particular occasion (laughter), nevertheless, he was perfectly prepared either to contradict it or to prove it to be true. [Applause.] But he liked the words of the song which had just been sung much better. The good lasses of England and America, God bless them. He saw some of the latter looking modestly in at the door, and it was two of the former that induced him to come over here. He thanked God that he had come, for here he had found many honest, good and true people.

The lecture which he would deliver—[laughter]—he begged pardon for his mistake. He had left the lecture in his hat down stairs, but he had the heads of a little lecture before him, and he promised it should not detain them for more than two hours. [Laughter and applause.] The subject would be the toasts and speeches of the evening. He was gratified to hear the President say, when about to present the first toast, that there was to be nothing said on politics, because his friend, Mr. Young, had told him that his own were repudiated by some of his countrymen here. He had not the most favorable opinion of some of the old Kings of the House of Hanover, but with respect to the blind, brave old man, no English heart could contemplate his sad fate without sorrow. And of his grand-daughter—how could any man speak of her except with honor and profound admiration? Concerning her, he wished to recall some words written in his lectures, (his description of the Queen) which had been received with applause wherever he had travelled, and he knew they would not have been so received if they had not been true. Whatever he might think of some of the old Kings of England, he would yield to none in admiration for the present Queen. The second sentiment was the health of the President, and he had drunk to it with great pleasure, from personal feelings; because when he was in this country the first time, the President attended one of his lectures. [Laughter and applause.] The next was to the Emperor of the French, and he had heard that with pleasure, because the Emperor of the French wears the badge of St. George. [Applause.] The next was to the sister societies, at which all the Knights of Christendom started up before the company. There was St. Andrews, St. Nicholas, and the others, and he was pleased to hear them all—particularly Jonathan, who was not so old as some of them. With reference to St. George, he had seen an account in one of the morning papers, casting some doubts upon him. But had they not worn his badges; had they not seen him represented as when he slew the dragon, with hardly any dress upon him, but his sword, and was that not enough to establish his identity. [Laughter and cheers.]

St. Dennis, of France, and St. George, of England, had for a long time been engaged with a great and powerful Dragon, [applause,] and St. George had not, perhaps, so completely smashed that dragon as some of his sons could have wished. They were in the habit of expecting wonders, and they were given to bragging of their deeds. In this they differed materially from Brother Jonathan, [laughter,] who never considers himself very strong beer. But at Inkermann they gave the dragon some terrible lance-thrusts; and at Balaklava they rode in and out of his very jaws. [Cheers.] At the Redan, if they received such a bite as caused them to retire and prepare for another round, it was not surprising. He was glad the second round never came off. His feelings, like his name, were for peace; and while he was proud of the gallantry and bravery of the troops, he was glad that peace had been declared. [Applause.] St. George is the patron of more than Englishmen. He is the patron saint of the Russians; and Mr. Thackeray thought it must have been a difficult thing for him to decide which of his sons to favor, when they met in opposition on the battle-field. But with peace between them, he would be prepared to wish prosperity to both. [Applause.] In England there are only two women who wear the badge of St. George—the Queen, who confers it upon knights and distinguished men, such as the Emperor of the French,—and Florence Nightingale, [enthusiastic applauge. As it appeared to be the custom to close with a sentiment, he would ask them to drink to the health and happiness of that saintly young woman. They would remember that it was the duty of all knights and gallants—the sons of St. George, besides bravery in battle, to succor the wounded and soothe the oppressed.

He proposed—

The Health of Miss Florence Nightingale—

Which was drunk with three times three, amid waving of handkerchiefs and other enthusiastic demonstrations.

Several volunteer toast were given subsequently and responded to, and at a late hour the company separated.

The Question of the Principalities.

From the Paris Debats, April 7.

The treaty of the 30th of March is nothing more than a reproduction of Art. 1 of the conditions, completed by developments that will better carry out the spirit and the aim of that condition. The treaty announces the suppression of the Russian protectorate, and defines the general principles on which the future organization of the Principalities is to repose. The details are said to have been added to the rules already drawn up, but which will not be signed until all the necessary documents have been collected. The Conference hesitates, it is said, between the different systems of political and administrative organization proposed to it; and its hesitation is natural, for nothing can be more difficult than to carry out the entire programme projected at Vienna, which is thus expressed: "The Danubian principalities will receive an organization in conformity with their wishes, their wants, and their interests; and this new organization, on which the population will be consulted, will be acknowledged by the contracting powers, and sanctioned by the Sultan as emanating from his Sovereign initiation."

The Conference has the intention, it is said, of selecting three Commissioners from its body, who will be sent to the spot to make inquiries, and report to Paris the result of their information and their personal impressions. Such a mission will demand much time, and may delay the termination of the labors of the Congress. That would be only a light inconvenience. A far more serious one would be for the faith of the Commissioners to be shaken, their conclusions to be denied, or the authority of the decisions of the Conferences to be disturbed by new and unexpected events. This has often been the case. The Congress of Vienna committed more than one error, decreed more than one measure which was never executed, more than one law which nations either disdained or abrogated. The Conference has not yet chosen its Commissioners, and their choice appears to be another source of hesitation; for it will be necessary that the three persons chosen should inspire an equal confidence in all classes of the Moldavian and Wallachian populations. The Plenipotentiaries of Austria, Russia, and Turkey are probably those who are best acquainted with the state of the Provinces, "their wishes, wants and interests;" but could it be asked of them to inquire and report on the civil and military acts of administration which have emanated from the governments they represent? Would it not be to ask them in a certain manner to report against themselves? We have done nothing more than indicate the difficulties of the question. The continued occupation of the Principalities by Austria will give rise to the just protest of Russia, and it is necessary to avoid giving birth to new subjects of quarrel in that part of Europe. It is certain that all these questions have not been solved by the treaty of peace, and have not ceased to be the objects of the deliberation of the Conference.

THE EVACUATION OF THE PRINCIPALITIES YIELDED BY AUSTRIA—PROPOSED ADJOURNMENT OF THE CONGRESS.

Paris (April 8) Correspondence of the London Times.

The Congress held a sitting to-day. The same reserve is maintained on its deliberations, but I am informed that the question of Italy was the one proposed to be treated, and that an animated discussion was anticipated. It appears that Austria, who had shown much disinclination to evacuate the Danubian Principalities, has yielded on that point.

It is generally believed that the Congress will be able to bring its labors to a conclusion this week, or the beginning of next.

THE FIFTH POINT—FURTHER REVELATIONS OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE CONFERENCES.

The Debats undertakes to unveil the transactions of the Conference with reference to the fifth article of the well known Esterhazy conditions—that by which the Allies reserved the right to produce ulterior conditions in a European interest.

The Russian Plenipotentiaries, it is said, did not defend either the military arsenal of Nicolaieff, or their naval establishments in the Black Sea, or upon the shores of the Black Sea, in the Sea of Azoff, or upon the shores of the Sea of Azoff. The treaty of peace proclaims in the widest and most absolute sense the principle of the neutralization of these two seas. Sebastopol will not be rebuilt. The Russian ports and cities will be accessible to all Governments, who will be free to exercise an active surveillance by means of consular agents. All the Russian forts which have been constructed upon the Eastern coast of the Black Sea, along the Caucasus to the extremity of the Russian Territory, not far from Batoum, will be destroyed, and cannot be replaced.

The Debats intimates that the demolition of the line of forts extending to the south of the Caucasus, between the Black and Caspian Seas, was demanded of Russia, and that the demand was refused, on the ground that the forts were necessary to the security of the frontier, that no European interest calls for their destruction, and that they cannot be brought within the scope of the 5th article. The Allies, it is said, gave way; but it was agreed that the Russo-Turkish frontier on that side should be defined, so as to avoid future conflicts, the Russians meanwhile retiring from the Turkish territory.

It is also affirmed that the Turkish plenipotentiaries demanded of Russia an indemnity for the expenses of the war, and for damages sustained through repeated invasions of the Principalities by Russia. These latter damages, it is said, have been frequently admitted by the Russian government, which has promised reparation, but hitherto has not kept its word. This demand the Russian plenipotentiaries rejected.

The treaty forbids the Russians—so the Débats is assured—the fortification of the isles of Aland. The prohibition is absolute, and admits neither fortified barracks nor entrenched posts.

Studies from the Life.

"Malakoff," the Paris correspondent of the N. Y. Daily Times, gives a very clever picture of the Ball given by Mrs. Mason at the American embassy, which we condense:

About half of the company, on this occasion, was American; the rest were for the most part diplomatic and court people. On entering and passing the compliments of the evening with Mr. Mason, who seemed in excellent health and spirits, my eye first fell on the forms of two tall white-haired men, standing by the chimney in close conversation, whom it was not difficult to recognize at once as Mr. Buchanan and Lord Clarendon. Were they talking about Central America, or the enlistments, or the treaty of peace? That is none of my business; but this much I do know, that the best feeling exists between these two gentlemen. The difference in the personal appearance of these men is very striking. Mr. Buchanan has a large frame, a monstrous head and face, and a pair of English whiskers which give a rough and unfinished cast to his features. He looks like a statesman however, and would pass any where for a man hard to head. Lord Clarendon, on the contrary, is a thin, genteel, polished man, with a handsome face, and frank pleasing manners. He laughs gaily in conversation, but when not occupied looks grave and careworn, as the man must necessarily be who supports at this moment the cares of the English foreign office.

And there comes little Baron Manteuffel, the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Prussia, who engages quietly in conversation with Lord Clarendon, while Mr. Buchanan seeks other company. Manteuffel is a small straight man, with light complexion, smooth face, a round bullet head, and a shrewd, self-possessed German expression. He wears his hair cut close, and carries gold spectacles. His appearance rather adds to than takes from his reputation as a statesman. There seems more coldness, more reserve in the conversation with Lord Clarendon, than between the latter and Mr. Buchanan. There is cause.

And there goes the Count de Cavour, a good-looking man. On his arm leans the Countess of Montijo, mother of the Empress Eugenie, a tall and now thin lady of fifty, who yet bears many traces of the queenly beauty which marked her youth, and who seems delighted to talk English to her American acquaintances, and for the general attention which is paid her.

There, standing in the dooor, looking quietly at the dancers, with his eye-glass, is the Prefect of the Seine, Baron Haussemann, the highest executive officer in France, after the Emperor. He is a very tall, large, grave-looking man, who never smiles, and seldom enters into conversation with any one; but his lady, the Baroness, over in the corner, keeps up a constant chatter with a bevy of lady acquaintances, amongst whom you will notice Mrs Lesieur, of the Chausee d'Antin. It is an honor to any host to receive in his house M. Hausseman, for if there is one man more than any other to whom France is indebted at this moment for valuable public services, it is certainly he. I always look upon M. Hausseman with a mind full of respect, for I know that he does not serve his country because it is an Empire, or that Louis Napoleon is the chief of State—but because he is a Frenchman. He will leave a name behind him that will live when those of the courtiers of his Majesty shall have been long dead.

Standing at the buffet you will see the Baron Hubner, Minister of Austria at Paris, and the Count Hatzfeldt, Minister of Prussia at Paris, both members of the Peace Conference, and both unusually peaceable looking individuals. The Austrian Minister is a thin young man, with smooth face and fair complexion, who looks more like a Yankee schoolmaster than a leading member of the great Austrian school of diplomacy. But he has thought and work in his face, and although he appears gay and light-hearted under the protection of the stars and stripes of America, there is an air of restlessness in his movements which shows the man of ambition. The Count Hatzfeldt is a more pretentious looking man, with bald head, black moustache, and his coat buttoned up tight to the throat, so as to expose to greater advantage the two stars set in diamonds which glitter on his breast. The Countess de Hatzfeldt passes for a beauty in Berlin, and is certainly a fine type of the elegant, well-bred German lady.

That tall, demure-looking man, who speaks to nobody, is the Duke de Cambaceres, Grand Master of Ceremonies at the Palace. The short, heavy man at the chimney, with profuse decorations and neglige dress, is M. Feuillet de Conches, Chief of the Bureau of Protocols at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, and Introducers of Ambassadors at the Palace. A few years ago, M. Feuillet de Conches was a feuilletonist of one of the Paris journals—now he is a pet at the Court. As he stands there talking to the Baron Seebach and Count Sartiges, you hear him making a noise in imitation of some animal which puts one's knowledge of natural history at fault, but which is, no doubt, a souvenir of his late visit to the Garden of Plants after the eagle feather. He is an important, fussy individual, and his political fortune is made.

In the dancing room you see a collection of as beautiful ladies and of as unexceptionable toilettes as it is possible to meet. The youthful, charming, and, for this evening, busy Misses Mason; the Misses Hutton, Corbyn, Parnell, Yorke, Barton, and Bigelow, and the queenly Creole beauty from New Orleans, Madame Pilie, make a bouquet of American beauty in which each is a rare flower, and which draw from the assembled male sex whole columns of admiration.

Answers to Correspondents.

We give our first letter from Waterford—our dear old birth-place, to-day. The writer is T. W. Condon, one of the most gifted and intrepid of the Young Nationalists whom the Mechanics and Tradesmen of the cities and towns contributed to the Irish revolutionary ranks of '48. An imprisonment, by order of the Lord Lieutenant for some months of that memorable year, stamped with an official displeasure his devotion to the country. He is now happy, thriving, and honored by all classes of society, and all political parties in his native city; and that he may continue to be so for many golden years, is the sincere and warm prayer of his old friend, comrade and townsman,

T. F. M.

Slang of Critics.—A correspondent who is anxious to defend us against the "faint praise" of a literary weekly we never heard of before, gives us a sharp criticism on criticisms. We omit its allusion to the paper. It has a right to its opinion, the copyright may be, which it need not fear ever will be invaded,—insipidity is a better protection than the "Clerk's Office of the Southern District." Our correspondent writes: "Criticism, at its best, should know its place, as the handmaid and servant of genius in everything. But, in its common trading jargon, it is contemptible—standing up for its little rules, amenities and platitudes," "content to dwell in decencies for ever," and observing the tone and manner of things with the solicitude and reverence of the flunkey-kind. The folks who manage it are regular clogs upon the march of intellect. Anything like feeling or passion—things without which literature is not worth a pinch of snuff—gives them visible offence. They are "struck with the earache by all stronger tones," and cry out against them, counselling the sensible jog-trot way in all things. They also say anything like originality or genius is the last thing one needs in a literary project, and lay this belief like an unction or warming-plaster to the pit of their stomachs. Curious that such an idea should be entirely Anglo-Saxon. In France, Germany, Italy and other places, literary power is respected, and good things are expected from it—the people there loving it for its own sake, and the pleasure they take in it. But the thing is a fallacy, after all. The stupid of the world fall oftener than the men of talent. Altogether, this foolish dislike of everything out of the routine mode, and this very stolid protest against intellectual vivacity, are bad signs of our literature—which labors under a servility of idea not at all becoming in a nation like this, with all its mental and material boasts about it—a servility to the imported modes and models of England which emasculates the mind of the thinking community. It is ridiculous to hear our critics talk of poetry and all that, when they are just the chaps to sneer down the fervor and strong feeling without which they never can have a taste of it—of the real, genuine sort, I mean That some strong feeling, of whatever kind, has all the elements of power and the hope of good things in it. But your chill, timid criticism, has upon it the curse of the barren fig-tree, to the end of the chapter. We are too much given to literary encoring and the slang of superficial criticism—which, wherever they prevail, are sure signs of debility, and a running to seed of the national intellect. I really think one who wishes for a manly style of thinking hereabouts, should welcome whatever would tend to break the mental monotonies and give newspapers and every other sort of literature a little diversity—if nothing else—seeing that these diggings are not "little Pedlington's," after all. But of one thing I am sure—that genius and strong feeling never spoke in any way, in any age of man's mind, never suggested or published anything whatever, without offending, harrowing, or scandalizing the regular and the humdrum, in some respect or other—as Burke, Barry, Fulton and the rest of those "high-falutin," (faugh,—what a vile phrase,) fellows knew to their cost. I hope such offences will never be wanting in the world, and I believe our literary projects really want nothing so much as literary strength and originality. Paddy Whack.

Correction.—The name of James Halpin appeared by mistake in our Memoir of the Guyon Cadets, for Peter Halpin, First Lieutenant of the company.

In the notice of the Erina Guard, of the Ninth Regt., after the words John Casey, Third Lieutenant, please insert: First Sergeant, vacant; Second do., John Murtogh; Third do., John Quin; Fourth do., Patrick O'Farrell. Color Sergeant, Terence McKenna; Paymaster, Joseph Kiernan. First Corporal, David Redmond; Second do., James Riley; Third do., Francis Sally; Fourth do., Peter Kelly; Color Corporal, Bernard Nolan.

Lieut. O'Connor, Irish Dragoons, contradicts the statement which appeared in our last from Lieut. Green, attached to the staff of the 9th Regiment.

Apropos of the season we have the following from a Southern correspondent:

SPRING.

Beautiful Spring! thou art come at last,
With thine azure-tinted eyes,
Thou art come with thy violet-perfumed breath,
Dissolving in gentlest sighs.
Thou comest with light around thy path,
And garlands in thy hair,
Flinging their sweetest odors round
On the bright and joyous air.
Smiling, and sweeping, yet if perchance
Thine eyes should dim awhile,
'Tis only that through the crystal tears
More brightly thy lips may smile.
Beautiful Spring! I love thee more
Than thy passionate sister, June;
More love I thy violets' modest hue
Than her roses that fade so soon.
The passing clouds that may sweep thy brow,
And the smiles that light thine eye,
Far more I love than the fire than burns
In the bosom of hot July!
'Tis thus that a maiden should ever be,
Gentle, and fond, and true;
Joy in her heart, and light on her brow,
And Love in her eye of blue.
Not full of the passionate warmth of June,
Whose fiery glances burn,
And wither whate'er they look upon,
Whenever her glances turn.
Nor cold and repelling as ever when
The summer's warmth departs,
And frigid December throws his chains
Of ice around our hearts.
Not cold as the winter, nor even full
Of the passion that summer may bring;
But ever modest and loving she,
And blooming and joyous as Spring,
Now transient tears, and now sunny smiles,
That chase the tears away;
But whether she smile, or whether she weep,
Lovely as April or May!

The writer of the letter from St. Louis will accept our friendliest thanks. Such letters are truly valuable, and we trust we shall frequently hear from the "Cosmopolite."

A Brooklyn correspondent who takes up the side of the pen, in a debate on the relative merits of that weapon and the sword, and who otherwise desires notice therwith, is, we fear, a manufacturer of Steel Pens, and thinks to smuggle an advertisement of his wares into our columns without paying for it. The accomplishment of such would, no doubt, be satisfactory as to the omnipotence of the pen. Talking on the subject reminds us of the just anger of a down-cast sub-editor, who thought that Richelieu, who said that the pen was mightier than the sword, might have thrown in a good word for the scissors.

"J. Buckley, Poughkeepsie."—We are extremely obliged by your information, and shall with much pleasure, very soon, make use of it.

"Mickey Free" (who greatly admires the Irish News) is desirous that we should give a few illustrations every week. Michael, the heads of too many Irishmen have been brought to the block already.

"Metropolitan Insurance Company."—We regret to learn that you have received annoyance from a party representing himself as our advertising agent. We desire it to be perfectly understood, that our Agents are always provided with our written authority, and for them we believe we can promise uniform politeness and gentlemanly consideration.

For the conduct of unauthorised canvassers you, and the public will we trust, kindly excuse our assuming any responsibility.

"James's" Heart-Longings are very unequal and exhibit the numberless deficiencies that accrue from an unmusical ear. What does he mean when he sings—

"I've wandered afar o'er the wide-world's pave."

Or when he pictures the

"Golden Light,
O'er shadowing the trees with a radiant glow."

"Kenmare."—For an authorized answer to your letter, we refer you to the official organ of the Arch-diocese.

The second chapter of our notice of John Savage's book will appear next week, though it is with no little diffidence we approach a subject—that of Ireland in '48—on which it is difficult for us to speak with the impartiality of a true historian, or as a correct commentator on one. Having been an eye-witness of, and a participator in, the scenes which the author of "The Modern Revolutionary History and Literature of Ireland," in the latter half of his work, describes. We may, however, despite of all our partialities, succeed in doing justice to the characters and transactions of which that volume is the richly-carved and frescoed picture-gallery.

Apropos to this subject, we refer a "Subscriber," who begs us to inform him of the cause and exact period of the split between the Old and Young Ireland parties, to Mr. Savage's book. The fullest information about the cause and period enquired for by a "Subscriber" will there be found.

Next week, the Sixty-ninth Regiment, N. Y. S. M., will advance its standard in our columns and pass in review.

Declined.—"O. H."—A madman's thought—not a doubt of it. The intentions of J. R. M. S., are evidently of the best kind, and his patriotism not to be doubted. For a first attempt his "Exile," is not execrable. We give a stanza:

"Too long, my country, hast thou wore the chain,
Too long, submitted to the British yoke;
But thy brave son's, when they arise again,
Shall never rest, until thy chains are broke."

MR. TIMOTHY EDWARD HUGHES, has received our written authority to collect Subscriptions and Advertisements for the "Irish News," throughout the New-England States.

MR. J. J. CONWAY, has a similar mission for the States of New-York, New-Jersey and Pennsylvania.

We bespeak the kind assistance of our friends for both gentlemen.

The Irish News.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, MAY 3, 1856.

ANOTHER DAY.

The war is over. The guns of the Invalides have proclaimed peace. The guns of London Tower authenticate the news. The jewelled quill of the Conference at Paris has wrought wonders such as the magic pen of the Ravels in Asphodel never accomplished before the foot-lights at Niblo's.

The Seine is illuminated. The Thames is on fire. Since the battle of Waterloo, there never has been such tempestuous rejoicing.

And for what? That's the question!

Retiring into darkness from the glare; retiring into silence from the uproar; retiring from the ringing of glasses in tent and palace; retiring from Thanksgivings in St. Paul's and Notre Dame; let the people, in their coal-mines, work-shops, fields, bolted dungeons and garrets, ask the question—and for what?

Peace is voted. The eagle's quill records it. The harnessed guns and slaves of imperial power proclaim it. Nay, the managers of the European scene declares that Providence distinctly fixed the day, since in the Gospel of the Sunday on which the deed of settlement was signed, there occurs this text—"And Jesus came, and, standing in the midst of his disciples, said, Peace be with you."

Letters from Paris—for instance those to the Manchester Guardian—announce this singular coincidence, with text and fact. And, as with many other facts, there is applause, and recognition, and submission, more or less truthful, to it.

But what have the People gained? That's the question!

Drop the jewelled Pen. Tear up your Treaty. Stuff and suffocate your exulting guns with Polish and Hungarian protests, the agonizing prayers that break from Speilberg, the death-bills sent to you from the Carribean Sea, the letters which flash about the world from Louis Kossuth and Victor Hugo, the murmurs which still roll out, from underneath the Rebel's Rath, and turf, and tombstone, from Cashel-ruins, and Clontarf-plains, where Celtic sword and Christian cross crowned in centuries long gone by, the struggle of our race; do this, and what remains?

Listen to it. Europe is, as she was in 1848; as she was when New York lit up her lamps for her; when Vauxhall Gardens were thronged and throbbed on her account. Europe is to-day, in the presence of America, just as she was when the Republic was proclaimed in Paris, and Hungary was in arms. Whatever pageants take place, the Democracy in Europe remains just as it was when Louis Napoleon was a forlorn hope in London, and the Coldstream Guards were at rest upon their arms in Knightsbridge Barracks.

There is rest for the Princes; rest for the Queen of Windsor Castle; rest for the huge Pelissier, with his red breeches and turtle chops; rest for the scouts of the Danube. But what of it? Thrones; knee-breeches; stars; diamonds; eagle-quills; gas; a Pyramid of skulls and cross-bones, marked with "as all things were"—behold the grand result!

For the present, and for this day. For another has yet to come.

TWO OR THREE WORDS ABOUT THE NEW NEW-YORK POLICE BILL.

The bill supersedes the present Board of Commissioners, consisting of the Mayor, Recorder, and City Judge, and vests the appointment of Policemen and the power to try them for offences, in a board of six Commissioners.

The Commissioners are named in the bill—appointed by the Legislature. Their successors are to be elected by the people.

The present Board perform the duties of Commissioners ex officio, and receive no compensation beyond the fixed salaries of their respective offices.

The Board, proposed to be created, get salaries of $2,500 each besides clerk hire, &c., &c.

The police force of the city numbers eleven hundred and fifty. They hold office during good behavior. This new bill makes their term of office expire 1st June next, and authorizes the new Board to appoint their successors.

It authorizes the Mayor to suspend any officer; but he must be tried by the Board, of which the Mayor is not a member.

It was introduced on the 94th day of the Session, which is limited to 100 days.

A similar project was introduced last year, about the same period of the session—perhaps a few days earlier; among other remonstrances against it was one signed by 13,000 of our best citizens.

No petition was presented, either last year or this, asking any change, or complaining of any defect of system or management by the Board of Commissioners.

The bill was introduced by Mr. Petty, of New-York, Know-Nothing. He and Mr. Brooks, K. N., were its chief apologists. The only ground upon which they justified its introduction was the allegation that the Mayor controlled the Board, and he did not divide the appointments equally among the political parties—the K. N.'s did not get their share.

The official record of appointments was produced by Senator Sickles, proving that out of 375 appointments made since 1st January, 1855, when the present Mayor took office, the Democrats had only received eleven more appointments than the opposition.

Judge Capron, the opposition member of the Board, admitted, on the authority of the Courier and Enquirer, that he had received his full share of appointments.

The bill, at every stage of its progress in the Senate, received the combined vote of the Republicans and Know-Nothings—the Democrats alone, four in number, opposing it.

No complaint was made that improper appointments had been made. It was admitted that the department was never in so efficient a condition as now. Senator Brooks complained bitterly that there were Irishmen appointed; this was the burden of his complaint.

Before the present Board was constituted, policemen were nominated to the Mayor by the Aldermen and Assistant-Aldermen of the respective Wards, and held office for two and, afterwards, for four years.

It was understood that the bill was drawn up by Lieut.-Gov. Raymond; that it originated in a coalition between the Republicans and Know-Nothings, to divide between themselves the patronage of the department, and its power and influence, to the exclusion of the Democrats. There were two nominal Democrats named among the Commissioners, but they were selected by the friends of the bill, and, of course, in their interest.

After a struggle of four days, the bill was recommitted to a committee of the whole Senate—its grave, at this period of the session.

TWO FACES UNDER A HOOD.

At a recent meeting of the Dublin Corporation, Alderman Roe, a distinguished distiller, moved an address to the Emperor of the French, congratulating him on the birth of an heir to the throne. The discussion which followed had its interesting incidents. The whole affair suggests a striking contrast.

Aldermen Boyce and Wheelan, in their scarlet gowns, like a brace of old women on a race-course, stumbling for tobacco in sacks, contested vigorously the honor of seconding the motion. But the latter, it appears, got the best leg foremost. "His voice," writes the reporter of the Nation, "was the more audible of the two," and succeeded in giving to the winds a voluminous speech.

The speech over, Alderman Boyce insisted that he was the seconder. Alderman Wheelan laughed derisively, appealing against his brother to all around him. Town-councillor Maunsell, interposed, hitting the nail upon the head. He thought it was only a question between the two Aldermen which of them should get the Legion of Honor.

Here there was loud merriment from the grave Fathers of the City, innumerable sly winks, and a profusion of by-play. It was finally decided, however, that Boyce was the man who had seconded the motion. Whelan was dropped. His speech went for nothing.

In the Old Curiosity Shop, Codling, the Punch-and-Judy exhibitor, reminds Little Nell, that Codling's the man. On this point Codling was emphatic with the child, having taken it into his head she was the daughter of some great folk, and would one day possess a large fortune. Alderman Boyce, no doubt, has been moved by similar conjectures and foresight, in his contest with Alderman Whelan. From the floor of a shop, just as old and as curious as that pictured by Dickens, in the second story of the Royal Exchange, Dublin, the kind Alderman calls out to the little King of Algiers—Boyce is the man!

The King of Algiers, no doubt, will remember Alderman Boyce, when he comes in for his property.

On the 7th of March, 1848, this same consistent Corporation adopted, almost unanimously, the following resolution :—

"That a congratulatory address be presented to the people of France for the glorious and triumphant assertion of liberty and reform over tyranny and despotism.

But times have changed. The purple hand is uppermost. The Special-constable of London is High-constable of France. The Cent Gardes have trampled under their hoofs the blouses of Gards Mobile. It is now as it was in days of the elder Napoleon, of which Henry Grattan has said :—

"Nothing can equal the shouts of the army, except the silence of the people ; the nation cannot rise upon the army, her mind as well as her constitution is conquered ; in fact, there is no nation ; everything is army, and everything is conquest ; and now she lies exhausted, for captain or cornet who should put the brand of his name upon her government, calling it his dynasty, and under this stamp of dishonor pass her on to futurity."

But even so, and even still, there is truth in the world, and hope for the brightness of the future. There are some men who will not be sycophants to power. Some men who still cling to the prostrate form of Freedom, on whose beautiful neck this Military Tragedian of St. Cloud, has set his foot. Even in that dull Council-room of Dublin, there are strong voices found to protest against the apostacy of the time. An honest, brave citizen, one John Plunkett, of James' street, tells these wrangling parasites, that for one, he "should object to the proposed address, for he did not forget how the Emperor succeeded to power. He enslaved the liberties of France, and let loose his soldiers on them, and spilt the blood of some of the best men, and drove others into exile. He would feel greater pleasure in voting an address to the people of France if they some morning sent him about his business."

Even so do Lamoriciere and Cavaignac deny themselves laurels, rather than disown the republican faith. Even so does the noble old Beranger refuse to sing—

Le soldat bien brossé qui nous guette,
Qui nous tuerait pour passer officer.

MILITARY MEMOIRS.

MONTGOMERY GUARD, RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

Organized May, 1850, with 45 members, and now numbering 78 men, rank and file. Belongs to First Regiment Virginia Volunteers, commanded by Col. Thos. P. August, First Division and Second Brigade Virginia Militia; officered by P. Theo. Moore, Capt. Galway, Ireland; John Dooley, Senior first-lieutenant, Limerick; M. Seagers, Junior first-lieutenant, Cork; Philip Dornin, Senior second-lieutenant, Loughrea, Co. Galway; John McDonald, Orderly Sergeant, Dublin; Theo. P. Mayo, Surgeon, Richmond, Va.

Uniform coat green cloth, single breasted, with three rows of yellow convex buttons, bearing the arms of Virginia on the breast, ten buttons in each row, with two rows of narrow gold braid running from button and hole on edge to corresponding button in outer row; standing collar of buff cassimere with two gold lace holes, four and a half inches long on each end, with a button on each hole, of the same description as those on the breast; buff cassimere turn backs and sword flaps on skirt and slash on sleeve; the flap and sleeve have on each three lace holes and buttons, two buttons at the hips, and stars at the points of the turnbacks. The coats of the commissioned officers conform to the above except as follows:—Narrow gold lace on breast, four lace holes on flaps and sleeves, collar edged with lace, and the usual ornaments on sleeves. PANTALOONS.—For Winter—Sky blue cloth or cassimere, with buff stripe, one and a half inches wide, down the outer seam. For Summer.—Plain white drillings. WINGS.—Green worsted with buff fringe and cord. Stock or Cravat, black; Gloves, white cotton; Boots or half Boots, black, worn under the pantaloons. ACCOUTREMENTS.—Waist belt of white patent leather, fastened in front by a gilt clasp, having on it the letters M. G. holding on the left side a cap, green cloth army pattern, with buff band; eagle on front. Pompon, green and buff. Drill Monday and Friday evenings every week. Parade monthly. Flag presented by ladies of Richmond, March 17th, 1851.

MEAGHER GUARD, CHARLESTON, S. C.

This company was formed for its first parade on the 23d of June, 1853, on which occasion it mustered forty privates. The second parade took place on the 4th of July, 1853, on which occasion the company was tendered the right of the 4th Brigade, S. C. M., through the courtesy of Colonel J. Charles Blum, of the 16th Regt. On the 2d of July, the arms of the State were given to the company, by the order of the Commander-in-Chief, Gov. Manning; being the first instance on record, in the State of South Carolina, where the State arms were entrusted to a company previous to its officers being commissioned. The officers received their commissions from Col. James Simons, of the 1st Regt. Artillery, S. C. M.; there being no room in the infantry regiments at that time. In November, 1854, the South Carolina Legislature passed a special Act for the purpose of forming a Rifle Battalion, composed of the following companies: German Riflemen, Meagher Guards, Washington Light Infantry, and Moultrie Guard.

The Meagher Guard belongs to the Rifle Battalion attached to the 16th Regt., 4th Brigade, Lower Division, S. C. M. It is officered by Capt. Sergeant, of Armagh city, Ireland, to whose indefatigable exertions is chiefly due the present prosperous condition of the company. The company elected him to his present honorable post at its organization. First Lieutenant, Edward Daly, of county Wexford, Ireland, who was also elected to his present office at the formation of the company, and contributed largely toward its present prosperity. Second Lieutenant, Michael P. Parker, of the city of Dublin, Ireland, who was elected to his present position at the organization of the company. Ensign Kennett, of Benburb, county Armagh, Ireland, who was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Ensign W. M. White, of New Ross, county Wexford, Ireland, Non-commissioned officers: First Sergeant, B. O'Connor, city of Dublin, Ireland. Second Sergeant, B. Slattery, county Cork. Third Sergeant, John Hargrave, of the city of Dublin, Ireland, who took an active part in the insurrectionary movement of 1848. He was a sterling Confederate, and a member of the Grattan Club, in Dublin. Fourth Sergeant, George White, of New Ross, county Wexford, Ireland. Corporals: First Corporal, James Devereux, county Wexford, Ireland. Second Corporal, Alexander Belford, Ireland. Third Corporal, John Hogan, city of Dublin. Fourth Corporal, Michael Dunne, Ireland.

The company uniform consists of a blue frock coat, green facings, slashed across the breast with green braiding. Commissioned officers wear plume—green cock feathers. Privates, red, with green above; equipments, black belt, bayonet scabbard, powder-horn and pouch. The company's color is a green silk flag, trimmed with deep gold bullion fringe. On the one side is emblazoned the Sunburst; on the foreground is beautifully interwoven the motto, "Independentia aut. Mors;" encircling the sun's rays is the name of the company in gilt letters. On the reverse are the arms and motto of the State of South Carolina, over which is worked the name of the company. The company's device is a spread eagle, over which appears the legend, "Independence or Death." Arms are a rifle and bayonet; epaulettes, gold bullion; pantaloons, sky-blue, with gold stripe.

The regular monthly drill of the company is held on the night of the second Thursday of every month, and a meeting on the 13th of the month, besides which the company holds a drill meeting previous to each of its parades and excursions. The commissioned and non-commissioned officers, with those of the other three companies forming the Rifle Battalion, are drilled twice in the month, by Major McCready.

The regular excursion days of the company are its anniversary, the 13th of January, 17th of March, 1st of May, 4th of July; besides which there is one regimental parade, one battalion parade, four other parades of no fixed dates, and the relief of Fire Guard, which occurs once in the year for each company —four companies going on, relieving the four companies who have been on fire duty. The fire duty lasts three months. In all, the company generally makes twelve parades in the year.

The flag was presented to the company, and appropriate speeches made on its presentation and reception. The company, in conjunction with the Ladies Calhoun Monument Association, invited T. F. Meagher, Esq., to deliver a lecture in Charleston, in behalf of the fund of the S. C. M. A., which was delivered before one of the largest audiences ever assembled in Charleston.

The proceeds of the lecture formed the largest item of contribution ever offered to the S. C. M. A. On St. Patrick's Day last, the company was invited to escort the St. Patrick's Benevolent Society to the Cathedral, where an eloquent panegyric was delivered, after which the company proceeded to Mount Pleasant, and, on its return, was escorted by the German Riflemen.

NATIONAL GUARD OF ST. LOUIS.

Organized July 29th, 1852. Formed under Robt. M. Renick, Colonel of 1st Regt. St. Louis Legion. Now numbers 90 active members. Officered by Captain John N. Pritchard, New-York. Graduated under William M. McArdel, one of the original founders of the Pulaski Cadets, afterwards City Guards, of New-York. First Lieutenant, Edward S. Wheaton, graduate of Westpoint Academy. Second Lieutenant, J. B. McKellops, of New York, Captain of Company F, St. Louis Legion, in Mexico. First Sergeant, Geo. W. West, Baltimore, Md., First Lieuteuant and Acting Adjutant St. Louis Legion, Mexico. Uniform simi lar to that of the Light Guard of New York, when their uniform was red, red cord in pants instead of stripe. Full dress uniform—scarlet coat, blue facings, blue pants, bear skin cap, white cross and body belts, with breast and body plates, and knapsack; white pants for summer. Fatigue dress, regimental uniform of U. S. A. Colors, U. S., with State arms on reverse. In winter the U. S. regulation overcoat is worn.

Drill on Monday evenings.

First ball, December, 1853; second, December, 1854. Elaborate service of plate presented by the company to Capt. John N. Pritchard, December, 1854; and flag presented by the ladies of St. Louis to the company at the Varieties Theatre, September, 1855. Visited Cincinnati, by invitation, on February 22, 1856, mustering 52 muskets, 5 officers, and 16 musicians, on this occasion ; when Chicago, Baltimore, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Cumberland, &c., were represented, and a company of Regulars, from Covington, in the parade; the St. Louis National Guard were universally admitted to bear away the palm for discipline and appearance.

They were called out, and on duty, on three occasions of riot in St. Louis.

THE NINTH REGIMENT, N. Y. S. M.

The enthusiasm with which the news of the popular outburst against tyranny, in Europe, in '48 and '49, was received on this side of the Atlantic, took the direction among the Irish-American portion of the community of military organization. The reaction against the policy of "moral force," even then perceptible in the minds of our countrymen, had the effect of stimulating the dormant national instinct, which not centuries of misrule has been able to eradicate in the race—THE LOVE OF ARMS—into active development. This movement, spasmodic and impulsive at first, acquired finally "a local habitation and a name" in the present Ninth Regiment.

This regiment dates its existence from '49, as an organization. Looking back to the events of that period, we find an Irish-American company, under command of Capt. James F. Markey, appearing at the monster meeting convened in the Park, to give expression to the sympathy with which America watched the struggle for liberty in Europe, and acting on the occasion as a guard of honor to the Hungarian republican flag. This company called themselves the Irish Fusileers, and were undoubtedly, as well as we can ascertain, one of the nebulæ of the regiment, although their existence was about coeval with the excitement of the times.

The regiment was chartered in 1850, under the command of Col. Ferris, of the old Ninth. This officer took a deep interest in the efficiency and prosperity of his command during the term he remained in office. And when, about a year ago, he left this country for the Crimean peninsula, for the purpose of observing more minutely the operations of war when conducted on the grandest scale, he took with him the sincere regret and regard of his regiment.

The Ninth, after the departure of Colonel Ferris, remained under the command of Lieut.-Col. P. D. Kelly, who was elected to that office on the 29th of August, 1854, until the 29th of June, 1855, when its present Commandant, Col. Lucius Pitkin, received his appointment, and assumed the command.

Col. Pitkin is a graduate of West Point, and is highly spoken of as a competent and attentive officer, and the best hopes are entertained that, under his guidance, the regiment may attain a high degree of efficiency. The remaining field officer is Major Richard Barry, who was elected on the 29th of August, 1854.

The regiment consists at present of eight companies, for information concerning which we refer to the Military Directory, to be found elsewhere in our columns. A description of the uniform has already appeared in the Memoir of the Guyon Cadets, April 26, who belong to the regiment. This subject of uniform we understand to be a topic of much interest at present. The State law recently enacted, prescribing a regulation uniform to be worn by all regiments organized after its enactment, could not, of course, affect the Ninth, inasmuch as the law does not operate retrospectively. But the earnest advocacy of this regulation uniform by the Colonel, prompted not by any feelings of prejudice against the Green, or in favor of any other color, as such, as we are informed, but by a conviction of the superior advantage of a uniform recommended by the State, has introduced a question as to the expediency of a change in this respect among the men. This, however, is foreign to our subject.

The Ninth, in connection with the Seventh, Eighth, and a new regiment called the Fifty-fifth, forms the Third Brigade, under Brigadier-General Hall. It complies with the law fixing the number of battalion drills through the year, and has five instruction evening drills through the winter.

[Obituary.]

PAT. LALOR, of Tinakill.

The green sod has been laid over this honest Irishman. The last advices from Ireland brought us that intelligence. It is mentioned in all the papers there, with special words of sorrow and respect. Here it will be received, amongst our countrymen, with feelings no less subdued and mournful. For this Irish gentleman, whose death we chronicle, for many years has been known, at home and abroad, as the staunch friend of the Irish peasant. His sympathies for the latter were ever deep and fresh, whilst his vigorous, plain intellect enabled him to push the question of their grievances and rights irresistibly upon the public mind, in Parliament and before the people. Entering the former with Daniel O'Connell, in 1833, he took his seat in his frieze coat and corduroy breeches, and, in that loose and dainty assemblage, distinguished himself not only by the brave simplicity of his dress, but by his inflexible truth, purpose, and conduct. "Pat Lalor's honesty" was a notorious fact and phrase wherever public men in the three kingdoms were spoken of. Starting with O'Connell almost at the beginning of his career, he never once swerved from him. His speeches on the Repeal of the Union attracted the haughtiest of its enemies by the sound wealth of information—especially on the agricultural interest—they contained, and by the rude, but powerful logic, with which he applied his facts.

Nor was he less distinguished by his own merits, than by the merits of his eldest son. He was the father of James Finton Lalor, whose genius, whose fierce earnestness, and broad republican doctrine are widely recognized, and who, in one of those famous letters of his on the Land Question in '48, for us, and all generations of Irishmen who desire to see their country what nature has qualified it to be, has laid down this eternal truth—that it is not the Union, but the Conquest, which must be repealed.

Literature.

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS.

THE SEVENTEENTH OF MARCH—GLIMPSES OF THE IRISH PROVINCES AND CITIES.

On this day, the Irishman, wherever he may be, goes home. It may be to Connaught. P'raps he's the man for Galway. He renews his acquaintance with that picturesque old town, with its massive Spanish mansions, all fraught with stories and vestiges of a splendid commerce—a commerce, which, as it appears in a letter from Henry Cromwell and the Irish Privy Council, in 1657, extended to Spain, the Straits, and the West Indies—a commerce, according to this letter, eclipsing that of every other place, town, or port in the three nations, London alone excepted. And having looked in at that antique house, with the death's head and cross-bones over the door-way, where Lynch Fitzstephen, the wealthy Irish merchant, becoming the executioner of his own son for murder, divided with the first citizen of Rome the stern grandeur which the sacrifice of paternal love to patriotism confers; and having mingled with the red petticoats and the rough jackets of the Claddagh, and wished the latter a powerful take of hake, and cod, and turbot, the next time they put out to sea; I bet my life he doesn't come back without satisfying himself, with a dozen or two, that the Poldoody oyster is a superior fish to the East River, much as may be said in print about the latter.

If he's not from Connaught, may be he's from Innishowen, and before he leaves Donnegal, will hunt out the spot where Richard Montgomery drew the milk which gave him sinew for Quebec. Or I wrong him. He's lower down in Ulster. If so, he'll ask the neighbors to show him where James Shields was born—the brave Irish lad whose blood spouted in torrents on the field, which, stony as it was, fetilized by the generous flood, blossomed for America into the crimson flowers of victory.

There is Dublin—the beautiful silent capital of a sceptreless and defrauded people—with its public buildings, all so solid, graceful and impressive; the Custom House with its glorious sea-green dome, and massive granite work from base to parapet, and bold array of statues crowning the sumptuous architrave and cornice; the Rotundo, within which a princely and ambitious Bishop, John, Earl of Bristol, sat at the head of an armed convention, and gave to the Democracy of the island the lustre of a mitre and all the pomp and consequence of an imperial peerage; the vaults of St. Michan's, in which the headless trunks of the Shearses lie, and where, as though they had been embalmed with spices of the rarest virtue, they have been preserved—imperishable as the spirit which inspired them—from the worm, and the foul deterioration of death itself.

And there is Trinity College, endowed by a Queen of fabulous virginity, memorable for its having been the nursery of such intellects as those of Swift and Usher, Goldsmith and Berkley, Burke and Curran. And there is the old Parliament House, with its Ionic colonades and gateways, through which the Lords and Commons used to enter. There it is, with its great court-yard facing College-Green, the pavement of which rumbled on the 19th of April, 1782, the anniversary of the battle of Lexington, with the field-pieces of the Volunteers. Beneath those domes are the tapestried and frescoed halls where Harry Flood, and Bushe, and Yelverton, and Grattan—the inspired apostlehood of a transcendent era—poured forth the golden numbers, and woke the thunders, and winged the lightnings, in the midst of which the divine commandment of freedom was announced. And last of all there is the Post-Office, with its stately Corinthian portico, with the three statues of Mercury, Hibernia, and Justice topping it, and Nelson's Pillar, right in front of it, blocking up the finest street in Europe—an audacious pile of granite, most fortunately misplaced there, since it conspicuously symbolizes the intolerance of England, which always stands in the way of Irish business.

As for the three statues on the top of the Post-office, we all know the story about them. An English gentleman arrived in Dublin early one morning. It was a very wet morning. It was raining in earnest. The gentleman took an outside jaunting car.

"Where to, Captain?" asked the jarvey.

"Gresham's Hotel," replied the Englishman.

"You'll be there in a minute," said the jarvey.

And away went the jarvey with his fare, and several trunks and hat-cases, umbrellas and walking-sticks. You always know an Englishman by the baggage about him. Rattling up Sackville street, the Englishman sticks his glass in his eye, and takes a squint over the well of the car, at the Post-office.

"Who are those above there?" says he, pointing to the statues on the top of the building.

"Them," says the jarvey, "them's the Twelve Apostles."

"Twelve Apostles!" exclaims the Englishman, and he wipes his glass with his handkerchief, and screws it tighter into his eye. "Twelve!" he exclaims, "why I only see three of them there."

"Arrah!" said the jarvey, turning round to the foreigner, "What the devil would bring the rest of them out in this weather?"

And now can we forget Munster? On St. Patrick's Day she surely is not forgotten. The Corkman on that day speeds back to the city of St. Finbar, and with the devotion of the Campanaro, listens once more to the sweet bells of Shandon,

> Whose sounds so wild, would in days of childhood,
> Fling o'er his cradle their magic spells.
> On this we ponder, where'er we wander,
> And thus grow fonder
> Sweet Cork of thee!
> With thy bells of Shandon,
> That sound so grand, on
> The pleasant waters of the River Lee!

Very probably, he takes a drive out in the direction of Blarney, to that Castle of Lady Jeffries, where, according to Milliken's ballad, Julius Cæsar and Nebuchadnezzar stand naked in the open air, and where a certain unapproachable stone, if kissed, is supposed to inoculate the tongue with a mellifluous civility of the most suspicious fascination.

The Kerry-man, with the help of Sir Edward Courtney, trudges up the flank of Mangerton, and from the rim of the Devil's Punch-bowl—iced punch it must be, for no one can swim in it, who doesn't get the cramp—he looks down with a heart throbbing with love, and eyes bright with pride, on and all over the loveliest lakes that ever were fanned to sleep by the rustling glories of the summer, or were swept into tumult by the white wind of the winter. From thence, looking a little to the south, he can see the bold headlands of the bay, into which Wolfe Tone steered the remnant of the squadron under Hoche, and where, with the recollection of the tri-color—true to the soil as the wooded rocks of Glengariff—fresh as the rushing waters of lone Gougane Barra—the hope of a brighter day still lives. From thence, too, looking towards America, he will behold the summits of the mountains which overlook the Abbey of Derrynane; mountains among which, with his gold-laced cap and tough hunting-pole in hand, O'Connell has many a time woke the echoes with his beagles; mountains, standing on the topmost peak of which, and leaning on his son, Shiel has with his quivering hand and ringing voice, pointed out the Liberator of Ireland, listening to the wave from Labrador breaking against his native coast, or looking far and wide into the island whose history shall forever be associated with his name.

The Clare-man has the gigantic caves of Kilkee to visit. Or, if he prefers a little diversion to the contemplation of the sublime, he will look in at the Abbey of Corcumroe, where Donagh O'Brien, King of Thomand, is represented in a recumbent posture, on the broad of his back, in full armor, with a short pipe in his mouth.

But there is Tipperary, with the Galties, and the Valley of the Suir, and the Rock of Cashel, crowned with tower, and chapel, and cathedral—the ruined regalia of Celtic kings—Tipperary, once the fertile country of a peasantry, swift and sure and stalwart as the nimblest and the boldest that ever started the chamois along the chasms of the Swiss Alps, or scared the eagle from his Pyrenean throne. Many an emigrant from the foot of Keeper, or the Golden Vale, or the neighborhood of Holycross, from the four quarters of the earth, tramps back to Tipperary on the day sacred to the shamrock.

Last of all, there is Limerick! Remember Limerick!—old and young—you who can but pray, and you who pant to strike! Remember Limerick! Daughters of the old land—sisters, wives, mothers of republicans—you who rejoice in an inheritance of honor bequeathed by those who, with arms made to fondle children, and breasts to nourish heroes, stood in the deadly breach, and with such rude weapons as the crumbling ruins gave, maintained it fiercely against the foe. Daughters of the Old Land, remember Limerick! Soldiers! you who wear the green—you who have pledged your bayonets to the cause of freedom and republicanism—you who, by reason of the very disaffection to the foreign government which expelled you from your own land, all the more loyally serve the government whose ensign is in your custody, and whose arms you bear; you who have been organized, sworn, and commissioned to vindicate the laws, preserve the public peace, and repel invasion—in these days, soldiers, remember Limerick!

WIFE, OR NO WIFE?

THE MARRIAGE AND DESERTION.

After an absence of many months, Mrs. Fitzherbert returned to England in December, 1785. The Prince resumed his visits to her. It grew into a public report—almost into a public belief—that they were married. Charles Fox was aware of the Prince's passion—knew that he used to go into all sorts of extravagances, tearing his hair, vowing that he would abandon the country, forfeit the crown, sell off all he possessed, and retreat with the object of his affections to America. Fox, in a letter dated December 10, 1785, earnestly impressed on the Prince the extreme folly of even thinking of marrying Mrs. F.; first, because, by the Bill of Rights and Act of Settlement, (temp. William and Mary,) his marriage with a Catholic would forfeit and throw him out of the succession of the Crown; and next, because, independent of religion, the Royal Marriage Act rendered absolutely null and void any marriage contracted by a member of the Royal Family without the Sovereign's consent.

The reply to this remonstrance was a solemn written announcement by the Prince, that there not only was not then, "but never was [sic in orig.] any grounds" for the reports of the marriage. This denial, on the word and honor of a Prince, is dated December 11, 1785.

Exactly ten days after—to wit, on the 21st of December, the Prince married the widow!

The marriage took place in presence of Mr. Errington, her uncle, and Mr. Smythe, her brother. For a very long time it was believed that the ceremony was performed by a Catholic clergyman, to ease the scruples of the lady, herself a Catholic. But it appears, by the marriage certificate, which is still in existence, that a Protestant clergyman officiated. The marriage certificate bears his signature, and was also signed by the Prince and his wife, as well as by Messrs. Errington and Smythe. The two last signatures were cut off by Mrs. F., at a time when it was thought likely that proof of the writers' complicity would be sought to punish them.

Why did the lady, a Catholic, consent to this Protestant marriage? In the hope that it would be binding on the Prince, her husband, and because she knew that, according to the doctrines of her Church, such an union (to quote the words of an eminent Catholic bishop) was "valid as a contract, and as a sacrament, and neither the Pope nor the Church could have annulled it."

The marriage solemnized, the lady and her husband lived together. She was tacitly acknowledged as his wife. The royal family were intimate with and friendly to her; the Duke of York, her brother-in-law, continued her friend and correspondent for forty years—until he died, in fact. Queen Charlotte, her husband's mother, received her at Court—a distinction which she certainly would not have accorded to her son's mistress.

The Prince got heavily in debt, by extravagance, and Parliament was applied to, to pay off his involvements, early in 1787. In the Commons, Mr. Rolle directly put the question—was the Prince married to a Catholic lady? The next day, Fox, who had his instructions from the Prince, solemnly assured Parliament that the report was "a miserable calumny, a low, malicious falsehood." He went further, and declared, on authority, that in fact, as well in law, no such marriage had taken place.

From that hour, Mrs. Fitzherbert never spoke to Fox—never forgave him. The Prince endeavored to persuade her that Fox had spoken without his knowledge. It is not likely that she believed him. But he had certainly assured Grey, as well as Fox, "upon his sacred honor as a Prince," that he was not married. The falsehood was told in a princely manner, to secure a grant of the people's money from Parliament. For this, "the first gentleman of Europe," as his flatterers called him, was content to brand his wife as his paramour. He had persuaded her that their marriage was lawful and binding. She trusted him—she was deceived. As Lord Brougham strongly says: "While he pretended that he was making her his wife, and made her believe she was such, he was only making her the victim of his passions, and the accomplice of his crimes."

In 1795, in order to obtain payment of his debts a second time, he consented to marry his cousin, Caroline of Brunswick. His own mother, who knew of his previous marriage, told him that he knew best whether he could contract the threatened alliance, or not. Before this he had literally turned Mrs. Fitzherbert away, in order that he might devote himself to Lady Jersey, a married woman. He espoused Caroline of Brunswick, and we all know how he treated her. After a time, on the solicitation of several of the royal family, male and female, Mrs. F. resumed her intimate connection with the Prince, after having obtained a brief from Rome declaring that her marriage was lawful. Her husband's relatives knew that, in her society, he was less vicious than out of it, and, therefore, desired the reconciliation. For eight years after this they lived together, happily enough, as man and wife, until the Prince fell in love with Lady Hertford; and, in his own house, at Brighton, gave "the cut direct" to Mrs. F. They met again, several years after this, but never as man and wife. At her earnest solicitation, he treated her daughter, the Princess Charlotte, with kindness. Soon after he became Regent, he consulted her on the subject of her breaking with his old friends, the Whigs, and he would have saved his honor had he followed her advice. After the death of Queen Caroline, in 1821 (when he was at the ripe age of 60), he had the cool audacity to tell Mrs. Fitzherbert—his real wife—that he should marry again! On his death-bed, this ill-used, repudiated woman wrote to him as a wife offering her services to a sick husband, but he declined them. To the last, however, he wore her miniature, suspended to a silver chain, around his neck, and it was buried with him. After all, she was the only woman, perhaps, that he really cared for.

All his family respected and regarded her. Queen Charlotte, the Prince's mother, in conjunction with the Duke of York, her brother-in-law, obtained for her an annuity of £6,000, secured by a mortgage deed on the Pavilion at Brighton. On the death of George IV., she was visited by his brother, William IV., to whom she submitted the proofs of her marriage; and he offered, as some recompense, to create her a Duchess. She declined the honor, and he then commanded her to wear widow's mourning for George IV., and to put her servants into the royal livery. He received her in his family circle, paying her the attention she was entitled to as his sister-in-law. This was in 1830. When she went to Paris, in 1833, she was received with all distinction at the Tuilleries, by Louis Phillippe and his family.

In April, 1837, Mrs. Fitzherbert died, aged 81. The monument above her remains represents her with three rings on the third finger of her left hand. No one can doubt that she was the wife of George IV.

To vindicate her character, and with the concurrence of the Duke of Wellington and Sir William Kingston, executors of George IV., certain papers were deposited, after his death, in Coutt's Bank, in the names of Lords Albemarle and Stowton. These are—the mortgages on the Pavilion at Brighton; the certificate of her marriage with George IV.; a letter from that Prince relating to such marriage; a will written by him in her favor; and a letter written by the clergyman who married them, endorsed by Mrs. Fitzherbert, to the effect that there were no children by the marriage. This last was necessary, as an impostor had turned up, claiming to be lawful issue of such union.

We have said enough to show that

> "Hal was the rascaliest, sweetest young Prince," and have but to add, that, with her usual confiding weakness, this was the man whom Ireland invited to assume sovereign dominion over her, during his father's mental incapacity. For him was incurred the enmity of George III., which ended in the annihilation of Ireland's chance of becoming as independent as her subjection to England would have permitted. He professed to have the most lively regard for Ireland, her sons, her interests. He betrayed them all, when he had the opportunity; and it is a well ascertained fact that he reluctantly consented, moved even to a paroxysm of tears, to the Wellington and Peel measure of Catholic emancipation, in 1829.

The Honorable Charles Langdale, cousin to Mrs. Fitzherbert, has published the Memoirs of that injured woman, from which we have gleaned a portion of this article. He affirms—and there is no doubt—that the marriage certificate of the Prince of Wales and Mrs. Fitzherbert is deposited at Coutts's Bank, London. It is a question (such evidence existing of the Prince's forfeiture of his royal rights by such a marriage) whether one single public act during the Regency and reign of George IV., a period of twenty years, is not de facto and de jure null and void. If he had no right to reign, the acts of his government are all annullable.

THE MESILLA VALLEY.

FROM THE NOTE-BOOK OF AN IRISH SURGEON. NO. III.

GRAPES AND GRAIN.

The rainy season in Southern New Mexico commences in the first or second week of July, and continues until the last week of October, or beginning of November. During this time scarcely a week passes without some rain falling, generally accompanied by thunder-storms, which, gathering in a few hours, break over the place, and discharge a heavy fall of rain, which rolls in torrents with nearly irresistible energy, cutting out new channels for itself in the dry and plaster clays. The adobe house on the Mesa is often a poor protection against the torrent, which undermines it, and, washing out the whole underpinning of the building, leaves it a heap of mud and ruins. The shower may last for one or two hours, and then the clouds part, the sun appears, the arid soil drinks in the superficial pools, and all is dry again. Then, rain and lightning storms may come on for a few days in succession, and then dry weather for seven or nine days, when the daily rains come on again. Such is the nature of the rainy season which, in these latitudes, occurs in summer time. Slight rains fall in the spring months, sufficient to refresh the earth and allow the ground to be opened for planting corn and roots. These, with grapes, constitute the staple vegetable productions of the river-bottoms. These bottoms, where not occupied with the splendid groves of cottonwood trees, whose deep green tint of leaf constitutes them one of the most beautiful objects which the eye can rest upon, are, in the neighborhood of the small towns on the Rio Grande, covered over, in harvest time, by a magnificent growth of Indian corn, rising eight and even ten feet high, and bearing luxuriantly. Owing to the distance of the Rio Grande towns from any populous district in other States, the inhabitants are dependant for the cereal plants upon the supply from their own fields, which is never too abundant, as the New Mexican is too indolent to do more than is absolutely necessary to sustain existence; and farmers there, as well as elsewhere, have learned that it is more profitable to them to cultivate little and get a high price for it, than to raise much and sell cheap. Expensive, indeed, would the breadstuffs be, if the ordinary laws of demand and supply were, in New Mexico, to regulate the price of corns as it does elsewhere.

Strangely enough, the price of such food is regulated on the river, by the dictum of the Quartermaster of the United States forts. He calculates the cost of receiving such stuffs from Texas, or Independence, and then offers a certain price—so much for every fanega (two bushels and a half). Inasmuch as three-fourths of the whole produce raised in the Valley is consumed by the troops, this proposal may not meet the expectations of the growers. They hold back for awhile, but, in time, submit, lest the supply would be brought overland, and the market be thus completely lost to them. Five dollars a fanega is the usual price for corn, wheat two dollars a bushel, eggs twenty-five cents per dozen, and butter seventy-five cents a pound; frijoles, or Mexican beans, bring four dollars a fanega —a sum which is also the equivalent of a sheep. When the first emigrants to California passed through the Territory, the value of sheep was small, and 50 cents a head the usual price; for the last five years it has been steadily rising, until it has reached eight times its original amount. All the corn and wheat used by the American population along the river, is ground at the grist-mill within a few miles of El Paso. The Rio Grande, there, in cutting its way through the termination of the Organ Mountains, flows over a rugged ledge of limestone rock, producing a slight fall, or rather rapids—the river dropping not quite twelve feet in half a mile. Mr. Simeon Hart has taken advantage of this fall to establish his flouring mill, and has economized the head of water by using the horizontal water-wheel, or tourbine. He has fitted up the whole with admirable skill, and beautiful machinery, all of which, both the parts of wood as well as of iron, came from Philadelphia. When it is considered, the long overland travel from St. Louis to Albuquerque, and thence down the river, a distance nearly of one thousand miles, by the slow travel of mules and wagons, some idea may be formed of the expense of fitting up the mill. It is in full and constant operation now, and is the only one of the kind in the Territory. Mr. Hart has thrown a dam across the river, above the falls, which he is at no cost to repair, the Mexican authorities of El Paso taking the care and repair of it on themselves, lest that if left to the mill-owner, he might deprive the town of a fair share of water for their asequias, or open streams, which carry the water for town purposes and for the irrigation of the ground. The poorer New Mexicans grind their own corn in the usual Indian way, with stone pestles on slabs of stone, or in stone mortars, resembling Irish queen stones. This work is usually performed by the women.

In the moist and warm soil of the valleys the grape thrives with wonderful luxuriance. Two varieties of grape are cultivated, one a purple grape resembling the Isabella the other a green Muscatel grape. The latter from its plumpness and sweetness of flavor is a delicious fruit, and often bears the second year very plentifully. There is no fixed price for grapes as every body cultivates, but generally six cents a pound would represent their value. Onions, water-melons, a variety of sweet potato, tomatoes, chiles and beet constitute the other growths, which, except the onions and red pepper, are sparingly grown except for the Americans. Both white and red beet grow to a large size and give great yields, and a large opening exists for the making of extensive fortunes in that country by the cultivation of beet-root for the manufacture of sugar. All the sugar consumed, comes at present either from Texas or over the plains, several hundred miles by land carriage; the consequence of which is its excessively high price, the poorest unrefined costing 50 cents, and the more refined article 74 cents and over a dollar a pound. The Winter is too severe for the cultivation of the sugar cane, and hence the manufacture of sugar from beet will, at some period not very distant, form a staple manufacture of the Territory. Such a manufacture would not only have the supply of the Territory of New Mexico but also that of the whole Northern part of Mexico down to the City of Chihuahua. The only sugar at present used there being that extracted from the Mescal one of the varieties of the Agave, a plant resembling the Indian Aloe shrub. The highest table lands of Southern New Mexico considerably modifies the climate which in that latitude would otherwise approach an intertropical temperature. Situated between four and five thousand feet above the ocean level, they are exposed to the winds from whatever quarter they may come, and in winter months the summits of the mountains, which in many ranges are two thousand feet above the plains, are covered with deep snows. On the table lands occasional winter snows fall, but rarely accumulate or lie on the ground. South of latitude 35° light rain and night frosts are the usual winter climate. The summers have the same mean warmth as those of Virginia, with less of the variability, and hence it is a climate admirably adapted for health. Next to Cailfornia it is probably the most agreeable climate within our country's limits, and from being reached in less time, and being less occupied, it offers some inducements to Emigrants and Settlers. The heat is not so excessive or so enervating as that of Southern Texas and the Gulf States, nor can rice, coffee or sugar be raised; and therefore, it is unlikely to be a slave-holding territory, while the luxuriant yields of the bottom lands and the extensive grazing plains on each side of the rivers, fit only for the raising of stock which roam in thousands in search of the bunch and buffalo grass, scattered in clumps apart, and yielding abundant nutriment equal to the prairie grasses of the Mississippi Valley. In this climate where the spring rains are wanting, the prairie grasses cannot spring up, and their place is supplied by the coarser herbage indigenous to a drier soil and estival moisture. These, not perishing in the drier winters, become a natural hay in the following spring, forming the chief sustenance of the animals who journey this overland route in seasons before the appearance of the young grass. Owing to the want of steady water courses and uncertain height of rivers, manufactures cannot be extensively carried on. Coal may be found yet in some of the ranges lying along the Rio Grande, as these valleys are of the same conformation as coal basins generally are. Timber, however, is very scarce throughout the whole country. Forest trees are never found on the plains, nor below an elevation of five thousand feet, they are thus confined to the summits and elevated flanks of the mountains, where the cypress, the oak pines, and cedar flourish. The cutting and hauling of these in the cumbrous carretas or Mexican wagons over the primitive roads, to twenty and even forty miles distance, renders wood a very expensive article. Such a thing as a frame house could not be thought of, the doors, jambs and windows, with occasional flooring, being the only parts into which wood-work enters. The houses, made of adobes or sun-dried bricks, sometimes with and oftener without straw, are all of one story, and the roofing is generally of brush, the ceiling being made of slender beams of the cottonwood or poplar growing in the bottom, stretched along the length of the room, while rushes are woven across between the timbers, and form a species of wicker ceiling which looks more artistical than a plastered roof. The cottonwood, though like other varieties of poplar species, too loose a grained wood for carpentry purposes, is yet well adapted for the purposes of roofing and fencing, and is a very fast growing tree, rising as high as sixty feet frequently in its seventh year. It is a species which has a great range in this country, being found growing in the coast ranges of California, along every river and water course in the great Basin, the infallible signs of springs and underground water in New Mexico—and flourishing as far East as the Mississippi—East of which it gradually declines and disappears.

ENGLISH AND AMERICAN LECTURING.

A stranger, fresh from the aristocratic nurseries of learning, be it from Oxford, the City of Towers, or the Academic halls of Gottingen, or the dust of old Trinity, of Dublin, must naturally feel not a little surprised at the contrast presented by the system of lecturing on this side of the Atlantic. There, a dainty D. D., or an obese Professor; here, a dashing, go-a-head parson, or a brilliant young literateur, or traveller. There, aspirants for knowledge, whose ancestors did not happen to rob on the highway or cheat on change, and who cannot boast of either the abstract prestiges of gentle family connection, or concrete influence of hard cash, must go as best they can without knowledge. Here, the land abounds with cheap Lyceums, open to each and all, without regard to accident of birth or wealth, and then we have the growing demand for really competent, and the growing impatience with, second-rate lecturers.

These and similar reflections fill the stranger's mind. They are, of course, colored by the freshness of his impressions, and in his enthusiasm he may give us here more credit for the intellectual passion for lecturing than we actually possess. But undoubtedly it is that intellectual life, fostered by free schools and free institutions, which has given to our lecture system a character of its own, as purely American as Niagara, camp meetings, and prairie-fires. As different from the times of antiquity as a keen, sharp, matter-of-fact Carlyleian scholar of Boston is from a polished, esthetical, sophistical Retorician of Athens—as different from cotemporary European lectures, as was Daniel Webster, as a statesman, from Lord John Russell, or the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher from Rev. Baptist Noel. As a general thing, European lecturers lack directness and reality. The cloven foot—political bondage, and social prejudice—leaves its mark even on the highest order of European minds. Hence their proclivity to view every topic as a matter of speciality, because the mind lacks breadth to take it up from a great central point of view of humanity.

We are well aware, that, in many instances, audiences are more stimulated by curiosity to see how a lecturer of celebrity looks, than by an anxiety to hear what he has to say. Yet they generally go through the whole sitting with exemplary patience, and gulp the pills of instruction, even when clumsily prepared, with a good grace.

In a large city like New York, with an enormous permanent and floating European population, this intellectual propensity may be to some extent overshadowed by a more frivolous passion for theatres, but in the interior and Western counties, where there are but few theatres — in such places as Buffalo, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Chicago, and especially through the length and breadth of Massachusetts, the popular mind has a wondrous taste for the intellectual luxury afforded by an accomplished lecturer. The amount of learning and useful information, thus quickly and cheaply circulated among the people, is immense. This go-a-head method of instruction may here and there certainly open a door to superficiality, but, for one person who, going to a theatre, would read or think less, there are thousands who would only be encouraged to read or think more; and we are delighted to see some of the best minds of the country, instead of vegetating in the already overcrowded avenues of the bar, or drudging in the precarious calling of the pulpit, devoting their energies to this new American educational institution of lecturing.

What to us seemed always most characteristic of our American lecturers, compared to those of European countries, is, that however high their claims for superiority, or however distinguished the services they may have already rendered their country, through the press, literature, or the forum, their bearing is always that of an unassuming modesty. They address their audience as fellow men. The lecturer may be a scholar, a satirist, a politician, an editor, or a clergyman, but he addresses his audience as men, and thus a link of equality, and consequently of humanity, is produced between him and his audience, which bespeaks attention and sympathy, and removes indifference and coldness. Hence that earnest, genial, hearty encouragement, which the lecturers receive at the hands of audiences here, by a sincere, well-sustained attention, while in Europe, though the applause may be here and there louder, the intellectual zest is far more subdued.

These and similar reflections presented themselves to our mind, on reading the accounts of two lectures recently delivered and published in England. One by Mr. Gladstone, on the Colonial system, on which we shall not now expatiate. The other by Lord John Russell, on the obstacles to moral and political progress.

Lord John closes with a glowing allusion to the United States:—"After not many years," said he, "the United States and England will present sixty, seventy, nay, eighty millions of freemen of the same race and language, reading Milton and Shakespere, and going hand in hand in peaceable conquest and bloodless victory." We should be extremely sorry to distrust Lord John's benevolent and holy aspirations; yet we must say, that we find already, in the very striking contrast of thought presented between his lectures and what would have been an American's, that in spite of the mutual love for Milton and Shakespere, and the common language, great differences of character have already been established by difference of climate and institutions, and are likely to open still a wider schism, if the many other foreign races are taken into account, which have already contributed so much to un-Anglicize, or, in other words, to Americanize the national character.

Lord John Russell's lecture, however, which, if delivered here, would be deemed unworthy of a fourth-rate clergyman, is a great effort for a second-rate statesman in England. Not that the lecture is statesmanlike, but the lecturer enjoys the prestige of a statesman, and words which would only start a yawn from unofficial lips, are received with great awe and respect, if the speaker happens to be one of the privileged order. Of course, if Lord John Russell speaks of obstacles to political progress, what he really means are the obstacles to his re-ascendancy to office. He, if in office, would of course bring in a new Reform bill, or a new Jew bill. At least this is the inference which he wishes to have drawn from his vehement deprecation of "obstacles," while, at the same time, it is amusing to see what a clever use he makes of Christianity, as that restraining influence, which he advocates as its leading principle, is nothing else but a circumstantial plea for the perpetuity of the dynasty of Bedford and Co.

Lord John Russell points to the necessity of progressive reform by showing from a reference to Wm. Porter's statistics for 1856, that not less than £57,000,000 of pounds are yearly spent for spirits, beer and tobacco. This is pretty well for the lower classes. But of the higher classes, as a body, Lord John Russell draws a picture far darker than any we have ever drawn of the worst individuals belonging to it, asserting that selfishness, luxury and sensuality have made into it still deeper inroads. At the same time, as he dwells on the utter neglect of education, we expected he would, as a natural sequence, come out with an advocacy of the Maine laws, a project for free schools, and with such alteration in the laws of entail and primogeniture, as by diffusing property more equally, would remove the vices engendered by the excess of wealth on one hand, and those crimes produced by excess of poverty on the other. But Lord John simply points to the evil, and then to Christianity as its cure. Christianity has existed for eighteen centuries, and what story does Lord John Russell and his picture tell? The question is, how has Christianity been put into action by human laws?

Now, we give the English people credit for a vast deal of piety and Christian resignation and meekness. If they had less of it, they would perhaps have shown more opposition to their unchristian rulers. But Lord John forgets that there are men who use Christianity not as he does, in favor of Russellism, but of Humanitarianism; not in favor of one or other Lord of the House of Bedford, but in favor of the same law in the great temple of Nature. Cromwell was one of these unconstitutional, odd, out-of-the-way followers of Christ. Is it because their advent was advancing, if we read times aright, that Lord John hurries off from the forum to the lyceum, and strives to earn as a philosopher that fame he could not secure as a statesman? Perhaps Lord John has a keen vision. Perhaps his move is premature. Unfortunately, however, he is not likely to gain a very brilliant reputation as a lecturer by this last effort in Exeter Hall. He does not speak like a man to his fellow-men, but like a man who stands on a higher pedestal, and condescends to look down on them, and, with temporary humility, exclaim, "Be of good cheer, boys; great are the evils under which we groan, but Allah is great, great is Allah!" This is the long and the short of the little Lord John Russell.

Yet, with all the lack of positive humanity, and all the drawbacks of negative philanthropy, we think it speaks well for England to see, at such a crisis in her history, her statesmen coquetting so pleasantly with social ethics and moral reforms. It speaks well for Lord John, too, to see him, after all his disasters at Westminster and Schonbrunn, summon up mettle enough to make a decent appearance before the old ladies and young misses of Exeter Hall. But, above all, we rejoice to see England introducing into her Courts this great institution of lecturing which has found birth in this country. Hitherto, lectures in England were mostly confined to scientific or purely literary matters, not as with us extending to miscellaneous subjects. The lack of liberality in the Church of England, and the fastidious temper of her clergy, will not bring as many accomplished pulpit-men into the lyceum as with us, where so many and so much more liberal sects contribute to expand the parsonic mind and soften the parsonic stiffness; bnt, on the whole, an example set by such men as Mr. Gladstone and Lord John Russell will not be lost. And though, from the causes pointed out, English lectures cannot compete with American, as far as influences on great masses are concerned, yet they may to some extent dispel the "crass ignorance"—to use a famous phrase of Lord Brougham—which at present prevails among the masses of Great Britain.

EXHIBITION OF THE NATIONAL ACADEMY OF DESIGN.

(SECOND ARTICLE.)

Of the two hundred and eighty-six contributions to the walls of the exhibition-rooms, there are probably some forty noticeable works of arts, and some twenty really good pictures; commendable, some for color, some for drawing, and some few for both.

In a former paper, we drew the attention of our readers to some dozen pictures of various merit. In the present issue, we purpose merely to arrange the marginal and fly-leaf notes made on our catalogue during subsequent visits to the Academy.

"Forest Scenery: near Frankfort, Germany." (23) By J. Volmering, A., attracts more than passing attention, as well from the obtrusiveness of the trunks of the trees as from the character, or rather the want of character, of the foliage. The broken earth, tangled brushwood, and weeds in the foreground are effective. The trunks are admirable, and evidently have been the subject of much careful study and elaboration; but the foliage is decidedly done brown. The leaves have no life, neither have they that distinct, but not necessarily offensive arrangement which, to the eye of the great landscape artist, is visible throughout nature.

"From North Conway," (152) by James A. Suydam, "Glen of the Downs, Ireland," (13) by Eliza Greatorex, Casilear's "Sunset," (165), and "The Ford," (174) by A. D. Shattuck, are worthy of notice. Also a little landscape (though excessively green) by George Inness, A.

Of the pictures devoted to the "human form divine," we have many sacrilegious specimens. It is a matter of serious anxiety to us, to know if the sundry portraits of gentlemen and ladies usual at such exhibitions, are sent by the individuals presumed to be represented, or by the artists, who, for a consideration, have either outraged humanity on the one hand, or canvas on the other. The vanity which inspires a sitter to be hanged in the Academy may be commendable in a beauty, or excusable in a fop, but in general is extremely obnoxious to the visitor. We say, in general, for portraiture is a branch of the fine arts for which few painters have the necessary capacity. If the artist sent the picture—such a one, for instance, as No.——(but we will not name it, nor many other of the same sort) we can only pity his stupidity in believing it worth exhibition or marvel at his audacity in pushing his tawdry inanity into public view. We think he would be glad to have benefitted by Captain Cuttle's advice to Dombey anent the spoons—to put the money in his pocket and "said nothing to nobody" about the picture. Some of these are as blue as the specimen ultramarine panels at a paint-shop, others as red as a chain of boiled lobsters at a fishmongers; again we have them as yellow as the flag at the quarantine, very often as stiff and brown as a stone front in the Fifth avenue, and, not seldom, all these varieties in most inharmonious obstreperousness, are to be met on the one canvas.

When we speak thus of portraits—when we are electrified and shaken into such voluminous anger, and cannot retreat without letting it out, every one at a glance will know and understand that we do not underrate that noble branch of art from which Titian, Vandyke, Velasques, Kneller, Lawrence, and Reynolds have received their laurels—which others greater have wandered under, and which to-day shelters the labors of a few fine artists.

There are between eighty and ninety "portraits" in the present exhibition, the greater number of which may well be left unnoticed. Elliott's head of Col. McKenny sustains the artist's reputation. It exhibits the boldness, as well as delicacy of color, the free treatment of the hair, and manliness of feeling which are striking characteristics of Mr. Elliott's manner. We have seen fletter portraits from his easel, but must be satisfied that he does not fall below himself in his general effects, which is sufficient praise for Elliott.

Blondell's "Portrait of a Lady" (136) is a deservedly attractive picture. The portraits by the ablest painters who devoted themselves to this specialty are no less pictures than portraits, and for this reason are as acceptable to the galleries and cabinets of connoiseurs and men of taste, as to the walls of the family mansions for which they were originally painted. We think less of the person painted than the style of painting, and the excellence of the latter will overcome any antipathy to the original; as, for instance, Titian's "Cæsar Borgia," Vandyke's "Charles I." (who well deserved the block), and others. Mr. Blondell was fortunate in having such a sitter, and has been equally fortunate in the pictorial treatment. The chief power of the picture is the impression of elegance it leaves in the mind, which is the great need we generally look for in vain in female portraits. We will not be so ungallant as to say, that the fair sitters are not gifted with that subduing necessity; but we will say (and many portraits here will bear us out), that the artists are so wrapt up in striving after some striking effect—something unknown in nature, but thought inexpressively necersary in getting up what they call an "an exhibition picture"—that they utterly fail to convey it. Mr. Blondell has apparently subdued Art in looking after Nature. There is no obtrusive seeking for effect, and an exceedingly happy one is produced. To parade his resources in color has evidently been secondary to an exhibition of truth, and therefore we have a really admirable picture. The end overshadows the means. The tone of the accessories tend judiciously to aid the natural illumination of the face, which is made the chief point of attraction at the same time that the dress is capitally handled, and cannot fail to recommend the dexterity of the artist.

"A Head" (76), by E. D. E. Greene, A., is elaborately and exquisitely painted, though in the elaboration the effect is somewhat lost. We must think of the painter; still, the flesh is so delicately tinted, and the feeling of such purity, that the painting cannot ensily be forgotten.

Mr. Baker, whose female heads are so beautiful, so chaste in feeling, so clear, mellow, and natural in tone, is well represented. And in the crayon way, 253 and 254, by Samuel Laurance, are very beautiful. The former, a portrait of Henry W. Longfellow well conveys the calm, thoughtful expression and liquid abstraction of the eyes of the poet.

Paul Duggan's "Capt. Ericsson" (251), is less delicate in handling, but the artist is not to be judged by it.

Of the more ambitious works of the figure painters there are none which need much lengthened remark. Mr. Kaufman's "Luther nailing his colors to the mast—we beg pardon—his protestation to the church door" (6), and "Galileo" (179), exhibit some boldness and good coloring; but they are not historical pictures.

"Galileo" fails in toto to give us an idea of the moment indicated by the catalogue. The old man with the globe under his arm looks as if he were coming down the steps of a bowling saloon to roll for a wager.

"Martha Reproved," St. Luke, chap. xi. (142), by D. Huntingdon, N. A., is a well painted group. There is nothing new in it, either in expression of treatment. It has a mellowness consequent upon age.

"Last Scene in Lear" (7), by P. F. Rothermel, is too Kenny-Meadow-ish in the figure drawing, and too sketchy in color. Though completely theatrical as a whole, one or two clever pictures might be cut out of it. As it is, with the failings noted, there is too much of a sameness of expression in the heads.

Mr. Hicks' "Bayard Taylor enjoying a morning in Damascus" (67), is as hard and stiff as the knave of diamonds. We cannot, however, but admire the courage of the painter in exhibiting a native born citizen in foreign costume. Mr. Hicks' "Sketch in color" (3), somewhat overbalances the impression left by 67.

"The Card-Players" (60), by E. Johnson, conveys more observation of human nature than any picture in the Exhibition, as well as ability to put it on canvas. It is admirably drawn, as admirably painted, and the heads full of character. Mr. Ehninger's "Gambler and Death" (183) is, also, full of meaning and force; it is a bad specimen of the artist's usual manner, but we think one more consonant with a true feeling for Art. "The Fortune-Teller" (30), by Wm. M. Hunt, is full of talent, which would be better appreciated if it were not painted on a blanket, as it evidently is.

M. Edwin White's "Visit of Consolation," and Mr. Peele's "Wreath of Wild Flowers" are a happy contrast in the style as well as subject. Both are good.

Mrs. Lilly Spence's "Young Husband" and "Young Wife" (94), though badly drawn, are destined to be very popular. The expression of the latter is capital; and the still life in both very well and minutely painted.

"Sundown" (140) by George C. Lambdin, a young girl by a window, deeply interested in reading, evidently just at the "happy scene," and the sun threatening to leave the world to darkness and to her—is a delicious gem. We see it was "for sale." He is to be envied who possesses it, for of course it must be purchased before this.

On leaving the rooms we thought it but fair and reasonable to make one suggestion for future catalogues. Certainly over two-thirds of the works of art exhibited were picture frames; yet the names of the worthy artificers of the same were not to be found. This ought to be remedied. Either they should be mentioned, when their work form so great an attraction, or the latter should not not be admitted, for the same reason.

ANCIENT MANUSCRIPT.—A codex of Pliny the elder, containing about the seventh part of the "Natural History," has been discovered by Dr. Fredegar Mone, of the University of Heidelberg, in the Convent of St. Paul's Corinthia.

A letter has been received in Philadelphia city, stating that Charles Bocsha, the distinguished harpist, died in Australia, Jan. 7. He was travelling with Madame Anna Bishop.

A CHURCH SCENE ON GOOD-FRIDAY.

Up the dim aisles winding slow,
The crowds unto the altar go.
Men and women, earnest faces,
On and on with softened paces,
Like the climbing waves that sweep
Furrowed circles from the deep;
'Gainst the dark shore breaking low,
Round the Sacred Cross they go.
Who are they that hither come,
In thought unto the Saviour's tomb—
Where He sleeps unrisen yet—
Where the armed guards are set—
Where the light lies gray and chill,
Over Zion's saddened hill?
Guests from out life's festal halls!
Where the long illumined walls
Echo but the dance and song,
Where the masqued and shining throng
Drown amid their gayest measures
The sounding wheels of time with pleasures;
Come they thus, the young and fair!
Life's purple robes of state that wear;
Upon whose wealth of braided tresses
Light the jeweled cincture presses.
Does Genius bow its haughty head,
And shower its perfumes round the dead,
And Wealth with rustling garments kneel
Beside the Roman's lifted steel?
Not so, they drift from squalid streets,
Where every wandering sunbeam beats
Upon the houses grim and high,
Blackly shutting out the sky
Where pent in every narrow room,
E'en careless childhood will not bloom,
Save with a wan and sickly light,
Like the pale ears that in their blight
The reaper's hand flings carelesss down,
From out the autumn's golden crown;
Or like the plants that far between,
Show their shrunk leaves of dusky green,
Amid those dreary window rows,
'Neath smoky tiles and flapping clothes
Hung out like banners of distress,
Upon those halls of wretchedness.
Ah! ne'er hath mortal pencil wrought
From out the fairy realms of thought
Such wild fantastic groups as throng
That silent chapel-aisle along;
Faces brown, bizarre, and stained,
On which the storms of time have rained;
Faces furrowed, seamed and wrought,
With many an anxious hour of thought.
No carpet knights of life are they;
The signs of trial and of fray
Are on their faces—dinted scars
They won from out life's noteless wars.
The ceaseless fight that hath no name,
The hero deeds unknown to fame,
The noble life, the martyr death,
The wasted youth, the fevered breath—
Their barque of life hath not swept on
With gilded pennons in the sun;
But worn and tossed by every shock,
The meeting wave, the jagged rock;
The dashing spray that sweeps them back,
The storm-winds whistling o'er their track.
Waves of black and tangled hair,
O'er young foreheads marked with care—
Lines about the lips compressed
That speak of struggles in the breast;
And, in the deep, unquiet eye,
A light we fear—we know not why.
Heads as white as Alpine snows,
And by them girlhood's opening rose;
Pale girls that in their beauty are
But captives fettered to the car
Of life, that sweeps them, bound and slight,
Amid the thunders of its flight;
Groups of children, wild and tanned,
With matted hair and roughened hand,
Still pressing on, unknowing they,
Young pilgrims early on the way;
Faces dark and marked, that show
That Fate, not Time, has been their foe;
That, 'neath their locks of iron-gray,
Teem like some gusty autumn's day
Across whose noon the driving rack
Of stormy clouds is streaming black,
With here and there a crimson streak,
As forth some straggling rays may break
From out the red, obscured sun—
Cloud-shrouded ere his day is done!
And thus, as picturesque and slow,
Along the soundless aisles they go,
Across the musing mind they threw
A vivid vision, strange and new,
Of how life's last procession long
Into the shadowy vale shall throng,
While redly sinks their latest sun,
Their temples rent—their palace gone.
Forth issuing from its blazing gates
To meet their near and closing fates,
The sons of every age and clime—
The first and latest born of time.
They that possessed the green earth first—
Beside the gentle waters nurst;
The quivered hunters of the woods,
Brown children of the solitudes;
Assyrian, Roman, Greek, and Frank,
The shadowy cohorts, rank on rank,
Still filing on, the buried Past
Arisen up sublime at last,
With all its wrappings cast away—
Revealed unto the living day!

ENUL.

LIFE OF NAPOLEON III., EMPEROR OF THE FRENCH. By Edward Roth. Boston: P. Donahoe.

We will not review this work, for obvious reasons. We will not recount what Louis Napoleon has, or has not done. His recent acts and his antecedents are vividly before the mind, glittering, as both are, with a persistency almost marvellous, an ambition politically uncontrolable and personally unsleeping, and with blood that cannot be washed out Whether posterity will receive Victor Hugo's character of him or otherwise is a matter to test the humanity and common sense of that posterity. Mr. Roth's work is a careful compilation of the details of a remarkable career. Some will read it as if the life of a saint, others as that of a vagabond, and all with considerable interest. For both it will supply the place of a book of reference until a better one is produced. While the author disclaims any philosophical learning in this production, and advises his readers that it is with dry facts alone he deals, still, it is not difficult to perceive in what light Mr. Roth views his hero. It could not well be otherwise; nor could we reasonably expect it. Much nonsense is talked about the partiality or impartiality with which a writer should treat his subject. Now, every man has an opinion—whether of little or much value is an after consideration—and he must indeed be a cowardly knave, or a hyfalutin hypocrite, who, writing a book, does not put his opinions into it, and let them fight for their mission, be decently and gallantly killed, waked, and buried, or live against all antagonism.

The book is handsomely printed.

The Sportsman's Vade Mecum. By "Dinks," containing full instructions in all that relates to the Breeding, Rearing, Breaking, Kennelling, and Conditioning of Dogs, together with numerous valuable receipts for the treatment of the various diseases to which the canine race is subject. As also a few remarks on Guns—their loading and carriage. Designed expressly for the Young Sportsman. New Revised Edition. And Dogs: Their Management. Being a new plan of treating the animal, based upon a consideration of his Natural Temperament, &c. By Edward Mayhew, M.R.C.V.S. Edited by Frank Forrester, author of "Field Sports." Illustrated. Stringer & Townsend.

This very luminous, as well as voluminous title page, will at once relieve our pseudo-fashionable readers from the fear that the above is a new work on puppies, and saves us any particular notification of the matter encompassed by the very handsome binding of the volume. We may as well, however, state that the original "Dinks," having been forced by the publishers so, as he says himself, by adding "a work on Dogs in General, to thicken his original and well-known work on dogs, has done from the hands of a most experienced veterinarian, whose opportunities are far more extensive than his own (the modest "Dinks") for the study of Canine Pathology." Frank Forrester adds his testimony to the usefulness of the book, and considers it unequalled by any on sportsmanship. Strong praise from a good authority on such matters. The illustrations are very good.

"The Teacher," by Jacob Abbott, is the title of a useful and exceedingly interesting work, which is devised with the laudable purpose of detailing, in a practical manner, the experience of practised teachers, for the benefit of those entering upon that arduous profession. The work is needed. The author does not ambition to bring forward any new theories or plans, but simply to make it useful, by bringing within a comprehensive routine, an embodiment of what has been approved of by the most experienced teachers. The book is enlivened and rendered of more than usual interest, for one of its class, by the judicious use of anecdotes, in illustration of certain points under consideration. The illustrations are also admirable. Harpers.

Key to Johnson's Philosophical Charts is a useful treatise which suggested itself to the author by its very necessity, and the great disadvantage he labored under as a teacher, in not having such an assistant as he now offers to others. Ranney.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

The Spanish Conquest in America, and its relation to the History of Slavery and to the Government of Colonies. By Arthur Helps. 2 vols.	Harper & Brothers.
The Tragedies of Æschuyius. Literally Translated with Notes, by Theo. Alois Buckley, B. A. Appendix containing th New Reading of Hermann's Posthumous Edition, translated and considered by George Burges, A. M.	Harper & Brothers.
The Sportsman's Vade Mecum. By "Dinks." New Revised Edition; and Dogs: their Management, &c. By Edward Mayhew, M. R. C. V. S.	Stringer & Townsend.
Eutaw: A Sequel to the Forayers. A Tale of the Revolution. By W. Gilmore Simms.	Redfield.
Legion; or, Feigned Excuses. By the author of "A Letter to a Member of a Church Choir."	Dana & Co.
Knickerbocker. For May.	S. Hueston.
Legislative Documents.	From Hon. D. E. Sickles.

The Rome correspondent of the Herald gives us some items of Art and American Artists, which we condense. All the American artists have orders from "home." Mr. Bartholomew has received orders for seven copies of his bust of Mr. Fillmore, from different cities—New York, Buffalo, Baltimore, Washington, &c.

Mr. Chapman, landscape painter, has orders that will occupy him till June, 1357; Mr. Page, historical painter, and the American Titian, (for he seems to understand coloring better than any living artist, and the productions of his brush have actually, on one occasion, been seized by the Roman Custom House, the officers of which took them for old originals of the great masters,) is occupied for years ahead. His Venus rising from the ocean before sunrise (mezzotint) is probably the best modern picture of the kind in the world. Mr. Mozier's very handsome marble figure, representing Silence, has been ordered by Mr. Lawler, of Cincinnati, now in Rome, for the Chamber of Commerce in that city; and Beatrice Cenci, by the young master hand of Miss Hosmer, goes to St. Louis. Mr. Freeman is a dashing artist, who understands how to breathe ideas on canvas, sketching thoughts with a masterly hand, suggestive to the beholder, without fatiguing him with too great an elaboration of details. Miss Clark, of Boston, is quite a circle of attraction herself, her landscapes showing a sympathetic study of Claude, Salvator Rosa, Orrizante, and Zucarelli. Mr. Crawford's monument of Washington, for Richmond, Virginia, is cast in bronze, in Munich, and will, no doubt, immortalize its author; but I believe, nevertheless, that the heroic predominates too much in the whole conception, and that there is not enough of repose in the statue of Washington to represent faithfully the character of the Father of his Country. I am, however, but a layman in the arts, and venture on any sort of criticism only with extreme diffidence.

It is stated, that in digging foundations for the new Cathedral at Marseilles, the workmen came on the ruins of a temple of Diana.

Literary and Artistic News.

War Historians.—Books relating to the war are finding publishers at St. Petersburg. A work now making some sensation in the capital is entitled "An Historical Review of the Crimean Campaign," and is from the pen of M. Anitchkof, Captain of the Staff attached to the Chancellery of the Ministry of War. The first volume is embellished with three splendid plans of the battles of the Alma, of Balaklava, and Inkermann. Documents in the hands of the Government, and recitals of eye-witnesses, form the chief portion of the book. The second volume enters into a narrative of the defence of Sebastopol. At Tiflis a sketch of the Russian campaign in Asia, and of the siege of Kars, has appeared.

We learn from the Evening Post that Edwin White is putting the finishing touches to a historical painting of great merit, which he styles "The Signing of the Compact on Board the Mayflower." The painting is a large one, comprising eight or ten figures of some of the most distinguished characters that graced the annals of our early colonial history—Carver, Winslow, Bradford, Brewster, Miles Standish, &c. &c. The Post thinks that Mr. White has been eminently happy in the choice, no less than in the treatment of his subject.

The Museum of Natural History in Paris has just received fifty-four cases of geological specimens, dug up from the ruins of Athens. Among these is a complete collection of the fossil remains of almost all the animals that existed in ancient Greece, some of which are said to be remarkably like those found at the present day in Africa.

The four colossal allegorical statues intended for the middle roof of the new Museum at Berlin, and representing Art, Peace, Fortune, and Prussia, have just been cast in zinc at different Berlin foundries. They will be covered with a sandstone-colored paint, and then be erected at once. The relievo for the frontispiece, modelled by Professor Kiss, will soon be finished.

An attempt to dramatize the "Paradise Lost" of Milton has been made at the Ambigu Comique, but continuing the History of the Creation until the Deluge. As a drama, of course (says Galignani) the thing is absurd, but the variety and beauty of the scenery and getting-up will probably secure it a certain run.

E. A. Brackett, the sculptor, is engaged upon a colossal marble statue of the Rev. Hosea Ballou, to be erected over the remains of the well-known religious author and theologian, which now repose in Mount Auburn. This classic token of regard is reared by the Universalist denomination at large.

Mrs. Julia Dean Hayne is about to visit California, Australia, and England, and takes with her Mr. Charles Pope, of New Orleans, as her professional attaché. They will leave New York about the 25th of May.

A booksller of Southampton, England, was lately fined five shillings for selling a newspaper on the Sabbath. The magistrate, in pronouncing sentence remarked, that by the terms of the English law (Stat. Charles II. and William III.,) nothing could be sold on the Sabbath but milk and mackerels.

Three thousand five hundred dollars have been offered for one share of the New York Tribune. This would make the one hundred shares, into which that establishment was divided a few years ago, worth 350,000 dollars. The par value of each share is $1,000.

There were printed, in Belgium, during the past year, one thousand and three different works in the French language, two hundred and twenty-four in Flemish, twenty-two in Latin, nine in German, and only two in English.

A new feuilleton in the "Presse," by M. Eugene Sue, called "La Femme de Lettres," of which only three numbers have appeared, has been suppressed by authority, the work being considered of a Socialist tendency.

OUT WEST CORRESPONDENCE.

St. Louis, April 20th, 1856.

An "out western" correspondent being geographically liable for Indian news, it is as well to commence by recording the ratification of a treaty between the President and certain hitherto contumacious tribes, whose names alone will be a "sweet morsel" to the admirers of Hiawatha. The meeting or council was held at Fort Pierre, and lasted from the 1st to the 5th of March, with Gen. Harney on the one side and bands of the Yauktounais, Ough-pa-pas, Blackfeet, Sioux, Minnecoujous, Saus-arcs, Two-Kettle, Yauctow, and Brules, on the other. Gen. Harney delivered to "Little Thunder," as a seal, the prisoners held in Forts Pierre, Kearney, and Laramie; and so, the hatchet is buried definitely —for the present. Two tribes were absent—the O-Gal-lal-las and the Wah-re-kouters under "Big-head," but their adoption of the proposed terms is beyond a doubt, as Harney in his late vigorous and severe campaign has taught them a lesson not likely to be forgotten. One of the most just measures adopted is, that the traders will henceforth be under the the control of the posts, and will have to reside in them—thus preventing, in a great measure, the impositions practiced on the Indian, and the "outrages" made by him in reprisal or retaliation.

On the principle of contrast, here is an extract from an estimate of the trade of this city, recently compiled, showing how rapidly the merchant is pushing his calling into the domain of "the hunter." Within a generation, this was little more than an Indian trading port, while in 1856, there were Eighty-seven millions, thirty-three thousand six hundred and ninety-seven dollars worth of goods sold in the city of St. Louis, while the trade of the present year will be at least fifty per cent larger, and still the tide of emigration continues towards the setting sun, and city, town, village, settlement and clearing alternate in unceasing progression towards the shores of the Pacific.

We had on yesterday a deputation from the military companies of Chicago, relative to our Militia being represented at the grand Military Encampment at that city, on the 4th of July where I doubt not your City Guard will find it difficult to carry off the prize, for appearance or discipline, from some of our Western companies.

The recent and conclusive majority of the Democrats here in election of city officers, which was in reality a contest between what is called the native and foreign elements, shows that the test of accidental nationality is fast approaching its senility—an event which every true republican and lover of liberty hails with gladness, and which originating as it did in petty political motives, must eventually be overcome and obliterated by the broad, comprehensive, healthy human feeling of fraternity, founded on individual worth.

As to Kansas, it will be satisfactory to your readers to know that "wars and rumors of wars" are at present confined to Mas, sachusetts committees and "special correspondents" of the Tribune &c., &c. On yesterday, at Barnum's Hotel, a six-footer South Georgian, "half hoss half alligator," en route for Kansas, introduced himself unceremoniously by inquiring my opinions on the Kansas question, which having been given, I inquired if he was going up? Well, he was! Had he a Sharpe's rifle? "No, he hadn't, 'cause he didn't want to shoot any one if he could help it; but he had a revolver, and if any rantankerous Yankee wanted to shoot, why he'd bet his plantation he'd take down the smallest kind of an Abolitionist every clip, at a hundred yards, with that revolver." Although not seeming to endorse the Rev. Mr. Beecher's opinion of Sharpe's rifles, he to all appearance agreed with his reverence as to admixing the Mississippi water, before drinking, with "Schiedam Schnapps," or "Otard" as a substitute. The up river boats are coming to our levee loaded to the guards, while the northern and western ones go slowly on their way, alive with human beings, and groaning under freight from hold to hurricane-deck. Our weather is at present beautiful. All kinds of business at high pressure, and Hope, in the shape of a sun-browned farmer—plough in hand—smiling on the future and promising an overflowing abundance. "Cosmopolite."

MILITARY CORRESPONDENCE.

FUNERAL OF CAPT. MC ARDLE.

About half-past 12 o'clock, on Wednesday, 24th ult., the funeral procession of Capt. McArdle moved down Broadway, every available point of sight near the church and along the route being crowded with spectators. The following companies were in the line: The New-York Light Guard, Captain Vincent; the National Greys, Captain Raynor; four companies of the Garde Lafayette, Captain Leclerc; the Independence Guard, Captain Boyle; the Tompkins Blues, the Brooklyn Light Guard, and the Brooklyn City Guard. The pall bearers were Major Fritz, of Philadelphia; Captain Henshaw, of the New England Guard, of Boston; Gen. Hagadorn, of Staten Island; Dr. Quackenboss, of Gen. Hall's staff; Captain Raynor, of the National Greys; and Capt. Vincent, of the Light Guard.

Capt. Ferris was Marshal of the day. The procession moved slowly down Broadway to the Hamilton avenue ferry, and thence to Greenwood Cemetery, where the deceased was interred in his family lot; the City Guard firing three volleys over his grave. A number of military officers from other cities attended his funeral, the pomp of which was greater than the city has for some time witnessed.

SIXTY-NINTH REGIMENT, N. Y. S. M.

An election was held in Company G (Mechanic Guard), of this regiment, at the City Armory, 20th ult., at which John B. Madden, Esq., was elected Captain, vice Greene, resigned; Second Lieutenant Malone was promoted to the First Lieutenancy, vice Martin, resigned; and Sergeant Coonan was promoted to the Second Lieutenancy, vice Malone, elected First Lieutenant.

THE LEFT WING OF THE SEVENTH REGIMENT,

Had a battalion drill on Thursday evening the 24th of April, at the City Arsenal, which, as the last for this year, attracted a large crowd of amateurs, especially that portion of them consisting of the fair sex, who attended on the occasion in numbers, undeterred by the rain. They were provided with seats—the ladies were—by the courteous and gentlemanly janitor, Mr. Mawby, on the side platforms. The first feature of the drill that impressed itself on the spectator, was the good order that was observed during its continuance. There was no talking in the ranks. And the mass of outsiders and lookers on were careful not to interrupt the silence there observed, except when some well-executed maneuvre elicited their applause.

The left wing consists of four Companies, viz.: the 3d company, Capt. Price; 5th, Capt. Speaight; 6th, Capt. Nevers; 7th, Capt. Monroe. The chief part of their exercise was the manual of arms. The various movements were executed as by one man. The firings were also excellent, more particularly the file firings, which were regular as the ticks of a clock, and which were continued five minutes without cessation. In marching, we noticed that in changing from common to quick time, and the reverse, the movement was executed with remarkable accuracy. Of the drill as a whole we have only to say, that it was worthy of the reputation of the regiment.

Col. Duryea is admitted to be a clever officer, but we do not think we do him injustice in attributing much of the efficiency of his command to the industry of his company officers, and the attention and zealousness of his men. Here was a practical illustration of our remarks in our last issue, touching the indispensable necessity of good line officers, if a command is to establish an enviable character. When we say good line officers, we mean officers that understand their business and do it. This is a mere matter of will, which can be easily accomplished by those who desire to do so. This command offers an example to Irish-American troops, worthy of imitation. They may attain the same excellence by perseverance. Indeed, the 5th company of this regiment is mainly Irish in its composition.

N. Y. Catholic Library Association.

At the Annual Meeting of the above association held on the 21st inst., the following persons were elected officers for the ensuing year, viz.:—

President, Mr. J. Cozans; Vice President, J. McQuire; Treasurer, John Russell; Corresponding Secretary, D. Quinn; Recording Secretary, J. Fabb—Librarian, J. S. Haughey.

Directors:

R. T. Kelly, J. J. Mullen,
M. B. Lynch, L. F. Cozans.
P. J. McQuire.

City News.

DR. CARNOCHAN—WARD'S ISLAND.—The editor of the Washington Sentinel writes the following account of a visit to Ward's Island, in company with the justly eminent surgeon connected with the Emigrant Hospital:

"We followed our friend, the Doctor, through all the wards, not, however, without some misgivings of our nerves at the sight of so much and such horrid human suffering. Hundreds of poor creatures stretched upon their sick beds, and yet all so cleanly and well cared for! It was a gratifying vindication of New York, in this respect, from the poet's aspersion, that 'man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn.'

"But now came the trying time for us. We were invited into the operating theatre to witness an amputation of the thigh. Also, an operation for malignant cancer of the lower jaw. We rather shrunk from this double proposition, but what could we do? A large number of students and physicians were in attendance to witness the operations, and we were not willing to be the only chicken-heart in the party. After being in the room some minutes, and with a most eligible position awarded us by the kindness of the young gentlemen, the first patient was brought in, moaning most piteously. This was a case of diseased knee-joint, occasioned by a railroad accident, and when amputation was deemed necessary. Upon the entrance of Dr. Carnochan, the students in attendance gave him a round of applause, which reminded us of our college days. His fine appearance, his soft and quiet manners, united to the high appreciation of his professional skill, seemed to have endeared him to all within and without his profession. Not even the shaft of rivalry seems to have been directed at him, for all his brethren whom we have seen, with one accord, and unreluctantly, gave him the high compliment of the first Surgeon in the State of New York. The clinical lecture he delivered upon the case, though brief, was clear and pertinent, and clothed in graceful and happy language. Chloroform being administered, (that most blessed of all discoveries,) and the exposition of all the terrible-looking paraphernalia, comprising knives, saws, &c., gave notice the work was about to begin. All things being ready, the Doctor took his position, holding his long, keen knife in his hand, while opposite stood his associate with a beautiful little saw, the handle turned towards the distinguished operator. The incision with the knife was so dexterously and quickly made, that we scarcely saw it before it had finished its work, and the little saw had commenced and ended the operation in, to us, and all who witnessed it, a most incredible short time.

Next came the cancer patient; and here let us say, we saw a hero! He was willing to stand the operation, which lasted over an hour, without chloroform. Indeed, we were afterwards told by the Doctor, that it was, in this case, important to have the will and aid of the patient, in consequence of the delicate regions of the jugular and carotid arteries, around which the knife had to seek the affected parts. We are not of the faculty, and therefore are not competent to describe this seemingly difficult and dangerous operation. Suffice it to say, it embraced the taking out of the whole of one side of the lower jaw, and the removal from the throat, as far down as the windpipe, of the diseased portions. Through the whole, severe as the labor was, the Doctor maintained not only his quiet self-possession, but the most excellent good temper and patience, for which we hear he is so distinguished. This brought us to sunset, and after making his patients as comfortable as possible, and certainly greatly improving the personal pulchritude of the cancer man, we turned our face homewards. We were gratified most highly at what we had seen, and thinking that though the duties of a surgeon were not the most pleasant in the world, yet he must find much comfort and satisfaction in the reflection, that it is often in his power to relieve the suffering, and bid the wretched live.

Dr. Carnochan is confessedly at the head of the profession in that city—has a large and lucrative practice in the branch to which he devotes himself chiefly—and, withal, is a most agreeable and cultivated gentleman."

Hon. James Buchanan arrived in the Arago'on the 23d inst., which was the anniversary of the birthday of the distinguished gentleman. This fact, combined with the enthusiasm of his reception, is looked upon by his political friends as auspicious. The city had resolved to invite the ex-minister to be its guest, and immediately on the arrival of the steamer, Alderman Ely, as spokesman (in the absence of his Honor the Mayor,) of the Committee of the Boards of Aldermen and Councilmen, welcomed Mr. Buchanan in a brief speech. He alluded to the universal joy which was felt at his safe return from a residence abroad, during which he had rendered so great services to his country, and by his eminently wise and judicious course, preserved the blessings of peace to two great nations. The American people honored him for these services as it did also for his private virtues. Mr. Buchanan replied in a very few words. He accepted with pleasure the hospitalities of the city, the metropolis of the Western Continent. He was glad, as he sailed up the beautiful bay, once more to return to this land of liberty, after his sojourn of several years among strangers. If he had done anything for the peace or the tranquillity of the nation, it had only been in the range of his duties both as a private citizen and a public officer. Now, however, he returned merely in his private capacity, and, as the city had so kindly invited him, he was at the disposal of the committee. Alderman Ely escorted Mr. Buchanan to an open barouche, in which they both took seats. The carriage was then driven off the docks through a dense crowd, and then to the Everett House, at the corner of Fourth avenue and Seventeenth street, where a fine suite of rooms fronting on Union square, were allotted to Mr. Buchanan. The other members of the committee, together with several other well-known persons, followed in carriages. Several gentlemen of the committee remained with Mr. Buchanan during the day. Mr. Buchanan left the city on the morning of the 18th.

The body of young Pierce, who so mysteriously disappeared on the 1st of February last, was found on Tuesday, 22d ult., and identified by his father, on the ocean beach at Rockaway. Valuables found upon his person—which were brought to the city last night, and recognized by many who knew the missing man—and the lack of any marks of violence upon the body, show quite conclusively that the theory of his robbery and murder was not correct. But how the death happened, or where, is as much a mystery as before.

The Post-office Department has concluded to allow $18,000 to the Panama Company for back pay, being the difference between eighteen cents a pound paid by Mr. Campbell, and twenty-two cents under the former contract, for transporting the mails across the Isthmus.

Manuscript Historical Documents Wanted.

Mr. Clayton, in the Senate, has recently called attention to the important collection of manuscript documents relating to our country's history, now in the State Paper office in London. A letter from Mr. H. G. Somerby states that there are upwards of two thousand folio volumes of manuscripts in the archives of the British government, containing original yet almost unavailable materials in the history of the founding and progress of the original states of the Union, illustrating almost every possible interest, public and private, during our dependency on the mother country; that they show the origin, character, and position of the individual colonists; the physical, moral, and religious history of the founders of the nation, the men who determined its character, and whose history is that of the nation; the periods and amount of emigration; the products of the country; the course and changes of trade; the amount and increase of navigation from time to time; the revenue laws and their operation; that they throw light on the history of the aborigines, and the mutual relations of the Indians and colonists; that they contain copies, and in many instances the original records, of the legislative assemblies of the colonies, occasionally supplying a hiatus in our own records—the private and official correspondence of the Royal Governors and subordinate officers of the crown; the reports and res gestæ of cases appealed from the Colonies to the higher judicial tribunal at home; these often involved the titles and boundaries of large tracts of territory—occasionally of towns, counties, or even of colonies; original charts and surveys; that, though these documents pertain to the British government, they historically belong especially to our own country and government; and historical justice and good faith to ourselves manifestly require that copies of them should be preserved at the seat of the National Government, where the statistician, the historian, and the general student may consult them at the smallest possible expense of time and money; that, of a large proportion of these papers there are no duplicates, and the originals are constantly exposed to loss and destruction by accident and decay; and this is suggested as a sufficient reason for the prompt and efficient action of the Government.

UNITED STATES SENATE.—On the 4th of March, 1857, the senatorial terms of the following gentlemen will expire: John B. Weller, of California; Isaac Toucey, of Connecticut; H. Hamblin, of Maine; J. D. Bright, of Indiana; Charles Sumner, of Massachusetts; Lewis Cass, of Michigan; John R. Thompson, of New Jersey; Hamilton Fish, of New York; Richard Brodhead, of Pennsylvania; Charles T. James, of Rhode Island; Solomon Foote, of Vermont; Henry Dodge, of Wisconsin. Of these only four voted against the repeal of the Missouri Proviso.

SURVEYS ON LAKE SUPERIOR.—Instructions have been issued by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, for the survey of the lands ceded to the United States by the Chippewa Indians, under the treaty of the 30th September, 1854, situated north of the St. Louis river, and along the north shore of Lake Superior. The work is to be commenced early next month.

MARRIAGES.

At St. Ann's Church, Dublin, Charles Armstrong, J. P., of Mount Heaton, King's county, to Georgina Maria, eldest daughter of Richard John Stacpoole, J. P., D. L., of Edenvale, county Clare.

At St. Thomas's Church, Manchester, Alexander Davidson, of Quebec, Canada, to Kate Gordon, daughter of Captain Cleather, late of the Royal Staff Corps.

William E. Burns, of Kilkee, to Miss Sarah Carman, sister-in-law of Mr. M'Clure, of Clare street, Limerick.

John Ffolliot, Major of the Sligo Rifles, son of John Ffolliot, of Hollybrook, county Sligo, to Grace, eldest daughter of the late Lieutenant Colonel Philips, of Rhual, Flintshire.

At Tralee church, Richard Magrath Fitzgerald, to Letitia, daughter of the late John Hurley.

Richard Griffith, of the 2nd Madras Native Infantry, to Fannie Kathleen, daughter of John H. Linde, of Eyrefield Lodge, county Kildare.

At St. Mary's Church, Stoke Newington, Charles Friend, son of John Hardy, of Highbury Crescent, to Harriet Elizabeth, daughter of the late Thomas Charlesworth.

At Melbourne, Australia, David Horne, of Melbourne, to Kate Susan, only daughter of Thomas Finnamore, of Allenvale, Victoria, late of Derrymore, King's county.

At St. Mary's Church, Clonmel, Frederick William Hoysted, of Kilboggan House, county Kildare, to Louisa Anne, widow of John B. Keane, and daughter of the late Boyle Minchin, of Wilton.

At Paris, Richard Kerr, Attache to Her Majesty's Embassy at Madrid, to Rose Jane, eldest daughter of Nicholson Calvert, of Quintin Castle, county Down.

At St. Mary's Church, Poona, Malcolm Monro Mackenzie, Civil Surgeon, Dhoolia, to Adela Jane, daughter of Charles Whyte, Deputy Inspector of H. M's. Hospitals, Bombay.

At Bagnalstown, Patrick R. Norton, of Lower Dominick street, Dublin, to Clare Mary, only daughter of John Casey, of Clareville, county Carlow.

At Londonderry, Constable J. O'Flynn, of the Grouse Hall Constabulary, to Jane, daughter of the late James O'Doherty, Strand, Londonderry.

Edward Latham Ormerod, M. D., of Brighton, to Maria, daughter of Frederic Millett, of Woodhill, Surrey.

At Greenwich, Garrat Wellesley, son of the late Garrat Parkinson, M. D., of Cahircalla, county Clare, to Harriet Jane, daughter of Lieutenant Colonel Lindsay, late commanding 1st Argyleshire Regiment.

At St. Andrew's, Holborn, Alonzo Augustus Wildbore, of 78 Old street, St. Luke's, Louisa Barbara, third daughter of the late William Loudon.

Stephen M. Yeates, of Dublin, to Mary Anne, daughter of the late William Parks, also of Dublin.

DEATHS.

At Woodville, Upper Leeson street, Dublin, in the 64th year of her age, Mary, relict of Thomas Beale, M. D., of Cahir, county Tipperary.

At Springfield, James Cooney, late of Dallynagee, aged 80 years.

At the house of his father-in-law, J. S. Saunders, 15 Richmond terrace, Clapham road, aged 32 years, Edwin Cooper, B. A., Trinity College, Dublin, one of the Masters in the Classical Department of Cheltenham College.

In Hardwicke street, Liverpool, Charlotte Rothe, wife of William Craig, and daughter of Thomas Christian, of Dublin, solicitor.

At his residence in Main street, Bandon, James Dawson, aged 67 years.

At Elsinore, Benford, son of James Deacon.

At Putney, Sir Rupert Dennis George, Bart., C. B., born 9th October, 1796, late Secretary of the Province of Nova Scotia.

At Elizabeth terrace, Paddington, Elizabeth Best, daughter of the late William Griffith, barrister-at-law, proprietor of Windsor and Frenches Estates, Barbadoes.

At Kilcoltrim House, county Carlow, the residence of Edmund Hagerty, J. P., Miss Mary Hagarty.

At Andres En Calais, William Hanna, late Quarter-master of the 4th Foot.

At the Mall, Kinsale, Anne Harris, relict of Capt. Harris, R. N.

Mr. Robert Heffernan, 59 Great Britain street.

At Bryansford, William S. Hill, J. P., formerly of Streamstown, county Westmeath.

At Hermitage, near Ennis, Elizabeth Matilda, daughter of Francis N. Keane, J. P.

At High street, Waterford, Mrs. Elizabeth Kenny.

At 4 Marlborough Cottages, Old Kent road, Thomas Leach, formerly of the Tax Office, Somerset House.

At Newgrove avenue, Sandymount, the wife of Michael Logan, C. E.

At Abbotsford place, York street, Belfast, William Maclurcan.

At Woolwich, Anne, relict of Wm. MacNaughton, in the 78th year of her age.

Charlotte, wife of John Marshall, Tullymurry House, Donaghmore.

At Dublin street, Monaghan, Mr. George Murdock, merchant.

At Castlebar, Mrs. Kate O'Dowd, wife of Roger O'Dowd, in the 75th year of her age.

At Dundalk, the residence of his son, the Rev. Somerset I. C. Townsend, D. D., Thomas Townsend, LL. D., father of the late Bishop of Meath. This gentleman was one of the few now remaining members of the Irish Parliament, and was a decided anti-unionist.

Mary Martha, daughter of Richard Trotter, of Tandragee.

In camp before Sebastopol, Orimea, of aneurism of the heart, Henry Whichcote Turner, Captain 1st Royal Regiment, aged 26 year.

At Cork, Captain Edward Verling, aged 93 years.

At Melbourne, on the 4th December last, Patrick Wallis, formerly of William street, Limerick, aged 52 years, brother-in-law to the respected parish priest of Glin, Rev. Mr. Bunton.

At Carrigeen, Boulavogue, Miss Anastasia Walsh.

At Abbeyleix, the Hon. Mrs. Wm. Wingfield.

Special Notices.

A CIRCULAR.

TO those engaged in Mercantile pursuits, any invention that will facilitate their labors is highly worthy of notice as well as extensive patronage. One of the most important inventions of the present age is that of a pen which possesses the necessary qualities of fineness in mark and durability in use. Those of John Foley, manufacturer Gold Pens and Pencils, 167 Broadway, New-York, stand pre-eminent. Their superior value is tested by the long time he has been engaged in our city in their manufacture.

We, the subscribers who know the value of these pens, from long use of them, cheerfully recommend them to those who wish for the most convenient article in the counting room. Signed by the following and many other parties:

Geo. S. Coe, Vice-President American Exchange Bank.
B. Murray, Assistant Cashier do. do. do.
J. Seymour, Cashier Bank of North America.
F. A. Platt, Cashier Corn Exchange Bank.
B. T. Hoogland, Cashier National Bank.
W. T. Hooker, President Continental Bank.
James McCall, President Metropolitan Bank.
H. Meigs, Jr., Cashier do do.
J. C. Beach, Cashier Marine Bank.
G. R. Conover, Cashier Importers' and Traders' Bank.
R. H. Lowery, Cashier Bank of the Republic.
W. B. Meeker, Assistant Cashier Bank of New-York.
T. D. Meiggs, Teller Bank of America.
Charles Windsor, Teller Mereantile Bank.
D. Randall, do. do. do.
J. M. Crane, Teller Shoe and Leather Bank.
J. E. Southwick, President Atlantic Bank.
George D. Arthur, Cashier do. do.
P. S. Henderson, Cashier Brooklyn Bank.
Constant W. Brown, Merchants' Bank.
Joseph W. Corlies, President St. Nicholas Bank.
George Ellis, Cashier Bank of the Commonwealth.
R. A. Tooker, Cashier Nassau Bank.
Samuel B. White, Cashier Grocers' Bank.
Edwin Ludlow, Cashier Ohio Life Insurance and Trust Co.
H. W. Cheeseman, Teller Market Bank.
Samuel H. Kissam, Teller Bank of Commerce.
William F. Brown, do. do. do.
S. K. Raymond, Teller Mechanics' Bank.
George D. Lyman, Manager New-York Clearing House.
Charles Dennis, Vice-President Atlantic Mutual Insurance Co.
A. B. Neilson, President Sun Mutual Insurance Co.
Elwood Walter, President Mercantile Mutual Insurance Co.
E. Russell Hinckley, President Atlas Mutual Insurance Co.
Daniel Drake Smith, President Commercial Mutual Insurance Co.
John P. Paulison, Vice-President Astor Mutual Insurance Co.
J. F. Cox, Vice-President Great Western Insurance Co.
William Le Coney, Vice-President Pacific Mutual Insurance Co.
William K. Ackerman, Secretary Illinois Central Railroad Co.
Wm. Bement, Treasurer New-York and New-Haven Railroad Co.
E. B. Litchfield, Treasurer Cleveland and Toledo Railroad Co.
R. B. Turner, Register do. do. do.
J. M. Hopkins, Sec'y. Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana R. R. Co.
G. H. Ford, Dep. Treas. do. do. do.
J. F. Davenport, Treasurer Hudson River Railroad Co.
Edward Thompson, Agent Long Island Railroad Co.
James Rowe, Cashier New-York Herald.
A. Gordon, Bookkeeper New-York Herald.
Henry L. Meech, Cashier Daily Times.
Richard B. Connelly, County Clerk.
T. M. Wigham, of Jacob Little & Co.
J. H. Stebbins, of N. R. Cobb & Co.
Jesse Payne, of Wells, Fargo & Co.

Winslow, Lanter & Co.	E. W. Tiers & Co.
R. W. Clarke, Dodge & Co.	Brown & De Rosset.
Carpenter & Vermilye.	Coolidge & Young.
Meigs and Greenleaf.	Shepard & Nelson.
H. T. Morgan & Co.	Spies, Christ & Jay.
Condit, Jenkins & Co.	H. M. Schieffelin & Fowler.
Quick L'Hommedieu.	Fairchild & Fanshawe.
Atwood & Co.	Beale, Melick & De Witt.
G. S. Robbins & Co.	Carhart, Bacon, Clark & Co.
T. Ketcham & Co.	Brewer & Caldwell.
Drake & Bradford.	American Express Co.
E. S. Munro & Co.	Hall, Dana & Co.
Wetmore & Robert.	Gage, Sloans & Dater.
Stevens, Wallace & Morris.	Afwater, Knapp & Woodruff.
Wells, Butterfield & Co.	Richards & McHarg.
S. B. Chittenden & Co.	Johnson & Higgins.
W. Carpenter, Ide & Co.	James & Henry McBride.
C. E. & W. J. Babcock.	Moody and Telfair.
Sheldon, Hoyt & Co.	L. Roberts & Co.
Bird & Neilson.	Waldo, Barey & Co.
Barclay & Livingston.	Jewell, Harrison & Co.

These Pens vary in size and price, viz., $1, $1 25, $2, $3 and $4 each, with complete silver extension cases, new style pencil, &c., attached are $2, $2 50, $3, $3 50, and $4 each. The undersigned is manufacturer of the celebrated "John Foley's bank pen," price $3 and $4 for the large size, including holder. All pens of my manufacture are made of fine gold, finished in the best manner; points warranted not to come off, and guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction; if not, will exchange them or return the money. Any of the above pens will be sent by mail on receipt of the price. Pens and cases made to order for trade, on the most advantageous terms.

JOHN FOLEY, Gold Pen Manufacturer,
1mo 167 Broadway, New-York.

TRIUMPH OF ART.

LOUIS KELLER has the honor to announce to the public that his Second Series of

Grand Tableau Soirees

will commence in this city on MONDAY EVENING, April 28th, at EMPIRE HALL, 596 Broadway, two doors above the Metropolitan Hotel, which has been fitted up and beautifully embellished and decorated by him expressly for the purpose. M. Keller also intimates to the intellectual, the refined, and tasteful, as well as the fastidious in matters which refer exclusively to the appropriateness and careful direction of the PLACE where his peculiar and distinctive performances are given, that he has yielded to general and friendly suggestions in his present arrangements, and believes that in all respects the wishes of the community will be met, and that the same approval with which his tableaux have been received by THE COURTS OF EUROPE, and the enlightened of nearly all the world, will be accorded to the enterprise which he now embarks in here.

☞ Full particulars will be duly announced. ap261t

THE EYE AND EAR!

DR. BIRGE, invites the attention of the afflicted to his practice in treating the Eye and Ear. He has cured more than five hundred persons who were pronounced incurable by other Occulists. He has also restored to sight seventeen persons born blind, and he pledges himself to cure every case that may be presented. That no one need be imposed upon, he warrants a cure in every case.

AMAUROSIS.—This obstinate disease he treats with astonishing success.

CATARACT.—This delicate and important operation, I warrant sight in every case.

ARTIFICIAL EYES inserted perfectly to imitate the Natural Eye.

DEAFNESS.—My treatment for this difficulty I offer as the most successful that has ever been in practice. I have restored to their hearing a large number who had been perfectly deaf more than twenty years.

Letters of inquiry for advice will be promptly attended to. Office 430 Broadway, New-York City. ap263m

IMPROVED ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

DR. J. ALLEN, (late Professor in the Ohio College of Dental Surgery,) invites attention to his improved method of constructing Artificial Dentistry, which combine the following advantages:

1st,—There are no seams or crevices for the lodgement of food, to vitiate the saliva, or infect the breath. The interstices are all filled with a silicious compound, which is so applied as to form an artificial gum; this is fused at a high heat, which unites the Teeth firmly to each other, and to the plate upon which tney are set, thus imparting great strength and lifelike appearance to the denture.

2d,—The Teeth for this style of work are made perfectly natural in form and shade, and when properly set with the artificial gum as above, exhibits that harmony with the other features which characterize the natural organs.

3d,—The original form and expression of the mouth and face can be restored. This is done by having the denture so constructed as to bring out the sunken portions and sustain them in their proper position; this is an important feature in this style of work, to which the author devotes special attention.

4th,—A clear and distinct articulation of speech is restored. This is effected by having the inside of the teeth, and artificial gum, of a natural form, to which the tongue is readily adapted; this prevents the hissing or muffled sounds so often observed in speaking or singing, in persons wearing artificial teeth.

The Rooms are at No. 30 BOND STREET, New-York. A Pamphlet containing more full particulars, sent free, to those who desire it. ap268m

Notices of the American Press.

From the "New-York Sunday Times."

THE IRISH NEWS.—Mr. T. F. Meagher is about to issue a new weekly paper with this title. Mr. M. is a gentleman of unquestionable talent, and handles an eloquent pen. So far, his course in this country has been marked with a modesty and good taste in marked contradistinction to the forwardness and poverty of judgment exhibited by some of his compatriots. If he govern the columns of the Irish News with the same wisdom, we shall be happy to witness his success, and greet with candid cordiality his honest opinions.

From the "New-York Sunday Mercury."

MR. THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, the distinguished expatriated Irishman, will commence on the 12th of April, the publication of a weekly paper in this city, entitled, the Irish News. Mr. Meagher is a scholar, a ripe and good one; and a gentleman. His talents are of the highest order, and his ability to edit a brilliant and popular paper is unquestioned. We pray him all possible success.

From the "New-York Dispatch."

ANOTHER IRISH PAPER.—We see that our talented Irish friend, Thomas Francis Meagher, has resolved to try his hand at newspaper making. On the 12th of next month he will issue the first number of the Irish News, of which he will be editor and proprietor, and which will be "dedicated to the service of the Irish people, at home and abroad." There is room for a sterling paper of the character indicated by the prospectus of the News, and we know of no man better calculated to get up such a weekly than Mr. Meagher.

From the "New-York Daily News."

THE NEW IRISH PAPER.—Mr. Meagher, the most moderate of our Irish patriots, has advertised a new paper devoted to the interests of his countrymen. There is an excellent opening for a moderate paper, and as Mr. M. is an eloquent and brilliant writer, the admirers of finished journalism will be equally gratified with the friends of Irish nationality and independence.

From the "Savannah Georgian."

THE IRISH NEWS.—This is the title of a weekly newspaper, the first number of which will appear on Saturday, the 12th of April, under the editorship of Thomas Francis Meagher, at New-York. The Irish News is "dedicated to the service of the Irish people at home and abroad," and the ability and singleness of purpose of its editor and proprietor are assurances that this end will be secured.

"From the "Home Journal."

The English, in this city, have their "Albion," the French their "Courrier des Etats Unis," the Germans their "Zeitung"—all of them able journals—and now the Irish are about to have an organ which will, probably, be inferior to none of the above. Mr. Thomas Francis Meagher will carry into the editorial department of the Irish News learning and facility of composition; and we hope his paper may meet with abundant success.

From the "N. Y. Evening Post," April 9.

THE IRISH NEWS.—The first number of Mr. Meagher's new paper has appeared. It is published in a quarto form, on sixteen pages, at the rate of three dollars per annum. For a first number, it presents an unusual variety of matter, and throughout bears evidence of the taste, culture and experience of its editor. Among its contents we notice a graphic Irish letter, some interesting personal recollections of the Irish Jesuits by the editor, besides a variety of editorial matter. From the latter we select the following, which may be looked upon as the editor's salutatory:

"THE IRISH IN AMERICA."

We do not doubt that the Irish News will prove a credit to American journalism; and we feel prepared to assure our readers that they will find in it the best digest of Irish news, and the fairest representation of Irish opinions and interests, that is published in the country.

From the "Tribune," April 10.

Mr. Thomas Francis Meagher's new paper, the Irish News, appeared yesterday. It is a sheet of sixteeen pages, filled with an unusual variety of interesting matter. The leading articles are marked by liberality, breadth of view, spirit, and common sense. If the Irish News does not meet with ample encouragement, those for whom it is particularly intended will deserve never to have a good paper.

From the "Times," April 10.

Mr. T. F. Meagher's Irish News has made its appearance. It is a handsome octavo of large size, and promises to be a creditable addition to our list of weeklies. It seems to have made arrangements for a very extensive correspondence, and each other of its departments appears to be well manned.

From the "Sun," April 10.

The Irish News, a new weekly paper, edited by Thomas Francis Meagher, made its appearance yesterday. Making due allowances for the disadvantages necessarily attending a new enterprise, the first number promises well. The tone and spirit of the articles are excellent, and we have confidence that Mr. Meagher will judiciously avoid the rhodomontade and clap-trap which have been the predominant features of Irish journalism in this city, and aim to teach his countrymen of all creeds that patriotism has a more earnest purpose than to exhaust itself in senseless verbiage and the perpetuation of narrow bigotries.

From the "Mirror," April 10.

THE IRISH NEWS.—Such is the title of the new weekly journal of our eloquent friend, Thomas F. Meagher, the first number of which is before us. It is a handsome sheet, of sixteen pages, wanting only a little better paper to make its types as radiant as the editorial thoughts they embody are brilliant. But a a newspaper should not be mechanically judged by its first issue. Like the newly lighted torch, it must flame awhile and be trimmed, before it will give its perfect light. Mr. Meagher dedicates his paper to the "Irish People, at Home and Abroad;" and taking his position modestly in the ranks, reserves the trumpet-blasts of his eloquence and genius, till he shall have fixed himself firmly on the watch-tower. He promises little, save that he has taken up a vocation to live it out; but the public may expect much from his fruitful and versatile pen. Truth, right, justice, and freedom cry welcome, when such souls as Meagher, pen-armed, enter the battle-ranks of an aspiring age.

From the "New-York Herald," April 11th.

THE IRISH NEWS.—A new Irish paper here, just started by Mr. Thomas Francis Meagher, some time a political exile in Australia, more recently a resident of the United States, and public lecturer. Mr. Meagher brings peculiar qualifications to bear upon his new business. He possesses literary and oratorical talent of a high order; and—without reference to his political career before he arrived in the United States—appears to have more judgment and discretion than have usually been found in his political associates. He enjoys already an extensive popularity among the people of his own class, and is so favorably regarded by all parties that no objection was made when, the other day, the courts admitted him to the bar before his naturalization. Under these circumstances it is fair to presume that Mr. Meagher will produce a journal superior to the average run of Irish papers.

From the "Journal of Commerce," April 11.

THE IRISH NEWS.—We have before us the first number of a weekly paper under the above title, edited by Thomas Francis Meagher. It contains 16 pages quarto, is well got up typographically, and its principal editorials are written in a tone which cannot fail to be useful to the Irish population among us. While they are thoroughly Irish, they yet evince a high appreciation of the privileges enjoyed by these people in the home of their adoption, and in short, are well adapted to promote a brotherly feeling between them and the native population, which it is clearly for the interests of both classes to cherish. The introductory article is so spirited and so beautiful, that we make no apology for transferring it to our columns.

From the "Albion," April 12.

A NEW IRISH NEWSPAPER.—Mr. Thomas Francis Meagher has just commenced the publication of a new weekly journal, under the title of the Irish News, and we cannot pass by the graceful custom of welcoming a new comer into the editorial ranks, however widely our course may differ from that which he chalks out for himself. Indeed it is satisfactory to know that this distance is so immeasurable, that no approximation can take place. Still, the world is wide enough, and in this country men may hold impracticable views, without seriously injuring themselves or other parties. Mr. Meagher has in his favor, for the general duties of his new profession, youth, zeal, talent, and a wide experience of life. Apart from his home politics, we are sure that he will work this mine creditably, and we trust most profitably to himself.

From the "Examiner," Columbia, S. C., April 12.

THE IRISH NEWS.—We publish in to-day's Examiner the prospectus of this paper, the first number of which appears to-day in New York. Mr. Meagher is a gifted writer as well an eloquent orator, and we have no doubt but the News will take its rank at once as a first-class journal.

From the "Courrier des Etats Unis," April 12.

THE IRISH NEWS.—Tel est le titre d'un nouveau journal hebdomadaire, auquel nous devons une double bien veune. D'une part, en effet, le Irish News arbore dans les sangs de la presse Americaine un drapeau de tout point semblable au nôtre: celui d'une nationalite lointaine, profondement originale et de tout point sympathique á la France. D'un autre côté, le nom dont il est signe est de ceux qui commandent le respect et l'admiration. M. Thomas Francis Meagher a eu le mérite plus rare et plus difficile qu'on ne le croirait, de grandir par l'exil, nonseulement aux yeux de ses compatriotes, mais aux yeux du monde entier. C'est un grand caractère, uni á un beau talent. Aussi, le succès de l'œuvre qu'il entreprend est-il assure d'avance. Les hommes de cette trempe sont précisément ceux dont la voix sait acquérir le plus d'autorite et l'exercer le plus dignement quand ils l'ont acquise.

From the "Sunday Atlas," April 13.

THE IRISH NEWS.—Thomas Francis Meagher made his editorial bow to the American public, in the columns of a new paper having the above title. We have read it carefully, and are exceedingly pleased with it. It is independent, bold, and well written, and will prove itself eminently worthy the support of the public, particularly that portion of it composed of his own countrymen. It is a quarto sheet of sixteen pages, handsomely printed, and will be issued weekly, from 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau, at three dollars a year.

From the "Boston Bee," April 14.

THE IRISH NEWS.—We have received from Wm. Hickey, agent, 128 Federal street, the first number of the Irish News, just started in New York, by T. F. Meagher, Esq. It contains for a salutatory one of Meagher's characteristic and brilliant articles. The paper is well printed, and contains an excellent and intelligent digest of general news.

From the "Evening Express," April 17.

THE IRISH NEWS.—We have the 1st and 2d numbers of this paper before us. Mr. Meagher, Editor: and, what is very remarkable in an Irish paper, the name of the Irish News well tells the character of the paper. It manfully defends and advocates Ireland—but lets American politics alone. It sees enough of Irish affairs, and Irishmen, to make a good paper of, without undertaking to lead and guide the United States.

From the "Irish American," April 19.

THE IRISH NEWS.—We have received and read the first number of the Irish News, owned and edited by Thomas F. Meagher. We bid our brother welcome to the field of journalism, and wish him and his project the largest success. With Meagher's rare eloquence, ready wit, quick and copious imagination, and accomplished scholarship, he cannot fail to make a mark in his new profession.

From the "American Banner and National Defender," April 19.

While we condemn Mr. Meagher for his attempt to establish a purely Irish paper, we honor him for his honesty in announcing, through its name, the Irish News, his intention to depend upon his national cognomen for all the respectability he needs in the premises.

From the "Observer," Utica.

THE IRISH NEWS.—The first number of this new weekly journal, published and edited by Thomas Francis Meagher, the eloquent Irish exile, is received. The sheet is "dedicated to the service of the Irish people at home and abroad." Then have the Irish people and the cause of Irish emancipation a most eloquent and devoted advocate and champion. The editorials are marked for their brilliancy and elegance, not less than for their genuine Irish enthusiasm and hopefulness.

From the "New-York Commercial Register."

We have received the first No. of the Irish News, a Weekly, Edited by Thomas Francis Meagher. If Mr. Meagher will conduct his paper with the same energy and talent as he has heretofore exhibited in all he has undertaken, he cannot fail of permanent success.

From the "Sun," Cincinnati, Ohio, April 23.

"THE IRISH NEWS."—We have received the second number of the Irish News, edited by Thomas Francis Meagher. It is well turned out, and may take its position in the list of the most respectable newspapers published in the country. We trust it will receive the support it merits, and that those for whose benefit the proprietor and editor promises to labor so seduously, will as zealously sustain him. The tone and temper of the editorials are significant to us of a fact suggestive of reflections, that at some future time we may make known to "all whom it may concern." We tender our gifted friend our warmest wishes for his success, and hope he may find journalism both pleasant and profitable.

From the "New-York Tribune," April 19.

THE IRISH NEWS, by THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, has already attained a solid circulation, we understand, of 20,000 copies. A much larger number of the first issue was required for specimens. The ability and dignity with which it is conducted amply justify the favor with which it is received.

Special Notices.

Genin's Styles for Children—Straw Hats for Spring AND SUMMER.—To-day, will be opened, at GENIN'S Lower Store, No. 214 Broadway, the largest and most beautiful assortment of Straw Hats, Caps, and Flats, for Children and Misses, ever offered at that establishment. The stock consists of more than twenty varieties of Paris Hats, and a still greater number of home designs and manufacture, suitable for children of both sexes and of all ages, from the infant in arms to the young lady of 16 or 17 years of age.

The French artists in straw have produced this season a number of new braids, and have displayed extraordinary taste in the novel and becoming shapes into which they have moulded these delicate materials. The designers employed in the GENIN factory, have also surpassed all their former efforts in the same departments, and it may be confidently asserted that so great a diversity of fabrics and style in Straw Head-gear for Children has never before been introduced in New-York. All these novelties are exhibited for the first time, THIS DAY, at ap262t Genin's, No. 214 Broadway, opposite St. Paul's Church.

City Ladies and Ladies visiting the city can find GAITER and BUTTON BOOTS, from 12s. to 20s.; SLIPPER TIES and BUSKINS, from 6s. to 10s. per pair; INDIA RUBBER SHOES in great variety, with Boys, Misses' and Children's BOOTS and SHOES of all kinds and prices, at ap264t J. B. MILLER & CO.'S, No. 134 Canal street.

Will Close.—National Academy of Design.—The 31st ANNUAL EXHIBITION of Original Works, by Living Artists, now open daily, at 548 Broadway, will close on Saturday night, May 10th.

By order of the Council.

ap262t T. Addison Richards, Cor. Sec'y., N. A.

The Irish News—UP TOWN!—at ROBERT CODDINGTON'S Book Store, 366 Bowery, one door above Fourth street, on Every Wednesday morning.

N. B. Papers put up in Wrappers and Mailed at this establishment, free of charge. ap194t

Dr. Allcock's Plasters, from their peculiar qualities and mechanical arrangement of ingredients, produce a genial warmth on the parts to which they are applied, often giving relief at once. In asthma, in pains and tightness of the chest they are unrivalled. In lumbago and chronic rheumatism they give ease when all other local applications have failed. In sprains, bruises, and affections of the kidneys they are beyond all praise. Recommended by all physicians who are acquainted with their warming, flexible and porous qualities. Sold at 25 cents each by T. ALLCOCK & CO., Brandreth Building; at Burnton's bookstores, 296 Bowery and 241 Hudson street; by Mrs. Hayes, 175 Fulton street, Brooklyn, and by all druggists in the city.

my22t

Brandreth's Pills, in their nature, are similar to the vegetables used by man for food, subject to the same digestion in passing from the stomach to the intestines. Incorporated into the circulation, they impart to the blood new vitality, which occasions it to throw out any impurities into the bowels, which organ expels them. How simple, yet how wise, are all the laws of our being? Acting in unison with these laws, a few grains of vegetable extracts remove the most terrible and fatal maladies, curing alike the most subtle virus or the sick headache, and in so mild a manner that they every day give ease and pleasure. Brandreth's Pills are sold at 25 cents per box, at No. 43 Canal street, Brandreth Buildings; No. 241 Hudson street, and No. 296 Bowery; also by Mrs. HAYS, No. 175 Fulton street, Brooklyn; by T. W. DYOTT & SONS, Philadelphia, and by all respectable druggists and medicine venders in the Union. my31t

Dropsies are Cured by Brandreth's Pills.—This form of disease is occasioned by the exhalent arteries throwing out a greater quantity of fluid than the absorbents take up. Brandreth's Pills convey by magic, as it were, an impulse to the remote extremities, arousing their absorbents to action; and in case of swelling, or watery deposits there, awakening the sleeping energies of those vessels, which, like millions of pumps at work, transmit the morbid fluid to the intestines and urinary passages, effecting a reduction of the dropsical limbs, sometimes in a few hours, and thus affording a striking illustration of the sympathetic action of Brandreth's Pills. Thus, in dropsies of the stomach, and in all dropsies, or continued enlargements of the joints or limbs, there is nothing in the world to be compared to the effect Brandreth's Pills produce. In chronic cases, perseverance, with full doses, is required. Some of the best men in the Union can be referred to, in proof of the above. Brandreth's Pills are sold at 25 cents per box, at No. 43 Canal street, Brandreth Buildings; No. 241 Hudson street, and No. 296 Bowery; also, by Mrs. HAYES, No. 175 Fulton street, Brooklyn; by T. W. DYOTT & SONS, Philadelphia, and by all respectable druggists and medicine venders in the Union. my32t

Edwin A. Brooks, wholesale and retail Boot and Shoe Store, Nos. 575 Broadway, and 150 Fulton street, New-York. Constantly on hand French Calf Skin and Patent Leather Boots, Shoes and Gaiters, made with Dick's Patent Elastic Shanks, and Congress Gaiter Boots; also a large assortment of Ladies' and Children's Gaiters and Shoes, Waterproof and Cork Sole Boots, Perpetual Gloss and Leather Over Shoes.

Boy's and Youth's Boots, Shoes and Over Shoes. my3 3m

WRITING AND BOOK-KEEPING.

FOSTER, DIXON & CO., give Lessons in Writing, Arithmetic, and Book-keeping, at 346 Broadway, where gentlemen are qualified for Mercantile situations, in an expeditious and superior manner.

The "New-York School of Writing and Accounts," is admitted to be the best organized institution of the kind in the United States. The course of instruction is practical, thorough and complete; the terms moderate; the hours of attendance 9 A. M. to 9 P. M., at the student's convenience; and every facility is afforded for the attainment of elegance in PENMANSHIP, expertness in ARITHMETIC, and skill in Book-keeping. 4t*

From the Dublin Tablet.

"Having experienced the benefits which Mr. Foster has bestowed upon the rising generation by his 'Pencilled Copy Books,' we were prepared to expect in his 'Double Entry Elucidated' a just theory, clearly and forcibly expressed. We are glad to see that the press has done the work justice—that Hood found it 'philosophical;' Friend of India 'scientific;' the Economist considers it the 'perfection of principle;' the Express recommends it for its 'simplicity;' and the London Times speaks of it as 'an excellent manual of business.' In all this we have only to add our full agreement. It removes a reproach which has hitherto fallen heavily upon our commercial education. It teaches a science."

Special Notices.

PROSPECTUS.

THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC REVIEW is now firmly established in Washington City. Every great question before the present Congress will be elaborately discussed in its columns.

Such subscribers to the "Western Democratic Review," as have overpaid, will be furnished with the "National Democratic Review," which, it is believed, will prove a work of vastly superior merit.

A considerable portion of each number of the REVIEW will be devoted to Literary and Scientific subjects. Several, among the most accomplished scholars and distinguished politicians in the country, will be regular contributors to its columns.

In answer to numerous inquiries of old and new friends, we deem it proper to say, THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC REVIEW will be printed and published at Washington City; is totally unconnected with any political Magazine in the country; is devoted, not to the support of any politician, but to the interests of the National Democracy—that democracy which will ever "carry the flag and keep step to the music of the Union."

The REVIEW is published in pamphlet form, upon beautiful white paper, in solid long primer, 96 pages per month—making two volumes per year, of 576 pages each.

TERMS.—$3 per year, payable invariably in advance.

INDUCEMENTS TO CLUBS.—Five copies for one year—$10; twelve copies for one year—$20. Booksellers ordering the work, will be furnished at the usual magazine rates.

Members of Congress, and postmaters in every part of the Union, are hereby authorized to receive and receipt for subscriptions to the REVIEW.

All moneys may be transmitted by mail at the risk of the editor.

Copies of the REVIEW will be found for sale at the Bookstore of Franck Taylor, 402 Pennsylvania Avenue, and at the office of publication 468 10th street, between D and E.

All communications to be addressed to

GEO. P. BUELL,
Editor National Democratic Review.

Catholic Society for the Promotion of Agricultural Settlements.—Office No. 8 Chamber street, (over East River Bank.) Open from 9 to 4.

8t J. G. MOYLAN, Sec., pro tem.

Life Illustrated; A First-class Family Paper, devoted to ENTERTAINMENT, IMPROVEMENT, AND PROGRESS. Weekly, $2 a year.

The Water-Cure Journal; HYDROPATHY, PHYSIOLOGY, AND LAWS OF LIFE AND HEALTH, $1.

The Phrenological Journal; For the Improvement of Mankind. Illustrated. $1 a year.

FOR THREE DOLLARS—all three will be sent a year. Address

ap262t FOWLER AND WELLS, No. 308 Broadway, New-York.

Emigrant Intelligence Office and Labor Exchange, No. 2 Canal street, corner of Centre street, New-York.—The office is established by the Commissioners of Emigration, where can always be found large numbers of LABORERS and SERVANTS, at very low rates of wages; and persons can have their orders filled by writing to the Superintendent, and sending the amount necessary to pay the passage of the parties required. No fees charged to employers.

JAMES P. FAGAN, Superintendent.

REMOVAL.

McConville & Murphy, Importers of Wide Silks, Shawls, Vestings, and Linen Goods, have REMOVED to No. 36 LIBERTY STREET, where all orders will be punctually attended to. tf

To Military Companies and Civic Societies.

OLD MONTGOMERY HALL, 76 Prince Street.—The Subscriber, having taken a lease of the above well known popular concern, begs to inform the Members of Military Companies and Civic Trades Bodies, and Managers of Balls, that he is ready to treat for the letting of spacious and well-lighted rooms, suited for meetings, &c.

The Bar attached to the Hall is always supplied with the best imported and domestic Liquors, Brandys, Wines, Ales, Irish and Scotch Whiskey, and choicest brands of Havana Cigars. JOHN DOLAN.

TO PRINTERS.

COPPER FACED TYPE.—CORTELYOU'S NEW-YORK TYPE FOUNDRY, and PRINTERS' WAREHOUSE, established in 1823, 29 Spruce street, four doors below William street.

The subscriber is prepared to furnish his well-known and superior Book and Newspaper Printing Types, in fonts to suit purchasers. Also, German and Ornamental Types, Greek, Hebrew, Ornaments, Music, Brass Rules, &c., manufactured of metals equal to any in this country, and finished in the most accurate manner. He also furnishes Presses, Chases, Composing Sticks, Stands, Cases, Furniture, Ink, &c.

WOOD AND METAL TYPES,

from other Foundries, and every article required in a Printing Office, at the lowest prices, for cash or approved paper. Type, copper-faced by the Newton Company, furnished to order. Old Type received at 9 cents per pound in exchange for new. Estimates for Printing Establishments furnished on application.

☞ Printers of newspapers who will insert this advertisement three times before January 1, 1857, sending me one of the papers, will be paid in printing types, when purchasing four times the amount of the bill.

PETER C. CORTELYOU.

PIANOS, MELODEONS AND MUSIC.

The Cash system adopted!—Prices greatly reduced.

HORACE WATERS,

No. 333 Broadway, N. Y.,

AGENT FOR THE BEST BOSTON AND NEW-YORK INSTRUMENTS.

The largest assortment of

Pianos, Melodeons, Musical Instruments,

AND

MUSICAL MERCHANDISE,

of all kinds, in the United States, Pianos from ten different Manufactories, comprising those of every variety of style, from the plain, neat and subtsantial 6½ octaves, in Walnut or Rosewood Cases, from $150 to $200, to those of the most elegant finish up to $1000. No house in the Union can compete with the above in the number, variety, and celebrity of its instruments, nor in the extremely low prices at which they are sold.

Horace Waters' Modern Improved Pianos,

WITH OR WITHOUT IRON FRAMES.

possessing in their improvements of over-strings and action, a length of scale, power, and compass of tone equal to the Grand Piano, united with the beauty and durability of structure of the square Piano. They are justly pronounced by the Press and by the first Musical Masters to be equal to those of any other manufacturer. They are built of the best and most thoroughly seasoned material, and guaranteed to stand the action of every climate.

Each Instrument guaranteed to give satisfaction, or purchase money refunded. Second-hand Pianos at great bargains, constantly in store; price from $30 to $140.

Horace Waters' Melodeons,

SUPERIOR INSTRUMENTS IN TONE, TOUCH AND DURABILITY OF MAKE.

(Tuned the equal temperament.) Melodeons of all other styles and makes. Price, $45, $60, $75, $100, $125, $140; double Reeds, $150; double Reeds and two banks of Keys, $200. Less a liberal discount. Clergymen and Churches, an extra discount.

Martin's Guitars, Brown's Harps, Flutes, Fluthas, Accordeons, Violins, and Musical Instruments,

OF ALL KINDS, AT LOWER PRICES THAN EVER BEFORE OFFERED TO THE PUBLIC.

A large discount to Teachers and Schools. The trade supplied on the most liberal terms.

MUSIC.

One of the largest and best selected catalogues of Music now published, comprising many of the choice and most popular airs of the day, and will be sold at one-third off from the regular prices.

Music sent by mail to all parts of the country, post paid. Particular and personal attention paid to all orders received by mail. Satisfaction guaranteed in every instance. Pianos and Melodeons for rent, and rent allowed on purchase. Pianos and Melodeons for sale on monthly payments. Second-hand Pianos taken in exchange for new. General and select Catalogues and Schedule of prices forwarded to all parts of the country by mail.

☞ Great inducements offered to agents in all parts of the country, to sell the Horace Waters' Pianos, Melodeons, and Catalogue of Music.

PIANOS AND MUSIC.—We learn that Horace Waters, of 333 Broadway, N. Y., agent for the sale of many of the most celebrated makers of Pianos and Melodeons, is offering them at prices which we advise all who desire to purchase to avail themselves of. He is also selling his large and well-known Catalogue of Music at one-third off from the regular prices, and will forward the same free of postage. His offers to the trade, teachers and schools, are of the most favorable character, all of which he will be able to fill to the letter, for having wisely adopted the cash system. The Horace Waters' Pianos are known as among the very best. We are enabled to speak of those instruments with some degree of confidence, from personal knowledge of their excellent tone and durab le quality.—N. Y. Evangelist. ap19tf

Business Directory.

RICH CARPETING.

1856. SPRING IMPORTATION. 1856.

ARTHUR DONNELLY,

98 BOWERY, (West side,) BETWEEN GRAND AND HESTER STREETS,

IS now prepared to exhibit his New Spring Styles of

Foreign and Domestic Carpetings,

Comprising every grade and every description, from the Cheapest Fabric to the Richest.

Importing his goods direct and thus saving the commission and interest which most dealers pay, he is enabled to offer them at prices highly favorable to consumers, who will find at his store, among other Carpetings adopted to all varieties of taste, the following elegant descriptions:

Medallions,	at	14s to 18s per yard.
Velvet,	"	10s to 16s "
Tapestry,	"	6s to 12s "
Brussels,	"	7s to 12s "
Three-ply,	"	7s to 10s "
Ingrain,	"	3s to 7s "
Common Ingrain,	"	18d to 3s "

English and American Floor Oil Cloths,

of every imaginable width, pattern and style.

A complete and choice assortment of

STAIR AND HALL CARPETS, RUGS, MATS, MATTINGS,

and of everything else appertaining to the Carpet Trade.

ARTHUR DONNELLY, 98 Bowery, (West side,)
ap198m Between Grand and Hester sts., N. Y.

SMITH, BROTHERS,

ONE PRICE

CLOTHING WAREHOUSES,

122 AND 140 FULTON ST., N. Y.

The PRICE is marked on all the goods in

PLAIN FIGURES.

We have now on hand a splendid assortment of Spring and Summer Clothing, together with our new styles of Spring

RAGLANS,

PELISSIERS,

AND CANROBERTS—

OR, SUMMER OVER-COATS.

ap263m SMITH, BROTHERS, 122 AND 140 FULTON ST.

IRISH, ENGLISH, AND SCOTCH LINEN GOODS.

THE subscribers who are exclusive dealers in LINEN GOODS, would invite the attention of housekeepers and others to their complete stock of

Shirting Linens,	Towelings,
Sheeting Linens,	Diapers,
Pillow-case Linens,	Lawns,
Table Linens,	Linen C. Handkerchiefs;

or, Linen goods of any description, which they offer for sale at very low prices.

J. C. Milliken & Co., 748 Broadway,
ap26 above Astor place.

LATEST FASHIONS.

THE New Hat Company would here lay before their readers a few of the advantages to be derived from their system of doing business, which is ONE QUALITY, ONE PRICE, AND NO ABATEMENT. In the first place, any gentleman, whether he be a judge of the article or not, can rely upon receiving our first and only quality. Secondly, our price is so low, that the man of the most limited means is enabled to procure a fine and fashionable hat, (at the same time we wish it to be distinctly understood that our hats are not to be excelled by those sold at four dollars by any other establishment,) and lastly, we strive to please. If any gentleman desiring a hat differing from the usual style, will call and leave his order, we shall endeavor to suit him in every respect. The inducements which we offer to wholesale purchasers, and the trade in general, are not to be exceeded by those of any other establishment.

Also, a large assortment of CLOTH CAPS, CHILDREN'S FANCY HATS, UMBRELLAS, &c., constantly on hand at the lowest rates. Nos. 146 and 148 Nassau st. ap268m

---

REMOVAL.

THOMAS McLAUGHLIN, Shirt Manufacturer, and dealer in Gentlemen's Furnishing Goods, WHOLESALE AND RETAIL, has removed from his old stand, 292, to 269 Greenwich street, corner of Murray, and invites the attention of buyers generally to his Spring and Summer stock of the above goods. Feeling confident from his long experience in the business and his increased facilities for manufacturing a superior article of Shirts, Bosoms, Collars, Stocks, Ties, &c., to be able to offer for nett cash the cheapest goods to be found in the city. Shirts made to order for the trade or otherwise. We will also receive from auction daily, Under Shirts and Drawers Gloves, Hosiery, Ties, Cravats, &c., worthy the attention of Clothiers, Dry Goods Dealers and others. Our motto is ONE PRICE ONLY. THOMAS McLAUGHLIN, 269 Greenwich street,
ap268mos (Corner of Murray street, New-York.)

LINEN HALL, 332 BOWERY,

EGAN & CO.,

THE proprietors take leave to inform their customers and the public, that they have moved their entire stock of Linen Goods to the above store, where they will from this time forward continue the wholesale together with the retail, of

Linens and Dry Goods,

of all kinds, at the lowest cash price. They are all of their own importation, and in order to make a permanent trade, they will retail them at the importer's prices. Their stock consists of Linen Sheeting, all widths and qualities; Damask Table Cloths, white and brown; Damask Table Linens, Diapers, Hucks, Back Towelings, Napkins, D'Oylies, White and Brown Drills, Checks and Stripes, all warranted pure linen, together with a large lot of

New Silks,

from 4s. to 12s. per yard; Stripes and Plaids, a splendid lot of Black Silks.

There are no damaged or bankrupt's goods included in this list, and they will sell lower than any other house having the same articles. Having a buyer always in Ireland, they are in a position and determined to sell low, and establish their house on the same principle as the "Old Linen Hall," in Dublin. Ladies are respectfully requested to examine the above stock, as affording a large assortment in variety and value. Amongst them will be found a splendid lot of 5-8 Damask and Snowdrop Napkins, from $1 to $1.50 per dozen, tickings and bleached muslins, cheap by the piece.

Striped Poplins,

A large assortment, from 3s. to 3s. 6d. per yard, with all other kinds of Dry Goods, to meet the wants of Spring and Summer purchasers.
ap261m EGAN & CO., Linen Hall, 332 Bowery.

THE METROPOLITAN

FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,

No. 108 BROADWAY,

(Cor. Pine Street.)

CASH CAPITAL $300,000.

JAMES LORIMER GRAHAM, President.

EDWARD A. STANSBURY, Secretary. my31y

JAMES CAIN,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

AND

CLOTHIER,

NO. 129 FULTON STREET,

(HERALD BUILDING,) New-York.
my31y

STATEN ISLAND

FANCY DYING ESTABLISHMENT.

OFFICE No. 8 John street, (two doors from Broadway,) New-York, solicit orders for dying Broadcloths, Merinoes, Paramattas, De Laines, and Silk, Woolen, and fancy goods of every description; Satin and Taffeta Ribbons, Gimps, Fringes, Galloons, and other trimmings dyed and re-finished with great success.

Also ladies and gentlemens Garments, Shawls, &c., &c.

BARRETT, NEPHEW & CO.,
3mos 8, John st., (2 doors from Broadway,) N. Y.

NICHOLAS WALSH.

SEXTON AND UNDERTAKER.

NO. 8 SIXTH AVENUE.

MEAGHER & CAMPBELL,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

NO. 82 BROADWAY.

NOTARY PUBLIC,

Commissioner for the U. S. Court of Claims.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, having formed a partnership with MALCOLM CAMPBELL, for the general practice of the law, the firm will continue to devote their attention to such law business as may be intrusted to them, including conveyancing, practice in all the courts of the state of New-York and of the United States, and general collecting business in all parts of the world. Particular attention will be given to the prosecution of claims against the United States in the Court of Claims.

Mr. Meagher may be consulted daily, on law business only, at No. 82 Broadway, from three till five o'clock P. M.

B. S. TREANOR,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

15 MASSACHUSETTS BLOCK, COURT SQUARE, BOSTON.

Particular attention paid to Conveyancing, and the examination of titles to Real Estate.

THOS. H. HURLEY,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 252 BROADWAY.

WILLIAM E. ROBINSON,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR,

HAVING entered into partnership with ISAAC DAYTON, Esq., (author of the work on Surrogates,) and WILLIAM A. COURSEN, Esq., gentlemen long known, and of high standing at the New-York Bar, has removed to their new office at 267 BROADWAY, third door below Chambers street.

☞ All business either in the Criminal or Civil Courts, promptly and faithfully attended to. ap191y

---

JOHN A. McSORLEY,

CUSTOM HOUSE AND SHIP BROKER, AND NOTARY PUBLIC,

7 BROAD STREET,

Clergymen, importing Vestments, Church Ornaments, &c., will be liberally treated with by calling on the subscriber.

REFERENCES:

Messrs. Thos. McClune & Co.,	Messrs. D. & J. Sadlier & Co.,
C. Meletta,	James Cook & Co. 6m

JAMES HARLIN,

WATCH, CLOCK MAKER, AND JEWELER.

236 HENRY STREET, BROOKLYN.

All watches and clocks bought or repaired at my establishment, warranted for twelve months.

JOHN KENNEDY'S

STEAM MARBLE WORKS,

35TH STREET, NEAR BROADWAY.

Statuary and Marble Mantle-Pieces, Monuments, Grave Stones, Tombs, &c. All orders thankfully received and punctually attended to.

M. J. CONNELL,

METROPOITAN BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTER,

NO. 39 BEEKMAN STREET, 1 DOOR EAST OF WILLIAM, NEW-YORK, AND 73 GRAND STREET, WILLIAMSBURGH.

All orders intrusted to me will be promptly attended to, and executed with unparalleled dispatch. tf

---

HARDWARE, CUTLERY, MECHANICS' TOOLS, &c.

THE subscriber has constantly for sale, of the best quality, and at the lowest prices, an assortment of the following articles: Tea-Trays, Cooking Utensils, Britannia and Plated Goods, Stair Rods, Table Cutlery, Tin Ware, Wooden Ware, Brushes, Brooms, &c.

Mechanics' Tools.

Also a full supply of Saws, Planes, Braces and Bits, Edge-Tools, Files, Hammers, Squares, Augers, Rules, Bevels, &c.

4t JOHN W. SULLIVAN, 74 Sixth Avenue, corner of Waverley Place.

COAL.

THE subscriber respectfully informs his friends and the public generally, that he has opened a new Coal Yard, cor. 27th Street and 9th Avenue, where he is prepared to sell the best quality of Red and White Ash Coal, at the lowest market price for cash. Weight warranted, or forfeit coal.

6mos* JOHN MACDONALD.

CHEAP COAL.

I BEG to inform my countrymen and friends and the public in general that I always sell the very best sort of Red and White Ash Coal at the very lowest prices. My object being quick sales and small profits, for cash.

ap193m Richard Clinton, 250 1st Avenue, cor. 15th St.

COAL of the very best quality both Anthracite and Bituminous, for family and manufacturing purposes, for sale by the subscriber from his Yards, 632 Washington, 128 McDougal, and 146 West Thirty-second streets. Also, Coal by the cargo.

ap191y Thomas Maher.

COPARTNERSHIP NOTICE.

THE undersigned have formed a Copartnership, under the name and firm of Foot, Cole & Co., for the transaction of the Paper Commission Business, at 82 Beekman street.

FOOT, COLE & CO.

JOEL W. FOOT,	C. D. HARMAN,
CHAS. COLE,	CARLTON LE SAGE.

Mr. H. C. Goodwin, has no further connection with us. ap19

THE GREAT RUSSIAN REMEDY.

Pro Bono Publico.

"EVERY MOTHER SHOULD HAVE A BOX IN THE HOUSE HANDY IN CASE OF ACCIDENTS TO THE CHILDREN."

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE. It is a Boston remedy of thirty years' standing, and is recommended by physicians. It is a sure and speedy cure for Burns, Piles, Boils, Corns, Felons, Chilblains, and old Sores of every kind.

For Fever Sores, Ulcers, Itch, Scald Head, Nettle Rash, Bunions, Sore Nipples, (recommended by nurses); Whitlows, Stiles, Fosters, Flea Bites, Spider Stings, Frozen Limbs, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Sore and Cracked Lips, Sore Nose, Warts and Flesh Wounds, it is a most valuable remedy and cure, which can be testified to by thousands who have used it in the city of Boston and vicinity for the last thirty years.

In no instance will this Salve do an injury, or interfere with a physician's prescriptions. It is made from the purest materials, from a recipe brought from Russia, of articles growing in that country, and the proprietors have letters from all classes, clergymen, physicians, sea captains, nurses, and others who have used it themselves and recommend it to others.

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE is put in large tin boxes, stamped on the cover with the picture of a horse and a disabled soldier, which picture is also engraved on the wrapper. PRICE, 25 Cents a Box. Sold at all the stores in town or country, or may be ordered of any wholesale druggist.

ap19tf Redding & Co., Proprietors, No. 8 State st, Boston.

P. H. McGINN,

FURNISHING UNDERTAKER,

No. 198 WEST 42d STREET,

Adjoining the Church of the Holy Cross, New-York.

INTERMENTS procured in any Burial Ground or Cemetery in the vicinity of New-York or elsewhere. All articles for Funerals, furnished on the most reasonable terms and at the shortest notice.

☞ All Orders promptly attended to, at all hours, day or night. ap193m

---

GEORGE B. COOK,

IMPROVED STEAM CYLINDER AND ADAMS PRESSES,

JENKIN'S BUILDING, Nos. 22 AND 24 FRANKFORT STREET, NEW-YORK. tf

---

MRS. J. McCARTHY,

FASHIONABLE MILLINERY STORE,

44 THIRD AVENUE,

Third door from 10th Street, New-York.

Cheap Straw Hats, Ribbons, Flowers, Ladies' Straw Goods.

Straw Bonnets cleaned and altered to the newest fashions.

LADIES' OWN MATERIALS MADE UP TO THE LATEST STYLES. tf

MATTHEW WALLACE,

25 CLARK STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.,

WHOLESALE DEALER IN NEWSPAPERS, BOOKS, &c.

☞ "The Irish News," on hand, by the earliest moment, each week. tf

---

McLOUGHLIN, McSHANE, & CO.,

(Successors to THOS. ANDREWS,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN

CHOICE TEAS, COFFEES, WINES, BRANDIES, AND GROCERIES,

61 FULTON STREET, near Cliff street,

M. C. McLOUGHLIN, ANDREW McSHANE, JAMES DOWLING. } NEW-YORK.

8m

WILLARD, FELT & CO.,

MANUFACTURERS OF ACCOUNT BOOKS,

AND IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER AND STATIONERY,

NO. 14 MAIDEN LANE,

8mos (near Broadway.)

JOHN J. STAFF'S.

WINES, LIQUORS, SEGARS,
LONDON, DUBLIN, PHILADELPHIA,
PORTER and ALE,
SCOTCH, BURTON, and EAST INDIA ALES,
CHAMPAGNE CIDER, in quantities to suit purchasers,
at 333 Broadway,
tf corner of Anthony street, New-York.

J. MURPHY & SON,

IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN

BRANDIES, WINES, GIN, RUM, IRISH AND SCOTCH WHISKEY, SEGARS, ALE AND PORTER, CORDIALS, &c.

J. M. & SON would call the attention of City and Country Dealers to their EXTENSIVE STOCK OF LIQUORS AND SEGARS under CUSTOM HOUSE LOCK and in STORE.

☞ We do not claim any superiority for our goods over those of any other House, but customers may rely upon being honorably and fairly dealt with, and all Liquors warranted as represented.

J. M. & SON are SOLE AGENTS for this City of Messrs. BUNCHARD & HARRISON'S superior Creaming and Sparkling DOMESTIC CHAMPAGNE, which possesses the same qualities as Imported Wine, and is more agreeable to the palate. It can be sold as low as $7 the basket.

A Superior Quality of IMPORTED ST. JULIAN CLARET, in cases, at $2 50.

Orders from Country Merchants solicited, and shipped with dispatch, at 150 Pearl, and 113 Water streets.

☞ Office 138 Pearl street.

P. MONAGHAN,

IMPORTER of the various and best brands of HAVANA SEGARS, &c. &c. Country and city merchants supplied in bond or in store. Duties paid or unpaid. 121 PEARL STREET, New-York.

N. B.—Sole Importer of the J. M. Vichot, La Union, and La Primavera brands. ap261y

---

McLOUGHLIN & EVERARD,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL GROCERS,

Keep constantly on hand a select assortment of

GROCERIES, WINES, BRANDIES, TEAS, COFFEES, &c., &c.,

AT THE OLD ESTABLISHED STAND,

ap263m 44 FULTON, between Pearl and Cliff streets, New York.

WISE'S IRISH MALT WHISKEY.

IMPORTED by J. & P. Hogan, Nos. 6 and 12 West street, and 257 Third Avenue, corner of 21st street, New-York, and corner of Vanbrunt and Sullivan streets, Brooklyn. J. & P. Hogan wish to inform their friends and the public that they have just received a large quantity of WISE'S CORK MALT WHISKEY, which will be sold at a reduced price, out of bond and at the above establishment. They are the only firm who import the same in New-York. ap261y

---

BURKE & MYLER,

IMPORTED WINES, LIQUORS AND SEGARS,

No. 42 SPRING STREET, New-York,
ap263m between Mulberry and Mott streets.

JAMES AINSLIE,

NO. 93 BEAVER STREET,

OFFERS for sale from U. S. Bonded Warehouses, of his own importation, Cognac Brandies, also Rochelle Brandies, in half, quarter, and eighth Pipes, pale and dark, of the well known brand of Arzac Seignette.

Gin—Sole importer of the superior Magnolia Brand; also, Cologne and Schnapps Gin.

Wines—Burgundy, Pure Juice, and old Port, Sherry, &c. Jamaica and St Croix Rums; Stewart's Paisley Whiskey, &c. 8mos

---

P. HUGHES,

LEMON SYRUP AND CORDIAL REFINER, and Dealer in Foreign Liquors, and French Brandies of different brands, Hollands Gin, Irish and Scotch Whiskey, Scotch Ale and Porter, and other Liquors, returns his sincere thanks to the public for the patronage he has already received, and hopes they will continue the same. No. 88 Cherry street, New-York. tf

---

O'CONNOR & COLLENDER,

BILLIARD TABLE MANUFACTURERS.

53 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

IMPROVED BILLIARD TABLES AND CUSHIONS.

MICHAEL PHELAN'S

MODEL TABLES AND COMBINATION CUSHIONS,

(Patented February 19, 1856,)

CORRECT in principle and perfect in action—so constructed as to insure mathematical correctness of angles when played upon, and warranted to possess the requisite elasticity in all seasons, having been tested by the best players in this country, and by them pronounced the most perfect of any hitherto constructed—are offered to the public as cheap as the ordinary tables of the day. Orders promptly attended to for fitting up private or public Billiard Rooms; new Cushions put on old Tables, &c.

Saloon and Salesroom No. 39 Chambers street, up stairs.

CABINET FURNITURE AND UPHOLSTERY.

Established in 1827.

THE largest and cheapest assortment in the State of New-York. Every thing, from a Broom to the richest article, may be found, including Carpets, Oil Cloths, Mattrasses, Beds, &c., &c., at 1yr R. J. TODD'S, 88 Fulton street, Brooklyn.

KNOX'S

OFFICE FURNITURE WAREROOMS,

59 AND 89 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

☞ Desks, Chairs, Cushions, Book-Cases, Lounges, Stools, and every article suitable for counting-rooms, Banks, and Insurance offices.

Desks of every description made to order on short notice.

The Irish News.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, Editor and Proprietor.

Three Dollars per Annum. Single Copies 6 Cents
Publication Office, 29 Ann St., cor. of Nassau.

VOL. I. NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, MAY 10, 1856. NO. 5.

Publications.

CONTENTS OF NO. V.

Editorial.

NICARAGUA.
MOVEMENTS OF REBELS.
STANDING ARMIES.
ENGLISH SAINTS AND MORMON SINNERS.
INFORMATION WANTED.
ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.
MILITARY MEMOIRS—Company C, (Carroll Guard,) 14th Regiment, N. Y. S. M. Company H, (Erina Guard,) 9th Regiment N. Y. S. M. Montgomery Guard, of Bridgeport.

Literature.

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS.—DAN CALLAGHAN AND GANSEY.—THE KILLARNEY PIPER AND THE MEMBER FOR CORK.
IRISH REVOLUTIONARY HISTORY.—SAVAGE'S '98 AND '48. Second Article, "Young Ireland" and '48.
THE MESILLA VALLEY.—From the Note-Book of an Irish Surgeon. No. IV. Silver Mines and Slaves.
MAGAZINES FOR MAY.—HARPER'S—PUTNAM'S—KNICKERBOCKER—SCHOOLFELLOW, HOUSEHOLD WORDS, &c.

Correspondence.

POETRY.—"MONTH OF MARY," by Annie.
CORRESPONDENCE.—Letter from Dublin.—"Spirit of the Irish Press."—Military Drills in New-York and Brooklyn.

THE IRISH NEWS,

EDITED BY THE PROPRIETOR,

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER,

DEDICATED TO THE SERVICE OF THE

IRISH PEOPLE,

AT HOME AND ABROAD,

Will be published every Saturday, on and after the 12th of April, at 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau, New-York.

TERMS.

For subscribers, $3 per annum: 6 cents a copy.
For wholesale dealers, $3 50 per hundred.
For retailers and carriers, $4 per hundred.
For Clubs, 4 copies to one address, per annum, $10.
" 7 " " " " $17.
" 10 " " " " $20.

For advertising.—Each square of eight lines,

Transient	$1
Monthly	$2
Quarterly	$5
Yearly	$16

N. B. Four lines, or under, constitute half a square.

Agents or Postmasters who interest themselves in procuring and remitting subscriptions, may retain 50 cents out of each annual subscription of $3.

☞ Subscribers, Agents, and Advertisers will please send in their orders early, and observe that our terms are invariably, payments in advance.

Communications of a PRIVATE nature should always be marked so. Those connected with the editorial department are to be addressed to Thomas Francis Meagher, and those on business to Richard J. Lalor, Irish News Office, 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau.

☞ Subscribers, residing in New-York, Brooklyn, and Williamsburgh, who pay in advance, will have their papers neatly enveloped, addressed, and delivered on each Wednesday through Boyd's Express or some similar medium.

Wholesale Dealers.

DEXTER & BROTHERS, 14 Ann Street, New-York.
ROSS & TOUSEY, 108 Nassau Street, New-York.
SAMUEL YATES, 22 Beekman Street, New-York.
MIKE MADDEN, 22 Ann Street, New-York.
HAMILTON & JOHNSON, 30 Ann Street, New-York.
DE WITT & DAVENPORT, 160 & 162 Nassau Street, New-York.
HENRY TAYLOR, Baltimore, Md.
FEDERHEN & CO., 13 Court Street, Boston.
WM. HICKEY, 128 Federal Street, Boston.
REDDING & CO., 8 Court Street, Boston.
THOS. McLOUGHLIN, 42 South 4th Street, Philadelphia.
T. R. CALLENDER, 88 South-Third Street, Philadelphia.
DROVIN & CO., Philadelphia.
A. WINCH, 116 Chestnut street.
J. M. CRAWFORD, 30 and 32 Chestnut Street, St. Louis, Mo.
MATTHEW WALLACE, 25 Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.
McNALLY & CO., 75 Dearborn Street.
J. W. SULLIVAN, Kearney Street, (next Post-Office) San-Francisco, Cal.
ROY'S, Detroit, Mich.

Retail Dealers.

NAGLE, Bangor, Me. — ADAMSON, Washington, D. C.
O'CONNELL, Cincinnati, O. — DOWNS, New-Haven, Conn.
HASTINGS, Albany, N. Y. — MORRISEY, " "
McGOWANS, Portland, Me. — DONOHUE, Newark, N. J.
JOHN H. TYSON, 89 Washington street, Hoboken, N. J.

Printed by Watters Brothers, 47 Ann street.
POWER PRESS OF GEO. B. COOK.

TEACHERS, ATTENTION!!—Perhaps the greatest educational event of this century is the publication of JOHNSON'S PHILOSOPHICAL CHARTS. There are ten Charts in all, each measuring 34 by 52 inches, and the set contains altogether about 300 Diagrams, illustrative of the most important outline principles of the Natural Sciences. Besides the essential diagrams found in the ordinary text-books, these charts contain several original illustrations, and possess the merit, rarely found in school-books, of being entirely original in plan and arrangement. They are, moreover, highly ornamental to a school-room, and obviate the necessity of philosophical apparatus which would cost from $3,000 to $5,000. Price of the set of ten charts, neatly colored and mounted, and accompanied with an explanatory Key, (a bound book,) $15. Ditto, on thick paper, colored and mounted, without cloth, $10. Ditto, plain, in sheets, neatly bound, $5.

Booksellers, Teachers, Agents, and all interested in Education, are respectfully requested to address the publisher,

Adolphus Ranney, No. 195 Broadway, New-York.

Mr. Ranney has also the pleasure to announce that he has purchased from EDWARD H. DIXON, M. D., editor of The Scalpel, and acknowledged to be the first surgeon in America, the copy-right of a work entitled "WOMAN AND HER DISEASES, FROM THE CRADLE TO THE GRAVE;" Adapted exclusively to her instruction in the Physiology of her system, and all the diseases of her critical periods; with an Appendix on the propriety of limiting the increase of family. Price $1. Copies mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price. Address as above. ap26tf

Dr. J. J. McGowan, Physician and Surgeon, Graduate of Harvard University, Fellow of the Massachusetts and Rhode Island Medical Societies, etc., has removed to No. 69 Canal street, New-York, a few doors from Broadway, where he will attend to calls in every branch of the medical profession. Dr. McG. will devote particular attention to chronic diseases, and those of women and children. m10 1t

GREENWOOD LAKE HOTEL,

Orange Co., State of New-York.

THE proprietor of the Parquette Saloon, under the Broadway Theatre, respectfully informs the public that he has leased the above fashionable watering place which has been carried on for years by Col. Felter, and trusts from the manner in which he has treated his city friends to the best the market could afford, to merit the continuance of their favors during the Summer months. The Hotel has all the advantages necessary for a summer residence—a copious lake furnishing food for gentlemen addicted to piscatorial pursuits; carriages suitable for invalids; woods and shady groves for lovers—in fact, everything conducing to pleasure and health during the warm days now approaching. The Hotel is easy of access, Stages meeting each train of the New-York and Erie Railroad.

All applications for Rooms, to be addressed to my3 3m George Mellon, 328 Broadway, N. Y.

Publications.

BOOKS RELATING TO IRELAND.

SIR JOHN DAVIES' HISTORICAL TRACTS. 8vo. full calf.
STUART'S HISTORY OF ARMAGH. 8vo. Scarce.
IRISH PENNY JOURNAL.
O'CONNOR'S CHRONICLES OF ERI. 2 vols., 8vo, full calf.
ANCIENT IRISH HISTORIES. By Spencer, Campion, Hanmer and Marleborough. 2 vols., large paper, 4to, full calf.
LEDWICH'S IRISH ANTIQUITIES. 4to, calf, plates.
ANTHOLOGIA HIBERNICA. 4vols., 8vo, half-calf, plates.
IRELAND ILLUSTRATED. By Petrie, Bartlett and Baynes. 4to, morocco, gilt edges.
ANNALS OF THE FOUR MASTERS. 7 vols., quarto, in Irish, with an English translation by O'Donovan. $45.
SAME WORK, translated by Cornellan. 1 vol., quarto, cloth.
CARTE'S LIFE OF THE DUKE OF ORMONDE, and the Great Affairs of his Time in Ireland. 6 vols. 8vo. Full calf, $20.
GRATTAN'S LIFE AND TIMES: By his Son. 5 vols. 8vo. Cloth, $7.
FITZPATRICK'S LIFE OF CLONCURRY. 8vo. cloth. $1 50.
HAY'S BOOK OF IRISH BALLADS. 2 vols., Eng. ed., cloth. $2 25.
FINDEN'S BEAUTIES OF MOORE. Forty-eight portraits, exquisitely engraved. Folio, cloth, gilt edges. $6.
WRIGHT'S HISTORY OF IRELAND. 3 vols. quarto, maps, portraits, and views, $7 50.
BARRINGTON'S SKETCHES. $1. SAVAGE'S '98 and '48. 1 vol., 12mo.
McGEOGHEGAN'S IRELAND. 8vo, cloth, $1 75.

MRS. HALL'S IRELAND, 3 VOLS., 8VO., FULL OF ILLUSTRATIONS. $12.

Warner's History of Ireland, 4to., $2 50. Warner's Irish Rebellion, 4to., $2 50. Life of Wolfe Tone, 2 volumes, $3 50. Mitchel's Jail Journal, $1. Mitchel's Hugh O'Neil, 37 1-2 cents. Moore's Life of Lord Edward Fitzgerald, 75 cents. Davis's Poems, with an introduction by John Mitchel, 37 1-2 cents. De Jean's Poems, 37 1-2 cents. Meagher's Speeches, $1. Furlong's Irish Prayer Book, 50 cts. Recollections of Lord Cloncurry, $1. Carleton's Willie Reilley, 75 cents. Mooney's History of Ireland, 2 volumes, $3. O'Connor's History of the Irish Brigade, 1 50. Life of Fighting Fitzgerald, 25 cents. Ellis's Romances and Ballads of Ireland, 75 cents. Burke's Speeches, 1 25.

For sale by P. M. Haverty, Bookseller,
110 Fulton street, New-York.

With a few exceptions, any of the above will be sent by mail, free.

KEATING'S IRELAND.

A NEW TRANSLATION OF THE

FORAS FEASA AR ERINN;

OR, GENERAL HISTORY OF IRELAND.

From a Manuscript Copy of the Original Irish of the Rev. and Learned GEOFFREY KEATING.

With Notes, Historical, Topographical, and Explanatory,

By JOHN O'MAHONY, Esq.

The work is now in course of preparation, and will be speedily published, in one large octavo volume of about 600 pages, with plates. Price to Subscribers, $2,00.

The book will be got up in superior style, and furnished to the address of Subscribers giving their names to a duly-authorized canvasser, or to

A list of subscribers will be printed in the work.

P. M. HAVERTY, Publisher,
tf 110 Fulton street, N. Y.

THE OLD ESTABLISHED CATHOLIC HOUSE OF

EDWARD DUNIGAN & BROTHER,

151 FULTON STREET, NEW-YORK.

Honored with a Gold Medal and letters of approbation from His Holiness

POPE PIUS IX-,

and patronized by the Archbishops, Bishops, Clergy, Colleges, Convents, and Religious orders in the United States,

HAVE JUST PUBLISHED

THE HAMILTON'S, a Catholic Tale, of great beauty and power, price 38 cts.
CONSCIENCE, or the trials of Maybrooke.
BROOKE, a tale, by Mrs. M. H. Dorsey, 2 volumes, cloth, each 38 cents.
HOURS BEFORE THE ALTAR, or MEDITATIONS ON THE BLESSED EUCHARIST, by the Abbe de la Bouilleru, Vicar-General of Paris, translated by a Religeiuse of the Visitation. 1 volume, price 25cts.

AND HAVE IN PRESS,

THE LOVE OF MARY, or reading for the month of May, by D. Roberts.
THE YOUNG CRUSADER, a tale. 4t

P. O'SHEA,

739 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK,

Catholic Bookseller and Publisher, Importer of Vestments, Altar Furniture, and Religious Articles generally,

RESPECTFULLY calls the attention of the Catholic Clergy, Religious Orders, Superiors of Schools and Libraries, and his patrons, generally, to his large and varied assortment of Standard and Devotional Books and Religious articles of every description, which he offers for sale on the most reasonable terms, wholesale and retail.

Particular attention is called to his recently published works, viz.,

Bickerton; or, The Immigrant's Daughter. (An anti-Know-Nothing Tale,) 12mo., cloth, ... $0 50
Life of the Princess Borghese; (Daughter of the Earl of Shrewsbury.) Translated by Rev. A. F. Hewit, (of the Redemptorists.) 1 vol., 18mo, cloth, ... 0 37½
Life of St. Francis of Assisium. By Rev. Titus Jocelin. 1 vol., 18mo, cl., 0 37½
Life of the Egyptian Aloyzius. Translated by Rev. A. F. Hewit. 2 vols., 18mo, cloth, each, ... 0 37½
Edna and Marguerite. A Tale; by the Author of the Orphan of Moscow. 2 vols., 18mo, cloth, ... 0 37½

Religious Articles.

Rosaries, per dozen, from 20 cents, to 4 00
" each, on silver chains, from 75 cents, to 12 00
Crucifixes, (brass,) per dozen, from 8 cents, to 12 00
" (silver,) each, from 25 cents, to 25 00

Statuettes, Holy Water Founts, &c., &c., in great varieties. Country Booksellers and travelling dealers, would do well when they come to New-York, to examine this stock before purchasing elsewhere.

3mos P. O'SHEA, 739 Broadway, New-York.

HAMILTON & JOHNSON,

NEWS AGENTS,

30 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

DAILY, weekly and Sunday papers, Magazines, and Cheap Publications. The trade supplied. Orders from the country solicited and promptly filled. JOHN HAMILTON,
tf S. W. JOHNSON.

HANNA & BEEBE,

COMMISSION PAPER WAREHOUSE,

No. 27 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW-YORK,

KEEP CONSTANTLY ON HAND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF PAPER SUCH AS

Book, Printing, Flat-cap, Folio, Glazed, colored, (sized and unsized,) Druggists', Hardware, Envelope, Manilla, Palm-leaf, Straw and Shipping, Papers Straw Boards, Box Boards, &c., &c., &c.

ALSO—Cop Waste for Steamboats and Railroad Engines.

They offer to Manufacturers at the lowest market prices,

Rags, Bleaching Powders, Soda Ash, Alum, Rosin, China Clay, Oil Vitriol, Oils, Feltings, Twines, Wire Cloth, Leather Belting.

☞ LIBERAL ADVANCES MADE UPON all CONSIGNMENTS.

Agents for Hanna, Carpenter & Abbott's Chandlerswick.
ap19 3m†

Publications.

JOHN BROUGHAM'S NEW BOOK.—

Now Ready:

THE BUNSBY PAPERS;

Or, IRISH ECHOES.

By JOHN BROUGHAM.

Author of "A Basket of Chips."

With Designs by McLenan.

One neat 12mo. Price $1.

CONTENTS:

Dan Duff's Wish and What Came of it.
The Blarney Stone.
The Gospel Charm.
The Test of Blood.
The Morning Dream.
The Fortune Teller.
The Fairy Circle.
O'Brien's Luck.
The Tipperary Venus.

Derby & Jackson, Publishers, New-York.
And for sale by Booksellers everywhere. my10 1t

MILLER, ORTON & MULLIGAN.

25 Park Row, New-York, and 107 Genesee street, Auburn,

HAVE RECENTLY PUBLISHED THE FOLLOWING

POPULAR BOOKS:

THE GREAT AMERICAN BATTLE;

OR

The Contest between Christianity and Political Romanism.

By Miss Anna Ella Carroll, of Maryland. 1 vol 12mo cloth gilt, $1 25; full gilt sides and edges, $2.

Containing 365 pages, and

TEN NEW PORTRAITS ON STEEL,

of the Distinguished Members of the American Party:

HENRY VIII. AND HIS SIX WIVES.

By Henry William Herbert. 1 vol, 441 pp. 12 mo, with accurate steel portraits of Henry and each of his wives. $1 25.

The important historic events which occurred during the reign of this powerful though reckless and dissolute monarch, and the number, character, and tragic fate of his unfortunate consorts, have invested the period, the king, and his victims with a peculiarly romantic interest, to which the accomplished author has added the charms of elegant diction; thus combining in Henry VIII. and his Six Wives historic truth and romantic interest.

Memoirs of the Life and Reign of Crtherine II.

Empress of Russia, with her Successors, comprising Incidents in the Russian History of the Fall of Sevastopol. By Samuel M. Smucker, A.M. 1 vol, 338 pages, 12mo, with steel portrait, $1.

IF you would be posted,

If you want mental food, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you want good Pictures, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you want tip-top Stories, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you admire Cobb's Stories, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you like Fanny Fern's Sketches, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you want good Romances, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you want a good, cheap Paper, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you have four cents over, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you are lazy in the morning, You will miss THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!

ap26 1t Ross & Tousey, are the Agents for this Paper.

EMPIRE HALL, 596 BROADWAY.

Two doors above the Metropolitan Hotel.

TRIUMPH OF ART!

LOUIS KELLER, respectfully announces to the Public that he has leased the above place, which has been appropriately fitted up and decorated expressly for the purpose of presenting his Second Series of GRAND TABLEAUX SOIREES, exhibiting all that is famous and refined in the arts of Painting and Sculpture, either Sacred, Moral, Mythological or Historical; together with National Subjects of more recent interest, forming at once one of the most beautiful and intellectual entertaiments for the approval of an enlightened people.

Mr. Keller also intimates, that in order to render the effect of his pictures more perfect by the aid of music and decorations, independently of the enormous expenditure of his own Troupe of TWENTY-SEVEN ARTISTS, he has engaged talented persons in the various departments of scenery, machinery, &c., including a full and superior Orchestra, conducted by Mr. GRILLE.

The first performance will take place

On MONDAY EVENING, MAY 5th,

and will be continued every evening during the week.

PROGRAMME:

OVERTURE BY THE ORCHESTRA. "Fra Diavolo".....Auber

PART I.—First Tableau.

THE CHARIOT OF THE SUN—Music, "Life's Pulse Waltz".....Lanner
Second Tableau.—ARIADNE and BACCHUS—Composed by Mad. Keller. Music, "Pepita Polka".....M. Grille.
Third Tableau.—FAMINE—Composed by M. Keller. Music from "Lucrezia Borgia,".....Donizetti
Fourth Tableau.—SHOWER OF GOLD—Composed by Mad. Keller.

PART II.—Overture, "Le Macon".....Auber.
First Tableau.—MASSACRE OF THE INNOCENTS. Music, "Musen Quadrille" Strauss.
Second Tableau.—L'ESPERANZA—After Paul Delaroche. Music, "Lorley Melodies".....Strauss.
Third Tableau.—TRUE GLORY—composed by M. Keller. Music, "Nationale."
FINALE, the Great National Tableau of THE BATTLE OF BUNKER HILL, after Trumbull. Music, "Hail Columbia."

The Programme will be changed weekly. The repertoire of Mr. Keller consists of upwards of 3,000 pictures, thus enabling him to present an ever varying source of interest and attraction. Doors open at 7 o'clock. Overture will begin at 8 o'clock. TICKETS, 50 cents. Private Boxes, $5.

Arrangements can be made for admission of Schools and Societies, by application at the Hall between the hours of 10 and 4. my10 1t

A BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE

FOR SALE CHEAP,

NOW DOING A GOOD BUSINESS, WITH A LARGE NEWSPAPER TRADE,

located nine years in one of the best business streets in this city. To a cash customer this is a rare chance. None others need apply. Location made known at this office. my 10 1t

CHARITABLE.

Those who feel disposed to aid the poor widow and children of the late R. WALSH, will please hand over their subscriptions to the Treasurer, Mr. James Mulligan, 127 Grand street, and attend the meeting to be held there on WEDNESDAY EVENING, the 7th inst.

Shipping.

C. H. MARSHALL & CO.,

Old Black Ball Line of Liverpool Packets.

CERTIFICATES

Furnished for Passage to and from Liverpool, on the 1st and 16th of every Month, by the following splendid ships:

James Foster, Jr.	Capt. J. W. Porter.
Neptune	" E. W. Peabody.
Harvest Queen	" E. Young.
Isaac Webb	" J. M. Bayer.
Great Western	" W. G. Furrier.
Manhattan	" T. Dixon.
Isaac Wright	" E. Abeel.
Columbia	" C. Hutchinson.
Fidelia	" W. A. Macgill.
Yorkshire	" C. A. Marshall.

REMITTANCES.

Drafts, for £1 and upwards, on the Royal Bank of Ireland, and on Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., Bankers, Liverpool and London, payable on sight.

C. H. MARSHALL & CO.,
88 Burling Slip, N. Y.

Agents in Liverpool, Baring Brothers & Co.,
OLD LINE PACKETS,
Pier 23 East River, foot of Beekman street. 6m

WILLIAMS & GUION'S

Old Black Star Line of Packets. 1856.

Passage from any part of Great Britain and Ireland, secured at the lowest possible rates by this old-established line, sailing from Liverpool to New-York every five days, comprising the following magnificent Ships:

Ships.	Captains.	Tonage.
AUSTRALIA,	Smith,	2,000
BRIDGEWATER (new),	Barstow,	2,000
CULTIVATOR (new),	Austin,	2,000
CYNOSURE,	Bray,	2,000
CORNELIA LAWRENCE (new),	Knapp,	2,000
DE WITT CLINTON,	Funk,	1,800
ENTERPRISE,	Davis,	1,200
GUY MANNERING,	Dollard,	2,000
JACOB A. WESTERVELT,	Hoodless,	2,000
IRENE,	Williams,	1,400
JOHN BRIGHT (new),	Cutting,	2,000
MARMION,	Hanley,	1,200
NORTH AMERICAN,	Clark,	1,800
OSWEGO,	Stevens,	1,400
ROBERT KELLY,	Barstow,	1,500
SILAS WRIGHT (new),	Freeman,	2,000
SOUTHAMPTON,	Furlong,	1,600
THORNTON (new),	Collins,	2,000
TICONDEROGA,	Boyle,	1,400
UNIVERSE,	Cave,	2,000
VANGUARD,	Norton,	1,800

The ships of this line are the largest and swiftest in the trade, their accommodations for passengers are unequalled, and the frequency and punctuality of their departure offer advantages to the emigrant not to be had by any Line of Packets. Such passengers as decline coming out, the money paid for them will be promptly refunded without discount.

Provisions of best quality are provided for passengers; rations, consisting of Bread, Flour, Rice, Oatmeal, Tea, Sugar, Molasses, Salt, &c.

The increased patronage received by the proprietors of the Old Black Star Line has induced them to add to the Line several New Ships, which have taken their place this season; no expense has been spared to render the facilities for Emigration equal to the times, and add to the renown of these celebrated Packets.

The regular Sailing days are 1st, 8th, 11th, 18th, 21st, and 26th of each month; this will give passengers opportunity for embarking more frequent than by any other established Line, to which the attention of the public is respectfully called.

No Certificate of Passage will be issued for children under 12 years of age unless accompanied by an adult, who must be paid for on same certificate; for persons over 60 years of age, or with any impediment, without a Permit from Commissioners of Emigration.

REMITTANCES.

Persons wanting to send money to their friends can obtain drafts for any amount, which will be cashed at sight at the following Banks:

Ireland—National Bank of Ireland; Royal Bank of Ireland; Ulster Banking Co., and their Branches.

Scotland—National Bank of Scotland and Branches.

England—Messrs. GLYNN, MILLS & Co, Bankers, London; GUION & Co., Merchants, Liverpool.

For further particulars apply, if by letter post-paid, to

WILLIAMS & GUION,
40 Fulton street, New-York.

GUION & CO.,
115 Waterloo Road, Liverpool.

AGENTS—JOHN WHITNEY, Providence, R. I.
EDWARD RYAN, 2 Albany street, Boston.
THOMAS RATTIGAN, Pittsburgh, Pa.

THOS. C. ROCHE'S

PASSAGE AND DRAFT OFFICE 83 SOUTH ST.

Sole Passenger Agent for GRINNELL'S celebrated

Swallow Tail Line of Liverpool and London Packets.

THOSE sending for their friends in the Old Country can make arrangements at this office to bring them from any part of IRELAND or ENGLAND at the lowest rates.

The ships sail from Liverpool four times a month, and from London twice a month.

Drafts for sale for £1 and upwards, payable in any part of England, Ireland, Scotland or Wales.

Passage Tickets and Drafts sold in this office are GUARANTEED by CORNELIUS GRINNELL, Esq., 87 South street, New-York.

☞ No connection whatever with any other Person or House useing the name of Roche.

For further information apply to THOMAS C. ROCHE, ap263m Old Stand, 83 South street, New-York.

THE NEW-YORK AND LIVERPOOL

United States Mail Line.

The ships composing this line are the following:

The ATLANTIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The ADRIATIC .....Capt. West.
The PACIFIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The BALTIC .....Capt. Comstock.

These ships have been built by contract, expressly for the government service. Every care has been taken in their construction, as also in their engines to insure strength and speed; and their accommodations for passengers are unequalled for elegance and comfort.

Price of passage from New-York to Liverpool in first cabin, $130; in second do., $75. Exclusive use of extra size state rooms, $325. From Liverpool to New-York, 30 and 20 guineas.

An experienced surgeon attached to each ship.

No berth can be secured until paid for.

PROPOSED DATES OF SAILING.

FROM NEW-YORK.	FROM LIVERPOOL.
Saturday, April 26, 1856.	Wednesday, April 16, 1856.
.. May 10, ..	.. April 30, ..
.. May 24, ..	.. May 14, ..
	.. May 28, ..
	.. June 11, ..

For freight or passage, apply to

Edw'd. K. Collins & Co., No. 56 Wall street, New-York.
Brown, Shipley & Co., Liverpool.
Stephen Kennard & Co., 27 Austin Friars, London.
B. G. Wainwright & Co., Paris.

The owners of these ships will not be accountable for gold, silver, bullion, specie, jewelry, precious stones or metals, unless bills of lading are signed therefor, and the value thereof therein expressed.

Shippers will please take notice, that the ships of this line cannot carry any goods contraband of war. sp26 6m.

Shipping.

BLACK BALL LINE
OF LIVERPOOL PACKETS,

Sailing to and from Liverpool on the 1st and 16th of each Month.

THE following ten magnificent clipper Packet Ships comprise the "Black Ball Line, viz:—

James Foster Jr.,	Manhattan,
Great Western,	Neptune,
Harvest Queen,	Columbia,
Isaac Webb,	Yorkshire,
Isaac Wright,	Fidelia.

DRAFTS AT SIGHT for any amount payable in every town throughout England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

Persons returning to the old country, or those sending for their friends, will find it to their interest to select the "Black Ball Line," as the accommodations in the above clippers for Cabin, Second Cabin, and Steerage Passengers, are well known by the travelling public to be far superior to any other.

☞ Apply or address by letter, post-paid; no letter will be answered unless a postage stamp is enclosed to pre-pay postage.

Jacob Wilson, 108 South street, New York,

Who is the only authorized Passenger Agent for the "Black Ball Line," which lay at Pier 23 East River, opposite this office. my3 3m

Emigration.

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,
Office, 51 Chambers street.

NOTICE.—The recent failures, by which a large amount of Bills remitted from this country to friends in Ireland, has been returned unpaid, afford to this Society the opportunity, and at the same time impose upon it the duty of informing the public, that such losses would have been prevented if the parties purchasing Bills had availed themselves of the advantages offered by the Society.

For the purpose of entire protection a fund is constantly kept on deposit in the Bank of Ireland, against which this Society issues its drafts, payable at sight (from sums of £1 sterling and upwards), on the Bank and all its branches, and has thereby for the last Ten Years afforded a mode of remittance perfectly safe and unquestionable.

New-York, December 29, 1851.

ANDREW CARRIGAN, President.

JOHN MANNING, ROBERT J. DILLON, HUGH KELLY, } Vice-Presidents.

EDWARD C. DONNELLY, Corresponding Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Recording Secretary.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Felix Ingoldsby,	John Nicholson,	William Redmond.
William Watson,	Hugh Kelly,	James Olwell,
John Manning,	Cornel Sheehan,	Daniel Devlin,
Terence Donnelly,	Romaine Dillon,	John McMenomy.

EMIGRANT INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS BANK.

No. 51 CHAMBERS STREET.

THIS Institution has been established for the purpose of affording to Emigrants and others, a safe place of deposit for their funds, to protect them from robbery and fraud.

It is conducted with the strictest economy—neither the Officers and Trustees, receive any compensation for their services. The entire profits belong to the Depositors, and will be divided amongst them, having due regard to the safety of the funds.

The last dividend was six per cent. upon all sums of $500 and under, and and will be continued or increased as the profits may justify.

Bank open to receive Deposits, daily, from 10 A. M., to 2, and from 5 to 7 P. M.

TRUSTEES.

William Watson,	John P. Nesmith,
John Nicholson,	John Milhau,
Andrew Carrigan,	Edward W. Tiers,
James Kelly,	Charles M. Connelly,
James Kerrigan,	Cornelius H. Sheehan,
Hugh Kelly,	Edward Bayer,
Charles O'Connor,	Daniel Devlin.
James Olwell,

JOSEPH STUART, President.
FELIX INGOLDSBY, 1st Vice-President.
JOHN MCMENOMY, 2d Vice-President.
TERENCE DONNELLY, Treasurer.
LOUIS B. BINSSE, Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Accountant.
JOHN MANNING, Comptroller. tf

REMITTANCES TO

ENGLAND, IRELAND AND SCOTLAND.

STERLING BILLS for sale on Messrs. Prescott, Grote & Co., Bankers, London, from £1 upwards, payable on demand, and negotiable in any part of the United Kingdom; also Bank of England Notes and Drafts of any of the English Banks or Bankers, bought and sold.

ap19 1y Prime & Co., 54 Wall street.

DRAFTS FOR £1 AND UPWARDS,

ON THE ROYAL BANK OF IRELAND,

(Expressly authorised by the Bank,)

FOR SALE AT THE BANKING HOUSE OF JOHN B. MURRAY,

No. 44 Wall street, (over Bank of North America,) New-York.

PERSONS wishing to send money to their friends in Europe, can remit it as above, by letter, post-paid, and upon receipt, a draft on the Royal Bank, will be forwarded without charge, to the person designated. 3m*

☞ To prevent loss, every Draft is registered here, and a copy of the register forwarded to the Bank by every mail steamer.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,

Office, corner of South and Beach Streets, Boston.

THE office of this Society is open from 7 A. M., to 6 P. M., where Emigrants can apply to obtain situations for which they are fitted. Farmers, Mechanics, and others in want of labor, will apply at the office.

Orders from employers in the country, stating the services required, the wages given, and the cheapest mode of conveyance, and giving respectable reference, will meet with prompt attention.

The Society will be thankful for all circumstantial and early information of any fraud, imposition or outrage committed on emigrants, and will endeavor speedily to apply a remedy.

MARTIN GRIFFIN, ARTHUR M'AVOY, } Vice Presidents.

NICHOLAS J. BEAN, Cor. Secretary.
JAMES FERGUSON, Rec. Secretary.
WILLIAM HICKEY, Treasurer.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

John Hughes,	P. Holly,
William Keating,	Christopher Plunkett,
Daniel O'Rourke,	Jeremiah Ford,
Thomas Hughes,	Hugh Duffy,
Owen Lappan,	M. Lennon, Charlestown,
J. Ryder,	James O'Brien, do.,

Patrick C. Boyle, Roxbury.

MICHAEL HUGHES, Agent.

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND, &c.

GEORGE McBRIDE, Jr., No. 14 Broadway, continues to transmit money, in sums large or small, to persons residing in any part of Ireland, in the same manner as he and his predecessor in business have done for the last thirty years, and more; also to any part of England or Scotland.

Money remitted by letter, post paid, to the subscriber, or personally deposited with him, with the name of the person or persons in Ireland, England or Scotland, to whom it is to be sent, and nearest post town, will be immediately transmitted and paid accordingly, and a receipt to that effect given or forwarded to the sender.

3mo GEORGE McBRIDE, Jr., N. N.

THE METROPOLITAN

FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,

No. 108 BROADWAY,

(Cor. Pine Street.)

CASH CAPITAL $300,000.

JAMES LORIMER GRAHAM, President.

EDWARD A. STANSBURY, Secretary. my31y

Special Notices.

DRILL ROOM GUIDE.

NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

TROOP A, (Irish Dragoons,) meet at the "Grape Vine Cottage," 45 Second Avenue, between Second and Third streets, on every Monday evening. JAMES MURPHY, Capt.

Company B, (Fitzgerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company D, (Guyon Cadets) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MURPHY, Capt.

Company I, (Jackson Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." W. O. MURPHY, Capt.

Company H, (Erina Guard) drill Thursday Evening at "Military Hall." R. CODDINGTON, Capt.

Company —, (Irish Grenadiers) drill each Thursday Evening at 22 White street. FELIX DUFFY, Capt.

TENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Brookes' Rooms." JOHN KENNEDY, Capt.

ELEVENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Montgomery Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. S. MURPHY, Capt.

SIXTY NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Troop A, (Irish Dragoons,) drill each Tuesday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." Lieut. B. O'CONNOR, Com'dt.

Company C, (—— ——,) drill each Wednesday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." Lieut. M. KEATING, Com'dt.

Company D, (Irish Rifles) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES QUINLAN, Capt.

Company E, (Fag a Bealac Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." GILBERT RIORDAN, Capt.

Company F, (Shields' Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Milleman's Hall," 7th avenue, corner of 26th street. JOHN R. MURPHY, Capt.

Company G, (Mechanic's Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." JOHN B. MADDEN, Capt.

Company I, (Irish Fuseleers,) drill each Monday Evening at 42 Prince street. M. CORCORAN, Capt.

Company K, (Brian Boroihme Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES HUSTON, Capt.

Engineer Corps, (Emmet Life Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Worth's Military Head Quarters," 22 White st. T. LYNCH, Capt.

70th REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company D, (Napper Tandy Light Artillery) drill each Thursday Evening at Brooklyn City Armory. WM. H. HOGAN, Capt.

SEVENTY FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company A, (Stats Rifles) drill each Wednesday Evening at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. Lieut. JAS. KELLY, Com'dt.

Company B, (Irish National Guard) drill each Friday Evening at "Centre Market Rooms." JOHN LANE, Capt.

Company C, (Young Ireland Rifles) drill each Friday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JOHN BURKE, Capt.

Company D, (—— ——) drill each —— at ——. —— NUGENT, Capt.

Company E, (T. F. Meagher Rifles) drill each —— at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. J. B. DONNELLY, Capt.

Company F, (Mich'l. Doheny Rifles) drill each —— at ——. J. F. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company G. (Emmet Rifles) drill each —— at ——. JOHN BEGG, Capt.

INDEPENDENT COMPANIES.

Company —, (Edward Fitzgerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." MICH'L. FLOOD NAGLE, Capt.

Company —, (O'Mahony Guard, E. M. A.,) drill each Tuesday Evening at "North America Rooms," cor. of Bayard and Bowery. JAMES CAVANAGH, Capt.

Company —, (Sons of '98,) drill each Friday Evening at the corner of 11th street and 1st Avenue, N. Y. M. H. SMITH, Capt.

Company —, (Wolfe Tone Guard,) drill each alternate Monday Evening at the "Second Ward Hotel," cor. of York and Pearl streets, Brooklyn. JOHN J. CLANCY, Com'dt.

Company —, (Irish American Grenadiers,) drill the first and third Thursday of each month at "Montgomery Hall," 76 Prince street, N. Y. MICHAEL DOYLE, Capt.

TWENTY-FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at Albany, N. Y. P. H. GRIFFIN, Capt.

SECOND REGIMENT—HUDSON BRIGADE.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each week at the "Armory," Grand street, Jersey City. —— FARRELL, Capt.

SECOND REGIMENT PA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Hibernian Greens,) drill each Thursday Evening at 83 South Fifth street, Philadelphia. P. O'KEAN, Capt.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening at 104 Market street, Philadelphia. Lieut. PATRICK O'CONNOR, Com'dt.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Friday Evening at "Ewen Hall," Hawley, Pa. M. W. MORRISS, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT ME. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Grattan Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Bangor, Me. JOHN CARROLL, Capt.

SIXTIETH REGIMENT ILL. S. M.

Company —, (Shields Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Chicago, Ill. CHAS. E. MOORE, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT VA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday and Friday Evenings in Richmond. P. S. MOORE, Capt.

SIXTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill the second Thursday of each month in Charleston. GEO. SERGEANT, Capt.

SEVENTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill once a month in Charleston, S. C. EDWARD MAGRATH, Capt.

N. B.—Commandants of Irish-American Military Companies throughout the United States, are respectfully tendered a place in the above "Directory," and requested to send such information as will enable us to represent them in it.

Republican Executive Committee.—The Committee appointed by the Tabernacle Meeting met at their Rooms' Clinton Hall, Astor place, May 2, 1856, ISAAC SHERMAN, Esq., Chairman, and C. W. ELLIOTT, Secretary. The following resolutions were adopted and were directed to be published:

Resolved, That the Republican Committees or Associations of the several Wards, now formed, or which may hereafter be formed, be requested to report to this Committee the names and residences of their officers, with their places of meeting and their system of organization, as soon as possible.

Resolved, That each Republican Ward Committee or Association be requested to nominate two Representatives from the Ward to meet this Committee in Convention at its Committee Room in Clinton Hall, Astor place, on the 15th day of May inst., at 8 o'clock, P. M., for the election of Delegates to the Republican State Convention to be held at Syracuse on the 28th day of May next.

Resolved, That these resolutions be communicated to the Central Republican Committee appointed by the several Wards, and that such Committee be requested to aid in carrying the same into effect.

On motion, adjourned.

ISAAC SHERMAN, Esq., Chairman.
CHAS. W. ELLIOTT, Secretary. my10 1t

Notice.—The members of the "Cosmopolitan Literary Club," are hereby notified that an Election for Officers will take place on Friday Evening May 9. Punctual attendance is requested.

By order. JOHN F. HENNE[illegible] Sec'y.

P. S. The Club meet at 8 o'clock on every Friday Evening in T. Coleman's School Room, corner of Little and Water streets, Brooklyn. All young men ambitious of literary attainments, can become members by applying to any of the officers. Citizens generally are respectfully invited to attend. my10 1t

Mrs. Luby's Classes for Dancing, Calisthenics, &c., Greenwich Hall, 275 Bleecker street, open until the 1st June. The last assembly for the season will come off on Wednesday evening, May 14. Admission 50 cents. Mrs. Luby gives lessons on the Pianoforte on Wednesdays and Saturdays. my10 2t

Central American News.

ENGLISH INTRIGUE—GREAT BATTLE AT RIVAS.

The arrival of the Orizaba, Capt. Tinklepaugh, on the 29th, and the Empire City, Capt. Wendle, on the 30th, brings news of a deeply interesting and exciting nature from Central America. The news of Schlessenger's defeat at Santa Rosa is not only confirmed, but rumors (apparently authentic) of his having sold the battle to the Costa Ricans. He has, at all events, deserted while on parole, during his trial by court-martial.

The most exciting intelligence is the news of a second battle at Rivas between General Walker and the Costa Ricans, on the 11th inst., and, not less in importance, some intercepted correspondence showing that the British Government has secretly encouraged and aided Costa Rica in its movement against Nicaragua. As these letters tend to lift the difficulty out of Central America and give it a wider character, they are of the first importance, and demand instant attention. The following are the published portions :—

ENGLISH INTRIGUE.

Foreign Office, Feb. 9, 1856.

"I am directed by the Earl of Clarendon to acquaint you that, having referred to the War Department your letter of the 12th ult., requesting that a small supply of arms may be furnished to the government of Costa Rica, his lordship has been informed by that department in reply, that 2,000 smooth bore muskets, (nittons) which are not so highly finished as the line pattern muskets of 1842, can be supplied for this service at £1 3s. each, or, if it should be preferred, 2,000 of the line pattern muskets of 1852, can be furnished at 56s. 8d. each.

"As soon as Lord Clarendon is informed by you of the species of arms which you decide upon, he will communicate further with the War Department, and request that the arms may be placed at your disposal. I have the honor to be, sir, your most obedient and humble servant, E. HAMMOND.

To E. Wallerstein, Esq., etc., etc., etc.

[Translated from the original.]

No. 10. London, Feb. 10, 1856.

SIR—In reference to my note of the 16th of last month, marked No. 4., in which I communicated to your Excellency that in the interview with Lord Clarendon, I had begged of him to favor our government with a loan of 2,000 muskets, I now take great pleasure to inform your Excellency that on the 8th inst., I was advised by the Secretary of Foreign Relations that Lord Clarendon having consulted with the Minister of War in regard to my request, I received the information that 2,000 muskets could be obtained at the price of 23s., or 2,000 at 56s. 6d. for that service, as soon as I informed his lordship which of the two kinds would suit me. He will give orders that the 2,000 may be placed at my disposal for the use of the republic of Costa Rica. I have not yet replied to that communication, but I have written a private letter to said Secretary, entreating him to send me an order to examine the two kinds of arms. After seeing them I will still consider if it is convenient to take them without positive instructions from his Excellency the President; but in the mean time I am persuaded his excellency will see the promptness with which the government of her Britannic Majesty has complied with my request is a very strong demonstration of her sympathy and good will towards that republic. Nothing is said, it is true, in the Minister's letter about the time the money should be paid; it shows that this is left for the republic to determine. I inclose therein a copy of the letter mentioned, and I take this opportunity to repeat myself your Excellency's most obedient servant,

E. WALLERSTEIN.

To his Excellency Ser Don BORNARDO CASTRE, Minister of Relation of the Republic of Costa Rica, San Jose.

[Translated from the original]

London, Feb. 16, 1856.

Ser don JUAN RAFAEL MORA, San Jose de Costa Rica.

Much esteemed Sir and friend—The mail which brings the correspondence of January 1st., from Costa Rica, has not arrived, and in consequence I have nothing to say to you in regard to mercantile business. As to public matters, you will please to refer to my communications, of to-day, to the Minister. By this you will see that this government is willing to put 2,000 muskets at my disposal for the service of the republic at Costa Rica. Nothing is said in the note about the time of payment. However, I have not made up my mind to take them previous to receiving instructions from you, or which of the two kinds of arms to take. In case I should take them previous to your being able to write upon the subject, I will send them in the month of March, if a vessel sails for Punta Arenas without further orders from you. I have not yet replied officially to Lord Clarendon to offer him my most sincere thanks in my own name and that of the republic, for his manifestation of sympathy and friendship for Costa Rica; and though the affable manner in which Lord Clarendon spoke to me when I bid him farewell, almost induced me to believe he would not refuse the muskets, I will not deny the pleasure I felt on receipt of Mr. Hammond's letter. I could not sleep at all that night for joy. I sent him a note on the following day, stating I would address an official note to Lord Clarendon, conveying my thanks, and that in the meantime I entreated him to send me permission from the War Department to examine the two kinds of muskets, so as to ascertain which I should take for the republic. All this is very good, but I don't like the intelligence from Nicaragua, where it seems Walker is establishing himself, firmer and firmer every day. I cannot understand how the other States did not unite themselves from the beginning to expel him from Nicaragua. I have letters from Guatemala and San Salvador, requiring me to request from this government help and succor; but what can be done for republics or people who do not make an exertion to help themselves. When I was telling Lord Clarendon that Costa Rica already had an army of 800 men on the frontier of Nicaragua, he was much pleased, and said "that was a right step," and I am persuaded that my having made that insinuation is one of the reasons for giving us the muskets. The questions pending between this country and the United States are very complicated, but there will be no war, for this reason, that the gentlemen in the great republic observe that although the British nation do not boast or say much on the subject, they are determined to punish the Yankees very severely for the least insult to the national honor. To the eyes of the whole world—of this country in particular—a war between the two nations would be one of the worst of evils; but to Central America the case would be very different, as Walker and his associates would soon be kicked out of Nicaragua.

I send to the government a copy of the Times, in which is found a letter from Mr. Marcy to the American Minister to Nicaragua. Though this letter appears to censure the Minister, and holds out a threat to Walker, the true sense is, that in a short time the government of the United States will recognize Walker's government. May God help us. Yours, &c.

E. WALLERSTEIN.

Two other letters accompanied this correspondence, one of which was from Mr. Moliny, the Costa Rican Minister at Washington, informing his government of recent letters received from the governments of Great Britain and France, in which great sympathy is felt for the Central American States in general. The other informs the government of Costa Rica that an English fleet will be immediately sent to the Pacific coast of Costa Rica.

Will not these letters open the eyes of the government and people of the United States to the movements of Great Britain in Central America? And will it not stimulate them to sufficient energy to immediately place a squadron of vessels both on the Pacific and Atlantic coasts of Central America? At present the British flag reigns supreme at San Juan del Norte, and vessels sailing under the American flag are held to a strict account. Communication is prohibited with the shore by the officers of the English frigate now lying in the harbor of San Juan, especially to all persons who come from Nicaragua, and a strict guard is kept around our steamers by the boats of this same frigate. The officers interfered on the arrival of the steamers Chas. Morgan from New-York, and orders were given that all passengers for Nicaragua should be taken back on the steamers, as they would not be permitted to proceed further. As no one had taken passage for Nicaragua, there was no evidence that any of the passengers on board were destined for that republic. Captain Carlton, of the British frigate, was undecided how to act in the matter, and the river steamer departed with 800 passengers, 300 of which were for Granada, to join Walker. It was the intention of Captain Tinklepaugh of the Orizaba, to give up his ship, in case the order of Captain Carlton, of the British frigate, had been carried out.

El Nicaraguense of the 12th ult. contains a long and spirited account of the details of the engagement of the 11th. Walker's army fought with great courage, and met with a stout resistance from the foe.

SECOND BATTLE OF RIVAS.

On the 7th ult. the Costa Ricans took possession of Rivas with 2,000 men. On the 11th, Gen. Walker, with 600 men, attacked them. After a fight of 17½ hours, he drove them out, but was obliged to abandon the city, from want of ammunition, leaving 600 Costa Ricans dead on the field, and a large number wounded. His loss in killed, wounded and missing is reported about 100.

An interesting feature in the battle of Rivas was the presence of some of those gallant spirits who adventured at that place the experiment of battle under the dubious auspices only of 56 men. Of the original number that embarked in the Vesta, and first met the enemy on the disastrous field of Rivas, there were 16 who participated in the recent engagement. These were Major J. B. Markham, Capt. Frank Anderson, Capt. D. K. Bayley, Capt. Peter Veeder, Lieut. L. G. Gay, Lieut. S. M. Leonard, Lieut. G. Gist, Sergeant Wm. Sarsfield, and privates Moses Anderson, J. Blanch, J. Colmers, H. Lyons, Dr. Matthews, Jake Norris and C. Travella. These men, without exception, behaved with a gallantry meriting the highest admiration and applause. They were proudly conspicuous through the whole conflict, seeming to feel and act as though Rivas was indebted to them an ovation of blood.

Of this number Lieuts. Stoll and Gay were killed, and Major Markham, Captains Anderson and Bayley, Lieuts. Leonard and Gist and Sergeant Sarsfield were wounded. Lieut. Stoll, the aid of Col. Don Bruno Natzmer, did most efficient service. It is authentically said that not less than 13 of the enemy fell by his single hand before he paid by his death the penalty of his gallantry. Lieut. Gay fell in a charge which he himself projected, and which required a courage of the most desperate character to prosecute. Than Capt. P. Veeder there was no man who displayed more heroic valor. It is with pride and pleasure that we commend the gallant action of Colonel O. J. McDonald, Captains Cook and Bradley and Drinker, of the Quartermaster Department; Major W. R. Rodgers and Capt. Mahon, John Pellicer, of the Commissary Department; Major Webber, a citizen volunteer; Lieut. J. S. Lyons, formerly attached to Major Brewster's command; J. Armstrong and J. Finney, of the Paymaster's Department; and Michael McCarty, volunteer Orderly to Gen. Walker. The reckless exposure of himself to peril stamped McCarty as a man without fear. All exhibited a brilliant and dashing courage, and are entitled to a similar encomium. Of this number, Armstrong was killed, and Cook and Bradley and Lyons and Finney were severely wounded. McDonald and Webber are missing, and the apprehension is felt that they have not escaped the disaster of battle.

As the details in the Nicaraguense contain all the important facts in regard to the battle, it is only necessary to state, that subsequent accounts confirm the reported loss of the Costa Ricans.

AFTER THE BATTLE.—COSTA RICANS' BRUTALITY.

The brutality of the Costa Ricans after the battle has never been surpassed in modern warfare. Gen. Walker, on his departure from Rivas, was compelled to leave a portion of his wounded (they had been declared mortally wounded by one of the surgeons,) in one of the churches. These men were butchered by the Costa Ricans in the most cold blooded manner. The Costa Ricans admit 450 killed and 250 wounded in battle. On the 18th ult., a courier reached Granada from Rivas, who stated that the enemy had thrown many of the dead bodies into wells, but were not able to dispose of one-third killed in the battle, and that the atmosphere had become so infected from their decomposition, that the cholera broke out on the 15th ult., in its most violent character. Many of the Costa Ricans had died, others were suffering from the disease, and the troops were leaving the city, terror stricken. Gen. Mora, it was reported, was one of the victims of cholera. We do not place full reliance in this statement, as on the 19th information was obtained from a native at the island of Ametepec, 14 miles distant from Rivas, that the Costa Ricans had not abandoned Rivas, but were fortifying it on the 17th, "anticipating another attack from General Walker."

THE UNITED STATES AND COSTA RICA—MURDER OF AMERICAN CITIZENS.

The Costa Ricans, in their attack upon Virgin Bay, murdered indiscriminately a number of American citizens who were unarmed, and who had never borne arms in Walker's government. Most of them were, or had been, employed on the Transit route, but they fell victims to the war-cry of the Costa Ricans :—"Death to all Americans in Central America." The following affidavits were taken before Col. Wheeler, U. S. Minister, on the 15th ult., and despatched forthwith to the United States government without delay.

REPUBLIC OF NICARAGUA, GRANADA, April 15, 1856.—This day came before me Charles Mahoney, a native and citizen of the State of Pennsylvania, aged 33 years, who being duly sworn, saith :—That he has been for the last 4 years in the employ of the Transit Company, on the Isthmus, as an engineer, and as such was employed as superintendent for building the wharf at Virgin Bay; that on Monday morning, the 7th day of April, 1856, the army of Costa Rica, headed by John R. Mora, the President of Costa Rica, entered said Virgin Bay. The deponent was standing in front of the office of the Transit Company, in company with Aaron B. Cooley and John Brown, employees of said Transit Company also. The troops of Costa Rica immediately surrounded the office, and an order to fire was given by the officer in command, when at least one hundred shots were fired; three of the balls struck this deponent, but not wounding him severely, and killed Peter Malone, a citizen of New-York, a stone quarrier, in service of the Transit Company, aged about 60 years.

2. Michael Long, also a citizen of New-York, and in the service of the Transit Company, aged about 22.

3. Thomas Walsh, also a citizen of New-York, and in the service of the Transit Company, aged 22 years.

4. —— Wilson, a native of Easton, Pa., and in the service of the hotel of John Mylard, a carpenter by trade, aged 26 years.

5. A lad, native of New-York, aged about 16, (name not known).

6. Thomas Mannegan, a native of New-York, in the service of the Transit Company, aged 17.

7. Thomas Loyd, a citizen of New-York, in the service of the Transit Company, aged 40 years.

8. A Lad, citizen of California, owner of saw mill, aged 45.

9. —— Kenan, citizen of Pennsylvania, aged 30.

All of whom died immediately, (except Long, who lived eight or ten hours,) from the effects of said shots. Also, Michael Katchfield, a citizen of Jersey City, was wounded, and another man, unknown to this deponent, attached to Mr. Lad's saw mill. None of those persons killed or wounded had any arms, or made any resistance of any kind whatever.

The forces then broke open the doors of the store, broke open trunks and robbed the dead persons and others of money and valuables, watches and jewelry. On the following morning the steamer Virgin came into harbor, and this deponent was sent by an officer to request the captain to come ashore. He went aboard, and remained on board, leaving the forces of Costa Rica in Virgin Bay, and came with the steamer to this place.

The conduct of the Costa Rica troops was barbarous and savage; for after the unarmed persons were shot and lay gasping for life on the ground, they brutally stabbed the wounded through and through, many times, with bayonets and swords.

This deponent has heard since he left Virgin Bay that all the American citizens left resident in Virgin Bay, including four ladies and one infant, have been murdered also by the Costa Rican troops; but as there has been no communication since, he cannot testify to its correctness, and he verily believes that the lives and property of all American citizens are in imminent peril, and imperiously demand the protection of the United States. He further states that he does not believe the life of the American Minister is safe at this time. CHARLES MAHONEY.

Signed and sworn to before me this 15th day of April, 1856.

JOHN A. WHEELER.

I, Aaron B. Cooley, native and citizen of New-Jersey, aged 38 years, was present with Mr. Mahoney, at the attack on the American citizens at Virgin Bay, and have read over the above statement, and I solemnly swear that my own knowledge confirms the facts of said statement in every particular.

AARON B. COOLEY.

Signed and sworn to before me this 15th April, 1854.

JOHN H. WHEELER.

REPUBLIC OF NICARAGUA, GRANADA, April 15.—In addition to his former testimony, made this day, Charles Mahoney appeared before me and testified, that in addition to the murder and robbery by the troops of Costa Rica, at Virgin Bay, on the 7th inst., they set fire to a wharf built by the Transit Company, of which said Mahoney was engineer, erected at an expense of one hundred and twenty thousand dollars, and it was completely destroyed by them. The forces of Costa Rica have now the possession of the transit route on this Isthmus, and the officers have declared that they are determined to exterminate every American now in the country, and in this intention they were sustained by the authorities of England and France, from whence they could procure, and had procured, material aid, as to guns and ammunition. CHARLES MAHONEY.

Sworn to and subscribed to before me this 15th April, 1856.

JOHN H. WHEELER.

REPUBLIC OF NICARAGUA, GRANADA, April 15, 1856.—I do hereby certify that I have been long and well acquainted with Charles Mahoney and Aaron B. Cooley, who have made the foregoing affidavits, and their characters for veracity are beyond all question—more efficient, industrious, and useful men cannot be found in any country, and full confidence may be given to any statement they may make.

Given under my hand this 15th April, 1856, C. CUSHING,
Late Agent of the Accessory Transit Co.

Col. Wheeler subsequently addressed the following despatch to President Moro :

LEGATION OF U. S. A., NEAR REP. OF NICARAGUA,
GRANADA, April 15, 1856.

The inclosed statement shows me a state of facts which you are already aware of; that on the 7th inst. unarmed and inoffensive citizens of the United States were cruelly butchered at Virgin Bay by the troops under your immediate command.

I have also seen your proclamation, that all persons taken with arms in their hands shall be immediately shot, and another that all American citizens shall be immediately driven out of Nicaragua and Costa Rica.

To prove the sincerity of your first proclamation you append a list of persons who were taken prisoners at Santa Rosa and shot on the 25th ult. Among them I find the names of Isaac A. Rose and John J. Gidin, natives of the United States. I have no right, and certainly no disposition to interfere in any way with the unhappy war now raging between the two sister republics.

But it is my right, as well as my duty, to inform you, as the the chief magistrate of Costa Rica, that the acts of murdering, in cold blood, unarmed American citizens, who are no wise connected with any belligerent act or party, is an offence against the law of God, of humanity and nations.

This offence is no less aggravated by the fact that those who committed so wanton an outrage were under your immediate command, that you were on the ground and did not prevent it, as it was in your power to do.

I would remind you of the letter of Mr. Molina, the Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of your government, near the government of the United States, dated Washington city, 13th December, 1854, to the Secretary of State of the United States, wherein he states that "the laws of Costa Rica are exceedingly liberal (on the subject of granting lands) and afford great facilities to emigrants who would come to Costa Rica and fix their residence there."

The treaty between the United States and Costa Rica, made in 1851, in the 12th article guarantees to citizens of the United States residing in Costa Rica in their persons and property the protection of your government.

Under these inducements and guarantees citizens of the United States have come and settled. What excuse can be offered, or how will you appear in the eyes of the world, when you publish a proclamation expelling these same persons without being guilty of any crime, and murdering them without any mercy?

In the name of the people of the United States and of the government thereof, I protest against such infamous conduct; and be assured, sir, that the government of the United States, aided as you may be by insidious and powerful allies, will inquire into such acts of lawless violence, and if unexplained and unatoned for, will take decided measures to protect the lives of our citizens and vindicate the honor of the nation.

Rumors have also reached me that some fourteen or eighteen American citizens, four ladies (one with an infant), were recently murdered by your troops at Virgin Bay. I am slow to believe so diabolical an outrage.

John B. Lawless, Esq., the bearer of this, is instructed to inquire, in the name of the United States for this Legation, into the facts touching this rumor.

I send him with my flag with this depatch, and I pray that you give him a conduct through your lines, and a prompt reply to your obedient servant, J. H. WHEELER, Minister of United States of America.

To his Excellency John R. Mora, President of the Republic of Costa Rica, in camp at Rivas, Nicaragua.

The proclamation to which Col. Wheeler refers was printed in Spanish, French, German, and English, and was posted on all the outposts of the army before the departure of Gen. Walker for Rivas. It is as follows:

John R. Mora, President of the Republic of Costa Rica, General-in-Chief of the Army of Nicaragua:

All the filibusters taken with arms in hand will be subject to all the rigor of the law, which in this is death.

But all the filibusters who have not used their arms against this republic, and give up out of free will their arms and persons to officers of the Costa Rica army, shall be pardoned. JOHN R. MORA.
Rafael S. Escalante, Sub. Sec. of Department of War.

Appended to this was the following list of persons taken prisoners at Santa Rosa, and subsequently shot on the 25th of March: James Salamon, Ireland; John Perkin, Italy; Andrew Constantine, Samos; Manuel Grego, Corfu; Theodore Lidecker, American; Henry Dunn, Ireland; Isaac A. Rose, American; Henry Johsierder, Germany; Peter Pyme, Ireland; Philip Johmit, Germany; Peter Connan, Ireland; James Hollin, Ireland; Antoine Pornu, France; David Koch, Germany; Wm. West, Prussia; Francis Narvaez, Panama; and Theodore Heining, Prussia.

Philip Egan Toothy was also taken prisoner, and condemned at the same time, but his punishment was changed to imprisonment, because he was the correspondent of the New Orleans Crescent.

This will bring up a new question in the United States for the action of our people and their government. It is, whether they will permit any foreign nation to raise the war cry of "death to all Americans" who may accept service in Central America.

Colonel Wheeler published the letter to insure its reception by Senor Mora, as it is considered wholly uncertain if any messenger he might despatch, although protected by the American flag, would not be massacred in cold blood.

THE MOVEMENTS OF WALKER.

On the 18th ult., 700 native troops were on the march, en route for Granada; and, with the 300 Americans who came out from New Orleans on the Charles Morgan—who were at Castillo Rapids on the 20th ult., and would be in Granada on the morning of the 21st—Walker will have under his command, in Granada, 1,000 Americans, and about 900 natives. In a few days he will divide his forces, by sending a part of them, by the steamers, to land near Virgin Bay and Rivas, and the others he will march by the land route, so as to attack the Costa Rica force from all positions, and cut off their retreat in every way possible. As to the result, no one doubts of his success, and the accounts by the next steamer will confirm this impression.

The army of Costa Rica at Rivas at the beginning of the battle no doubt numbered 2,000, which was afterwards reinforced by 250 from Virgin Bay. This is authenticated from various sources, and their whole number on the Isthmus was 3,000, namely, 2,000 at Rivas, 500 at Virgin Bay, and 500 at San Juan del Sur. Their days on the Isthmus are numbered, for in two weeks from this time not one living Costa Rican will be found within the borders of Nicaragua.

THE COSTA RICANS DISHEARTENED.

From some accounts it appears that the Costa Ricans are very much disheartened. They assert that they had promises from the Nicaraguans to rise en masse as soon as they crossed the Costa Rican frontier, but that all the aid they received was from a few of the old Chamorra party. So far as Nicaragua is concerned, there is very little disaffection within her own borders. What does exist is either the Chamorras, who have heretofore ruled with an iron rod in the department of Granada. They are recognized as the aristocratic party. They have lost all power now, and the whole of the Central American States combined cannot restore it to them.

Honduras, San Salvador and Guatemala are said to be in favor of peace, and will not invade Nicaragua. They received the Commissioners of Nicaragua in a friendly manner, and have discountenanced the enlistment of troops and even disbanded some of the new levies. The intercepted correspondence between the British Government and Costa Rica, in which the former agrees to contribute 2,000 stand of arms to the latter, has caused great excitement among the Americans in Nicaragua. Quite a number of Minie rifles were taken from the Costa Ricans at Rivas. There were also several Englishmen and Frenchmen seen in their army.

Massacre at Panama.

A terrible affray occurred on the 15th of April, at Panama, between the American Transit passengers and the natives, in which the former had thirty killed and forty wounded.

It appears that on the arrival of the passengers from New-York by the steamer Illinois, on the 15th inst., a trifling row was created between an American and a native negro, about a dime's worth of fruit, which appears to have been a preconcerted plan to lead to the terrible scene that followed—for hundreds of natives were immediately on the spot, armed with pistols, guns, machetes and knives. In five minutes after, the bells of Santa Anna Church were tolling the fire alarm, as a signal to collect the negroes together, and in less than ten minutes more a most fearful onslaught was made on the passengers landing from the train, and the awful attack of murder had commenced.

The Governor was immediately sent for by the Railroad authorities, and with the greatest difficulty induced to show himself.

The helpless passengers, most of whom were perfectly unarmed, took refuge in the hotels in the neighborhood of the terminus and in the Railroad Station, and the police and National Guard soon made their appearance, not to afford peace and protection to the passengers, but mixing up with their colored countrymen, and, headed by the Police Captain, pouring volley after volley of musket balls into the unprotected crowd of passengers outside, and into the Railroad Depot, which was crowded with women and children. The negroes, finding themselves supported by the police and National Guard, and countenanced by the Governor, who first gave the order to fire upon the station, now became perfectly reckless, broke open the hotels and the station, and cut down every foreigner in their way. The hotels were ransacked of everything they possessed, and their furniture broken up and destroyed, as was also the office of the Railroad Company—every book and paper therein being literally torn to atoms. Men and women were forced to kneel down and submit to be robbed even of their rings and trinkets, and the killed and wounded had their clothes torn off them in the search for plunder. Every trunk and bag that could be found was torn open and destroyed. "Terrible, indeed," says a correspondent of the Times, "was it to witness fourteen Americans lying dead side by side, pierced through and through by the bullets of the police, and mangled beyond recognition by the machetes of the natives, and still more terrible was it to witness more than twice that number wounded, many of them beyond hope of recovery, as they lay there exhibiting the most fearful spectacle that can possibly be imagined, it appearing impossible that man could be so mutilated and yet survive. As far as ascertained about sixty Americans have been killed and wounded, fifteen of whom have already died, and a dozen who will probably be unable to survive beyond a few days. And as a proof that the attack was most unprovoked, and that the massacre was most wilful and premeditated on the part of the natives, I may state that but one native is reported to have been killed, which is yet doubtful, and a very few, if any, wounded."

The Empire City brought three of the wounded.

Among the killed were Michael Bettern, of Orleans county, Vermont; R. W. Marks, of Pennsylvania; Mr. Dubois, of Louisiana, and Mr. Stokes, an officer of Gen. Walker's army. It is impossible to ascertain all the names of the killed. Out of fourteen bodies at the railroad freight house, only one, the Mr. Stokes before mentioned, had been recognized.

Among the wounded were Wm. H. Hunter, Theodore De Sabla, Secretary to the American Consul at Panama, and Mr. Palmer, an employee of the Railroad Company. The above are all residents of the Isthmus. Also George O'Freed, of New-York, and the Rev. John Selwood, late of Grahamville, S. C., were wounded.

The sufferers were all sedulously attended to by the steamer and Isthmus physicians.

The passengers upon whom the assault was made by the natives, were those which left San Fransisco on the 20th March, by the steamer Cortez, for San Juan. They landed at Panama, instead of San Juan, in consequence of the Walker troubles in Nicaragua.

The Express matter of Wells, Fargo & Co., coming by the Illinois, was not carried over the Panama Railroad with the passengers, but started on the train in the evening. The robbers at Panama were aware of this, and awaited its arrival, expecting it to run off the track, torn up by them, and thus become an easy prey. Just before the arrival at Panama, one passenger car conductor, named Williams, was taken by the natives while watching the arrival of the train, and threatened with instant death unless he would go to meet the train and bring it in, which he agreed to do.

They swore they would kill every man on the train. He ran and met it just before it came to the broken track, waved his handkerchief as a signal to stop, and jumping on the engine, begged the engineer to go back.

It was instantly done, while the negroes approached within a few rods. The train ran back to Aspinwall, and was thereby saved.

European News.

The Cunard mail steamship Persia, Capt. Judkins, arrived at half-past six o'clock on the morning of the 29th ult. She sailed from Liverpool at half-past ten o'clock on Saturday, the 19th inst.

The steamship Ericsson sailed from Liverpool at 9 o'clock on Wednesday morning the 16th, with ten passengers.

The news conveyed by the Ericsson was not of importance, its chief feature having been the postponement of the debate on American affairs, until the return of Lord Clarendon from Paris. The Persia brings accounts of the close of the Conferences; of a civic banquet given in London to the American Minister; of Panmure's explanation why troops are being sent to Canada; of a small defeat given to the government by Mr. Spooner's vote against the grant to Maynooth, and of rumors that have gained strength thereby to the effect that Parliament will be speedily dissolved.

The Madrid Gazette of the 16th of April publishes a despatch from Valencia, dated the previous day, 12 o'clock, announcing that Valencia continued tranquil. The Captain-General of the Phillipine Islands had reported, under date the 8th February, that tranquillity continued.

On Monday, the 14th of April, at Vienna, the shares of the Lombard-Venetian Railroad were at 29 per cent. premium. A great Vienna banker received orders on Friday to buy 2,000 shares for Paris houses at 20 per cent., and on Saturday the premium was as high as 32 per cent.

The Courier de Marseilles states that the municipality of that city have resolved on giving a grand banquet to Marshal Pelissier and his staff, whose arrival there is expected about the end of this month.

Some apprehension is felt that the French Senate may, for the first time, turn restive and put a veto upon the bill imposing a tax upon carriages. They can only do this, according to the constitution, upon the ground that the bill is unconstitutional; but, on the other hand, if they choose to call it unconstitutional, there is no appeal from their verdict. Many of the Senators who were stimulated—nay almost ordered—by government to set up their carriages in order to give employment to the working classes, feel deeply aggrieved that they are now to be called upon to suffer a novel description of taxation.

Advices from Warsaw, of the 4th instant, say—Prince Gortschakoff has informed the principal capitalists that vast enterprises are projected in Poland and Russia, and that they will act in their own interest, and at the same time give proofs of patriotism, in arranging matters so that money will not be wanting when required. He mentioned, at the same time, that the Emperor wished that the manufactories of Russia should be no longer worked by foreigners, and that his majesty desired to bring into play the abundant resources of the country.

Advices from Alexandria of the 5th of April state that an accident had occurred on the railroad. No life was lost, but 600 bales of cotton had been destroyed. Solyman Pasha (the French Colonel Selves,) had resigned the command of the Egyptian army. A special commissioner from the Sultan had arrived at Alexandria.

The intelligence from Constantinople is to the 7th ult. It announces that grave disturbances have taken place in the province of Caramania, on account of the hattihumaioun. The Turks pillaged several houses, and all the inhabitants who were not Mussulmans were obliged to fly. An English company has obtained the concession of the railway from the Turkish capital to Adrianople.

A letter from Berlin of the 13th of April, says:—"The great dinner which the Minister of Commerce, M. Von der Heydi, gave in honor of peace, was very brilliant. The Ambassador of Russia proposed in very eloquent and hearty terms a toast to the Queen of England, the Emperor of the French, and the King of Prussia. The propositions made by Russia relative to the extension of the commercial and customs treaties of 1818 and 1825, have reached the government; but the concessions of Russia are much less important than had been expected."

Spain.

THE INSURRECTION AT VALENCIA.

The Madrid journals of the 9th and 10th of April, contain details of the insurrection at Valencia.

On the morning of the 6th, whilst the municipality was proceeding to draw for the conscription, a numerous body of insurgents rushed in, crying: "Down with the authorities! No conscription!" and, amidst threats of death to the members of the municipality, proceeded to break the urns. The insurgents were headed by firemen and National Guards, but were for the most part laborers from the railway. After expelling the Mayor and his colleagues from the building, the insurgents proceeded to the Plaza San Francisco.

The Captain-General marched against the insurgents at the head of a column of 200 infantry, 50 cavalry, and 4 pieces of artillery. The insurgents, who were in the balconies and the windows, received him with a sharp fire, which caused him some loss, and he fired cannon against them; but the insurgents resisted desperately, and bands of them spread over the city and attacked several guard-houses. After three hours' combat, in which the cavalry took part, the insurgents were dislodged from the houses, and wore compelled to retreat. The number of killed and wounded on both sides was about 40; and it is now said that amongst the slain were six soldiers and a lieutenant.

A Barcelona paper, the Progresso, of the 10th, says that the insurgents erected a barricade in the Call de Carnieeres, and that 300 of them defended it with such energy that it was not carried without "great loss," both among them and the troops. It says also, that their rallying cry was "Vive Espartero? Vive Liberty!" 130 insurgents were arrested on the 8th. Troops arrived in the city from Barcelona on the 9th, and others had been despatched from Madrid.

Gen. Villalonga was removed from the Captaincy-General of Valencia, and Gen. de Zabala, Minister of Foreign Affairs, is appointed to the post. Marshal O'Donnell, Minister of War, is charged with the administration of the foreign department during his absence. A report was current in the capital that the troops of the garrison of Madrid had been kept in their barracks owing to the fear of disturbances; but the Epoca says that it was not true. A grand review of about 30,000 of the garrison and National Guard of Madrid had been ordered.

The Epoca says that the movement of Valencia had ramifications at Murcio, Carthagena, and Barcelona.

A report has been circulated by a Tory London journal, that Lord Palmerston and M. Labouchere are about to retire from the cabinet, and Sidney Herbert and Sir James Graham to take the government.

It is reported at Paris that diplomatic movements of importance are on foot with respect to Italy.

An Austrian ambassador is to go immediately to Rome on a special mission.

It is rumored that this mission refers to the concordat, but the Italian journals say it relates to the general state of Italy.

Count Orloff goes to Naples immediately after the exchange of the ratifications, to see his son, who was wounded in the Crimea.

TRAFFIC IN WHITE GIRLS.—"The traffic in girls between England and the Continent has of late been carried on, if not upon so large a scale or so openly as that of Circassia and Constantinople, at least in a far more shameful manner, without our boasted civilization interposing any remedy. The Hessian broom-girls—those poor little flaxen-haired creatures who are purchased or stolen from Hesse to be employed by their thieving masters as beggars in the streets of London—are, Heaven be praised, less and less frequently seen here, but in their place we notice among the cyprians, swarming more and more, German women. These are enticed hither with specious pretences from Hamburgh, Bremen and the Rhine countries; taken in charge by procuresses, reduced to abject destitution, and at last turned out upon the streets. On the other hand, the German and especially the Hamburgh brothels have their regular agents here by whom English girls are, through a thousand villainous arts, allured on board ship and carried off to the Continent. Not long since, one of these cases was brought before the city magistracy. A young girl had been taken away from her father's house almost by force. In the deepest distress he applied to Sir Robert Carden for aid in recovering his child, and fortunately in time to obtain it. Sir Robert telegraphed the Hamburgh Police to arrest the kidnappers and at once sent over two trusty agents to release the girl. Smith and Munger—the agents employed—state that they succeeded in this, only after much effort; that the procuress who took the girl had reported her as a thief, and that they had reason to suspect that said procuress was on excellent terms with the Police, who raised all sorts of obstacles in their way; that many other English girls were kept in Hamburgh upon various pretexts; that the traffic was thoroughly organized; that the British Consul was aware of the facts, but could do absolutely nothing unless Lord Clarendon should see fit to take decisive measures, and finally, the wretched condition of these unfortunate victims was heart-rending."—German Paper.

The American Question in Parliament.

In reply to a question put by Mr. Bailie, in the House of Commons, on the 14th April, touching the papers relating to recruiting in the United States, Lord Palmerston said:

The documents which must naturally form the groundwork of the reply of her Majesty's government to the last communication from the government of the United States were only received a short time ago, and they contain a good deal of detail. My noble friend Lord Clarendon, as is well known, is now at Paris, engaged in negotiations of a very important character, which occupy a great portion of his attention every day. My noble friend's powers of work are, however, very remarkable, and, although absent from this country, he is transacting the business of the Foreign Office with only that delay which is necessarily incident to the distance between Paris and the Foreign Office. The answer to be made to the United States government necessarily requires very careful preparation—that, on the one hand it may contain nothing which can at all envenom the discusssion that unfortunately has already gone too far; while on the other hand, nothing may be omitted essential to the case of the British government. The absence of my noble friend, the necessity of communication with him, and the small portion of time he has been enabled to bestow upon a matter which requires a great deal of consideration, have been the causes which have hitherto prevented the completion of the answer of the British government. The answer is in preparation, and we are in communication with my noble friend on the subject. I will not undertake to say that in the course of this week the answer can be so entirely agreed upon as to be communicated to Mr. Dallas. My noble friend may probably return to this country at the end of this week, and I think I may venture to say that at an early period of next weeek we shall be in a position to submit to the house the whole of the correspondence. [Hear, hear.]

Sir B. Lytton observed that he had given notice of a motion with reference to the dispute between Her Majesty's government and the government of the United States respecting the affairs of Central America. He could not bring forward that question until certain papers for which he had asked, and which he was told would be laid on the table in a few days, had been produced.

Congressional.

Thirty-fourth Congress—First Session—Senate.

April 28.—Another Pacific Railroad Bill.—Mr. Hamlin introduced a bill to incorporate the Atlantic and Pacific National Union Railroad Company. He said the bill had been sent to him by an individual whom he did not know, with the request that it should be offered as a substitute for all other Pacific Railroad bills. He read some extracts from a letter accompanying the bill, in which its author says it is the most important bill ever presented in Congress since the adoption of the American Constitution, and whatever party shall first adopt it will be sure to succeed in the Presidential campaign. The reading of the extracts occasioned much laughter. Kansas.—Mr. Brown spoke on the Kansas question. He argued that the right of sovereignty over the Territories had not been delegated to Congress. He said he should always vote for the admission of any State with sufficient population to entitle it to one representative in Congress, without inquiring whether its Constitution permitted or excluded Slavery. Mr. Stuart moved to take up the River and Harbor bills. Rejected. The Naval Board.—Mr. Bell, of Tenn., defended Lieut. Maury from the derogation implied by the action of the Naval Board.

April 29.—After some debate, the Senate refused to print 10,000 copies of Capt. Maury's report of the exploration of the sources of the Brasos and Witchitan rivers—Messrs. Brown and others contending that the Senate published too many books. The bill making appropriations for new fortifications was taken up, considered, and set aside, without action. Mr. Stuart introduced a bill providing a punishment for forging or counterfeiting land warrants, or certificates. Referred to Judiciary Committee. Several private bills were passed.

April 30.—The House bills relative to appropriations for the improvement of the harbor of Sheboygan, and creating Columbus, Ky., a port of delivery, passed. On motion of Mr. Sumner, of Mass., a resolution was adopted directing the Finance Committee to consider the expediency of providing, by law, all articles of foreign manufacture obtained exclusively from submerged and derelict wrecks, whether sunk in our own or foreign waters, may be admitted free of duty.

May 1.—Mr. Weller submitted a resolution, calling on the President for any correspondence which our Minister to Nicaragua (not heretofore communicated) regarding the recognition of the new Nicaraguan Government. Mr. Weller defended Gen. Walker. He said he was in the constant receipt of letters inquiring whether he sustained the policy of this nation in regard to the Nicaraguan Government. He now took occasion to remark that he entirely disagreed with that policy. If the Executive thought it expedient to reject Col. French on personal grounds, he thought the Nicaraguan Government should have been notified of that fact, and been officially recognized. The usual practice of this Government has been to recognize the South American Governments, whosoever was in power there. Those which lie on the route of the Pacific, especially, ought to be treated with courtesy and friendship. He did not desire to see Central America annexed to this Republic, but wanted a stable Government there, and this was only to be accomplished by the diffusion of Anglo Saxon blood—he, therefore, thought that emigration to that country should be encouraged rather than discountenanced. He said that no man had been more shamefully misrepresented than Gen. Walker. He was not a freebooter, but a man of the purest motives. Mr. Weller read a letter from Gen. Walker, in which it is asserted that the British Government have interfered in the present struggle between Costa Rica and Nicaragua, and have furnished the Costa Ricans with arms. A state of war now exists between these two Governments. Costa Rica invaded Nicaragua, though she did not declare war against her, but against the Americans who aided the present party in power to subvert the old Government. Mr. Weller, in allusion to the recent riot at Panama, said the best of feeling existed between this Government and the Government of New-Granada, and he had no doubt the whole power of the latter would be exercised to bring the offenders to justice. Mr. Seward had called some weeks ago, for information on this subject. He however thought it was important that the President should be left free to exercise his discretion in this delicate matter. Mr. Douglas believed that the Clayton-Bulwer treaty was being violated every day by Great Britain, and thought something ought to be done about it. He regarded the present Government of Nicaragua legitimate; as much so as the other existing Governments of Central America. It was the firmest and most stable Government there had been there since the throwing off of the Spanish yoke, and, so far as he knew, justice was more impartially administered, and the rights of man and property more sacredly guarded and protected under the existing Government than under any previous one. Nor was it any objection in his mind that an American by birth was in command of the Nicaraguan army. Nicaragua has as much right to become the asylum of emigrants from this country as we have to receive European emigrants. She had as much right to naturalize Gen. Walker as we had to do the same thing by Gen. Shields. Further, Nicaragua had as much right to send an American by birth Minister to this country as we had to send a man of foreign birth to represent us in the Courts of Spain, Italy or Holland. He believed we ought to enforce our neutrality laws, but not go a hair's breadth beyond the line of strict duty. Mr. Butler thought we ought to be careful not to involve ourselves in a war with any nation through the acts of intermeddling adventurers. Mr. Weller withdrew the resolution. The Retiring Board.—Mr. Toombs spoke in opposition to the action of the Naval Board, contending that the law was not properly executed, therefore the proceedings under it are void.

May 2.—Mr. Benjamin made a speech on matters growing out of the Slavery question, in which he declared it to be his intention to join the Democratic party. Mr. Cass obtained the floor for Thursday next, when he will address the Senate on "Squatter Sovereignty," in reply to Mr. Brown of Mississippi. Mr. Seward replied to that portion of Mr. Benjamin's speech which respected himself. Mr. Hale, alluding to Mr. Clay's recent speech, remarked that he had but one word to submit in reply, that it will take something besides malignity to redeem imbecility from contempt. Mr. Clay, (springing to his feet greatly excited,) I defy the Senator's malice as much as I contemn his baseness. If he were animated by those heroic feelings which he professes, he would not come upon this floor, and under the protection of its rules, seek immunity for his insolence. I know he is pleased by this attention. There are those of his class, who, like the London Attorney, Mark Meddle in the play, are ambitious of a kick. [Sensation.] Mr. Clay concluded by remarking that he had nothing more to say to that Senator, having twice declined his acquaintance. Mr. Hale said he had never sought an introduction to Mr. Clay but once, and that was on business for the benefit of a citizen of Alabama. Mr. Clay said he did not think his reputation for veracity would suffer by comparison with one who had repeatedly eaten his own words. Mr. Hale replied, that if he did eat his own words, he would have a more palatable meal than the Senator from Alabama if he should undertake to eat his. [Laughter.]

House of Representatives.

April 28.—Mr. Nichols made a personal explanation respecting his vote for Mr. Banks as Speaker. He denied that the printing and binding question influenced his vote against his colleague and for Mr. Banks. Mr. Campbell disavowed having intended to cast the least imputation on Mr. Nichols' integrity, but at the same time he believed the printing question delayed the organization of the House. Mr. Ready asked questions of Mr. Campbell in reference to what the latter had said in connection with the Speakership. Mr. Campbell replied that no formal proposition was made by members of that party. Mr. Morgan objected to further explanations, and the Senate's bill to remit duties on goods, wares and merchandise destroyed by fire, was taken up. After an unsuccessful motion to make the bill a special order, it was sent to the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union. The Senate bill, amendatory of the act, establishing the Circuit Court of California, passed.

April 29.—The House passed a joint resolution for enlarging the Custom House, Post Office, and U. S. Court-house building at Cleveland. On the motion of Mr. Cox, the Committee on Commerce was instructed to inquire into the expediency of exempting steamboats of 150 tons burden, or less, from the operation of the law for the better security of passengers on vessels propelled in whole or part by steam. The Nebraska contested election case was postponed three weeks. A resolution was unanimously reported from the Committee of Elections, declaring Mr. Fuller rightfully entitled to represent the 6th district of Maine. Adopted. Also to allow Mr. Milliken, contestant of Mr. Fuller, mileage and per diem. Mr. Quitman advocated the repeal of the neutrality laws, which he considered a violation of the Constitution and a stigma on American intelligence.

April 30.—Mr. Washburn, from the Committee on Commerce, reported a bill establishing collection districts, designating ports of entry and delivery, and modifying the revenue laws. He did not wish it to go to the Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union, for that would be the end of it. Mr. Jones of Tenn., said the bill comprised 350 pages, the largest ever presented in Congress; time should be afforded for examination.

Mr. Fuller of Me., remarked that the bill was as perfect as it could be. It was principally a codification of existing laws, which are now spread over four hundred acts, commencing with the adoption of the constitution.

May 1.—The House passed the Indian Appropriation Bill and the bill reviving the Act of 1853, relative to suspended entries of public lands, and the Act of 1846, concerning suspended preëmption land claims. On motion of Mr. Phelps, the petition from the members of the Pittsburg Bar, against the official conduct of Judge Irvin was referred to the Judiciary Committee. Mr. Maxwell spoke on the Southern side of the Slavery question, and Mr. Perry against the extension of Slavery. Mr. Quitman introduced a bill to repeal certain sections of the neutrality laws. Referred to the Judiciary Committee.

May 2.—Mr. Ritchie presented the memorial of Judge Irvin, of Pennsylvania, in response to the charges of the Pittsburg Bar against his official conduct, and asking a full investigation. Referred to Committee on the Judiciary. Thirteen private bills were passed.

Presidential Facts and Rumors.

Gen. Gideon J. Pillow has written a letter withdrawing his name from the Cincinnati Democratic National Convention and recommends President Pierce to do the same. He favors Buchanan or Douglas, and says that both are sound National Democrats, and that either of them will unite the party.

The Washington Sentinel is of the same opinion, at least as regards Buchanan. It gives its reasons for backing him in these words:—

"With the South as a unit, thirty-four Northern votes will elect the Democratic candidate. Mr. Buchanan holds that number in Pennsylvania and New-Jersey, and therefore his selection (without reference to other States in which he has equal chances and with any other candidate) will secure the triumph of the Democratic party and vindicate the rights of the South. What more can any man do? Who so surely can do that? But, in addition, Mr. Buchanan possesses in as high a degree as any man the confidence of the 'solid men' of the country of all parties, to that degree that demagogues could not mislead them with false statements."

The Albany Knickerbocker speculates as follows:—"The chances that Hunter of Virginia will get the nomination at the Cincinnati Convention are on the increase. The reception given to Buchanan in Philadelphia was so mixed with 'wet blankets' and disrespect, that the prospects of Hunter and other outsiders have largely increased. Should Hunter fail, it is said that his friends intend to rally around Daniel S. Dickinson, of New-York. How about that? What says the Atlas and Argus? Can it swallow Dickinson?

The Lowell Courier to-day, says the Lowell Advertiser of the 29th ult., is neither Whig nor Know-Nothing, but Independent, and goes for Sam Houston. On Friday the Courier was Whig; yesterday it was K. N., to-day Independent; tomorrow it will be something else.

A dispatch has been received by a gentleman of Washington, that North Carolina has instructed her delegates to the Cincinnati Convention, to vote for Gen. Pierce for President, and Mr. Dobbin for Vice-President.

The Baton Rouge Advocate says, Col. Benton, in his late letter on the Presidency, had in his eye, not Col. Fremont, but some such man as Justice Wayne of Georgia, as the man unconnected with the slavery contest, who ought to be taken up by the people for the Presidency.

The Feliciana Democrat comes to us with the name of Stephen A. Douglas at its head for President. This is the Democrat's choice, but it will support any other sound man nominated by the Cincinnati Convention.

A New-Hampshire Democrat writes, that Pierce will be defeated in that State by 5,000 majority.

The Columbia (S. C.) Banner supports Mr. Pierce, believing that "he has done more than any other man in his position could have done." "We have," it says, "advocated his re-nomination under all circumstances, and independently counselled that on our own principles of conservatism, we should adhere to him against all other candidates. We have always held it a good rule in life to give assistance to a friend when he needed it, as the best evidence of an earnest interest in his behalf—and by solid acts and not by words.

The Taunton [Mass.] Gazette waxes witty over Mr. Fillmore's prospects. It says:—Mr. Fillmore was informed of his nomination when in Rome. Strange to say, he did not appear to attach much importance to the matter. The reports say it had no influence upon him. It hasn't on anybody else.

It is generally believed that Mr. Fillmore has accepted the nomination, but we find the following paragraph going the rounds:—

"The rumor now is that Fillmore will decline the nomination. It is said that he has written to his friends in New-York that he is not a Know-Nothing. George Law is to trot out in his stead."

The Northern Budget sums up thus:—For the Vice-Presidency, Howell Cobb is said to be the most prominent. All who are for either Pierce or Douglas for President, are inflexibly against Buchanan. Buchanan has the support of Pennsylvania, New-Jersey, and Maryland, with strength in Michigan and New-York. New-England is mostly for Pierce, and the South mainly for either Douglas or Pierce. Prominent Democrats, who have not resigned the principle of availability, and who, at this early period look to compromise, in case of bitter conflicts regarding Northern candidates, have in reserve Gen. Rusk of Texas. There is a strong impression in well-informed circles that Mr. Buchanan's prominent friends are by their indiscreet zeal likely to induce a combination against him powerful enough to prevent his nomination under any circumstances.

Famine in Cape Verde Islands.

Wash. A. Bartlett, late of the U. N. Navy, writes to the National Intelligencer:

I was at the Cape Verde Islands as late as the 29th October last, and an eye-witness of the desolate condition of at least two of the islands. On my leaving, Com. Crabbe, commanding the United States squadron, charged me with documents, which were published in yours and other journals on my arrival home on the 1st of December, with some general remarks of mine that unless relief could be sent to these unforunate people from some quarter, they must perish to the number of perhaps thirty thousand in this year of 1856.

Unfortunately for the appeal then made, being at a time when such heavy drafts had been required on the public sympathy and charity for the sufferers of our own land at Norfolk and Portsmouth, and the commencement of the winter season, when all our benevolence is needed for our own suffering poor, it was not a time when an appeal could be made effectually here; but I had made appeals elsewhere which were responded to.

And now that the additional testimony which you have published shows the continuance of the famine, and that there is yet time for us as a people to do something for these distressed sufferers, I trust the appeal will be heard, and that out of our abundant stores and promising harvest we shall send generous aid to this famishing people. The fact is certain, that 50,000 people are, as it were, shipwrecked at sea, on desolate islands, and they must have corn to sustain them alive till Providence shall give them rain and a crop. And as you have asked that some one shall take the initiative in the matter, I hereby offer to commence a subscription with one hundred bushels of corn, and to take charge of the vessel that may be loaded with the bounty of our people, and at my own cost and charge to find the means to man and navigate her to the Cape Verde Islands, and to sail the moment such a vessel can be loaded.

Correspondence.

Dublin, April 19th, 1856.

Your friend, Sir Colman O'Loghlen, has been appointed assistant-barrister for the county Carlow; he presided, for the first time, on Monday last. All parties hailed his presence in the court-house with delight. But, it seems to me, this appointment is a very inadequate recognition of his forensic talents and attainments. Perhaps, if he were a presumptuous rogue, like Judge Keogh, his promotion might have been higher. Heigho! the wicked prosper here on earth—especially in Ireland.

Father Maher, of Carlow Craigue, and Cashel Hoey, editor of the Nation, have been pitching beautifully into each other these last two weeks. Father Maher calls the editor an "infidel," and the editor speaks of the "brazen recklessness" of the belligerent priest, whom he commiserates as a "lugubrious, poor old gentleman." The whole of this comes from the expulsion of the Nation from the "Catholic Young Men's Society," by order of Archbishop Cullen. There is, in fact, a delightful row all around. George Henry Moore, one of the members of Mayo, is into it dashingly. He lets fly six columns at the pastor of Craigue, and in the handsomest manner invites his reverence to meet him—"angrily, if you please," he says, "but fairly, if you dare!"

Another Tory is in for Athlone. Capt. Handcock, son of Lord Castlemaine, succeeds William Keogh. The Dublin Telegraph blots its morose pages with big tears, over the loss of another patron in Parliament. New Ross, Sligo, and, last of all, Athlone, have fallen into the hands of the enemies of Sadleirism. John Reynolds turned up on the hustings. A seedy old pawnbroker, one Martin Carroll, proposed him as a candidate, to give him the privilege of disemboguing a speech. In doing so, the man of the three golden balls declared that Reynolds "loved Ireland and the cause of Ireland," and they wanted a man like him "to shield their altars from desecration and preserve their virgins, dedicated to the living God, from insult."

Reynold's speech was, for all the world, like a pawn-broker's shop. All the old odds and ends of the deceased oratory of years were piled up in it, and, with all the dull jokes and Joe Millerisms of a dozen bankrupt agitations, made up the dingiest miscellany of scurrility, clap-trap, and slang.

Capt. Handcock said he was no place-hunter. Alderman Reynolds avowed it reminded him of the song about Miss Judy Baxter, "who refused a husband before he had asked her." He repudiated the liberal professions of the gallant young captain, as "sham, humbug, and base coin." Then he told the story which O'Connell, and every Repeal orator from him down to Tom Arkins, has ten thousand times told, about the corporal of the Donegal militia.

"Where's the Donegal militia?" asked the Brigadier-general.

"Here I am!" said the corporal.

Turning from Handcock, he had a set-to with Ennis, another of the candidates. He congratulated that gentleman on his declaring himself a democrat. He was glad to find, by his own admission, he was "crockery-ware, and not china; delf, and not porcelain." Warming, as he gives it right and left to all against him, he thrusts his knotted fist into Dr. Gray's stomach with all the brute force of a coal-porter.

"I know," he says, "that precious lad of the Freeman's Journal. He commenced his career at Claremorris and Achil Island, distributing insulting No-popery tracts against the Catholic religion. He is a rascally Orange dodger."

Becoming suddenly pleasant, the next minute, he tells the mob his mother was a Tipperary man, and sits down amid tremendous cheers, imploring them not to realize the truthfulness of Moore's sad lines—

"Unprized are her sons till they've learned to betray, Undistinguished they live if they shame not their sires."

All through his performance, this audacious demagogue was boisterously cheered, whilst his foul insolence and indecency of tongue were received with shouts of laughter, and a loathsome exuberance of mirth. Where on earth is Ireland, like a drunken helot, reeling to? Men notorious for being utterly eaten up with political corruption—men who have for years and years, until their knavish heads grew gray with their debaucheries, thrived upon the swindled credulity of the people, and who walk the public thoroughfares with the sign of the thief and the leper across their foreheads—these men are still cheered, and blessed, and trusted. Heavens! what a spectacle.

At the close of the Cavan Special Commission, Thomas Dunne was convicted of the murder of Miss Hinds, and was sentenced by Chief Justice Monahan to be hanged on the 16th of May. The culprit heard the sentence unmoved, asking his Lordship, when he had done, to allow his body "to be given to his people." His Lordship intimated to him his humble petition was graciously granted.

By-the-bye, in your "Recollections" you oughtn't to forget Monahan, the Chief Justice. You met him, as an enemy, on more than one occasion. You helped to beat him out of Galway in 1847. He helped to ship you out of Ireland in 1849. What an ungrammatical, slovenly, slip-shod limb of the law he was! Keogh and he are well matched on the same bench. However, Monahan is a lawyer, which Keogh never was. Rascality prospers in Ireland. I say it again. King Lear has method in his madness—there is Gospel-truth in his wild ravings on Dover heath:—

"Through tattered clothes small vices do appear; Robes, and furr'd gowns, hide all."

Your Stonyhurst school-fellow, Lord Castle-Rosse, has made his maiden speech in Parliament. The occasion was that of old Spoony Spooner's motion to rescind the Maynooth grant. It was a very creditable display; so every one says. Your father, also, spoke upon the occasion. John Esmonde, his colleague, is a huge mute—as fat as Pelissier. The idea of his being in Parliament!

"Fat paunches have lean pates."

Shakespere gives the text, and Esmonde furnishes the comment. Out with him! Pexton, our old cobbler at Clongowes, with his miserable slim legs, protruding ribs, perforating elbows, and sharp, accidulated nose, would have been an infinitely better man for St. Stephen's than this inarticulate porpoise of Pembrokestown. Pexton against Esmonde, any day! Come, thou "lean and hungry Cassius," off with your apron, down with your last, and out with your programme—there's nothing like leather!

The Cork Examiner renews the report that Mr. John O'Connell will retire, ere long, from the representation of Clonmel, owing to an appointment to some place under government, suited to the practical talents and business habits of the sitting member; and Mr. Patrick Joseph Murray is named as his successor. "Mr. Murray is a native of Tipperary, possessed of independent means, an excellent landlord, a member of the bar, and well known in literary circles as a writer of considerable ability and versatility."

Mr. Murray's earliest effusions sparkled like ginger-beer, in the columns of the Tipperary Vindicator, and were supposed to be satires on Young Ireland, on public honesty he had not the pluck to imitate, and literature which his stingy little brain was incompetent even to plagiarize. By all means, Dr. Burke and his parishioners must return him for that beautiful borrough which Captain O'Connell has so chivalrously represented on the Curragh of Kildare, and the barrack-square of Waterford. Such men as Murray are wanted in Parliament. The Whig whippers-in want them to make up their pack.

A great scene occurred in the Court of Common Pleas, the day that Mr. Justice Keogh took his seat, for the first time, on the Bench. The reporter of the Evening Post pencils it off in this style:—

"The Judges did not sit until half past one o'clock; but long before that hour the court was densely crowded in every part. The spacious gallery was literally packed; the jury boxes and the benches being occupied by motley groups, some in bar costume and some in ordinary dress, amongst whom the gay and fashionable dresses of the fair sex, in every variety of shade and ornament, formed an agreeable contrast, and presented a cheerful and animated coup d'œil. Expectation was on tiptoe, as the preparation for the entering of the Judges, preceded by the tipstaffs coming on the bench with the portfolios of the learned personages, and those preliminaries being completed, the learned occupants of the bench advanced from chamber, the junior Judge leading, followed by Mr. Justice Jackson, Chief Justice Monahan, and Mr. Justice Ball, the senior of the puisne Judges. On Mr. Justice Keogh ascending the steps leading to the judgment seat, the right honorable and learned judge was greeted with a hearty round of applause from every quarter of the bench. The new Judge acknowledged the reception he met with on this, the first day of his appearance in his judicial capacity, by bowing graciously to the bar and the general assemblage. He looked remarkably well."

He looked remarkably well! Fancy Keogh in a red petticoat, as poor Devin Reilly irreverently called it, and a broad-bottomed wig! How the jovial knave must have laughed under it, at the thought of being there. As for all that crowding and cheering, and waving of scented handkerchiefs by fair hands, and applause from the members of the bar, it was all got up. "The spacious gallery was literally packed." Packed, as John Mitchel's jury was, and Smith O'Brien's, and the Dublin theatre, on "Command" nights in '48, when Lord Clarendon had his valets, and shoe-blacks, and grooms, and scullions, distributed through the Pit, and every other part of the building, to greet him vociferously when he made his appearance in the Vice-regal box. You remember, too, when the Earl of Besborough opened his model soup-kitchen, on Easter Monday, 1847, in the parade-ground, opposite the Royal Barracks, a shivering squad of invalids and cripples from the Mendicity Institute, gave what the reporters next day called "a hearty cheer," when his amiable Lordship tasted the soup. Such demonstrations as that which signalized Mr. Keogh's accession to the Bench, are easily invented. Half-a-crown a head will do it. As for the ladies, they used to throng the Queen's Bench, and even squeeze up old Blackburne and Moore, and make them uncomfortably hot, during the State-trials. Whatever is doing, they're ever on hand, the darlings!

Should Lord Palmerston be hauled over the coals for the appointment in the House of Commons—as very probably he will be, by Mr. Disraeli—how triumphantly he'll point to that scene in the Common Pleas as a public sanction, by the Bench, the Bar, the Public, and above all, by the ladies of Ireland, of the appointment of Judge Keogh. Judge Ball, his red-nosed, jolly-nosed, dry-witted brother, must have been deliciously amused to see such a scamp bowing in his new wig to the beadles and bailiffs, and all the other floating population of the court. Judge Ball is full of fun, and much addicted to good living, so much so, that in the Four Courts, and on Circuit, and indeed in Parliament, when he was there as Member for Clonmel, he was known as "Ball and Supper," as poor Maginn was known as My gin-and-water. Judge Keogh may not highly enlighten his Lordship on the Bench, but he'll greatly assist him in convivial consultations over claret and broiled kidneys.

Pat Costello is much pleased with the appointment, though he doesn't see why he shouldn't be dressed up in a big wig and bloody gown, just as well as his friend, Keogh. Nor I neither. Pat is just as well entitled as the latter to the judicial disguise. When I look at him now, strolling through the hall of the Four Courts, with that snuff-colored, gold-headed walking-stick, with that roguish humorsome nose and mouth of his, I can hardly fancy that eight years have gone by, since on your return from Paris, after presenting the address to the Provisional Government, and we were walking together down Sackville street, Pat met us at the corner of Earl street, and with a sly twinkle of his greenish damp eye, asked you if you hadn't been "fraternizing in France?"

Oh, by-the-bye, and by all that's beautiful! you mustn't forget Pat, neither, in your Recollections of Ireland. You have heaps of stories about him. You don't forget his meeting you one day on the strand of Tramore, just a week or two after the Secession, and talking to you about Smith O'Brien. "He's crotchety, Meagher, crotchety," says Pat, with his unmusical hard brogue, "he's always breaking away from his leaders. I believe, if he ever got into Heaven, he wouldn't be a day there without kicking up another Paradise Lost!"

But the best story about Pat is his meeting the late Sir Michael O'Loughlen, in Brussels, immediately after the latter had been created a Baronet. O'Loghlen and Costello had been for many years the most intimate friends. It was "Mick and Pat" between them. On the occasion I speak of, Pat was sauntering through the Place Royale, just opposite the church of St. Jacques, whistling a tune, swinging his snuff-colored stick, with his hat on one side of his head, when he sees Sir Michael coming towards him from the Hotel de l'Europe. "Be all that's lovely," says Pat, "but here's the Masther of the Rolls!"

Pat quickened his pace, stepped out like a "soger," shouldered his stick, gave his hat an additional cock, and cries out—"How're you Mick?"

"How do you do, Mr. Costello," says the Master of the Rolls, with great decorum and dignity, barely smiling, and perfectly calm.

Pat steadies his hat on his head, buttons his coat, brings his stick prompt with the point to the ground, straightens himself up a bit, looks at the Baronet, nods his head knowingly—

"Why, then," says he, "one would imagine it was I was promoted!"

The Carlow Sentinel mentions the death of Ebenezer Shakleton, of Balitore, in that county. Ebenezer died in his seventy-third year. The descendant of an ancient Yorkshire family—members of the Society of Friends—which settled in that same quiet nook of Balitore, in the reign of Queen Anne, he was distinguished as well by the historic recollections connected with his name, as by the goodness, usefulness, and purity of his life. It was at the grammar-school founded by his great-grandfather, that Edmund Burke received his preparatory education for Trinity College. The love which the great Irish Statesman ever cherished for this school, and the beautiful valley in which it stood, and the venerable preceptor under whose care his young mind expanded and grew strong, and produced such immortal fruit, is delightfully evident in his correspondence with Mrs. Leadbeater. The Shakleton whose death I mention, was a truly good man, widely known and greatly loved. In politics, he belonged to James Haughton's school. For upwards of fifty years he kept the hotel on the Dublin road, a little above the village. Breakfasting one morning there with my father, on my way up from Carlow, we were told by the waiter that we couldn't have any chops, as the butcher had disappointed them. "Thirty years ago," said my father, "I came this way, just at the same hour as I've done this morning, and having ordered chops for breakfast, after ten minutes' delay, got the same excuse."

The Catholic Telegraph has a paragraph this morning, announcing that—here are the words—"ten thousand dollars have been subscribed by nine gentlemen in New-York and one in Charleston, towards establishing a College for American youth at Rome." If this be true, what will your Know-Nothings say? If Rome doesn't go to America, America will go to Rome, and what becomes then of the Constitution and Bunker Hill monument? The Know-Nothings should, at once, run a bill through Congress, prohibitory of emigration to Rome for such purposes as the Telegraph announces in the foregoing paragraph. That would be the best way (besides letting no one into America) to give effect to their Japannese constipating policy.

Dr. Cahill is writing immeasurable letters to Lord Carlisle, the Lord Lieutenant, in this same indecent old Telegraph. What they're about, it would be difficult to say. Now, here's a passage from his last production, dated Belfast, April 16th:

"Examine the history of Cyrus, of Philip, of Alexander: study the biography of the prosecuting Roman Emperors: read the career of Nero, Caligula, Domitian, Dioclesian: follow the desolating track of Attila, the ferocious Northern barbarian; and I know, my Lord, I am addressing a finished scholar and historian when I assert, that neither the Paganism of the ancient Eastern Empires, nor the inhumanity of the Roman Emperors, nor the cruel barbarism of the Northern Invaders, can bear any comparison in point of unmitigated persecution and unfeeling atrocity with the insane fanatical horrors of the early Protestant Christian Kings of England."

What on earth all this has to do with the present condition of Ireland, with John Sadleir's forgeries, Keogh's new wig, the disbanding of the Militia, the Athlone election, or anything else which at present affects or interests the Irish public, I'm at a yawning loss to conjecture. Dr. Cahill's pen is like Mynheer Von Flamm's steam-leg, which never ceased going, even when its owner was dead. I knew an old parish-priest in the county Kilkenny, a few years ago, who never let a Sunday go by without having a thundering attack from the altar on "Harry the Eighth and his half dozen of wives." The topics of Doctor Cahill's letter to the Earl of Carlisle—indeed, to every one else—are just as original and appropriate. He is an admirable, a graceful, and impressive lecturer; a good priest; a delightful companion; a picturesque preacher; but, as a public letter-writer, he is relentless and oppressive. I close, lest you say the same of yours,

KILMAINHAM.

P. S.—By-the-bye, I understand that Spooner, the Member for North Warwickshire, is preparing a bill compelling all letters, for publication in newspapers, to pay an equivalent for the post-office charge they at present evade, his immediate object being the total suppression of Dr. Cahill, the Rev. gentleman's inability to pay for such a mountain of letters, as he throws up in a year, being a matter of mournful notoriety.

Letters from Cairo announce that the disturbances at Mecca and Djeddah have increased, and that both places are in full insurrection. The inhabitants have refused to recognize the authority of the new governor appointed at Constantinople, and it is said that 60,000 men are in arms.

Irish News.

Spirit of the Irish Press.

The Dundalk Democrat is justly excited at Keogh's appointment to the Bench. It says:—"He will laugh and grow fat' on the salary which his treason to Ireland has won him. What cares he for the taunts of patriots, the jibes of wits, the frowns of honest men. His brazen brow will meet and brave it all. Always bloated and blowing and puffing like an over-fed ox, no blush of shame will mantle his face; for William Keogh thinks it a famous thing to have a country to sell. And he has sold Ireland wholesale. In one huge transaction he disposed of the tenant-right of the farmer's from the Giant's Causeway to Cape Clear, and behold the reward he has got, a seat on the Bench of Justice!

And yet, disgraceful and humiliating as this appointment is, we thank thee, Palmerston for making it! It has given the last confirmation, if such were necessary, to his hatred of this country, and his hostility to the rights of the tenant farmers. He has rewarded the suicide's partner in political guilt. He has raised up the pledge-breaker to a position, where none but the pure-minded, the virtuous and noble-hearted should sit. It is the boon of Whiggery to Ireland in 1856, and we believe its reply to the defiance of Sligo and New-Ross.

Well, be it so. Let the country look to it. Let the honest men take up the gauntlet thus cast down. A general election is approaching. This disgraceful appointment sounds the note of preparation for the people. It proclaims for them undying and eternal hostility to the Whigs. This base party starved and banished millions. They gave a license to the landlords to level houses in tens of thousands with the earth. They passed their iniquitous Titles' Bill, and handed the Catholic Hierarchy over to the common informer. They bought the traitors of the Irish Parliamentary party. They called on their dupes to resist Lord George Bentinck's motion for granting £16,000,000 to our famishing people. They have again and again passed their gagging bills, coercion bills; transported O'Brien, Meagher, Martin, and Mitchel; imposed an income tax on a country recovering slowly from eight years of dreadful famine; but all these insults, wrongs, outrages and tyrannies are nothing, worth nothing, when compared with the crowning insult they have offered the country by placing this man, William Keogh, on the judicial bench."

"THE PEACE" IN IRELAND.

Immediately on the news of the signing of peace being made known in our city, say the Waterford Chronicle, the "joy-bells" of the Protestant Cathedral rang out a merry peal, which was continued at intervals during the evening. A general feeling of joy pervaded all classes of our citizens at the welcome tidings; and the only hope now is that nothing untoward may happen to render it abortive.

The Czar having submitted, says the Leinster Express, to conditions which his father rejected with scorn—having substantially consented to all that was demanded of him, England and France had no option but to conclude peace. They have done so in an honorable and dignified manner, and it is no small commendation to the firmness of the British plenipotentaries, that the Emperor of the French has acknowledged that it was to them that the advantageous terms obtained were principally due.

If the war now ended has been beneficial to the cause of justice in Europe—if it has freed one state from usurpation, and curtailed the dangerous ambition of another—if it has added to the fame of France and England, and strengthened British dominion in the East—it has not been without advantages of different kinds. It has shown us the faults of our military system, and given the most vital caution against permitting their continuance. Whilst it has increased our power, it has checked our national vanity, and told us that even with the greatest courage, and the greatest will, at the eleventh hour, to do well, there is no royal road to military skill.

On the same subject the Dundalk Democrat talks somewhat differently:

It is well. Well for France—well, perhaps, for England. What have they gained by the two years' slaughter? Nothing for humanity, nothing for liberty, nothing for the millions who groan and pine beneath the feet of despotism. It was a foolish, ridiculous war. We have always said so. We now repeat what we have so often stated. The Emperor of France may talk of glory—and his is the only glory achieved on the side of the allies—and England may bluster, boast, and proclaim what she is now able to do in the art of slaying men, and burning and battering towns and citadels; but we ask, what have the Western Powers accomplished against Russia? The answer, in truth and equity, is—nothing.

Well, it is a hard thing for two of the most powerful nations in Europe to have been doing their utmost for two years against a solitary enemy, without inflicting more injury upon him than is meant by nothing! But so it is. They have done their utmost by land and sea, and the result turns out to be that they have left Russia stronger than when they commenced.

Again and again, during the progress of the unforunate and foolish war, we said the French and English should endeavor to make peace at any price. Had they made it twelve months since, when England's army was melting away before the effects of famine and cold, like snow before the sun, it would have been far better. But they felt then that disgrace would attach to their names, should they yield and retire. And what have they done since? France, by a fortunate stroke, gained the Malakoff, and England was twice soundly thrashed at the Redan. The Russians, after deeds of heroism never before surpassed, then commenced their wonderful retreat across the harbor of Sebastopol, leaving the south side a heap of blood-stained ruins. The Allies gained some old houses and barracks at an expense of 200,000 men, and £200,000,000 of money, treasures which would build, arm, and make impregnable thirty Sebastopols.

That was what they gained.

The Tablet, taking into consideration the probability of a general election before autumn, calls the attention of its readers to the unreliable state of the Catholic constituencies:—

Some of the best friends of the cause have been so disheartened and disgusted by the corrupt treacheries of so many representatives of Catholic constituencies, and by worse still, the low state of political morality which made such treacherous baseness possible and profitable, that they have lost all faith in parliamentary action, and all hope of benefit from constitutional exertions. Upon the timely preparation which shall be made, the result of the general election will in a great degree depend. The responsibility must be brought home to the constituencies. They must select their own candidates in time, and not wait for the last moment, and then go begging about for candidates, to take the first that comes to hand, no matter how incompetent or suspected. And again, candidates who aspire to represent independent constituencies should come forward now with a declaration of their principles. Converts to popular principles, made on the eve of a general election, are to be vehemently distrusted, though in a few instances they may prove sincere. A man who declines to belong to the independent party before the election, is not likely to adhere to it very firmly or faithfully after he has taken out his lease of parliamentary life. Of course it is for the constituencies themselves and the leading men amongst them to consider these things and to act accordingly. The principles and the character of any man who aspires to join the ranks of the independent party in parliament cannot be too well known or too anxiously sifted.

PAPERS vs. THE PRIESTHOOD.

The discussion arising from the expulsion of the Nation and Tablet from the Young Men's Catholic Society of Dublin, has called forth a letter from the editor of the Nation, a specimen of which is as follows:

I have the honor of being assailed, in this day's Freeman, by the Rev. James Maher, in one of the most truculent and unwholesome tirades, I will venture to say, to which his Reverence's name has ever been subscribed. I guess his object in requesting the obliging editor of the Freeman to be sure to insert this fine piece of vituperation upon Friday morning—but I happen to have time enough before the publication of the Nation is completed, to tell the Reverend gentleman and the public, why it is I entertain so bad an opinion of him—and why it is that I cannot regard him in any controversy of this kind as a gentleman and a priest, pleading his opinions boldly, truthfully, and honestly, at the bar of public opinion, but as a brawling firebrand, unscrupulous in his assertions, uncharitable in his accusations, and as little under the influence of his right reason as a Malay running a-muck.

The Reverend gentleman has been a long time, and very often, before the public. I doubt if there is a priest in this country, or any other, whose appearances in print have been so intensely discreditable to his order. The business of his biographer, if he ever have one, will be like the business of a scavenger. He will hunt the back slums of journals whose corruption, actual or proximate, was infallibly marked by his appearance in their columns; and find stretching through many years, a constant succession of series of attacks—always ferocious, almost always foul with the very odor of Billingsgate—against the purest, the most pious, and patriotic characters of his time. He will present him for the verdict of posterity with as many anonymous aliases to his tail, as figure after some hardened offender's name in the Hue and Cry—for it is the Reverend gentleman's custom, unless where he attacks the dead, or some person so insignificant as myself, to wear the mask while he wields the stiletto.

Before he lampoons me again for commenting with irreverent freedom upon the conduct of his nephew the Archbishop, and the Bishops of Elphin and Ossory, and others of the Sadleirite school, let me remind him of the style of some of his own reflections upon two Archbisaops, not very many years ago.

One of them was the late Primate Crolly—a Prelate remembered by all who knew him with affectionate veneration; and the sanctity of whose long and laborious life was crowned by a holy and a happy death. He was hardly cold in his grave when the Rev. James Maher wrote of him that his "laxity of opinion" was a "breaking down of all the fences of Christianity," and of that kind which "inundated Christian lands with scepticism."

He has written on a great many sides of a great many subjects, and on all with unseemly violence. He has argued for and against the same subject, Mixed Education, for instance, with arrogant and ruthless intolerance, which would one day consign to damnation his own opinions of the next. On most of the open questions of the day, between ten and twenty years ago, Dr. Crolly and Dr. MacHale were totally opposed. Father Maher assailed each in turn with impartial ferocity—varying his task once or twice by such fulsome praise of Dr. Murray, as we cannot reconcile with his antipathy to the two other Archbishops, or yet with his patronizing veneration of a third, his nephew, Doctor Cullen; whose policy was not believed, until of late, to have squared with that of his predecessor in this See, or in the See of Armagh. Of Dr. MacHale, in these days, his Reverence gave the following character:—His Grace was "one of those weak mortals" by whose "vanities and jealousies the Church of God is desecrated." His Grace had published "taunts," "ungenerous attacks," "groundless insinuations," in "miscalled pastorals"—full of "reckless charges"—and which exhibited "the boiling and bubbling over of a fretted and perturbed spirit." At one time, he is accused of having been guilty of "incomparable folly and puerility"—at another, he is compared to the "false brother" who "formed the climax of Paul's suffering." He is told that his only resource is "the resource of weak minds, noisy, angry, personal invective"—"against the advocates of truth"—whom he assails "by angry declamations," and "a precipitate course of vituperation;" so that his Grace's "angry epistles would irretrievably ruin a character of ten times his worth."

I might still further shock and disgust the reader by specimens of the "precipitate course of vituperation" to which Father Maher is so peculiarly prone; but I hope I have done enough to discredit his indignant diatribe against me, and against better men.

The Tipperary Bank continues a leading subject of discussion. "Since we called attention," says the Leinster Express, "to the relation of the Bank of Ireland to the Tipperary Bank, some remarkable statements on the same subjects have been made. According to the Munster News, the latter was actually originated and brought into existence by the Bank of Ireland, and with the laudable object of damaging or ruining a rival. In answer to this and other attacks on it, the Bank of Ireland has said nothing; but we greatly err if the public will allow themselves to be put off with this assumed apathy. Concerning the the part played by our College-Green friends, in this lamentable insolvency, nothing ought to satisfy the sufferers short of a parliamentary investigation.

The London and County Bank, says the Dublin Freeman, has got no less than twenty assignments of Irish property purchased by Mr. John Sadleir, no doubt mostly by the monies advanced by his brother, Mr. James Sadleir, out of the coffers of the Tipperary Bank; but, so far as we can gather from the facts elicited at the Master's office, the shareholders of the Tipperary Bank have received no security of any kind against the lands purchased in the Irish court, and are shut out from all claim on them by the Lodnon and County Bank.

The exact nature and extent of Mr. Sadleir's land speculations cannot be ascertained till Messrs Morrogh and Kennedy furnish the lists which they undertook to present to the official manager and his solicitor.

We must admit that the purchases made by Mr. James Sadleir seem to require as much explanation as those made by his late brother, and that gentleman will have, in defence of his own reputation, to disclose with great minuteness the circumstances which caused him to make purchases in the name of another party, and to have the property legally vested in that other party, at a time when no pecuniary transactions with the fictitious buyer, and no family arrangements seem to have required that concealment.

Incidents in Convict Life.

LECTURE BY JOHN FROST, THE ENGLISH CHARTIST.

In pursuance of a requisition numerously and respectably signed, Mr. Frost, the English political exile, delivered a lecture in the Tabernacle, on his experience as a convict in the English penal settlement in Van Dieman's Land. The audience was quite meagre, but intelligent and respectable.

Mr. Frost began by making some observations on the duties of those in power, the evil of unrestricted authority and the social privileges of the citizen, in the abstract. He subsequently spoke of the companions whom he met on his voyage in a convict ship to Australia, and of the causes which had led many of them into crime. He attributed the fall of most to the evil example or neglect of employers and vicious companionship into which they had weakly suffered themselves to be led. From this he diverged to the brutalities exercised by the authorities on shipboard and in the colony, which he illustrated by narrating a number of harrowing facts coming under his own knowledge. In Port Arthur, he said, the flogger was the strongest man to be found, and, like his masters, delights in human suffering. The "cat" previous to use, was steeped in salt and water, then exposed to the sun to dry, by which the thongs were made as hard as wire. This instrument, with its eighty-one knots, applied with fearful vigor to the naked back of the victim, cut it up like a saw, The exacting cruelty of the magistrates, the strictness with which they required the most humiliating exhibitions of respect, and the severity with which they punished any apparent or fancied neglect of it, were next dwelt on at length. He (the lecturer) had been raised to the honorable position of overseer of a gang of road-makers on Tasman's peninsula. One day he observed the magistrate at a distance; he shouted to his men "attention!" ordered them to fall into line as the functionary approached, and received him with hat in hand. This so pleased the official that he complimented the superintendent as a second MACADAM, and sent him next day a pound of tea and four pounds of sugar, which, however, with other good things, were one day stolen from his (Mr. FROST'S) hut by two convicts who left the church and broke in through the back window of his apartment. The lecturer next referred to the manner in which justice, so-called, is administered in the penal colonies. This, he said, was not regulated by the guilt or innocence of those accused, but by the whim or villainy of those to whom its administration has been assigned. The Government officers are generally men of the vilest disposition and most vulgar breeding. The convict who was more intelligent than themselves was a special object of their hatred and the most frequent recipient of their persecutions. The prejudice against color is pretty strong in this country, but it falls short of equaling the hatred evinced by the officials towards the convicts. An Irish soldier who had been transported for some breach of military duty, and who was a man of decided character and warm temper, was one day brought before Sir Maurice Booth, the Commandant, for some trifling disregard of the regulations. Booth sentenced him to 100 lashes—Port Arthur lashes—fifty of them to be administered on the breech. "What," said the prisoner, "you surely do not mean that. I am an ill used man; I have been a British soldier; I have served my country faithfully, and am unjustly sentenced to transportation. If you mean to punish me, punish me like a man, not like a school-boy." "By heavens," shouted the Commandant, "you must undergo the punishment as I have announced it."

The prisoner was removed, the lashes were administered as ordered, and brought back to the magistrate in a condition which would excite the pity from any man with a heart. Grief and pain seemed struggling with him for the mastery. He was now charged with insolence to the Commandant in saying that he (the Commandant) did not mean to punish him as he had threatened, and, in that condition, sentenced therefor by Booth to 14 days close confinement on bread and water. Subsequently this convict was brought up for striking a man, in a moment of excitement, with a hammer, be supposed he was about informing the authorities of his intention to escape. The injured person died of his wounds, and the convict was hung. Thus two lives were lost in consequence of an iniquitous system. But this was not all. Capital punishment was far preferable to a life in an Australian penal colony. There were circumstances in which young men might be placed, compared with which life-taking would be a mercy. And such were the iniquities of the Australian convict life—a system prolific in villainies, and for which the British Government alone was responsible.

Captain Oliver Byrne took the platform to second a vote of thanks to Mr. Frost, and in the course of his address dealt with the British Government and the Union Jack in terms the reverse of complimentary. He asserted that he had held the office of General in the British army, and resigned rather than yield to the infamous advances made to him by those in power to become a poisoner and an assassin. The vote of thanks to the lecturer was carried with vociferous cheers.

Interesting trom Rio de Janeiro.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Wednesday, March 5, 1856.

The excitement in regard to the America passed away in a day or two. She went to sea on the 13th of February, taking in tow the Savannah flag-ship of the Brazil squadron. Why the Savannah went to sea under the circumstances, is a mystery hidden in such profound depths of wisdom that your correspondent will not try to fish it up. Commodore Salter made a sure thing of it that neither the English nor French ships-of-war would interfere with the America, and then gallantly went forth to encounter——the winds and waves. The French and English frigates went to sea two or three days after the America left, a cruise having been arranged prior to the excitement in relation to the suspected Russian privateer. The Savannah returned into port, Sunday, Feb. 24, without the loss of a life or a spar, though we understand something split one of her sails. Thus ended this terrific affair between Brother Jonathan and J. Bull and J. Crapo, Esqrs.

Answers to Correspondents.

An American friend, whose great-grandfather was driving his carriage on this island when George the Third was in his cradle, puts this question to us: Why are we Americans always to be called Anglo-Saxons? and answers it thus: Truly, that is another name for English people—the only one of the numerous stocks from which Americans are sprung that have warred with us, insulted us, and with enmity and jealousy sneered at us from the very beginning. Are we to be confounded with the English, when I and plenty of my neighbors are proud of the old Dutch blood that runs in our veins? Our very mothers' maiden names were handed down to them by Huguenot ancestors, that came to the country seven or eight generations back; while the name of our first cousins on one side begin with the undeniable German Sch, and next door we are related to a family with the explanatory O before two Celtic syllables. We speak the English tongue, not because so many are of English parentage, but because we were so long under English rule. We make use of their language and literature, for which, from the other side, we are forever hearing of our obligation; but history makes it appear that the great works in any tongue are not for one time, or for one people. We have adopted much of the English law, but that is because it suits the Yankee character to take that which is handiest; and the English had lived a constitutional history, and gleaned and borrowed from all nations. But we do not want to identify ourselves with their sins or their spirit, or to be called by their name, and hear our people, through carelessness or habit, adopt the misnomer. We protest that it is unfair—aye, more—that it is as unpleasant as untrue. Are we, of Dutch, French, Irish, or German extraction, less American than the one man out of a hundred you will meet among us who reminds you of an Englishman? In truth, as a nation, we differ in temperament, opinions and appearance, more from the English than from any of the other peoples from whom we are descended. It is from this cross of the various nations that our strength comes. Every nation has engrafted upon this wide-spreading tree its most vigorous scions. Their hardiest, boldest, brightest youth have, from time to time, settled here, bringing ideas and usages from every land to contribute to the general stock. Hence the intellectual and physical activity which marks the American character, individualizes it, and makes us as distinctly a nation as if we were descended but from one race—Goth or Arab. The blending has been perfect. You can recognize an American, as such, anywhere; but you cannot tell, without the assistance of his name, his probable descent. We, of the United States, have a perfect right to the name—Americans. We have won it by making it known and respected, the name of a first-class power—aye, and associated with principles and practices of our own—the people's name—and acknowledged ones in the Eastern and Western world. It is well understood as claimed by, and belonging to us. The Canadians, and Mexicans, and other Powers of the Continent, have adopted names sufficient to prevent all confusion. Should we identify ourselves with a nation always our rival? When the English wish to conciliate us, we are their cousins, of the Anglo-Saxon race. Why swallow the smooth flattery, which will be followed by a sarcastic slur equally false?

Though the character of the following lines are as sweetly feminine as the signature, still the penmanship, however delicate, indicates a more manly hand. There is much promise here.

"THE MONTH OF MARY."

'Tis the sweet "Month of Mary," the young flowers are lending
Their beauty and fragrance to deck her loved shrine,
While innocent hands, near the hallowed spot tending,
Are weaving fair chaplets her brow to entwine.
No longer bright May, is thy bloom desecrated
By off'rings to Venus the Goddess of Love—
By Piety's children thou'rt now dedicated
To the pure "Queen of Virgins," our Mother above.

'Tis a soothing devotion, for oh! when we're kneeling
Round the dear little altar, to breathe a low prayer,
What sad, pleasing mem'ries come over us stealing,
Of childhood's first hours, ere we knew sin or care;
When we lisped our first Aves, while on our souls beaming
Were visions of heaven, we may ne'er know again—
Ah, then down the cheek come the contrite tears streaming,
That we're now not so pure, or so fervent as then.

Oh! ye who are weary of chasing earth's pleasures,
Who feel in your hearts a void nothing may fill,
Or who having grasp'd its frail perishing treasures,
Feel the thorn in your bosoms there rankling still,
Oh come in the sweet "Month of Mary," there praying—
From the Earth's sinful pleasures the gay mask shall fall,
And whispering angels will soothe the soul, saying,
One moment in prayer is indeed worth them all!

ANNIE.

"A Poor Scholar" wants to know if we ever met Carleton, the Irish novelist. We had that pleasure often. Two or three days after the Secession, a large party of Young Irelanders made an excursion to Powers-Court Waterfall, a few miles, on the Wicklow side, beyond Dublin. Carleton was of the number. The previous part of the week there had been a heavy fall of rain. The cascade was full and turbid, and fell with bewildering force and tumult from the beetling cliff, a hundred feet above. The mud and bog it had loosened on its way to the brink of the precipice, came furiously splashing down with it, and deluging with a discolored flood, the rocks and trees and green banks at the bottom. Close by, trickling out of a crevice in the rocks, three or four feet above the level of the stream, in the cool shadow of some beautiful laurels and white-briar, a little bright stream sparkled. It was as clear as a diamond, too. "There," said Carleton, looking up to the great thundering water-fall, "is Owld Ireland, sthrong and muddy, and there" (pointing to the little stream,) "is Young Ireland, pure and weak."

"Cahirciveen" asks us how many of the O'Connells are now in Parliament. Only two—John and Dan—sons of old Dan. John is member for Clonmel. Dan sits for Tralee. Maurice is dead these three years. Morgan holds a patent office in the Four Courts, with a handsome salary of $15,000 a year. Maurice was, far away, the most gifted of the sons. He was generous and gallant, too, and decidedly more national in his tone and nature than any of his brothers. His lines on the death of Davis show this. Morgan accompanied General Devereux to Venezuela, and there won the admiration of Bolivar, by the gallantry of his address and his soldier-like conduct.

An "Irish Youth" asks us a question, which it would take at least half a column to answer. Davis used to say, that McGeoghegan's History of Ireland, so far as it went, was the best to be had; and as for the local histories, there's Hardiman's Galway; Smith's Kerry; Ryland's Waterford, and Dalton's Dublin, which furnish minute information of the most reliable soundness. But as for our friend's trying to get "everything connected with Ireland and the Irish," &c., it would take the fortune of Crœsus, and the longevity of Methusalah, to accumulate and digest the learned pile.

"Malden, Mass."—We have not received the package or book alluded to in our correspondent's letter of the 28th ult.

Our friends of the "Meagher Club" of Lowell, and Mr. Peter Flynn of Narrowsburg, we sincerely regret to hear, did not receive No. 8, of the News, which was duly sent to them.

MR. TIMOTHY EDWARD HUGHES, has received our written authority to collect Subscriptions and Advertisements for the "Irish News," throughout the New-England States.

MR. J. J. CONWAY, has a similar mission for the States of New-York, New-Jersey and Pennsylvania.

We bespeak the kind assistance of our friends for both gentlemen.

We desire it to be perfectly understood, that our Agents are always provided with our written authority, and for them we believe we can promise uniform politeness and gentlemanly consideration.

THE IRISH NEWS.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, MAY 10, 1856.

NICARAGUA.

General Walker has addressed a letter of grave importance to Senator Weller, of California. The letter was read, last week, in the Senate. Throwing the clearest light on the present affairs of Nicaragua, and furnishing information of a serious aspect, suggestive of one or two questions vitally affecting the rights of nations, and in an especial manner the future interests of this country, we give such portions of it as illustrate the value it possesses.

General Walker refers to the fact, that notwithstanding the overtures of peace and good will which have been made by Nicaragua to the neighboring republics, from the time of the overthrow of the aristocratic faction until the declaration of war by Costa Rica, these republics have showed themselves, if not positively, at least negatively hostile to Nicaragua. This fact could only be accounted for, on the supposition that French and English agents were secretly at work, perpetuating the instability and disorder which the American sympathizers, under Walker, had with such gallantry done so much to correct. Tangible facts, however, were wanting to realize and with an indisputable distinctness, substantiate the supposition.

The intercepted letters of Wallerstein, the Costa Rican agent, resident in London, and those of Mr. Hammond, on behalf of Lord Clarendon, at last supplied the proofs that had been so long withheld. We publish the letters in another column. We learn from them that England is furnishing arms to Costa Rica, to enable her to invade and lay waste a country where, after years of fearful strife and havoc, with the brave brotherly help of a handful of Americans, order has been restored, life secured, property made sacred, and industry evoked. Two thousand muskets are sold to Costa Rica, through the direct agency of the Foreign Office in London, whilst, as General Walker informs Senator Weller, the whole of the British West India squadron is sent to San Juan del Norte, and cruisers from the Pacific station are detached to Punta Arenas, to keep that coast clear of all buccaneering flags, save the Union Jack.

The Dutch Costa Rican, Wallerstein, writing from his back-parlor in Harrow Road, London, acknowledges—we quote his words—"on the part of the government of Costa Rica, the receipt of the gratifying compliance with the application, made by him to Lord Clarendon for arms, and reminds his lordship that "the interests of Costa Rica are closely connected with the interests of British subjects in that quarter."

That England is at the bottom of all this mischief and bloodshed—that the statement of the Nicaraguense of the 19th of April, that "England is the real enemy in the field against Nicaragua"—that "England has long had her hand upon these States, making of this, or of that party, the tool with which she has turned and overturned the Central American Governments, until poverty and desolation reign, where prosperity and riches ought to shine on every hand"—that such is the fact, is now very plain and positive.

In addition to the evidence furnished by the letters intercepted at the mouth of the Seripique, General Walker adduces the fact, that until now, Costa Rica never declared war against Nicaragua, although there have been reasons, heretofore, for her doing so, and, on the score of arresting the reign of ruin and inhumanity, a justifying and ennobling incentive.

Not a doubt of it. England is there—a deadly serpent in the chaparral of that rich and beauteous region—and it will be her's, unless driven from it by such a volley as made her reel at the Bayou Bienvenue, and sent her home a cripple from New Orleans.

The question seems to us to have simply come to this—who will have the supreme right of way between the Atlantic and Pacific? The United States and England have been, and still are, the contending parties. Will the United States give way, leaving England to put up a toll-gate at the Castello Rapids, and plant her Red Cross there on the old fort above the river, in token of her ownership of the road?

Will America consent to pay the toll, struck by the Parliament whose Stamp-Act she cut to pieces and flung in the foolish face of old King George, and without a murmur, and with perfect good grace and ease of heart, consent to pass from one part of her domain to another, through a double file of sneering Red coats?

That's the question, from out a group of others not less vital.

MOVEMENTS OF REBELS.

The Canadian Ministry were defeated on the 29th ult., on a motion offered by Mr. Lyon Mackenzie, well known and distinguished as a "rebel" in the Canadian disturbances of 1837. At the time there was a reward of a thousand dollars offered for him, and it was not until years after the other "rebels" of the period were allowed to return, that Mackenzie's head was acknowledged to be his own. The motion was for a petition to the Queen for the unconditional pardon of "Smith O'Brien, the Irish Patriot, and John Frost, the English Chartist." The motion was carried againt the Government by a vote of 40 to 38.

STANDING ARMIES.

Now that the "Peace Conference" has triumphed, and the King of Algiers in his cradle, like the infant Hercules, has strangled the serpents of war; and there is breathing time—time, under the mark of "distinguished consideration" and "renewed assurances"—for Europe to gird up its loins and re-whet its steel for the greater struggle which must inevitably take place, and which will inaugurate new alliances to glut the jealousies and diplomatically varnished hates of old ones—we may take a glance over the barracks of Europe.

They are the springs by the adjustment of which "power" is "balanced" on the one hand, and the taxes crushed out of the people on the other.

In this view we take into account the returns of the armies in times of peace—if peace can ever be said to exist where there are but soldiers and tax-gatherers on the one hand, and a people who cannot demur on the other.

Count De Gurowski gives the whole bulk of the Russian army as consisting of 17 corps, with 4,900 companies of infantry, and 1,469 squadrons of cavalry, and 330 batteries of heavy or light artillery. This would give an aggregate of some 850,000 men, but as the above writer states, that more than a third of this amount ought to be deducted in regard to incompleteness of battalions, companies and squadrons, and other causes; the figures given in the European statistics of Thom's official Directory are no doubt as correct as can possibly be. Here the standing army of Russia is figured at 603,000, which is one soldier for every 100 of the population, or one soldier to every three and-a-half square miles.

France has a standing army of 404,500, which is one soldier to every eighty-eight inhabitants, and about two soldiers to the square mile.

Great Britain has a standing army of 128,864, which is one soldier to every 215 1-4 of the inhabitants, and 1 1-20 of the population of every square mile in the British isles.

The United States has a standing army, which may be set down at about 11,000, which is one regular to 2,304 1-3 of the population, or one regular to every 296 2-5 square miles. This army can never increase to any alarming extent. The acquisition of new territory, or the sentinelling the frontier against Indian encroachments, may add a few hundreds to it; but here its increase ends. The nature of American institutions are opposed to a standing army. The diffusion of military knowledge through our citizen soldiery is, as it well may be, the sure reliance and guardian of the commonwealth. Ostensibly the militia of the United States is composed of every able-bodied white male citizen between the ages of eighteen and forty-five, subject to many exceptions which are sufficiently well understood. At present the enrolled militia of the States is close upon, if it does not exceed, two million. The States of Pennsylvania, New-York, Ohio, and Virginia, in the order of their names, presenting the strongest muster-rolls of citizen-soldiers. In the aggregate, one out of every twelve in the population is a militia-man.

Austria has a standing army of 414,900, being one-ninetieth of the entire population, and 1 3-5 of the population to the square mile.

Prussia has a standing army of 225,550 which is one soldier to every 72 1-2 of the population, and over two to the square mile.

The little bee-hive kingdoms of Bavaria, Belgium, and Holland, though not among the first class powers, are noticeable from the vitality within them. The first has an army of 70,311, or one soldier to every sixty-four inhabitants; being more than 2 1-2 to the square mile. The second has 90,000 soldiers, being one to every forty-nine inhabitants, or eight soldiers to the square mile. And the third sustains an army of 43,000; being one soldier to 70 1-2 of the population, or 3 1-2 to the square mile.

So much for monarchical institutions. In the case of Russia, France and England, we give the figures as they stand in time of peace. In war, they can nearly double their forces. In 1815, the army of England was 300,000.

On a comparison of these figures we have good reason to congratulate ourselves. The ever-recurring taxations, to support the pomp and dignity of monarchy, harass the people to feed and clothe lazy and intolerant legions on the land. Just think of it. A little scrap of land, like Belgium, not larger than New-Hampshire and Rhode Island, having a revenue of some $23,000,000, supporting an army of 90,000, and running itself in debt to the amount of some $123,000,000.

No wonder they have revolutions in Europe.

Here, under every circumstance, we are better governed. The working classes have such necessities towards living as many populations of Europe would deem luxuries; and America regulates her fighting as brokers or merchants do their Wall street affairs, like clock-work. War is declared; an army springs up, armed cap-a-pie—Minerva from the brain of Jupiter. We fight, conquer, and come home to our writing-desks, our law-courts, our work-benches, our market-carts. After scrubbing off the enemy, we turn to scrub up an existence for ourselves. We get paid, to be sure, while we are fighting, as we would for holding the plough, or measuring out tape. We get a grant of some one hundred and sixty acres of wild land when we are done, and their our expense to the State ends. And all this, because we are fighting for ourselves who form the State, while in Europe they fight for the State, which is not the People.

ENGLISH SAINTS AND MORMON SINNERS.

That one step which is said to lead downwards from the sublime to the ridiculous, may find a counterpart in the action which brings liberty to the level of licentiousness.

Political and personal freedom is the guardian of the republican state, and must be characterized by a comprehensive and considerate respect for the individuals of which that state is composed; inasmuch as every single person in the community lives, moves, and has a being—enjoys peace, security, and position, by the relation he bears to the entire family. The use of this family relationship is liberty—the abuse, licentiousness; whether applied to morals or politics. The latter, even though gilded by whatsoever pseudo-philosophical name, is easily and quickly seen through by all clear-headed and sound-thinking people; and society, in its own way, outlaws that action or intention which has already degraded and divided itself from the interests, moral purposes, and family ties which unite and dignify the Christian community.

Some of these days there will be hard words between Uncle Sam and his Anglo-American relative who has been living a latter-day saintly existence and keeping a harem out in Utah. The rest of the family will, no doubt, condemn the life he has been leading, considering his example not exactly of that nature they could wish their wives and children to follow.

That great tie under the blessings of which man receives his chief comforts—which awakes his energy and inspires his intellect—which makes him strong, good, and a reliable member of the State—that great blessing which actuates all our hopes and surrounds all our achievements—which calms our excitements, cheers our gloom, and crowns our glory—that simple but sublime matrimonial compact, which is the saviour of youth and support of old age—is not, in the opinion of the best and wisest children of the republic, to be dishonored by any mistaken religious zeal, or any unmistakable sensuality.

Utah may become to America what Turkey is to Europe—the resource by which youth will wrap sensuality with romance, or the dream-land of confirmed debauch. It may be a recognized nation, and preserve its manners, customs, and unsocial socialism intact; but the influence of American mothers will prevent the introduction of its faith to any other State of the Union, and jealously overawe the expression of any such deteriorating doctrines within their domain.

The women of America will preserve the other sex from Mormonism, or any other gross combination of English Socialism, Mohammedan licentiousness, and the transcendental pruriency of many old and young "philosophers." This they shall effect, too, in their homes, by the domestic hearth, among their friends and children; and not by the neglect of both, in the preparation of strong-minded philippics, or in the delivery of the same. Thus at present the women of America force the Mormon missionary to seek in Europe that extensive field of proselytism which he cannot attain here. It is a remarkable fact, and worth noting, that notwithstanding the moral delinquencies so often spoken of as existing in our midst, the Mormon Paradise is chiefly sustained by the fallen angels from the other side of the Atlantic.

A remarkable case of infatuation is at present attracting some attention in the papers. The facts convey the moral. They are these: One Joseph Hodgetts lived in Worcestershire, England; he was a coal-dealer, and by honest industry, backed by the economy and management of an equally-industrious wife, had amassed a comfortable property, and reared a large and well-favored family. Their hearth was bright—their home happy; peace and good-will, like bountiful guardians, held them in charge; when, alas, a Mormon apostle charmed the ear of the eldest son, and he went to Utah. Soon with others, "approved apostles," he returned on a recruiting tour. He won his mother and sisters to the immoral immortality of Joe Smithism; and, while the father was absent on a business excursion, carried all the rest of his family off; having collected the debts due by customers, drawing £314 from the Bank, and appropriating every portable article, even to the bed-linen, from the house. Hodgett's agony on his return may be judged. It was on a Saturday. With a superintendent of police he started for Liverpool, reached there about three next morning, and, after some hours of fruitless search, chartered the tug-boat Great Conquest to chase the Enoch Train, which had started for Boston with a cargo of Mormons. After some three hours they reached the object of their search; but in their hurry they had overlooked the getting of warrants. The Captain, however, not being a Mormon, was willing to aid the distracted husband; but the opposition of the Mormons would probably have rendered his aid futile, had not Mr. Chipp (the superintendent) firmly declared, that rather than fail in his mission, he would accompany the vessel to Boston, and denounce the whole party to the British authorities there. Not till then was the wife allowed to see her husband.

"The upshot of the matter was," says the Worcestershire Chronicle, "that the wife and youngest child were first of all handed into the tug, and when the husband still knelt on the bulwarks, the very picture of paternal distress, praying that yet more of his offspring might be restored to him, even the emigrants themselves began to murmur, and say that it was a shame to part a father and his children. The Mormon elders hereupon peremptorily ordered their insubordinate victims to go below; but the captain, finding now that he could do so safely, ordered the other two children, girls about seven years of age, to be handed to their delighted parent, and the tug then cast herself loose to return to Liverpool. The two eldest daughters, aged 16 and 18, the latter a very fine young woman, obstinately refused to go back, and we shudder to think of the fate that is in store for them."

There were nine hundred on board the Enoch Train, of which, says the London Chronicle, three hundred men and women, boys and girls, formed the contingent supplied by the Birmingham district alone to the future population of Utah.

Mormon emigration is steadily and quietly increasing. Occasionally some incident like the above brings public attention to it, but the fact that it is chiefly from England the great body of saints are wafted to this shore is overlooked. And, moreover, it is from that class of Englishmen among whom the public sale and purchase of each other's wives is a matter of not uncommon occurrence, as the papers duly inform us, and to which Dickens, Eliza Cook, and others have directed attention. The official Mormon Emigration Report shows that from November 27, 1854, to April 26, 1855, there landed

At	New-York,	874
"	Philadelphia,	1,450
"	New-Orleans,	1,302
	Total	3,626

The nationalities of this number are given thus:

English	2,231	Norwegian	53
Danes	409	Irish	28
Scotch	401	Swiss	15
Welsh	287	Piedmontese	15
French	75	German	13
Swedes	71	Prussian	1

These figures speak for themselves. It is the sheerest folly, to believe that anything approaching a majority are actuated by the slightest idea of "religion." It is noticeable that, in these five months, the English emigration was almost two-thirds of the whole. The missionaries have increased in activity since. Emigration has also increased; and it is beyond doubt, that, were the complete statistics at hand, Mormonism would appear more clearly an English institution, and Utah much more an English colony than an American one.

What the Five Points have been to the city of New-York, Utah is fast becoming to the Union.

INFORMATION WANTED.

Exactly one year ago, the Democratic Review commencen an article with the inquiry—"Can any body tell what has become of Sultan Abdul Medjid, in whose behalf the great Christian crusade of the Anglo-French Alliance was undertaken?" and concluded the same article with the words of philosophic Jefferson thus—"wretched is that country in whose internal affairs foreign nations are permitted to meddle."

This opening and this ending is the best history of the eastern war given yet. It struck us particularly at the period; and its value has been only heightened by succeeding events. If indeed Jefferson's conclusion had been stated first, the opening question would have come naturally to mind, the "wretched" position of Turkey being more than demonstrated, in the fact, that "foreign nations" had meddled in its internal affairs.

It is something worth remembering that, at the first blush of hostilities, the whole civilized world was in favor of Turkey and against Russia, regarding the latter as the despot, par excellence, of the two engaged; but no sooner had England joined the former than the aforesaid civilized world was in favor of Russia; seeing in England only a more insidious, because a less open and less blunt oppressive representative of that monarchic deification which Russia, more honestly—if with less policy—had inaugurated.

The question then became, not one of rights or encroachments between Turkey and Russia, but one between two powerful thrones, and between which there was alone the characteristics of despotism to be considered. The one ruled with an open and undisguised strong arm, and avowed its purposes, the other ruled with an arm of iron covered with velvet—smooth on the outside, but relentless, cold, and hypocritical in fact.

In the struggle Turkey was lost sight of. Omar Pasha, who exhibited more skill and bravery than the Generals of the Alliance, was given a subordinate position—placed "under the surveillance of his dry-nurses, General Simmons and Colonel Dieu,"—and even one of the leading commercial organs of England acknowledged, in denying the statement of Mr. Bright, who said the war was for the support of a filthy despotism—that England was not fighting for Turkey, but against Russia.

Turkey was disgraced by her friends. Both the army and navy of England are behind the glory of France. Austria has shirked the question. Denmark and Sweden pretended to keep moving—Russia has fought well—Clarendon, Palmerston, Buol, Manteuffel, Walewski, Orloff, et id genus omne, have bowed and palavered each other—a feather has been plucked from the wing of an eagle, to be stuck in the tail of an alliance—a peace is made—and where is Abdul Medjid? Where?

"Can any body tell what has become of him?"—that's the question.

MILITARY MEMOIRS.

COMPANY E. (CARROLL GUARDS,) FOURTEENTH REG'T, FIFTH BRIGADE, N. Y. S. M.

This company was organized on the the 13th of May, 1843, being the first Irish-American company organized on Long Island, and being called originally, the Irish Volunteers. It was officered by Captain Patrick M. Short; 1st Lieut., Henry Mc Cadden; 2d Lieut., Richard Walsh. The Lieutenants succeeded the Captain in the command according to their rank. About four years ago, George B. Magrath, the present Captain, took the command. This officer had served his time in the Governor's Guard, then 2d regiment, N. Y., and had acted as orderly-sergeant in the Erina Guard, 9th regiment. He was elected about four years ago, and at his suggestion the company took its present name. He was born in Bath, England. His father left Limerick at the time of Emmet's rising. The other officers, at present, are, 1st Lieut., Thomas Maloney; 2d, John Malone.

The uniform is a blue frock (regulation) and pants; white trimmings, cross-belts, and regulation cap. The company drill is held Tuesday night, at the Adelphi.

In the summer of 1854, this company was ordered out with its regiment, the 14th, one Sunday, and was stationed at the City Hall, Brooklyn, for the purpose of suppressing the riots, occasioned by the preaching of the "Angel Gabriel."

The regiment was hurried down, about six o'clock in the evening, to the South Ferry, whence a report had come that a fight was raging, but on the appearance of the military the mob dispersed.

COMPANY H, ERINA GUARD, NINTH REGIMENT, N. Y. S. M.

This company was organized February 22d, 1850, Washington's birthday. Officered as follows:—Robert Coddington, Captain (promoted); Thomas Murphy, 1st Lieutenant; John Doyle, 2d Lieutenant; John Casey, 3rd Lieutenant. First Sergeant, vacant; Second do., John Murtogh; Third do., John Quin; Fourth do., Patrick O'Farrell. Color Sergeant, Terence McKenna; Paymaster, Joseph Kierman; First Corporal, David Redmond; Second do., James Reilly; Third do., Francis Sally; Fourth do., Peter Kelly; Color Corporal, Bernard Nolan. The Captain and 1st Lieutenant are natives of Dublin. The uniform of the company is that of the 9th regiment. Drill, every Thursday evening, at Military Hall, 193 Bowery. No person admitted as a member unless he be a citizen, or have declared his intention to that effect. Since its organization, several members have been promoted from this company, as commissioned officers, to other companies. Captain Coddington was out as a member of the 6th regiment during the Macready riots.

MONTGOMERY GUARDS, BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

The Montgomery Guards of Bridgeport, known as Co. B, 8th Regt., 2nd Brig., Conn. Militia. Organized March 16, 1853, when the following officers were elected and commissioned by Gov. Seymour, now minister to Russia:—Captain Thomas B. Coats, born in Limerick; 1st Lieut., Michael O'Connell, born in Cork; 2nd Lieut., John Fox, born in Kildare; 3d Lieut., Edward N. Goodwin, born in Dublin.

This was the first company in the regiment that conformed to the Militia law of the State—requiring that every company organized should procure a dark blue frock coat and pants, white stripe on pants; white epaulettes; any pattern hat, pompon, &c. In consequence of Capt. Coats leaving town, there was an order for election, May 2nd, 1854, to fill vacancy, when the following change took place:—Captain, Michael O'Connell; 1st Lieut., John Fox; 2d Lieut., Ed. N. Goodwin; 3d Lieut., Richard Sewell.

The Company have paraded according to the law of the State, three times annually in May, as company, and three times in September with regiment; have made ten independent parades, on one of which they visited Derby, and were received in the most hospitable manner by the Smith O'Brien Rifles, commanded by Captain Harly.

Company B were disbanded by Gov. Minor, September 25th, 1855, for being Irish adopted citizens. The company are now independent, and have procured arms and equipments, consisting of percussion muskets, black patent leather belts and cartridge boxes; ornaments on hat, eagle, harp, and bugle on silver-breast-plate brass, eagle and harp in silver; waist-plate, brass, with letters M. G. in Silver: M. G. on cartridge-box in silver—the expense of which accoutrements was partly defrayed by the native and adopted citizens of Bridgeport. The following change has been made in uniform: sky blue pants with buff stripe; buff collar and cuffs on the coat; a plume for hat, the upper part of which is white, while the lower part is green. Company drill every Monday evening, from 7 to 10 o'clock; number of men 50.

Captain Oliver Byrne lectured once before the company, on Military Art and Science. Annual Ball held on the 26th Dec.

The present officers are as follows:—Capt., Michael O'Connell; 1st Lieut., Edward N. Goodwin; 2nd Lieut., Patrick Curley; 3d Lieut., Robert T. Hurley; Orderly Sergeant, Joseph O'Connor.

Literature.

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS.

DAN CALLAGHAN AND GANSEY—THE KILLARNEY PIPER AND THE MEMBER FOR CORK.

Two weeks ago, we left the Member for Cork sitting at that jovial table in Finn's Hotel, Killarney, with Gansey, the blind chanthur, close to his elbow. The cloth had been removed; the fruit laid; the Port and Claret circulated; the mellow, genial old Whiskey—Wyse's oldest—had been passed from hand to hand, and under another combination, from mouth to mouth. Cigars, too, had been lit. The dining-room was full of aromatic smoke and exhilarating steam. The festive sea was at its highest tide. Not a bare or barren spot could be descried. The sparkling, bounding waves rolled over the broad space; swept the brown glistening strand from end to end; dashed up to the sulkiest rocks that thought to frown or look stiff upon them; broke in flashes though many a lowering crevice; and flinging up pearls, and shells, and flowers of daintiest fibre and countless shapes and hues, while many a white-winged wild-bird swept down to and up from them, made earth, if not Heaven, rejoice.

And if there were Naiads and Tritons gamboling in that flashing sea, there was a white-beard Neptune presiding there, and with a potent silver ladle, instead of Trident, ruling the revelry, and benignly keeping down its storms. This was easy for him. Æolus, with the winds in his leather cave, being close to the elbow, and under the thumb, of the aqueous old god.

There was a pause in the tinkling of glasses, the shoving of sugar-bowls, the hubbub of voices. The Member for Cork had finished his fifth glass of Port with a smack. He had straightened himself in his chair and bent forward a little. His fishy little eyes gleamed out like glow-worms, on the eve of exhaustion, from the depths of their caverns. The faint speck of light had to pierce its way through a bog of soft flesh before it could flicker on the moist surface; and when it succeeded, it gave signs of the struggle. It was a gelatinous lustre. It could not have illuminated a globe the girth of a pea.

Drawing the napkin across his lips, smiling with ponderous composure, revolving his head a little to one side, then nudging the Piper with the broad tip of his elbow, his slim, half-suffocated little voice squeaked out—"Now for it, Gansey!"

What a cheer! What a ringing hear, hear! What a furious tatoo of spoons and nut-crackers down both sides of the table! What a lifting, and clanking, and draining of glasses! How rapturously and wildly they sprang to their legs, and waving decanters, and tumblers, and candlesticks, and dessert-knives, and finger-bowls, above their heads, and across the table, gave three-times-three for the glorious blind Minstrel of the Lakes! Callaghan, all the while, during all the tumult, in the fiercest of it, sitting with a radiant complacency in his cushioned chair, his napkin replaced, his small eyes voluptuously glistening, his snowy waistcoat dilating with the glowing atmosphere of the scene, his old face reddening and cracking and oozing, like a leg of mutton upon the spit,—his elbow working impatiently at the Piper, and the small, half-stifled voice still squeaking—"Now, Gansey, now for it!"

"Very well, your Honor," says Gansey, and he turns his aged noble head slightly towards the master of the feast. Then throwing himself back a little; turning up the left leg across the right, so that the ancle of the former might rest the least bit above the bent knee of the latter; fixing the bag under one arm and the bellows under the other; fixing them nice and tidy, so that not a breath might be lost, nor a note of the smallest dimensions escape; and then hurriedly patting the keys up and down, behind and before, to make sure they were there and good for the night, the glorious old fellow bent himself to it, and with all its wild witchery, gave us the Fox-hunter's Jig.

When I forget Ireland, I shall forget that scene. It is before me now, as distinct, as glowing, as full of life, as though I came away from it last night only, and I were still within speaking distance of the echoes of Dunloe. The long, bright table, so richly furnished with fruit and wines; the few wax-lights, placed at long intervals apart, throwing over the principal figures and features of the picture a faint, lemon-hued, delicately mellowed gilding, and leaving the entire room, except where that narrow isthmus of wine-flowing and fruit-bearing mahogany extended, in deep darkness; the multitude of faces, all animated, most of them gay, none serious, many flashing with fun; here and there an odd one clouding up suddenly, and as suddenly breaking into lightnings, as that quaint, grand music woke memories of the martial days of the island; and all turned with an earnestness, more or less vivid—more or less marked by the eye, the mouth, the protruding chin, the elbow on the table, and the arm with clenched hand pressed against the head—all turned towards old Gansey, watching with an intent delight and wonder the ecstatic movements of his fingers, thumbs, arms, backbone, sole of the foot and knee-joint. But it was the outward play of the soul on the blind features—the sunshine, the storm, the rush of the red leaves before the wind, the scudding clouds above the sleeping lake, the starlight in the Black Valley—it was this which made him glorious. It was this which perfected the magic of that wild minstrelsy. It was this which gave to it the cry of the hounds, the scream of the startled eagle, the echoes of the mountains, the splash and gurgle of the brook, the moan of the woods in the midnight, the tramp of the chasing hoofs, the rapture of the sport!

As the last note died with a gasp in those glorious pipes, and the old man loosened his limbs, lifted his noble gray head, and took a breath of fresh air higher up, he was greeted as he commenced. Again the revellers rose; again flashed cup, and bowl, and silvered knife amongst the fragrant clouds; again broke out the hip-hip hurrah; again the windows rattled; again the loud jovial peals went rolling through stone wall and oaken door, up stairs, along the slumbering corridors, to the rafters of the garret, and through the skylights out upon the lake. Gansey rose from his seat in the midst of it, sweetly smiled, bowed, and sat down.

Unruffled in the midst of it, Callaghan remained enthroned on his green cushion, the napkin still flowing from beneath his waistcoat, his little eyes still winking and glistening through the chinks still left them in their dungeon-depths of fat, his white head looking whiter through the smoke than ever, his old face exuberantly blossoming and blazing with unctuous delight and the best of whiskey.

The cheers subsided. Every one sat down. Every one filled up.

"Gansey, what will you have?" said the Member for Cork to the Piper, turning his head almost imperceptibly in the direction of the latter, at the same time giving him a social wink, as it were, with the tip of his elbow.

"Your honor, there's nothing better than the owld stuff," says Gansey.

"Right, Gansey," says Callaghan, "devilishly right."

"How will you have it, Gansey—hot or cold, Gansey—which, Gansey, will you have?"

"I have a preference for the cowld, your honor," says Gansey.

"Right again, Gansey," says Callaghan, "devilishly right."

With which confirmatory words, the Member for Cork fills up a large tumbler of grog for the Minstrel of the Lakes, which the latter takes at a breath, handing the vacant tumbler back to the Member, who, delighted with the exploit, fills himself one, smiles, winks, gives Gansey a nudge, and absorbs the whole.

Then the performance begins again. Gansey braces himself up for a second achievement. Tightens the bag again under his left arm. Tightens the bellows again under his right. Crosses one leg over the other. Slips his fingers, up and down, over the keys. Bends to it lovingly, and gives us the Devil's Gallop round the Hob. And again there's the same quaint, wild, rude, grand, descriptive music; again does the old man's bleak face light up and flash, and show like a landscape in a changeful season of rain and sunbeam; and again does the cheer break out, and the glasses ring, and the delighted faces flash their grateful joyousness upon the blind musician; and again does the Member for the beautiful city of Cork sit there, in snowy vastness of waistcoat, napkin, head, and whiskers, with corpulent complacency drinking in the mirth of the music, the enthusiasm, and something yet more grateful to his unfathomable soul, silent, smiling, radiant, massive, and immutable. A Neptune, if you will, among the Naiads and the Tritons—but a Neptune with the leer and paunch of Bacchus.

As the last note dies, for the second time, with a gasp in those glorious pipes, and the old man loosens himself, lifts his gray head, and takes a breath of fresh air higher up, Dan Callaghan motioning his head in the direction of the pipes, finishing his own tumbler, faintly smacking his lips, and trying to give Gansey a nudge, says:

"Gansey, what will you have—brandy or spirits, Gansey—which will you have?"

"Your honor, we'd better stick to the owld thing, we're not tired with it yet."

"Right, Gansey," says Callaghan, "dev'lishly right, and devilishly good."

"How will you have it—hot or cold—Gansey, how will you have it?"

"My preference," says Gansey, "is for the cowld—it warms one better than the hot."

"Right!" exclaims Callaghan, trying to slap his thigh with his fin, for he was built like a turtle; "right, Gansey, dev'lishly right!"

Close upon which there was another, and, for the fifth time, a tremendous cheer, amid the ringing of glasses, the battering of spoons, the shaking of windows, the flashing of fruit-knives, and countless other expressions of convivial enthusiasm.

Until long past midnight did this continue. Until long past midnight did this feasting, drinking, cheering, carousing, music, wild merriment, enthusiasm, uproar, roll on and roar. For the third, and the fourth, and the fifth, and the sixth, and the seventh, and the eighth, and the ninth time, did Gansey tighten and bend to the tune; did the Hip-hip-Hurrah ring out; did the pipes carry us to a hunt, or a charge, the camp, or a wake; did the pipes gasp out their last hoarse note; did the tumult of thanks break out; did the gray head bow in kindly acknowledgement, the old man rising and sweetly smiling, as most blind people do; and for the third, the fourth, the fifth, the sixth, the seventh, the eighth, the ninth time, did Dan Callaghan, immovable in that capacious chair, turn almost imperceptibly in the direction of the pipes, and ask—

"Gansey, what will you have—brandy or spirits, Gansey—which will you have?"

And each and every time did Gansey meekly but incorrigibly reply—

"Your honor, we'd better stick to the owld thing."

And every time that Gansey made this answer, did Callaghan, more or less vivaciously, exclaim—

"Right, Gansey, dev'lishly right!"

Coming on close to two o'clock in the morning, I left the room. I was the last to leave it with the exception of Callaghan and Gansey. They were still sitting, just as they had been sitting eight hours before, when I closed the door of the dining-room upon them. As I went up stairs, with my bed-chamber light in hand, and as I reached the second landing-place and paused for a moment, I could hear the words—faintly, it is true—but distinctly enough:

"Gansey, what will you have?"

Then there was a mumbling, a shuffling of glasses, a very short dry laugh, and these words:

"Right, Gansey; dev'lishly right!"

On getting to my room, I found they had forgotten to make the bed. I pulled the bell. In a few minutes one of the servants came up. Having told her what I wanted, I thought I might as well return to the dining-room whilst she was putting the things in order. There was a fire there when I was leaving. I had taken cold on the Lake, coming down from the Gap, passing through which we had been drenched to the skin, and I thought it would be as well to take a heat at the coals preparatory to a bake in the blankets.

Down I went, candlestick in hand. Down I went, and into the dining-room I walked. Close to me was a dense mass of shadow—a little beyond me, a misty stream or streak of light—beyond that again, another bank of cloud. In one spot, up at the head of the misty stream or streak of light, after some intent and quiet gazing, there appeared to me to be a circle of peculiar brightness, and something like huge phantoms looming up within it.

I advanced a little further. I was in the same room I had dined in. Sepulchral as it looked, it was our uproarious banquet-hall. I recognized the fire-place, the bell-ropes, the hangings of the windows, the very cracks in the yellowish smoked ceiling, and the parochial attempts at plastic art upon what the waiters called the "cornish."

I advanced still further, still holding the candlestick, which held the mould candle, in my hand. I looked down. There was the very table at which I had sat, and no mistake about it. There was the bright, brown mahogany, in which I had seen reflected so many jovial faces, and those golden and ruby-colored glasses, and the fruits of the Azores and Malaga. There it was, strewed with the remnants and vestiges of the feast—broken tumblers, decanter-stoppers, finger-bowls turned up like bee-hives, raisin stalks, orange peels, the husks of walnut and hazel nuts—sprawling nut-crackers, strained sugar-tongs, the melancholy roots of cigars, a water jug with a hare-lip, another without a handle—a profusion of ruins, over which, and through which, a sickly blueish light went to and fro—there it was, the wreck of the board at which I had sat.

I advanced still further yet; I looked up—up to the head of the table—up to where the huge phantoms appeared to me to be cowering.

There were two silver candlesticks there. The candles in them were burnt down to within three inches of the sockets, whilst the black wick, with a great red fiery bulb at the end of it, hung over full two inches, and like a scorpion was eating its way into its own body with a suicidal malignity. It was a deadly description of light these candles threw out. But within it I saw the white napkin, and whiskers, and the bagpipes. Callaghan and Gansey were still at it.

I retired to the fire-place, and stood with my back to it. Neither of them had remarked me. They had seen nothing—heard nothing. They were alone in the world, and as happy as a couple of old Irish kings.

"What will you have, Gansey?"

"No use of changing at this time of day—the owld thing, your honor."

"Right, Gansey, right—dev'lishly right."

"Hot or cold, Gansey—which will you have?"

"The hot gives me cowld, and the cowld makes me hot," says the Piper.

"Right," says the Member, "dev'lishly right, and dev'lishly good."

Something put it into my head to go over to them. I did so. Gansey, of course, couldn't see anything. He heard something, and spread his ear. Callaghan saw very little more than his neighbor, and was no better for hearing. He sat there without a stir, without a wink, without a breath hardly, as if a carved or stuffed continuation of the velvet cushioned chair. He looked neither to the right nor the left, nor up, nor down. Gansey looked as if there were an evil spirit near him.

"Good night, Mr. Callaghan," I said.

"Who the devil are you—good night," he said.

"I suppose, sir," I said, "we shall not have the pleasure of your company to Cork to-morrow?"

"I don't care a damn," says he, trying to look up, but kept down by a night-mare, "I don't care a damn if I never moved out of this. Gansey, what will you have?"

And so I left them both.

IRISH REVOLUTIONARY HISTORY.

SECOND ARTICLE—YOUNG IRELAND AND '48.

'98 and '48.—The Modern Revolutionary History and Literature of Ireland: by John Savage. Redfield: New-York.

Standing in the Great Chapel of Waterford, in the summer of 1826, Daniel O'Connell uttered these words:—

"The rising youth of Ireland appear to have their pulses beating with better blood, and I have remarked more than once that while I, myself, was tranquil, the eye of youth, scarce reached beyond childhood, was glistening with indignation at the history of six centuries of mis-government which this country has endured. This fiery youth, with hotter blood boiling in their veins, are accumulating fast around us."

The magnificent proportions of the temple within which these words were uttered; the lofty Corinthian columns; the bold arches; the sculptured monuments beneath them; the excited thousands with which the church was on that day peopled; the magnitude of the wrongs, the rights, the hopes which gathered them to the spot; the sanctity of the place; the presence of the Cross; every circumstance concurred to stamp these words with a rare solemnity. Thomas Wyse, in his History of the Catholic Association, referring to this scene, declares it to have been the grandest picture he had till then beheld. "It was," he writes, "a thrilling sight, this great man throwing himself upon his knees between the government of England and the impetuous generation which threatened it in the future."

Five years before he died, O'Connell saw this fiery youth in the flesh about him. The day he spoke of them in those majestic sacred aisles of Waterford, they were but a red speck in the remote sky. But as he journeyed on, they grew to be a reality of blood, and brain, and muscle, in the stormy life of which he was the ruler. In the Committee-room of the Repeal Association; at the public meetings of that body; in the '82 Club, of which they were the originators; on the Rath of Mullaghmast; in prison with him in Richmond Bridewell; at the Rotunda Levee, where he might have been crowned with gold or clad in the toga palmata as King or Consul, had he so wished; everywhere he met the fiery youth he had in that stately Church foretold.

The debates upon the Provincial Colleges; the debates upon the Resolutions of July, '46; the Secession; these, and other events, bring the prediction and the prophet face to face. O'Connell fancied his grave would interpose between his generation, born in shackles, and the bolder one, born with free limbs, with whose advent he had menaced the government of the day. They came ten years sooner than he expected. His grave was a rampart from which they beckoned the people to a loftier height. They had been in the dust and sweat of the rough fight, for a period twice as long as the Crimean quarrel, when they laid him amongst the flowers, under the sweet sod, in that beautiful garden of the dead, they call Glassnevin.

The last half, or nearly so, of Mr. Savage's book contains a narrative of the sayings and doings of this predicted generation —"this fiery youth with hotter blood boiling in their veins"— and presents in rapid succession the portraits of the celebrities of Young Ireland. The narrative is compactly built on heaps of facts, and finished off with a profusion of graceful foliage, and other ornaments. The portraits are drawn as clearly, beautifully, and boldly as Daniel Maclise, in his illustrations of Moore's Melodies, has thrown off that grand group ringing out in chorus—

"One bumper at parting, tho' many Have circled the board since we met."

But before we enter this portrait gallery, which the young artist of the Dublin Society has so industriously put together and so generously embellished, we feel it seriously due to the affections of a nation, and the grandeur of its history, to dissent from the depreciatory estimate he has formed, not so much of O'Connell himself—"for," he says, "I do not speak against him, but of him, through historical facts, which are common property"— as of his labors and achievements. John Savage underrates both one and the other. Measured by his intense republicanism, everything short of the project and patriotism of Wolfe Tone, is insignificant and vulgar. Catholic Emancipation, assuredly, was a narrower measure than that for which Hoche set sail, and Humbert landed in Connemara with his grenadiers. But it was just, and needful, and ennobling.

What was the condition of the Irish Catholics which O'Connell, so far as the law was concerned, cancelled and reversed? Take up the speeches of Richard Sheil, and learn it from this one passage;—

"The Catholic aristocrat was made to feel that his ancient blood, which slavery had made stagnant in his veins, was of no avail—the Catholic merchant was taught that his coffers, filled with gold, could not impart to him any substantial importance, when every needy corporator looked down upon him from the pedestal of his aristocratic religion—the Catholic priest was informed that he had much occasion to put the lessons of humility inculcated by the gospel, into practice, when every coxcomb minister of the Establishment could, with impunity, put some sacerdotal affront upon him—the very humblest peasant in the land was desired to look at his Protestant neighbor, and compare his condition with his own. In short, from the proudest nobleman down to the meanest serf, the whole body of the Roman Catholics were rendered sensible of their inferior posture in the State."

That Emancipation reversed all this, so far as the statute-book could operate, neither the most querulous critic nor the most rancorous enemy can question. And to whom but to O'Connell was this great restitution owing? Lord John Russell, in the debate on Lord Stanley's Registration Bill, in 1841, vindicating the devotion of the Irish people to O'Connell, and addressing himself to the gentlemen who rebuked them, asked them—

"Did they not see, that the parties who had so long and so obstinately refused submission to the claims of that people, yield at length, and reluctantly, not to the wisdom of Burke, not to the eloquence of Sheridan, or Fox, or Tierney, or Wyndham, or Brougham, who had year after year exerted themselves, and put forth their wonderful powers in that House in favor of those rights, but to the influence and power of the Hon. Member for Dublin."

But we have merely taken a passing exception to what we conceive to be a dwarfed and distorted portraiture of a colossal man, whose life occupies a vast space in the less romantic, but not less interesting history, of these latter days. It is unnecessary for us to say more.

Of Thomas Davis, the founder of the Young Ireland party, we have hardly more than a glimpse. But it is a glimpse through a net-work of gold. His death is thus truthfully and most beautifully told:—

"Mozart died finishing the requiem that was first destined to chant over its creator, and then to enchant creation. De Lisle wrote the chant that conducted him to the scaffold; and which then became and since remained the war-cry of his nation—the Marseillaise. Tasso lived long, yet died only when appreciated; the blithe notes of Fame singing him out of the world, with the laurels on his brow for a death-chaplet. And Thomas Davis fled from the earth when he had created a spirit and fostered an appreciation that could weep tears of blood for his loss."

The events of 1846—the defection of the Protectionists, under Lord George Bentinck and D'Israeli—the return of the Whigs to office—the Dungarvan election—the Secession of Young Ireland from O'Connell—these events strike us in a rushing enumeration, as graphic as it is copious. We lose nothing—not a solitary plank with a name or a date on it—with all the rapidity of the current. We have Tom Steele as vividly before us as when we heard him, in a delirium of indignant rhetoric, allude to the Earl de Grey, Sir Robert Peel, and Sir James Graham, as "Lentulus, Cethegus, and Cataline, confederated over their bowl of blood." We have the first meeting of the Irish Confederation, January 13th, 1847, given back to us upon a glowing page, and in reference to it, this startling fact:—

"It is known but to few, that about this period one of the most eminent and distinguished barristers in Dublin waited on O'Connell to impress on him the necessity of reconciliation and union with 'Young Ireland.' The 'old man' had great esteem for the character and ability, as well as confidence in the aid, of the gentleman in question. He felt the full force of his remarks and agreed with him. His son John, however, who was present, flew into a passion, and expressed a determination to leave the country for ever, if his father 'received' the seceders; it would be a personal slight to him (John). 'You see how I am placed,' said O'Connell, and he went away to die."

That eminent and distinguished barrister told the story, there recited, to the writer of this notice. Overlooking the Grand Canal and the house in which Robert Emmet was taken, a little rampart, flanked by two guard-houses, springs from the wall, hemming in the buildings of Richmond Prison. A stone stairs leads up to it from the inner yard of the prison. Our friend had come to wish us good-bye. The Swift had been signalled. We mounted to the little rampart, and as we leaned over it, he disclosed the secret, which, for the first time, the public learns from this frank volume.

Of John Mitchel we have a memoir such as Davis might have written; and a likeness, not too spiritualized, such as John Hogan might have chiselled. He shows him to us in the Irish Council, the stated objects of which were:

"The combination of Irishmen of all grades and opinions, the guardianship and assertion of the rights and interests 'of our common country,' and the reflection of its wants and wishes."

Mitchel, he says, beheld this Council with the fondest anticipation, and labored zealously to raise it to the height his glowing brain desired:—

"The great object of his heart was a combination of the classes, and in the Irish Council he fondly hoped to find a fearless exponent, as it apparently was a faithful admixture, of all classes. His energies were unceasing, and his active and laborious intellect reviewed and analyzed every question, illustrated every resource, and suggested every means capable of contributing to, or accomplishing, the great end. He entered into and shed a clearer light upon every topic of discussion, and was especially prominent in the advocacy of Tenant-Right."

He labored earnestly, but in vain. "The Council," says Savage, "was more the critic of the English Parliament, than the advocate of an Irish one."

Turning over the bright pages of this little history of a sad great epoch, how freshly do our old friends and comrades shine in upon us in this dull corner of Ann and Nassau! Here comes John Martin, "the pure and estimable, who, combining with his persistent republicanism a chivalrous friendship, settled up his worldly accounts, and staked the proceeds and his person in the columns of a journal, that Mitchel might not lie when he had pronounced for him in the dock." Here comes Kevin O'Doherty, "young, promising, and gifted with those superior talents that give iron strength to a conclusion in the mind of an enthusiast." After him, his loving friend Williams, who was "as pious as he was patriotic;" whose two weapons in '48 were "a prayer-book and rifle;" who considered "the crack of the rifle a necessary Amen to his morning prayer;" and who, born in Tipperary, had his soul "charmed into the flashing wit of its mountain rills, the quiet humor of its whispering streams, the immovable patriotism of its hills, the broad gushing passion of its potent rivers."

Just prominence, however, is not given to Gavan Duffy, one of the projectors of the Nation newspaper, and for more than ten years its wise and able editor. Through all the labors, successes, penalties, and perils, which marked the career of Young Ireland, he was our steadfast friend, confidant, and companion, and however his rude slander on the honor of John Mitchel may have snapped the private ties which bound him to us, we can never forget the strength and beauty of his intellect, his earnestness, his sleepless solicitude, activity, and toil, at the press, in the Council-room, and Parliament; nor can we hear of his arrival in a distant land, to which he has mournfully exiled himself, without deep sympathy for the disappointments which made his days dark in the old land, and a truthful prayer for his full happiness, and all honor, in his new home.

A noble chronicle and picture of Smith O'Brien bears this inscription, as it were in emeralds, upon its margin:

"Of a noble family, his sympathies were ever with the people; and the advocate of their rights, he never disgraced them by demagoguism. He neither kissed the blarney-stone, nor touched the purse, which is so prominent an institution, and so prolific a fountain, in Irish politics. In the Parliament—he towered above the Irish hacks there, as an Irish Round tower, full of historic memories, ascends to heaven amid the modern hovels by which it is surrounded. As a Senator he was dignified, and as a rebel only too chivalrous."

Then we have McManus, with his "soldier heart and manly nature;" James Fenton Lalor, with his "deformed person, fierce logic, pure style, and relentness republicanism;" John Dillon, with his "sombre Spanish visage and heart of Milesian heat," his gentle wisdom and silent courage; O'Gorman, with his military look, deep musical voice, and prompt eloquence; Doheny, with his vigorous arm, true heart, and teeming brain, ploughing his way from the furrow to the Forum, and standing there from '43 to '46, as a popular orator, second only to O'Connell.

We come down a few miles from Cashel, and find ourselves on the banks of the Suir, at a place called Mullough, where lives one John O'Mahony:

"A gentleman farmer, of ample means and thorough education, of unassuming manners and devoted patriotism, in whose warm Southern nature a deep knowledge of the ancient Celtic tongue and misfortunes brooded, and tinctured with a silent but lofty veneration and enthusiasm, the hopes and aspirations which at the period manifested themselves in the Young Ireland party—who, in a word, was a 'rebel'—a pure-souled, high-hearted, courageous, and in his district—which encompassed the counties of Tipperary, Waterford, and Kilkenny—most powerful rebel."

Not a doubt of it, he is

"One of the greatest enthusiasts that ever drank music from a moth-eaten manuscript in the Celtic tongue, and as resolute a guerilla as ever inspired or mastered a multitude of like resolute souls."

Of Dr. Antisell we have this pleasant little fragment of a memoir:—

"At the time he joined with the students on their appearance in the political arena, he was already distinguished as a geologist and chemist, to the archives of which sciences he has contributed some valuable treatises. He was a pupil of Sir Robert Kane, and regarded as second only to that celebrated chemist and successful scientific experimentalist. In America he has found a prolific field of investigation, and has fully sustained and enlarged the reputation for which he received credit. He has lately been engaged on a scientific mission by the United States government in California."

Some loving and glowing touches bring before us, from the far South, our genial, lyrical, generous, truthful friend, Joe Brenan, with his wealth of eloquent words and fancies, and all the storms, calamities, sorrows, and conquered honors of his dawning manhood. May he long preserve and multiply these latter!

A biography of poor Devin Reilly closes the book; and from it the world here may learn how much of heart, and power, and genius the coffin closed upon that 6th day of March, 1854, in the city of Washington. On his early grave, and on that of Davis and McNevin, we lay a copy of this book. It tells their story, and that of the young school and generation of which, in life, they were the lights, and are now in death the treasured memories.

THE MESILLA VALLEY.

FROM THE NOTE-BOOK OF AN IRISH SURGEON. NO. IV.

SILVER MINES AND SLAVES.

New Mexico has other sources, of national riches, besides her fertile valleys. Almost every one of her mountain ranges are sources of general wealth. Allusion has already been made to the copper mine mountains now held by the Apaches farther North; the mountains East of Santa Fe have gold placers on their sides, which were under Spanish domination worked by the Indians for the conquerors. In the Jemez range West of Santa Fe are veins of copper and auriferous quartz; but the chief mineral of New Mexico is the silver lead ore which occurs in veins in the Organ mountains and the chains to the East, the Sacramento and Guadaloupe ranges. In the Organ mountains along the Mesilla valley, these ores are worked by one Stevensons, who has his furnaces erected upon the river edge near the village of Las Cruces, fifteen miles distant from his mine. The smelting of the ore is carried on in clay furnaces according to the ancient Mexican modes, by which much of the silver is lost during the extraction, for the furnaces frequently break from the weight of the charge, or burn into holes, when the whole mass drops into the fire and is lost. Notwithstanding such occasional accidents the profit of working the ore and mine is very great, and under proper management would be much more so. The veins of silver-lead ore are very constant being found extending sixty miles in length along the same range as far South along the river as the town of El Paso. The silver obtained generally goes down to Chihuahua, where it is run into molds for coin, and not stamped as by European and American mints. Other minerals as lime, gypsum and salt exist also in great quantities. The salt is obtained from the evaporation of fresh water basins formed by the rains which under the summer sun dry up and leave an efflorescence of salt from one to four inches thick on the surface of the ground. The flat plains between the mountain ranges of the country East of the Rio Grande (for there are no true valleys there) furnish all the salt. These plains have no rivers running along them, and the drainage of the hills and the surface waters collect into pools, and by lying on the surface of the soil for so many weeks absorb its saline matter and thus yields the fine incrustations of a rather pure salt, which did formerly, and to a large extent does still form a staple article of exchange with Northern Mexico. Between the Sacramento and Guadaloupe ranges is a plain which is the chief depot of the salt trade for that country.

The labor used on all such pursuits is not free, but of the kind known as Peonage. A Peon is a voluntary slave, and is generally one who, unable to extricate himself from debts, becomes the slave of the creditor until the debt be discharged: during his slavery he is paid for his labor, but at so small a rate that he never can apply any of his money to the repayment of the principal: four to six dollars per month is the wages of a peon, which is never paid in coin, but by order, or by the master supplying from his own store the wants of the slave, which is done at prices far above what money could procure—all articles of dress are so supplied. Thus, when a man once becomes a Peon he rarely ever again gains his freedom, for even should he obtain from a third party the sum to purchase his liberty from his master, he by that act becomes the slave of the lender, and exchanges are often made in that way: it is one of the redeeming features of peonage that a slave may change his master: if the peon can find any one willing to advance the original amount to pay the master back his purchase money, he obtains his freedom from the old master, only to become the slave of the new one. This liberty to change, however, considerably ameliorates the lot of the peon. Theoretically for any debt unpaid and proved peonage may be inflicted on the defendant; yet practically very few in New Mexico become peons for sums under seventy dollars, and for this amount it is generally women who are sold. The writer of this article is cognizant of a case where for that sum a New Mexican woman passed from the condition of freedom into peonage. She possessed a little cabin in a small village, and lived by small chores. Easter approaching and with it new excitements at the gaming tables to which she was devoted, she went to an American resident and told him that she was very desirous to gamble, but had no money—that if he would advance her seventy dollars, she would repay him if she won, and if not she was willing to become his slave. Satisfied with the agreement he loaned the money, which lasted the unfortunate nearly four days. At the end of which time she collected her little house furniture together, fastened up the door of her cabin and presented herself to her new master, who transferred her to his kitchen, as she was a good cook, after the Mexican fashion. The children of peons are not legally or necessarily peons, but often incidentally become so. It may be seen that peonage has some advantage over African slavery, because first it is to a great extent voluntary, and second it is not hereditary; and the option of changing masters lies with the slave: he can also demand his freedom whenever he presents the sum for which he was bought. Peonage was introduced into this continent by the Spaniards, upon whom it was forced in Old Spain by the Moors, when they subjugated that country; it exists through all Mexico and California, as well as New Mexico. The Californian peon is the native Indian, and is a much more degraded being than the Mexican, who is a half-breed of some kind or other. From this outline of peonage it may be at once understood how it may happen that slavery cannot obtain any strong hold wherever peonage exists; for the master has no responsibility for his peon—he only feeds him; he neither clothes him, nor cares for him when sick: and should he die or become disabled, his loss is little felt, as but little comparatively was paid to obtain him. The race is hardy and capable of great endurance, and are chiefly occupied in the labors of the farm and in herding cattle on the plains. In this case they receive some corn in a bag, sufficient for sustenance for ten to fourteen days absence, and armed with bow and arrow for defence and to kill what game they can, drive the flock of sheep and cattle out into the plains forty, fifty, and even a hundred miles away from the town, and sleep out until the provision gets exhausted, when they drive the cattle homeward again if not relieved. Many of these herders are caught and killed by the Indians, who, emboldened by the distance, attack the herd. On such an occasion the peon never resists an attack, but always flies and escapes if he can; his duty being only to protect the flock from loss by wild beasts or accident, as by fight or falls.

Peonage is probably a necessary condition of society, as it exists in a mixed population, whose habits and education are of so low a standard, and is devoid of many of the drawbacks attending the servitude of the colored race.

MAGAZINES FOR MAY.

Harper has many interesting and instructive papers this month. Recent occurrences and present want of popular information on the subjects will render "A Visit to the Silver Mines of South America," and "Commodore Perry's Expedition to Japan" very acceptable. Both are agreeably written and profusely illustrated. "The Gnawers" gives us pen and ink portraits and reminiscences of the natural history of the beaver, porcupine, squirrel, jerboa, hare and rabbit tribe of animals. Of "Little Dorrit" we have four chapters. The essence of Sam Rogers' Table-Talk is given in a gossipy anecdotal article, the writer of which cannot take refuge in the anonymous. If the reader cannot discover him, he is not worth the information. He makes a pleasant bouquet after considerable trouble, for Sam Rogers was rich in everything, save his poetry and puns. A paper on Motley's "Dutch Republic" is a really capital outline of the first two parts —embracing the first, and a portion of the second, volume of that exceedingly interesting history—and of which, by the way, we have a lengthy review in hand, and will publish soon. Standing on the "Editor's Table," and with the aid of the pile of books thrown thereon, we have a peep—if not a full view—into the "The American Pulpit." The gentleman at the table tells us that preaching in America is not what it used to be thirty years ago (likely enough), and thus daguerreotypes this "generation of preachers." "One—he says—calls the champions of 'Natural Vestiges of Creation' into the field, and enjoys the luxury of an unresisting fight. Another leaps full-armed into a museum of Megateria and fossils, and scatters bones right and left in terrible dismay. A third is profound on Ontology; a fourth spices his sermons with Fichte, Carlyle, and Strauss; a fifth honors the Bible by taking a text, and supplies the rest from the Westminster Review." We are not informed as to the whereabouts of these divers and diverse reverends, which is amiss. For instance, we should not like seeking for No. 5, to happen on No. 2, and instead of being put to sleep on the "soft sawder" of the Review, to knock our nose against a fossil, and be kept awake with the scattering of bones in terrible dismay.

Putnam is up to the time with a vivid, graphic paper on the Kane Artic Expedition. There are many pleasant glimpses at Esquimaux intelligence in it. We have a very appreciative review of Kingsley as a poet. The writer considers his volume worthy to make a fourth with Tennyson's "Maud," Browning's "Men and Women," and Longfellow's "Hiawatha," and apropos to the fact of it being necessary to defend Kingsley, a clergyman, for having written a drama, the writer remarks truly:— "It only shows how far gone in formalism England is, in every direction. It sends old women to command in the Crimea, and requires that a poet should be justified for writing poetry." That wild, wayward, brusque, brilliant, broadly-gifted, often narrow-seeing, clear and cloudy, decided without being distinct (and sometimes vice-versa), conceited and consummate writer on Art, Mr. John Ruskin, is the subject of a clever article, well written, with some sensible and good points.

The historical paper on "Nathan Hale, the martyr spy of the Revolution," and the review of the private Correspondence of Napoleon will attract—the former from its national character, the latter from the intrinsic ability contained therein. The "Editorial Notes" are in good spirit, and, for politicians, the article on "Our relations with England," referring to the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, and the late correspondence thereon, will complete this issue very favorably. Putnam is an institution.

The Knickerbocker, like every thing human, earthly, and domestic, is moving—moving to laughter, to radiant smiles, and jocose titillations of the facial fibres. It is a full and hearty number, tolerably well varied both in prose and verse—having a fair sprinkling of appreciative literary notices, a chatty letter from Niagara, by the "Up the River Correspondent," and the editor's usual enlivening table, which, however juicy, does not (as the reporters say of the "spiced" at the opening of a new hotel) groan under, but sniggers immoderately with, the burden of all the "delicacies of the season." S. Hueston.

Household Words has the first three chapters of "A Rogue's Life," which, we notice, is getting quite popular. Honesty is evidently not the best policy. The very spicy paper, "The Great Hotel Question," is concluded; and "Gibbet street," a few pages from "The Roving Englishman" at Messina, and some verses, will attract the reader. Dix & Edwards.

The School-Fellow is a delightful periodical for our juvenile friends—indeed many of maturer growth might read its elegant pages with serious benefit to themselves. The illustrations are in thorough keeping with the fine paper and printing. Dix & Edwards

Literary and Artistic News.

A rather bitter war, is at present, waging between M. Wilson Croker and Mr. Hayward, with respect to the correctness of a translation of Mons. Montalembert's recent work on England, executed by an unknown lady, who appears as H. B., and recommended to Mr. Murray, the celebrated publisher, by Mr. Croker. The translation appears to be, in several portions, incorrect, and was published without the authority or inspection of the author. Both the combattants wield a bitter lance. Mr. Croker, who is now near 90 years of age, was celebrated as a Tory of the old Eldon school, and served as Secretary of the Admiralty under various administrations. He has since, for some years, been editor of the Quarterly Review, and is still an occasional contributor. The articles on Macaulay's History are from his pen. Mr. Hayward is a barrister, a writer in the Edinburgh, and was for some years a writer on the Morning Chronicle. About a year since, he was appointed Secretary to the Poor Law Board, by Lord Aberdeen, of whose party he has been a constant supporter. He is author of the celebrated satirical pamphlet on Disraeli, and is the most brilliant conversationist in England.

Cork School of Art.—We find that there are thirty engineers on the books, eight carpenters, four cabinet-makers; besides carvers, gilders, modellers, photographers, lithographers, japanners, decorators, house painters, &c. There are then four architects, six builders, and ten female teachers. All these rendering themselves more expert in a trade, or qualifying themselves for a profession. We find then about 75, out of 156, to whom the knowledge taught in the school is a matter of the very first moment, as a means of self-elevation and progress.

At the sale of a valuable collection of paintings, belonging to Joseph Burnett, of Boston, the Banishment of Coriolanus, by Washington Allston, sold for $107 50; Exterior and figures, by Schaefels, of Antwerp, sold for $139; Italy, landscape and figures, by Ames, sold for $210; Interior of Cathedral, by Allston, a beautiful picture, sold for $252 50; The Crucifixion, a copy from the famous picture by Guido, which was held by the administrators of Dr. Jarvis, from whose collection it was selected at $1,000, sold for $500.

Dr. Kleipstein, says the Charleston Courier, whose plantation is within a few miles of Mount Pleasant, in the parish of Christ Church, has lately discovered the remains of a Mastodon embedded in alluvium. A beautiful specimen of one of its huge grinders has been presented by the Doctor to Professor Holmes, of the College of Charleston, and has been placed in the Museum of Natural History of that institution.

The editor of the Evening Mirror says: "We have just been shown an admirable daguerreotype of 'Marion Harland' at Derby's, which represents her as a young lady with a full brow and a fine eye (an excellent thing in a woman), with a serene, contemplative face—'a being breathing thoughtful breath;' and altogether a very winsome, comely picture. Will neighbor Derby have the goodness to duplicate the portrait and send us an 'editor's copy?"

So say we all of us.

The total number of publishers in the United States, comprising, however, only those who publish books, not periodicals, is, in round ndmbers, three hundred. About three-fourths of them are to be found in the cities of Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore.

Dr. R. Traverse, of Marsh's Library, is preparing for the press all the Latin lives of the Irish Saints not yet edited by Colgan, or others, in the original language, with learned notes, after the manner of Colgan. St. Brendan, the navigator, will be one of the first series. It is believed that the Irish Saint and his companions were the first discovers of America.

Alpheus Durr, a noted Leipsic publisher, is about to include the works of Marion Harland (Mary Virginia Hawes) in his series of American authors.

Mr. John G. Palfrey is now in England employed in the collection of materials for a "History of New England," which he is about to write.

The Museum of the Louvre has just bought a MS. volume written by Leonardo de Vinci, and illustrated with pen-and-ink drawings by the same author. The price paid for it was 35,000 zwanzigers.

It is denied by the children of the late Mrs. Caroline Lee Hents, that the work entitled "Courtship and Marriage, &c.," was from the pen of that lady.

Mr. Schentz, of Stockholm, has invented a calculating machine, which is exciting the attention of the learned and curious.

Christopher Moore's beautiful marble statue of the poet Tom Moore will soon be erected and inaugurated in Dublin.

A complete edition of the works of Mr. G. W. Curtis is soon to be brought out by Messrs. Dix & Edwards, of this city.

According to Professor Agassiz, no fossils of the rose have yet been discovered by geologists. He thinks the creation of the plant was coeval with that of man.

Miss Peggy Land, a young woman of Pickens county, South Carolina, about 24 years of age, after seeking womanly employment without pecuniary success, went to farming last year, and made cotton which netted her $100; her corn crop was two hundred and fifty bushels, worth 60 cents per bushel, and she raised 35 bushels of wheat, worth $1,50 per bushel! She accomplished this herself, without assistance of hiring. She plowed, drove the cart, cut her wheat, and cribbed her corn.

MILITARY CORRESPONDENCE.

The Sixty-Ninth Regiment had a battalion drill on the evening of the 29th ult., at the City Arsenal. The muster of several companies was respectable, while that of others was slim; which might have been owing to the close neighborhood of the first of May. In the same way, there was much unevenness in the drill; some companies doing as if they had officers who looked after their discipline in the company drills, and presenting in this respect a marked contrast with others, apparently not so fortunate. The companies that seemed especially to come under this latter category, succeeded in marring the symmetry of the general movements. But, as we understand, they have been unfortunately situated in respect to their command, for some time back—we decline to particularize for the present. The firing by battalion and by division was very good—that by company, from the causes mentioned, was indifferent. In the marching in common time, we beg to suggest to some of the officers that they should avoid precipitating the movement—a fault of frequent recurrence during the evening, and by which the efforts of other officers to take wheeling distance were continually defeated. The least attention to this fault will correct it. A word in conclusion, on punctuality. A compliance with the order fixing the commencement of the drill at 8 o'clock, would enable the commandant to dismiss before 11, and not injure the regiment.

Military Matters in Brooklyn, E. D.

On Tuesday evening, the 29th ult., pursuant to orders issued by Col. J. C. Smith, a regimental drill of the officers, commissioned and non commissioned, and three companies of the Fourteenth regiment—the "Rifles," Captain Beadell; "Washington Guards," Captain Martz, and the "Carroll Guards," Captain Magrath,—took place at the Adelphi, in the Eastern District. Considering the utter want of accommodation for military exercise of any kind in this district, and the consequent want of practice under which this portion of the 14th have to labor, their essay on the occasion was creditable, and evinced a laudable determination not to succumb to difficulties.

In respect to opportunities for improvement, the military of the Western District have much the advantage; even the old Armory at the corner of Henry and Cranberry streets being greatly better than nothing. We were under the impression that the project of establishing an armory, worthy of the name, in Brooklyn had received the sanction of the Legislature some time ago, and that a new building, adequate to the requirements of our military friends in that section, would have ere this reared its front, affording "ample scope and verge enough" for military evolutions and practice, including those of Captain Hogan's artillery. Or, if this could not have been accomplished—that is, if a building could not have been located in a sufficiently central position to suit the views of both districts—that a gun-house or branch armory would have been built in the Eastern district sufficiently capacious for the purposes of military improvement. Why has not one or other of these projects been accomplished? Has the Brigadier's injunction put the whole subject eternally to sleep?

Poughkeepsie, April 14, 1856.

Having a taste for Military matters, and a little experience also, and seeing in your journal a "Directory" devoted to the military of the Union, I transmit to you the names of the only corps of Irish-American soldiery between this city and Albany. They are as follows, the oldest organizations first:—

"Jackson Rifles," 20th regiment., N. Y. S. M., —— brigade, 2nd division, located at Rondout, Ulster county, N. Y.

James Diamond, Capt.

"Jackson Republican Guards," 21st regiment, N. Y. S. M., 9th brigade, 3d division, located at Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, N. Y. H. Dimond, Capt.

"City Volunteers" 22nd regiment, N. Y. S. M., located at Hudson, Columbia county, N. Y. W. J. McNulty, Capt.

The "J. R. G." I have the pleasure to state (although our K. N. friends think otherwise), was organized by myself, under the most embarrassing circumstances, and if you wish, I will transmit to you a sketch of its organization for publication.

Yours truly, J. Buckley.

We have received from our military correspondent at Washington the following U. S. army intelligence, just promulgated from the War Department:—

Washington, April 21, 1856.

Special Orders, No. 41.

The following assignments of officers (Adjutant-General's Department) have been directed by the Secretary of War:—

Brevet-Major W. W. Mackall to the department of the Pacific. Head-Quarters Benicia, California.

Brevet-Major George Dease, to the department of the West. Head-Quarters, St. Louis, Mo.

Brevet-Major J. McDowell, to the department of Texas. Head-Quarters, San Antonio.

Brevet-Major F. A. Page, to the department of Florida. Head-Quarters, Pensacola.

Brevet-Major D. C. Buell, to the department of the East. Head-Quarters, Baltimore, Md.

Big Salaries.—W. Lyon Mackenzie, member of the Canadian Legislature for the County of Haldimand, in presenting to the Upper Canadians reasons why they should dissolve their union with those of the Lower Province, has occasion to speak of the large salaries paid to officials in Canada. The Governor, Sir E. Head, gets $31,000 a year, his house rent and servant hire. The ten Ministers get each $6,000 a year, $6 a day during the sessions of Parliament, mileage and "immense patronage." The Engineer of the Grand Trunk Railway has a salary of $13,000 a year. Sir Cusac Roney, "agent for that work gets the same. Chief Justice Robinson has $6,666 per annum, $500 for traveling expenses, and a pension of $4,444 when he shall see fit to resign. The Register of Hamilton, Dundas and Wentworth, (he is a Minister also) gets $6,500 a year. The Register of Toronto and York gets $12,000 a year. The Governor has a Secretary to whom the Canadians pay $3,000 annually, for the pretence of quill driving.

American News.

An interesting case was tried by the Court of Claims on the 29th. The 9th article of the Florida Treaty provided satisfaction for injuries to the Spanish inhabitants of that territory who had suffered by the operations of the American Army in 1812–13. The acts of Congress to fulfil the obligation embraced claims to the amount of nearly $3,000,000, with more than $1,500,000 interest, which latter has not been paid. A petition having been filed for interest on a $4,000 claim, heretofore allowed, the Court of Claims hold that the Florida Judges were not authorised to act as an ordinary court, but as commissioners merely, their awards, together with the vouchers, to be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury. That this arrangement could not be disturbed without the authority of Congress, which established this mode of complying with the treaty of stipulation. That the question of interest must come under the review of the Secretary of the Treasury, from whose decision there can be no appeal. Judge Scarboro considered that the hundreds of thousands of dollars involved sunk into insignificance in comparison with the important principle presented. He delivered an elaborate opinion, differing from Messrs. Gilchrist and Blackford. A re-hearing was granted.

Every day witnesses, says the Richmond Examiner of the 28th ult., some new indignity to the fallen majesty of Know-Nothingism. Twelve months ago, Sam's word might have stood against a world of parties and politicians; now, there are few so poor as to do him reverence. Then, he boasted the power to crush out and annihilate all the "old and corrupt" political parties in the land; now, his liegemen cuff and kick him as a clown, and make him the butt of every expression of their contumely and contempt. His "progress" from the parlor to the kitchen of the old Whig aristocrat, and out of the kitchen into the back alley like a scalded dog, deserves to be perpetuated by the pencil of a modern Hogarth. We record to-day the tardy but appropriate verdict of the sober second thought of the old line Whigs of Kentucky against the adventurer and imposter; not that it puts any worse phase upon his hopeless fortunes than they already wore, but merely as rendering conspicuous one of those outward evidences of a fact universally known and conceded by the living generation which should be erected as useful landmarks for history.

The Louisville Democrat persists in asserting that Louisville is declining. The Journal asserted the other day that there were only 57 vacant tenements in the city; this the Democrat denies, and says there are 55 vacant tenements on Main street alone, giving the items to prove it. The merchants of that city have passed a resolution to the effect, that the public prints of our city be requested to discontinue the discussion of the prosperity of this city. The papers will not comply. The decline of the city is laid to the account of K. N. victories. "Men," adds the Albany Knickerbocker, "will not live in a city where women and children are murdered in cold blood, for the insane doings of a drunkard."

Of the wheat crop in Virginia, the Staunton American says, that the prospect for an abundant wheat crop in that region is not very flattering, and that the chinch bug has already given indications that it will again infest the fields. The editor of the Lewisburg Chronicle, on a trip to the south-western part of the State, never saw a poorer prospect for a good crop, and in many places it was difficult to see wheat above ground. The graziers of that section are getting short of feed in consequence of the dryness of the weather. On the other hand, the Staunton Vindicator says, that the wheat crop of Albemarle, with that on the Valley Road from Staunton to Harper's ferry, is decidedly better than it ever saw it before.

Of the growing crops of Maryland, the Princess Anne Union states, that the cherry and peach trees in that county are in bloom. Many of the peach trees, however, were killed by the severe winter. The Catoctin Whig gives a cheering account of the wheat in Frederick county, while the St. Mary's Beacon reports a gloomy prospect for the grain crop in that region, and in several of the lower counties, on account of late seeding. In Prince George's county, the tobacco plants are said to be nearly ruined by the drought.

The Richmond Enquirer says that the collections made by, and contributions made to, the Mount Vernon Association are large, and it adds, that "at the proper time measures will be taken to open negotiations with Mr. Washington, and, on a full review of the whole field, we entertain no doubt that a contract will be made by the Governor with Mr. W., and that, on the payment of the $200,000 within five years, as provided by the late law, the latter will make a deed for the Mount Vernon Estate to the State of Virginia.

On the night of the 30th ult., a great conflagration took place in Philadelphia. The wind was blowing freshly from the north-east, and spread the flames with fearful rapidity. One fireman, John R. Graff, (a returned volunteer in the Mexican War,) was killed. A row took place between two fire companies, in which James Bartley was stabbed in the breast. There are little hopes of his recovery. The loss is roughly estimated as over one million.

Those persons who resided in this vicinity fifty years ago, says the Cincinnati Commercial, recollect that the forests in the valleys of Millcreek, the Great and Little Miami and Whitewater, were enlivened with the gay plumage of flocks of paroquets. Like the aborigines, these birds seem destined to disappear before the improvements of the white man. We learn that flocks of twenty, or more, were recently seen in Decatur county, Iowa.

The Rock Islander states that about seven years ago a father and son landed at Port Byron, in Rock Island county. After paying the freight on their few household goods, they had but seven dollars. They went to work industriously, bought a small piece of land, and added to it from time to time as they were able. A few days ago, they were offered twenty-one thousand dollars in cash for their farm, which they refused.

On the 1st May a registration system of letters, between the United States and Great Britain, went into effect. The registration fee on letters to Great Britain is 5 cents, the same as on registered letters from one point to another within the United States; therefore, on a single letter to Great Britain the postage and registration fee combined will be 29 cents. Prepayment is required.

The colored Know-Nothings of Ohio, have called a State Convention, to be held at Columbus, on the 29th. Their white brethren, not to be outdone in patriotic labors, have called theirs for the 27th of May—two days in advance. They appear to be busily at work to circumvent each other.

Official advices have been received from Commodore Salter, of the Brazil Squadron, stating that he had returned to Rio from escorting out to sea the steamer America, which it was supposed was fitted out at New-York as a Russian privateer, and that she had not been molested by the British Admiral, as previously threatened.

The woman arrested in Baltimore on suspicion of having stolen a child four years old from Brooklyn, proves to be a respectable person who formerly resided in Brooklyn, and when arrested, was on her way to Cleveland, Ohio. Arriving in Baltimore, she got out of funds and changed her name to solicit aid. The child is her own.

The steamboats and tow boats never were so crowded with up freights as this spring. The railroad freight houses are all blocked up, there not being car convenience to carry off the immense piles destined for the west, north and east. The signs indicate a prosperous spring and summer business.—Alb. Knick.

Joseph Brennan, Esq., of the Delta, has been invited, says the Baton Rouge Advocate, to deliver a lecture for the benefit of the widow and children of the murdered policemen, Algeo. He has, with characteristic generosity, consented to do so.

Snow fell in some parts of the Valley of Virginia last week, to the depth of seven or eight inches. The growing wheat in Clarke and some of the adjacent counties, is said to be looking finely, and a large crop is anticipated.

The Paris correspondent of the New York Express is of opinion that the French emigration to America, this year, will be immense. The provincial French are a sober and industrious people.

The Havana fruit trade this season is said to be greater than it has been for fifteen years. It is estimated at $100,000. From the Mediteranean the supply is much larger, the total value of the importations being $500,000.

The Christian Register says: "It is calculated that the clergy cost the United States six millions of dollars annually, the criminals nineteen, the lawyers thirty-five, tobacco forty, and rum one hundred millions.

The female husband in Syracuse has been discharged from prison—her sentence having been illegal; the statute only authorizing a sentence of sixty days for vagrancy, whilst she was sent for ninety. She promises to make some rich revelations.

Mr. John Sheldon, of Globe Village, Massachusetts, drowned himself in the river of that place. He was 81 years old, and universally respected. Grief for the death of his wife, with whom he had enjoyed fifty years of happiness, was the cause.

A saw log lying on a hillside at Tiltonsville, Ohio, rolled over three children playing near it. Two of them were killed, but the youngest, but a babe, was uninjured, a providential knot in the log lifting it above the little innocent's bulk.

An old woman lately arrived in Chicago, on her way to Urbano, Illinois, with a bed, a box, three dogs, a cat, a black hen, a basket containing five kittens, and a pup with its eyes not open.

Mr. A. E. Dietz, of Addison, Michigan, has a calf of his own raising, which weighed, at a year old, 1,002 pounds. The length of this "cow-baby" is 7 feet 4 inches; girth, 6 feet 4 inches; height, 4 feet 3 inches.

Albany is the most favored city in the Union. We havn't, says the Knickerbocker, had a fire in six months that destroyed more than $10 worth of property. The insurance companies' dividends must be large the coming half year.

Oregon is taking measures to be admitted into the Union, the population now amounts to fifty thousand, with more "wealth than any other community of fifty thousand on the face of the globe."

On board the Empire State, arrived at New-York on the 28th from Liverpool, with a load of emigrants, eight died with small pox on the passage, and 29 with the disease were taken off at Quarantine!

G. P. R. James, the British Consul at Norfolk, Va., has received instructions from Lord Clarendon to distribute £1,000 for the benefit of the widows and orphans of those who died during the epidemic last autumn.

Mr. Wm. Hite, one of the proprietors of the New-Orleans Dry Docks, was badly stabbed a short time ago in the Ponchartrain cars by a person named Harvey Brooks, who was subsequently arrested and locked in prison.

There are twenty women in the employment of the United States, at various points, as keepers of light-houses, beacon-lights, &c. Three or four have the prefix of "Miss" before their names, in their reports to the government.

The revenue of Virginia, under the new tax bill, will amount, according to some authorities, to $3,600,000; according to others, to $4,000,000, sufficient to absorb her floating debt, and furnish a supply for other purposes.

The mania for shooting in Cincinnati, says the Sun of that city, is on the increase. It requires an immediate check, or it will come to pass that every man, for his own protection, will have to carry concealed weapons.

The largest fruit grower in Northern Ohio, who reports to the Cleveland Plaindealer in brief as follows:—Peaches, none; Apples, good; Grapes, fair; Cherries, fair. All other fruits good.

Yesterday, says the St. Louis Democrat of the 26th ult., in the Circuit Court, John Bell emancipated his slave Cynthia, 24 years old, and her daughter named Dora, aged about 2 years.

Ripe strawberries are in the market at Savannah, Georgia, and Charleston, South Carolina, and figs and peaches in New-Orleans, Louisiana.

Watson Abrams, a young fisherman, of Fishkill, New-York, stole away the daughter of Abram Wood, and killed the father for pursuing them. He then escaped in the cars.

A Spaniard named Mateo Gurderez, cut his wife's throat in a crazy fit, on Monday last, in New-Orleans, and afterwards killed himself. He was aged 33, she 25.

The largest cow in the United States was recently sold in Manchester, N. H. She girts 9 feet, and weighs 2,700 pounds. She sold for $500.

The population of Pittsburg and the seven or eight boroughs which surround it, is set down at the present time at 126,620, being an increase of 55 per cent. in less than six years.

The woman who neglects her husband's shirt-front is not the wife of his bosom.

The amount of forged land warrants already discovered exceeds 1,000,000 acres. The investigation is still in progress, and additional frauds are coming to light.

A long correspondence is in progress between the Postmaster-General and the Panama Railroad Company, relative to the compensation for carrying mails across the Isthmus.

The fare on the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad between St. Louis and Cincinnati has been reduced. The price of passage now is the same as by the river.

A Mormon paper, with the title of the Western Standard, has lately appeared in San Francisco. It advocates all the Mormon ultra doctrines—plurality of wives among the rest.

The Hard-shell Democratic State Committee met at Syracuse on the 29th ult., and, after some formal business, adjourned sine die.

The Weston Herald states that a little son of Mr. Adam Aitchison of that place, came to an untimely death last week, from drinking a quantity of strong ley.

The total value of exports for Savannah for 1854–5 was $20,129,230. The exports of cotton in 1855 exceeded those of 1854 by 70,904 bales, or over 22 per cent.

One man in Philadelphia holds a million of dollars of the Texas bonds soon to be paid, which he bought from the U. S. Bank at the rate of fifteen cents to the dollar.

The United States Treasurer reports the amount on hand, subject to draft on the 24th ult., as $24,885,000.

They are giving Ice Cream and Strawberry parties in Mobile.

The village of Towanda, Cattaraugus county, New-York, was almost wholly destroyed by fire on the 30th ult.

The Methodists are about erecting a College on a grand scale at Danville, Pa.

The total amount of coal brought from the Maryland coal region this year is 82,130 tons.

The total value of property belonging to the city of Hoboken is $174,655 40.

A Boston doctor reports a case of gout in a boy eleven years old.

Martin Koszta, the Hungarian, has purchased a farm on the Median River, Texas, for which he paid $9,000.

Specimens of fish with four legs have been received by Prof Agassiz, from Port Defiance, in New-Mexico.

Chicago has eight dailies, five tri-weeklies, and not less than twenty-eight weeklies.

The travel west has set in with a rush equal to Niagara Falls.

The wheat crop of Virginia is said to look very thrifty, and stands well upon the ground.

Special Notices.

☞ Post Office Notice.—The Mails for Europe, per steamer Arabia, will close at this office on Wednesday, the 7th day of May, at 10½ o'clock, A. M. E. C. Bailley, Postmaster, Boston.

☞ Post Office Notice.—The Mails for Europe, per U. S. steamer Ericsson, will close at this office on SATURDAY, the 10th day of May, at 10½ o'clock, A. M. [my10 1t] Isaac V. Fowler, Postmaster.

Gentlemen's Hats in Quarterly Patterns.—The established excellence and style of our peculiar fabric for Gentlemen's wear, renders it needful for us only to announce the quarterly issue for March, 1856. LEARY & CO., Leaders and Introducers of Fashions for Gents. Hats, Astor House, Broadway. my10t2

Good Servants.—Employment Office, No. 129 Waverley place, two doors from Sixth avenue, and one block from Washington park. The proprietor having had three years' experience in the business, has been induced, at the request of a large number of wealthy and influential citizens, to open an office in the above location. It will be his earnest endeavor to obtain servants who entertain a just idea of the value attached to the faithful performance of their duties, to pay prompt attention to orders, and impartially consider the interests of their employers. Honorable dealing, he hopes, will distinguish every transaction connected with his office, and a prompt attention to the wants of employers will be strictly adhered to. He would particularly call attention to the location of his office, it being the most central and respectable in the city. It will be his study to sustain its reputation and ensure the confidence of his patrons. [my10t1] WM. O'BRIEN.

GEO. McDONNELL,

BOOT AND SHOE MANUFACTURER,

32 PARK ROW, NEXT DOOR TO LOVEJOY'S HOTEL, NEW-YORK.

☞ Boots, Shoes, and Gaiters of the best quality made to order.

3m.my10 Geo. McDonnell.

WILLIAM M. SMITH,

The Public Favorite, and only American Opposition

BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTOR,

THE OLDEST ESTABLISHED IN THE BUSINESS.

Work done promptly and faithfully—cheaper, quicker, and better than any other poster in the city. Work done either in New-York, Brooklyn, Williamsburgh, or Jersey City. Boards lent for concerts, or any kind of work.

Office, 28 Spruce street, New-York,

ap26tf (Between William and Gold streets.)

FASHIONABLE HATTER, 223 THIRD AVENUE.

Cowhy's Spring style of Hats, now ready, are superior to anything hitherto offered in Beauty of Shape, and Elegance of Finish. Being a practical hatter himself, Cowhy is enabled to sell a Superior Hat at a very Moderate Price.

His young gent's hat is one of great beauty, and his assortment of children's fancy hats and caps cannot be surpassed by any other establishment in the city.

N. B.—Hats and Caps made to order, and warranted to fit, by COWHY, 223 Third Avenue, between 19th and 20th streets. my8 1y

BOOTS, SHOES AND GAITERS,

Wholesale and Retail,

MADE TO ORDER BY

LORIN BROOKS,

188 Fulton street, New-York, opposite Church street, West of Broadway. my10 1m

WRITING INKS.

We ask the attention of all who wish imperishable records,—a matter of great importance to State, County and Town Offices, Banks, and others, to Dr. Chilton's test of the prominent Inks in use, made with a view to show their different degrees of permanence by exposure. Engraved facsimiles of the test can be seen at our office.

Thaddeus Davids & Co.,

ap19 6m Manufacturing Stationers, 26 Cliff street.

DRY GOODS AND EMBROIDERIES.

H. MAGEE, has removed to 140 Atlantic street, Brooklyn, where he has opened a large stock of Spring and Summer Goods, which he will sell at very low prices. my3 1m

City News.

A disastrous fire broke out on the morning of the 2d inst., in the depot of the Harlem and New Haven Railroad, extending from Elm to Centre, and from Leonard to Franklin streets.

The upper portion of the building was rented by Edward Anthony, and by him rented to sub-tenants. Mr. Anthony occupied a portion of the building in the daguerreotype manufacturing business, in which he employed a large number of hands. His loss is about $24,000, fully covered by insurance.

The entire loss is over $100,000. About eight hundred hands are thrown out of employment. The Harlem Company was insured for $20,000, which covers their loss. The New Haven Co. owned the south part of the building, and their loss is much greater than that of the Harlem Company.

In consequence of the illness of a juror (Mr. Fox), the "Stanwix Hall tragedy" case has been adjourned to the 1st June.

The Sunday Times says: "We perceive that Phelan's model billiard tables and combination cushions are coming greatly into vogue. The Everett House has them, so has the Hotel St. Germain, while at the billiard arena of the St. Nicholas they have taken the place of other tables. Keefe, the celebrated restaurant keeper under the Metropolitan, has just ordered fifteen of these superior articles for one room in his establishment. In fact, they seem to be the only article of the kind now in which good players have confidence."

Messrs. William Brady & Co. submitted a communication to the Brooklyn Common Council, proposing to furnish the city with water for the sum of $3,500,000. They take as a basis of their estimate the plans and specifications heretofore adopted by the Common Council, and propose to add to said plans, and build an additional reservoir on Prospect Hill, of a capacity to hold twenty million gallons of water, with the necessary grounds, engine, machinery, and means for its supply, with 150 miles of pipe, and also, to erect 1,000 hydrants. They also agree to pay for all the land, streams and reservoir sites, except such as may belong to the city, and to pay the land damages, &c., &c., and to deliver twenty million gallons of water per day. Referred to the Water Committee.

Mr. James Jones, formerly of the exceedingly enterprising firm of Ross, Jones & Tousey, has become connected with the New-York Clipper. As might be expected from Mr. Jones' rare business capacity and unceasing industry, the Clipper has since then visibly improved. Mr. Jones' former polite and gentlemanly partners continue to drive their immense business with true Young-American energy and consequent success.

Death of Ogden Hoffman.—The death of this distinguished and brilliant gentleman—which took place on the 1st inst., at his residence in 9th street—produced a sensation of deep grief, not alone among his friends, but on the public to whom he was so favorably known for many years. Mr. Hoffman was the eldest son of the late Judge Josiah Ogden Hoffman, and half-brother of Charles Fenno Hoffman, the novelist and poet. His son, Ogden Hoffman, Jr., is United States District Judge in California. Mr. Hoffman entered the Navy at an earl age as a midshipman, and was on board the President frigate at the time of her chase by a British squadron. He afterwards went to the Mediterranean, but retired from the Navy soon after the close of the war, and was admitted to the bar. He commenced practice in Orange County, which sent him to the Legislature, and was appointed District-Attorney; but he removed to this City about the year 1826, and became a partner of Hugh Maxwell, at that time District-Attorney, and distinguished himself in assisting the prosecution of the famous conspiracy cases, when Henry Eckford, Jacob Barker, General Swift, Lawton, Mowatt and others were indicted for conspiring to defraud the public. In 1828 he was in the Legislature for the city. He was then a member of the Jackson party, but afterwards joined the Whigs, at the same time that Moses H. Grinnell, Dudley Selden, and other prominent members of the Democratic party abandoned Tammany Hall. He was District-Attorney from 1829 to 1835, and was appointed United States District-Attorney by General Harrison. In 1838 he was sent to Congress, and was again elected in 1848. In 1854–5 he was Attorney-General of the State. During the past twenty-five years he was engaged on every important criminal trial in this city, and it was by his ability and surpassing eloquence that Robinson, who was tried for the murder of Ellen Jewett, obtained a verdict of acquittal. He was twice married; the last time to a daughter of the Hon. Samuel L. Southard, of New Jersey. In his death a brilliant light has been extinguished, and a void created which will not be easily filled.

The Late Robert Kelly.

Mr. Kelly graduated at Columbia College in 1827, with the highest honors of his class, and immediately went into commercial business, to which he devoted himself till 1836, when he retired with a large fortune and the reputation, of being a merchant of rare sagacity and judgment. During this period he made himself master of eight languages, with all of which he preserved a familiar acquaintance up to his last illness.

"On retiring from business," says the Evening Post, "Mr. Kelly became connected with several benevolent institutions; in 1842 he married, and spent the succeeding two years travelling in Europe. Upon his return he devoted himself with his accustomed energy to various pursuits, both public and private, and especially to the cause of public education. He was for many years an active trustee of the New-York University and of the Madison and Rochester Universities. He was the second President of the Board of Education of this city, and was the principal author of the plan of education adopted and still in use at the Free Academy. He was also the author of the plan of study (novel in some particulars) adopted by the Rochester University, which still bears practical evidence of the wisdom which projected it. About three years since, he received from this institution the degree of Doctor of Laws, now-a-days rarely so worthily disposed, and at the last session of the Legislature he was elected a Regent of the State University. He was also elected President of the Alumni of Columbia College upon the occasion of their recent organization, and has also been President of the Board of Trustees of the House of Refuge for seven years past.

The following are some of the offices which he filled at the time of his decease—and when the ability, promptness and energy which distinguished him are remembered—for he would not accept any office without performing all the duties which pertained to it—it will be apparent that his time was fully engrossed, and thus, though what is usually termed a man of leisure, few men had less practical experience of it:—Regent of the University of the State of New-York; Chamberlain of the City of New-York; President of the House of Refuge; Vice-President of Merchants' Clerks' Savings Bank; Director Mechanics' Bank; Director United States Trust Company; Trustee Clinton Hall Association; Trustee New-York Society Library.

In politics Mr. Kelly was a Democrat, and during the later years of his life manifested an increasing interest in political matters. He was the candidate of the Democratic party of the State for Comptroller at the last election but one, we believe, and at the time of his decease was chairman of the Democratic General Committee of this city, member of the Democratic State Central Committee, and one of the delegates at large to the Democratic National Convention that is to assemble in June next at Cincinnati.

Mr. Kelly has been a diligent student throughout his life, and his library, in which he spent most of his leisure, is one of the best private collections of books in the city. He was a polished writer, and had he lived a few years longer, would have, probably, left some more permament memorial of his literary accomplishments. He leaves a wife and three children and a brother, the Hon. Wm. Kelly, who now represents the counties of Dutchess and Columbia, in the State Senate. He died at 11 o'clock on the night of the 27th ult. His disease was congestion of the brain.

The Florida Indians.

A BATTLE IN THE BIG CYPRESS—INDIAN DEPREDATIONS—STIRRING TIMES.

The Tampa Peninsular has issued extras, containing details of a battle between the Indians and Major Arnold's command:

"Whilst scouting in the Big Cypress, with the available force of his command, composed of Capt. Dawson, Second-Lieuts. Langdon and Gardner, Assistant-Surgeon Moore, and 108 enlisted men, Maj. Arnold was attacked on the 8th ult. by Indians, estimated from 80 to 100, who were lying in wait in a thick cypress swamp, (water two feet deep,) about half a mile from 'Billy's Town.' The first indication of their presence was a fire from them on the advanced guard, which was soon followed by a full volley on the column. Company C, commanded by Lieut. Gardner, leading off, which at that time was not far in rear of the advance guard.

After exchanging some three hundred shots on both sides, a charge in front was ordered. At least 54 Indians ran towards 'Billy's Town,' and a number took to a dense Cypress on the right. The fight and pursuit lasted about six hours.

The loss was private John Simms, Company L, 2d Artillery, mortally wounded, (survived about 15 minutes); Corporal Joseph Corson, privates John Muller, John Strobell, Company C, 2d Artillery; and Thomas Newton, Company L, 1st Artillery, severely wounded, and privates Silas M. Watkins and William Abbott, Company C, 2d Artillery, slightly wounded. Several received shots in their clothing and haversacks. What loss or injury the Indians sustained is not known, further than that blood was discovered on the bushes through which they retreated.

On the 18th ult. a squad of Indians fired the house of Asa J. Goddard, located near the head waters of Manatee and within two miles of Capt. Addison's Fort. The house had been previously abandoned by Mr. Goddard and family, but contained nearly all his effects. After the complete desolation of Mr. Goddard's place, the Indians went to the house of John Creig, within half a mile of the above mentioned Fort, and plundered it of everything it contained."

From the Ocala Companion, Extra, of April 17.

Mr. Enoch Daniels, a citizen of Levy county, left his home in search of hogs, and after proceeding about three miles, his dog, which was running ahead, stopped at a clump of palmettoes, barked a few times and ran back considerably frightened.

At that moment Mr. Daniels saw an Indian rise up from the palmettoes to fire upon him, and as the Indian fired he turned his horse toward home. Just then nine Indians sprang from their hiding place, and uttering the most horrid yells, fired and rushed upon him. His coat was pierced by bullets, and the stock of his gun considerably shattered, but he was unhurt.

After he had gone three or four hundred yards he turned and saw two Indians very near him. One of them dodged to a small tree and commenced loading. Believing that all their guns were empty, Mr. Daniels fired upon the Indian, who fell, and the surviver going to the assistance of the one who was shot, the chase was given over.

The next morning a scouting party, twenty in number, among whom was our informer, started in pursuit. They found the spot as described by Mr. Daniels, a pool of blood by the tree where the Indian was shot, and saw blood a long distance on their trail. The party followed several miles; but upon going some distance into the Gulf Hammock, whither they had traced the Indians, they were compelled to turn back.

From Texas.

Texas dates to the 19th inst. bring nothing very important. The Galveston papers report that vegetation is suffering all over the country, from drought.

Capt. Callahan, the well known frontiersman, was shot by a person named William Blassengave, with whom he had some difficulty.

The Indianola Bulletin, extra, of the 19th, furnishes the following intelligence:

We have just learned, from the most undoubted and authentic source, that the railroad terminus of the San Antonia and Mexican Gulf Railroad has been located at Indianola. Powderhorn, the lower part of the city, will be the locality for the depot. Col. Osgood has taken the contract from Indianola and Victoria, at the rate of $19,250 per mile.

California Trade with the Russian Possessions.—Quite a trade has sprung up between this city and the Russian possessions. The Cyane sailed on the morning of the 26th, with a large cargo of assorted merchandise, suited to the wants of the residents of those ice bound regions. During the past year we have occasionally sent—very quietly, of course—a ship-load of merchandise to the Russians at the mouth of Amoor river. As it is understood that a sort of Sebastopol stronghold is being constructed there, where several thousand men are to be stationed, it is not improbable that after peace is established in Europe a regular communication may be kept up with this port.—San Francisco Alta, April 5.

Later from Lower California.—By the arrival of the brig Judson, Vincent, twenty-five days from Lower California, we learn that the Apaches had done much damage to the stock this season, and have been within fifteen miles of Guyamas. They have also done much mischief to the caravans on their way to the upper country. The caravans of about 400 mules left Hormosil in the latter part of February for California. The government in Mexico recently appointed a new Governor to Sonora; he came about the last of February, but had to leave again as the whole population was opposed to him. All the troops were called from Guyamas to Hermosil. Gov. Gandaros was still in office when the Judson left.—San Francisco Alta, April 5.

From Oregon and Washington Territories.—Advices have been received from Portland, Oregon Territory, up to March 29. The Indians had attacked the settlement at the Cascades, destroying the town and killing some twenty persons. They have also captured and destroyed the steamer Mary. Altogether, Indian affairs in Oregon look exceedingly gloomy, and it is evident that the Territory needs assistance.

In Washington Territory there has been but little change in the state of affairs since the departure of the last steamer. The inhabitants are still in fear of an attack.

Laying the Foundation Stone of the new Catholic Church of St. Vincent de Paul, Liverpool.

On Tuesday, 8th ult., the ceremony of laying the foundation stone of the new Catholic Church of St. Vincent de Paul was performed by the Right Rev. Dr. Goss, Catholic Bishop of Liverpool, assisted by about forty clergymen. The site of the new church is in St. James street, and was purchased from the corporation for the sum of £6,000. The design for the new church is by Mr. Pugin, son of the late celebrated Mr. Pugin. The plan is of an oblong form, to suit the requirements of the ground, and is composed of a chancel 27 feet by 24 feet deep, two side chapels 24 feet long, 12 wide, which will eventually be separated from the chancel by an open metal screen. The above are divided from the nave by three Painswick-stone arches. The nave is composed of six bays, and measures 96 feet in length by 60 feet in width, and 62 feet in height. On the right-hand side are two sacristies, one for the clergy and the other for the servers, behind which come four confessionals of convenient dimensions. The church will eventually be entered by four doors, namely, the grand west entrance door, one at the east end for the clergy, and two at the side, only one of which will at present be erected, the site of the others, together with that of the baptistry, being at present occupied with other buildings. At the east end corner will be the presbytery, with accommodations for three or four priests. The style of the building is early decorated, and the materials to be used in its construction are as follows:—The whole of the external wrought work is picked out of the Stourton-hill quarry; the walling stone is from Upholland, which has an extremely good effect when set. The whole of the internal masonry is executed in Painswick and Caen stone. The church will seat 1,000 souls, with standing room for 500 more. The house will be built of best Bolton pressed bricks, with dressed stone openings. The contract is undertaken by Messrs. Haigh & Sale, and amounts to £5,700. The church has been designed by E. Welby Pugin, and Mr. Eyre is engaged under him to superintend and direct its execution. The usual service appointed by the Church to be read on the occasion of laying a foundation stone having been intoned by the bishops and priests, Dr. Goss performed the ceremony of laying the foundation stone in the ordinary manner. The bishop and the priests having been passed in procession around the ground upon which the church is to stand, returned again to the spot where the stone had been laid, after which the bishop addressed the meeting at some length.

Sir Robert M'Clure has been reimbursed in the fees (£104 0s. 2d.) paid by him on receiving the honor of knighthood. The fees payable on making the Emperor Napoleon III. a knight of the Garter amounts to £479 13s. 4d. They were defrayed out of the public funds. The expenses of Lord John Russell's special mission to Vienna last year amounted to £2,332 16s. 4d.

Mrs. Crowe, a respectable lady, was lately garroted by two ruffians, in Liverpool, and robbed of a gold watch, gold chain, locket, and seals. The ruffians were captured after a run of three miles.

An influential deputation has waited upon Lord Palmerston, on the subject of the reduction of the wine duties. Lord Palmerston promised that as soon as the Government could improve our commercial relations with France without endangering the revenue, the matter should be considered.

John Macdonald, head-gardener to the Duke of Norfolk at Arundel Castle, is in custody charged with stealing a cash-box containing £128.

MARRIAGES.

At Sona Chapel, by the Rev. Mr. Mullen, Simon Fitzgerald, of Mullingar, to Catherine, daughter of the late John M'Cormick, of Kill House, Westmeath.

At London, William Delany Finch, of Tullamore Park, Tipperary, to Mary Sophia, daughter of Thomas W. Roake, of Moulsey, Surrey.

At St. Thomas's Church, Captain Ernest Randolph Mackesy, of the 97th regiment, to Fanny Johnston, daughter of the late David Bell, of Dublin.

At St. Peter's Church, the Rev. Benjamin Dickson, F. T. C. D., to Margaret Frances, relict of Francis C. Hassard, and daughter of Richard Hudson, of Spring Farm, Wicklow.

At Monkstown, George B. Johnston, of Glynn, Antrim, to Jane Waring, daughter of Thomas Kelly Evans.

At Saggard Catholic Church, N. Crinion, Pill lane, Dublin, to Maria M., daughter of James Sheil, Rathcoole House, Rathcoole, Dublin.

At Passdava, Ceylon, Thomas, son of John Gray, Vice Consul for Belgium, &c., Kingstown, Dublin, to Mary, daughter of Alexander Swan, of Hythe, Kent.

At Carrigtwohill, Francis H. Woodley, of Haymount House, Cork, to Annie, daughter of the late James Ross, of Parkside.

At Fermoy, William H. Thompson, Paymaster of the 59th regiment, to Ellen, daughter of the Rev. Henry D. Freeman.

At Kilpeacon, Limerick, Edmond Morony, of Ballyclough House, to Julia, daughter of the late William J. Westropp.

At Ballygar, William D. Kelly, of Kilronan, Galway, son of Owen Daly, late of Mornington, Westmeath, to Anna Letitia Elizabeth, daughter of the late Rev. Henry Digby.

At Belfast, John Smith, of Cavan, to Fanny Eliza, relict of G. Quin, Esq., M. D., of Belfast.

At London, the Hon. Charles Stewart Hardinge, M. P., son of Field-Marshal Viscount Hardinge, to Lady Lavinia Bingham, daughter of the Earl of Lucan.

At London, Viscount Somerton, eldest son of the Earl of Normanton, to Caroline, daughter of Viscount Barrington.

At St. Rilda Church, Melbourne, Thomas S. Martin, merchant, to Emma, daughter of Christopher Robinson Rutledge, of Newcastle-on-Tyne.

At Leamington, Colonel W. Henry Vicars, late of the 61st regiment, to Jane, widow of Pierce K. Mahony, of Kilmeany, Kerry, and daughter of Robert Gun Cunninghame, of Newtown-Mount-Kennedy, Wicklow.

At Liverpool, Silas Danby, C. E., to Margaret Rosina, daughter of the late William Moore Connell, of Cork.

At Cheltenham, Charles Henry Crookes, of the Bengal Horse Artillery, to Maria Eliza, daughter of the late Richard Morris, of Ballycanvan House, in the county Waterford.

DEATHS.

Of a lingering and painful disease of the heart, which he bore with Christian fortitude for upwards of four years, Luke Tully, second son of Luke Tully, formerly of the Correspondent newspaper, a state prisoner of 1848, sincerely and deservedly regretted by all who knew him, in the 33rd year of his age.

At St. Margaret's, Stillorgan, Edward T. Corcoran.
At Ballieboro, Frances, wife of Thomas Chambers.
At Dublin, Thomas Church, son of George Church, Carrick-on-Shannon.
At the Presentation Convent, Richmond, in the 69th year of her age, Sister Mary Francis Brett.
At Queen's square, Henry Wood, leader and director of music at the Queen's Royal Theatre.
At 7 Bessborough parade, Rathmines, aged 84 years, Ellen, relict of Peter Eggleso, of Stafford street, and Clontarf.
At Millmount, Dublin, Anna, daughter of the late Richard O'Callaghan, of Smithstown, Meath.
At Newcomen Terrace, Rev. John Joseph Donovan, O. S. F., Franciscan Convent, Athlone.
At Drummartin, John Sexton.
At Cabra, Michael Donnelly.
At Ballymorres, Bray, Henrietta, relict of the Rev. Jason Crawford, formerly of Oakley Park, Meath.
At Blackrock, aged 80 years, George Irwin, late of Plantation House, Meath.
At Woodford, Dromara, Down, aged 82 years, Henderson Black.
At Lawrencetown House, Down, Annabella Harriet, wife of Captain George Bowen, of the Royal Navy.
Grace, wife of Thomas Parks, of Ballug Castle, Carlingford, and daughter of the Rev. John Kinahan, of Feakle, Clare.
In Cork, aged 81 years, Anne, relict of J. Harding, of Hanover Hall, in that county.
At Rockfort, near Nenagh, Arthur Wolfe.
At Garranboy, Clare, aged 82 years, Mr. J. Scanlan, father of the Rev. Michael Scanlan, P. P., Cloughjordan.
At Beaumont le Roger, Eure, France, Margaret, relict of Patrick O'Keefe, formerly of Abbeville, Waterford.
At Frenchay, near Bristol, aged 75 years, General J. Greenstreet, of the Hon. East India Company's Service.
At Southampton, Col. F. Farquharson, formerly of the 7th Royal Fusileers.
At George Town, Demerara, Thomas, son of Thomas Towers, of Bushy Park, Borrisokane.

Special Notices.

A CIRCULAR.

TO those engaged in Mercantile pursuits, any invention that will facilitate their labors is highly worthy of notice as well as extensive patronage. One of the most important inventions of the present age is that of a pen which possesses the necessary qualities of fineness in mark and durability in use. Those of John Foley, manufacturer Gold Pens and Pencils, 167 Broadway, New-York, stand pre-eminent. Their superior value is tested by the long time he has been engaged in our city in their manufacture.

We, the subscribers who know the value of these pens, from long use of them, cheerfully recommend them to those who wish for the most convenient article in the counting room. Signed by the following and many other parties:

Geo. S. Coe, Vice-President American Exchange Bank.
B. Murray, Assistant Cashier do. do. do.
J. Seymour, Cashier Bank of North America.
F. A. Platt, Cashier Corn Exchange Bank.
B. T. Hoogland, Cashier National Bank.
W. T. Hooker, President Continental Bank.
James McCall, President Metropolitan Bank.
H. Meigs, Jr., Cashier do do.
J. C. Beach, Cashier Marine Bank.
G. R. Conover, Cashier Importers' and Traders' Bank.
R. H. Lowery, Cashier Bank of the Republic.
W. B. Meeker, Assistant Cashier Bank of New-York.
T. D. Meiggs, Teller Bank of America.
Charles Windsor, Teller Mereantile Bank.
D. Randall, do. do. do.
J. M. Crane, Teller Shoe and Leather Bank.
J. E. Southwick, President Atlantic Bank.
George D. Arthur, Cashier do. do.
P. S. Henderson, Cashier Brooklyn Bank.
Constant W. Brown, Merchants' Bank.
Joseph W. Corlies, President St. Nicholas Bank.
George Ellis, Cashier Bank of the Commonwealth.
R. A. Tooker, Cashier Nassau Bank.
Samuel B. White, Cashier Grocers' Bank.
Edwin Ludlow, Cashier Ohio Life Insurance and Trust Co.
H. W. Cheeseman, Teller Market Bank.
Samuel H. Kissam, Teller Bank of Commerce.
William F. Brown, do. do. do.
S. K. Raymond, Teller Mechanics' Bank.
George D. Lyman, Manager New-York Clearing House.
Charles Dennis, Vice-President Atlantic Mutual Insurance Co.
A. B. Neilson, President Sun Mutual Insurance Co.
Elwood Walter, President Mercantile Mutual Insurance Co.
E. Russell Hinckley, President Atlas Mutual Insurance Co.
Daniel Drake Smith, President Commercial Mutual Insurance Co.
John P. Paulison, Vice-President Astor Mutual Insurance Co.
J. F. Cox, Vice-President Great Western Insurance Co.
William Le Coney, Vice-President Pacific Mutual Insurance Co.
William K. Ackerman, Secretary Illinois Central Railroad Co.
Wm. Bement, Treasurer New-York and New-Haven Railroad Co.
E. B. Litchfield, Treasurer Cleveland and Toledo Railroad Co.
R. B. Turner, Register do. do. do.
J. M. Hopkins, Sec'y. Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana R. R. Co.
G. H. Ford, Dep. Treas. do. do. do.
J. F. Davenport, Treasurer Hudson River Railroad Co.
Edward Thompson, Agent Long Island Railroad Co.
James Rowe, Cashier New-York Herald.
A. Gordon, Bookkeeper New-York Herald.
Henry L. Meech, Cashier Daily Times.
Richard B. Connelly, County Clerk.
T. M. Wigham, of Jacob Little & Co.
J. H. Stebbins, of N. R. Cobb & Co.
Jesse Payne, of Wells, Fargo & Co.

Winslow, Lanter & Co.	E. W. Tiers & Co.
R. W. Clarke, Dodge & Co.	Brown & De Rosset.
Carpenter & Vermilye.	Coolidge & Young.
Meigs and Greenleaf.	Shepard & Nelson.
H. T. Morgan & Co.	Spies, Christ & Jay.
Condit, Jenkins & Co.	H. M. Schieffelin & Fowler.
Quick L'Hommedieu.	Fairchild & Fanshawe.
Atwood & Co.	Beale, Melick & De Witt.
G. S. Robbins & Co.	Carhart, Bacon, Clark & Co.
T. Ketcham & Co.	Brewer & Caldwell.
Drake & Bradford.	American Express Co.
E. S. Munro & Co.	Hall, Dana & Co.
Wetmore & Robert.	Gage, Sloans & Dater.
Stevens, Wallace & Morris.	Afwater, Knapp & Woodruff.
Wells, Butterfield & Co.	Richards & McHarg.
S. B. Chittenden & Co.	Johnson & Higgins.
W. Carpenter, Ide & Co.	James & Henry McBride.
C. E. & W. J. Babcock.	Moody and Telfair.
Sheldon, Hoyt & Co.	L. Roberts & Co.
Bird & Neilson.	Waldo, Barey & Co.
Barclay & Livingston.	Jewell, Harrison & Co.

These Pens vary in size and price, viz., $1, $1 25, $2, $3 and $4 each, with complete silver extension cases, new style pencil, &c., attached are $2, $2 50, $3, $3 50, and $4 each. The undersigned is manufacturer of the celebrated "John Foley's bank pen," price $3 and $4 for the large size, including holder. All pens of my manufacture are made of fine gold, finished in the best manner; points warranted not to come off, and guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction; if not, will exchange them or return the money. Any of the above pens will be sent by mail on receipt of the price. Pens and cases made to order for trade, on the most advantageous terms.

JOHN FOLEY, Gold Pen Manufacturer,
1mo 167 Broadway, New-York.

IMPROVED ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

DR. J. ALLEN, (late Professor in the Ohio College of Dental Surgery,) invites attention to his improved method of constructing Artificial Dentistry, which combine the following advantages:

1st,—There are no seams or crevices for the lodgement of food, to vitiate the saliva, or infect the breath. The interstices are all filled with a silicious compound, which is so applied as to form an artificial gum; this is fused at a high heat, which unites the Teeth firmly to each other, and to the plate upon which tney are set, thus imparting great strength and lifelike appearance to the denture.

2d,—The Teeth for this style of work are made perfectly natural in form and shade, and when properly set with the artificial gum as above, exhibits that harmony with the other features which characterize the natural organs.

3d,—The original form and expression of the mouth and face can be restored. This is done by having the denture so constructed as to bring out the sunken portions and sustain them in their proper position; this is an important feature in this style of work, to which the author devotes special attention.

4th,—A clear and distinct articulation of speech is restored. This is effected by having the inside of the teeth, and artificial gum, of a natural form, to which the tongue is readily adapted; this prevents the hissing or muffled sounds so often observed in speaking or singing, in persons wearing artificial teeth.

The Rooms are at No. 30 BOND STREET, New-York. A Pamphlet containing more full particulars, sent free, to those who desire it. ap26 3m

Special Notices.

PROSPECTUS

OF THE SIXTH VOLUME—NEW SERIES OF THE

UNITED STATES DEMOCRATIC REVIEW,

FOR 1856.

THE United States Democratic Review, established in 1838, entered upon the Sixth Volume of its new series the first January, 1856.

In Politics, the Review will faithfully adhere to the principles recognized by Jefferson and Jackson, and as set forth, from time to time, by the Democratic National Conventions. At the same time, keeping pace with the progress of the age, it will advocate all those measures of public policy calculated to promote the best interests of our common country.

It will be the aim of the Editor to make it not only an efficient advocate of Democratic men and measures, but also

A WELCOME AND USEFUL FAMILY MAGAZINE.

Various causes combined to withdraw from the Review that powerful array of talent which so long placed it foremost amongst its cotemporaries. Those causes have ceased to operate. The most distinguished Statesmen and writers of the Democratic party will again contribute to its pages; and nothing will be omitted to make it worthy of the high vocation it aims at, viz., to be the organ of the United Democracy of the Union. The Democratic Review will be published in the same form as its preceding volumes, and is under the editorial charge of SPENCER W. CONE.

In addition to its political features, no exertions will be spared to make its Literary, Scientific, and Miscellaneous Departments worthy of the old days of its fame.

The urgent demand for something in its character, firm, uniform, and reliable, upon national questions, above the sectional squabbles of individuals, and always true to the great end of the party organization, viz., the dissemination and support of the pure principles of national Democracy—affords a wide field of usefulness; and we rely upon the Democracy of the Union for our support.

TERMS—$5 PER ANNUM, OR $3 STRICTLY IN ADVANCE.

GREAT INDUCEMENTS TO FORM CLUBS.

PREMIUMS.

Any person sending $13 will receive Five copies of the Review for one year, and either of the following works: "Longfellow's Hiawatha," "Songs of the Revolution," "Widow Bedott Papers," "Bayard Taylor's Travels in China and Japan," or "Life of Daniel Boone." Price, $1.25 each.

Any person sending $25 will receive Ten Copies of the Review, and either the whole of the Works above named, or "Dr. Kane's Arctic Explorations," beautifully illustrated. Price, $5.

Any person sending $40 will receive Twenty Copies of the Review, and "Irving's Life of Washington," in three large vols. Price, $6.

Any person sending Five prepaid subscriptions, at $3 each, will receive "Irving's Life of Washington. Price, $6."

Any person sending Ten prepaid subscriptions, at $3 each, will receive "Calhoun's Works," by Kralle, in four large vols. Price, $8; and "Van Santvoord's Lives of the Chief Justices of the United States." Price $2.25.

Any person sending Twenty prepaid subscriptions, at $3 each, will receive "Jefferson's Complete Works," in nine large vols., published, by order of Congress, from original manuscripts. Edited by A. H. Washington. Price, $25.

☞ The books above named are all handsomely bound, and recently published.

Specimen Numbers of the Review will be sent gratis when requested.

☞ TO POSTMASTERS.

POSTMASTERS ARE RESPECTFULLY SOLICITED TO ACT AS AGENTS FOR THE UNITED STATES DEMOCRATIC REVIEW.

All communications to be addressed to Lloyd and Campbell, 252 Broadway, New York.

City Ladies and Ladies visiting the city can find GAITER and BUTTON BOOTS, from 12s. to 20s.; SLIPPER TIES and BUSKINS, from 6s. to 10s. per pair; INDIA RUBBER SHOES in great variety, with Boys, Misses' and Children's BOOTS and SHOES of all kinds and prices, at ap264t J. B. MILLER & CO.'S, No. 134 Canal street.

Will Close.—National Academy of Design.—The 31st ANNUAL EXHIBITION of Original Works, by Living Artists, now open daily, at 548 Broadway, will close on Saturday night, May 10th.
By order of the Council.
ap262t T. Addison Richards, Cor. Sec'y., N. A.

The Irish News—UP TOWN!—at ROBERT CODDINGTON'S Book Store, 366 Bowery, one door above Fourth street, on Every Wednesday morning.
N. B. Papers put up in Wrappers and Mailed at this establishment, free of charge. ap194t

Dr. Allcock's Plasters, from their peculiar qualities and mechanical arrangement of ingredients, produce a genial warmth on the parts to which they are applied, often giving relief at once. In asthma, in pains and tightness of the chest they are unrivalled. In lumbago and chronic rheumatism they give ease when all other local applications have failed. In sprains, bruises, and affections of the kidneys they are beyond all praise. Recommended by all physicians who are acquainted with their warming, flexible and porous qualities. Sold at 25 cents each by T. ALLCOCK & CO., Brandreth Building; at Burnton's bookstores, 296 Bowery and 241 Hudson street; by Mrs. Hayes, 175 Fulton street, Brooklyn, and by all druggists in the city.
my32t

Dropsies are Cured by Brandreth's Pills.—This form of disease is occasioned by the exhalent arteries throwing out a greater quantity of fluid than the absorbents take up. Brandreth's Pills convey by magic, as it were, an impulse to the remote extremities, arousing their absorbents to action; and in case of swelling, or watery deposits there, awakening the sleeping energies of those vessels, which, like millions of pumps at work, transmit the morbid fluid to the intestines and urinary passages, effecting a reduction of the dropsical limbs, sometimes in a few hours, and thus affording a striking illustration of the sympathetic action of Brandreth's Pills. Thus, in dropsies of the stomach, and in all dropsies, or continued enlargements of the joints or limbs, there is nothing in the world to be compared to the effect Brandreth's Pills produce. In chronic cases, perseverance, with full doses, is required. Some of the best men in the Union can be referred to, in proof of the above. Brandreth's Pills are sold at 25 cents per box, at No. 48 Canal street, Brandreth Buildings; No. 241 Hudson street, and No. 296 Bowery; also, by Mrs. HAYES, No. 175 Fulton street, Brooklyn; by T. W. DYOTT & SONS, Philadelphia, and by all respectable druggists and medicine venders in the Union. my32t

Edwin A. Brooks, wholesale and retail Boot and Shoe Store, Nos. 575 Broadway, and 150 Fulton street, New-York. Constantly on hand French Calf Skin and Patent Leather Boots, Shoes and Gaiters, made with Dick's Patent Elastic Shanks, and Congress Gaiter Boots; also a large assortment of Ladies' and Children's Gaiters and Shoes, Waterproof and Cork Sole Boots, Perpetual Gloss and Leather Over Shoes.
Boy's and Youth's Boots, Shoes and Over Shoes. my3 3m

"TERRA COTTA"

CHIMNEY TOPS,

PLAIN and Ornamental. Drain Pipes of all sizes, superior manufacture, lowest rates. LONG ISLAND POTTERY. Depot, 82 Nassau street, New-York. my10 3m

HERRING'S

PATENT CHAMPION FIRE AND BURGLAR PROOF SAFES.

THE great interest manifested by the public to procure more perfect security from Fire for valuable papers, such as BONDS, MORTGAGES, DEEDS, NOTES, and BOOKS OF ACCOUNT than the ordinary SAFES heretofore in use had afforded, induced the subscribers to devote a large portion of time and attention during the past fourteen years in making improvements and discoveries for this object, and they now beg leave to assure their numerous friends and the public generally that their efforts have been crowned with complete success, and now offer the "IMPROVED HERRING'S PATENT WORLD'S FAIR PREMIUM FIRE-PROOF SAFE," as the

CHAMPION SAFE OF THE WORLD!

Having been awarded Medals at both the

World's Fair, London, 1851, and in New-York, 1853,

As superior to all others. It is now undoubtedly entitled to that appellation, and, secured with HALL'S PATENT POWDER-PROOF LOCKS, which also was awarded MEDALS as above), forms the most perfect Fire and Burglar Proof Safes ever offered to the public.

The subscribers also manufacture all kinds of Boiler and Chilled Iron Bank Chests and Vaults, Vault Doors, and Money Boxes or Chests, for Brokers, Jewelers, and Private Families, for Plate, Diamonds, and other Valuables, and are also Patentees (by purchase) and Manufacturers of

JONES' PATENT PERMUTATION BANK LOCK.

SILAS C. HERRING & CO., Patentees,
GREEN BLOCK, Nos. 135, 137 and 138 Water street, New-York. my10 tf

STATEN ISLAND

FANCY DYING ESTABLISHMENT.

OFFICE No. 3 John street, (two doors from Broadway,) New-York, solicit orders for dying Broadcloths, Merinoes, Paramattas, De Laines, and Silk, Woolen, and fancy goods of every description; Satin and Taffeta Ribbons, Gimps, Fringes, Galloons, and other trimmings dyed and re-finished with great success.
Also ladies and gents, Shawls, &c., &c.
BARRETT, NEWTON & CO.,
3mos at st., (2 doors from Broadway,) N. Y.

Special Notices.

PROSPECTUS.

THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC REVIEW is now firmly established in Washington City. Every great question before the present Congress will be elaborately discussed in its columns.

Such subscribers to the "Western Democratic Review," as have overpaid, will be furnished with the "National Democratic Review," which, it is believed, will prove a work of vastly superior merit.

A considerable portion of each number of the REVIEW will be devoted to Literary and Scientific subjects. Several, among the most accomplished scholars and distinguished politicians in the country, will be regular contributors to its columns.

In answer to numerous inquiries of old and new friends, we deem it proper to say, THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC REVIEW will be printed and published at Washington City; is totally unconnected with any political Magazine in the country; is devoted, not to the support of any politician, but to the interests of the National Democracy—that democracy which will ever "carry the flag and keep step to the music of the Union."

The REVIEW is published in pamphlet form, upon beautiful white paper, in solid long primer, 96 pages per month—making two volumes per year, of 576 pages each.

TERMS.—$3 per year, payable invariably in advance.

INDUCEMENTS TO CLUBS.—Five copies for one year—$10; twelve copies for one year—$20. Booksellers ordering the work, will be furnished at the usual magazine rates.

Members of Congress, and postmaters in every part of the Union, are hereby authorized to receive and receipt for subscriptions to the REVIEW.

All moneys may be transmitted by mail at the risk of the editor.

Copies of the REVIEW will be found for sale at the Bookstore of Franck Taylor, 402 Pennsylvania Avenue, and at the office of publication 463 10th street, between D and E.

All communications to be addressed to

GEO. P. BUELL,
Editor National Democratic Review.

Catholic Society for the Promotion of Agricultural Settlements.—Office No. 8 Chamber street, (over East River Bank. Open from 9 to 4.
3t J. G. MOYLAN, Sec., pro tem.

Emigrant Intelligence Office and Labor Exchange, No. 2 Canal street, corner of Centre street, New-York.—The office is established by the Commissioners of Emigration, where can always be found large numbers of LABORERS and SERVANTS, at very low rates of wages; and persons can have their orders filled by writing to the Superintendent, and sending the amount necessary to pay the passage of the parties required. No fees charged to employers.

JAMES P. FAGAN, Superintendent.

REMOVAL.

McConville & Murphy, Importers of Wide Silks Shawls, Vestings, and Linen Goods, have REMOVED to No. 36 LIBERTY STREET, where all orders will be punctually attended to. tf

To Military Companies and Civic Societies.

OLD MONTGOMERY HALL, 76 Prince Street.—The Subscriber, having taken a lease of the above well known popular concern, begs to inform the Members of Military Companies and Civic Trades Bodies, and Managers of Balls, that he is ready to treat for the letting of spacious and well-lighted rooms, suited for meetings, &c.

The Bar attached to the Hall is always supplied with the best imported and domestic Liquors, Brandys, Wines, Ales, Irish and Scotch Whiskey, and choicest brands of Havana Cigars. JOHN DOLAN.

TO PRINTERS.

COPPER FACED TYPE.—CORTELYOU'S NEW-YORK TYPE FOUNDRY, and PRINTERS' WAREHOUSE, established in 1823, 29 Spruce street, four doors below William street.

The subscriber is prepared to furnish his well-known and superior Book and Newspaper Printing Types, in fonts to suit purchasers. Also, German and Ornamental Types, Greek, Hebrew, Ornaments, Music, Brass Rules, &c., manufactured of metals equal to any in this country, and finished in the most accurate manner. He also furnishes Presses, Chases, Composing Sticks, Stands, Cases, Furniture, Ink, &c.

WOOD AND METAL TYPES,

from other Foundries, and every article required in a Printing Office, at the lowest prices, for cash or approved paper. Type, copper-faced by the Newton Company, furnished to order. Old Type received at 9 cents per pound in exchange for new. Estimates for Printing Establishments furnished on application.

☞ Printers of newspapers who will insert this advertisement three times before January 1, 1857, sending me one of the papers, will be paid in printing types, when purchasing four times the amount of the bill.

PETER C. CORTELYOU.

PIANOS, MELODEONS AND MUSIC.

The Cash system adopted!—Prices greatly reduced.

HORACE WATERS,

No. 333 Broadway, N. Y.,

AGENT FOR THE BEST BOSTON AND NEW-YORK INSTRUMENTS.

The largest assortment of

Pianos, Melodeons, Musical Instruments,

AND

MUSICAL MERCHANDISE,

of all kinds, in the United States, Pianos from ten different Manufactories, comprising those of every variety of style, from the plain, neat and subtsantial 6½ octaves, in Walnut or Rosewood Cases, from $150 to $200, to those of the most elegant finish up to $1000. No house in the Union can compete with the above in the number, variety, and celebrity of its instruments, nor in the extremely low prices at which they are sold.

Horace Waters' Modern Improved Pianos,

WITH OR WITHOUT IRON FRAMES.

possessing in their improvements of over-strings and action, a length of scale, power, and compass of tone equal to the Grand Piano, united with the beauty and durability of structure of the square Piano. They are justly pronounced by the Press and by the first Musical Masters to be equal to those of any other manufacturer. They are built of the best and most thoroughly seasoned material, and guaranteed to stand the action of every climate.

Each Instrument guaranteed to give satisfaction, or purchase money refunded. Second-hand Pianos at great bargains, constantly in store; price from $30 to $140.

Horace Waters' Melodeons,

SUPERIOR INSTRUMENTS IN TONE, TOUCH AND DURABILITY OF MAKE.

(Tuned the equal temperament.) Melodeons of all other styles and makes. Price, $45, $60, $75, $100, $125, $140; double Reeds, $150; double Reeds and two banks of Keys, $200. Less a liberal discount. Clergymen and Churches, an extra discount.

Martin's Guitars, Brown's Harps, Flutes, Flutinas, Accordeons, Violins, and Musical Instruments,

OF ALL KINDS, AT LOWER PRICES THAN EVER BEFORE OFFERED TO THE PUBLIC.

A large discount to Teachers and Schools. The trade supplied on the most liberal terms.

MUSIC.

One of the largest and best selected catalogues of Music now published, comprising many of the choice and most popular airs of the day, and will be sold at one-third off from the regular prices.

Music sent by mail to all parts of the country, post paid. Particular and personal attention paid to all orders received by mail. Satisfaction guaranteed in every instance. Pianos and Melodeons for rent, and rent allowed on purchase. Pianos and Melodeons for sale on monthly payments. Second-hand Pianos taken in exchange for new. General and select Catalogues and Schedule of prices forwarded to all parts of the country by mail.

☞ Great inducements offered to agents in all parts of the country, to sell the Horace Waters' Pianos, Melodeons, and Catalogue of Music.

PIANOS AND MUSIC.—We learn that Horace Waters, of 333 Broadway, N. Y., agent for the sale of many of the most celebrated makers of Pianos and Melodeons, is offering them at prices which we advise all who desire to purchase to avail themselves of. He is also selling his large and well-known Catalogue of Music at one-third off from the regular prices, and will forward the same free of postage. His offers to the trade, teachers and schools, are of the most favorable character, all of which he will be able to fill to the letter, for having wisely adopted the cash system. The Horace Waters' Pianos are known as among the very best. We are enabled to speak of those instruments with some degree of confidence, from personal knowledge of their excellent tone and durabl quality.—N. Y. Evangelist. ap19tf

Information is wanted of Henry Murray and Margaret his wife,—before her marriage, Margaret Donegan,—of Ireland, they can hear of something very greatly to their advantage on addressing, (post paid,) ALEXANDER P. GARESCHE, St. Louis, Mo. my10 3t

A Retired Clergyman, restored to health in a few days, after many years of great nervous suffering, is anxious to make known the means of cure. Will send (free) the prescriptions used. Direct to
Rev. JOHN M. DAGNALL,
my10 3m No. 59 Fulton street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Business Directory.

RICH CARPETING.

1856. SPRING IMPORTATION. 1856.

ARTHUR DONNELLY,

98 BOWERY, (West side,) BETWEEN GRAND AND HESTER STREETS.

IS now prepared to exhibit his New Spring Styles of

Foreign and Domestic Carpetings,

Comprising every grade and every description, from the Cheapest Fabric to the Richest.

Importing his goods direct and thus saving the commission and interest which most dealers pay, he is enabled to offer them at prices highly favorable to consumers, who will find at his store, among other Carpetings adopted to all varieties of taste, the following elegant descriptions:

Medallions,	at	14s to 18s per yard.
Velvet,	"	10s to 16s "
Tapestry,	"	6s to 12s "
Brussels,	"	7s to 12s "
Three-ply,	"	7s to 10s "
Ingrain,	"	3s to 7s "
Common Ingrain,	"	18d to 3s "

English and American Floor Oil Cloths,

of every imaginable width, pattern and style.

A complete and choice assortment of

STAIR AND HALL CARPETS, RUGS, MATS, MATTINGS,

and of everything else appertaining to the Carpet Trade.

ARTHUR DONNELLY, 98 Bowery, (West side,)
ap198m Between Grand and Hester sts., N. Y.

SMITH, BROTHERS,

ONE PRICE

CLOTHING WAREHOUSES,

122 AND 140 FULTON ST., N. Y.

The PRICE is marked on all the goods in

PLAIN FIGURES.

We have now on hand a splendid assortment of Spring and Summer Clothing, together with our new styles of Spring

RAGLANS,

PELISSIERS,

AND CANROBERTS—

OR, SUMMER OVER-COATS.

ap268m SMITH, BROTHERS, 122 AND 140 FULTON ST.

IRISH, ENGLISH, AND SCOTCH LINEN GOODS.

THE subscribers who are exclusive dealers in LINEN GOODS, would invite the attention of housekeepers and others to their complete stock of

Shirting Linens,	Towelings,
Sheeting Linens,	Diapers,
Pillow-case Linens,	Lawns,
Table Linens,	Linen C. Handkerchiefs;

or, Linen goods of any description, which they offer for sale at very low prices.

J. C. Milliken & Co., 748 Broadway,
ap26 above Astor place.

LATEST FASHIONS.

THE New Hat Company would here lay before their readers a few of the advantages to be derived from their system of doing business, which is ONE QUALITY, ONE PRICE, AND NO ABATEMENT. In the first place, any gentleman, whether he be a judge of the article or not, can rely upon receiving our first and only quality. Secondly, our price is so low, that the man of the most limited means is enabled to procure a fine and fashionable hat, (at the same time we wish it to be distinctly understood that our hats are not to be excelled by those sold at four dollars by any other establishment,) and lastly, we strive to please. If any gentleman desiring a hat differing from the usual style, will call and leave his order, we shall endeavor to suit him in every respect. The inducements which we offer to wholesale purchasers, and the trade in general, are not to be exceeded by those of any other establishment.

Also, a large assortment of CLOTH CAPS, CHILDREN'S FANCY HATS, UMBRELLAS, &c., constantly on hand at the lowest rates. Nos. 146 and 148 Nassau st. ap263m

---

LINEN HALL, 332 BOWERY,

EGAN & CO.,

THE proprietors take leave to inform their customers and the public, that they have moved their entire stock of Linen Goods to the above store, where they will from this time forward continue the wholesale together with the retail, of

Linens and Dry Goods,

of all kinds, at the lowest cash price. They are all of their own importation, and in order to make a permanent trade, they will retail them at the importer's prices. Their stock consists of Linen Sheeting, all widths and qualities; Damask Table Cloths, white and brown; Damask Table Linens, Diapers, Hucks, Back Towelings, Napkins, D'Oylies, White and Brown Drills, Checks and Stripes, all warranted pure linen, together with a large lot of

New Silks,

from 4s. to 12s. per yard; Stripes and Plaids, a splendid lot of Black Silks.

There are no damaged or bankrupt's goods included in this list, and they will sell lower than any other house having the same articles. Having a buyer always in Ireland, they are in a position and determined to sell low, and establish their house on the same principle as the "Old Linen Hall," in Dublin. Ladies are respectfully requested to examine the above stock, as affording a large assortment in variety and value. Amongst them will be found a splendid lot of 5-8 Damask and Snowdrop Napkins, from $1 to $1.50 per dozen, tickings and bleached muslins, cheap by the piece.

Striped Poplins,

A large assortment, from 3s. to 3s. 6d. per yard, with all other kinds of Dry Goods, to meet the wants of Spring and Summer purchasers.

ap261m EGAN & CO., Linen Hall, 332 Bowery.

THE EYE AND EAR!

DR. BIRGE, invites the attention of the afflicted to his practice in treating the Eye and Ear. He has cured more than five hundred persons who were pronounced incurable by other Occulists. He has also restored to sight seventeen persons born blind, and he pledges himself to cure every case that may be presented. That no one need be imposed upon, he warrants a cure in every case.

AMAUROSIS.—This obstinate disease he treats with astonishing success.

CATARACT.—This delicate and important operation, I warrant sight in every case.

ARTIFICIAL EYES inserted perfectly to imitate the Natural Eye.

DEAFNESS.—My treatment for this difficulty I offer as the most successful that has ever been in practice. I have restored to their hearing a large number who had been perfectly deaf more than twenty years.

Letters of inquiry for advice will be promptly attended to. Office 430 Broadway, New-York City. ap268m

---

COAL.

THE subscriber respectfully informs his friends and the public generally, that he has opened a new Coal Yard, cor. 27th Street and 9th Avenue, where he is prepared to sell the best quality of Red and White Ash Coal, at the lowest market price for cash. Weight warranted, or forfeit coal.

6mos* JOHN MACDONALD.

CHEAP COAL.

BEG to inform my countrymen and friends and the public in general that I always sell the very best sort of Red and White Ash Coal at the very lowest prices. My object being quick sales and small profits, for cash.

ap198m Richard Clinton, 250 1st Avenue, cor. 15th St.

COAL of the very best quality both Anthracite and Bituminous, for family and manufacturing purposes, for sale by the subscriber from his Yards, 682 Washington, 123 McDougal, and 146 West Thirty-second streets. Also, Coal by the cargo.

ap191y Thomas Maher.

COPARTNERSHIP NOTICE.

THE undersigned have formed a Copartnership, under the name and firm of Foot, Cole & Co., for the transaction of the Paper Commission Business, at 32 Beekman street.

FOOT, COLE & CO.

JOEL W. FOOT,	C. D. HARMAN,
CHAS. COLE,	CARLTON LE SAGE.

Mr. H. C. Goodwin, has no further connection with us. ap19

P. H. McGINN,

FURNISHING UNDERTAKER,

No. 198 WEST 42d STREET,

Adjoining the Church of the Holy Cross, New-York.

INTERMENTS procured in any Burial Ground or Cemetery in the vicinity of New-York or elsewhere. All articles for Funerals, furnished on the most reasonable terms and at the shortest notice.

☞ All Orders promptly attended to, at all hours, day or night. ap198m

---

Business Directory.

MEAGHER & CAMPBELL,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

NO. 82 BROADWAY.

NOTARY PUBLIC,

Commissioner for the U. S. Court of Claims.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, having formed a partnership with MALCOLM CAMPBELL, for the general practice of the law, the firm will continue to devote their attention to such law business as may be intrusted to them, including conveyancing, practice in all the courts of the state of New-York and of the United States, and general collecting business in all parts of the world. Particular attention will be given to the prosecution of claims against the United States in the Court of Claims.

Mr. Meagher may be consulted daily, on law business only, at No. 82 Broadway, from three till five o'clock P. M.

B. S. TREANOR,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

15 MASSACHUSETTS BLOCK, COURT SQUARE, BOSTON.

Particular attention paid to Conveyancing, and the examination of titles to Real Estate.

THOS. H. HURLEY,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 252 BROADWAY.

WILLIAM E. ROBINSON,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR,

HAVING entered into partnership with ISAAC DAYTON, Esq., (author of the work on Surrogates,) and WILLIAM A. COURSEN, Esq., gentlemen long known, and of high standing at the New-York Bar, has removed to their new office at 267 BROADWAY, third door below Chambers street.

☞ All business either in the Criminal or Civil Courts, promptly and faithfully attended to. ap191y

---

JOHN A. McSORLEY,

CUSTOM HOUSE AND SHIP BROKER, AND NOTARY PUBLIC,

7 BROAD STREET,

Clergymen, importing Vestments, Church Ornaments, &c., will be liberally treated with by calling on the subscriber.

REFERENCES:

Messrs. Thos. McClune & Co.,	Messrs. D. & J. Sadlier & Co.,
C. Meletta,	James Cook & Co. 6m

JAMES HARLIN,

WATCH, CLOCK MAKER, AND JEWELER.

236 HENRY STREET, BROOKLYN.

All watches and clocks bought or repaired at my establishment, warranted for twelve months.

JOHN KENNEDY'S

STEAM MARBLE WORKS,

35TH STREET, NEAR BROADWAY.

Statuary and Marble Mantle-Pieces, Monuments, Grave Stones, Tombs, &c. All orders thankfully received and punctually attended to.

M. J. CONNELL,

METROPOITAN BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTER,

NO. 39 BEEKMAN STREET, 1 DOOR EAST OF WILLIAM, NEW-YORK, AND 73 GRAND STREET, WILLIAMSBURGH.

All orders intrusted to me will be promptly attended to, and executed with unparalleled dispatch. tf

---

JAMES CAIN,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

AND

CLOTHIER,

NO. 129 FULTON STREET,

(HERALD BUILDING,) New-York.
my31y

NICHOLAS WALSH.

SEXTON AND UNDERTAKER.

NO. 8 SIXTH AVENUE.

ROBERT IRWIN,

CHEAP BOOT AND SHOE STORE,

my10 156 Chatham street, opposite James' st., New-York. 3m

HARDWARE, CUTLERY, MECHANICS' TOOLS, &c.

THE subscriber has constantly for sale, of the best quality, and at the lowest prices, an assortment of the following articles: Tea-Trays, Cooking Utensils, Britannia and Plated Goods, Stair Rods, Table Cutlery, Tin Ware, Wooden Ware, Brushes, Brooms, &c.

Mechanics' Tools.

Also a full supply of Saws, Planes, Braces and Bits, Edge-Tools, Files, Hammers, Squares, Augers, Rules, Bevels, &c.

4t JOHN W. SULLIVAN, 74 Sixth Avenue, corner of Waverley Place.

THE GREAT RUSSIAN REMEDY.

Pro Bono Publico.

"EVERY MOTHER SHOULD HAVE A BOX IN THE HOUSE HANDY IN CASE OF ACCIDENTS TO THE CHILDREN."

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE. It is a Boston remedy of thirty years' standing, and is recommended by physicians. It is a sure and speedy cure for Burns, Piles, Boils, Corns, Felons, Chilblains, and old Sores of every kind.

For Fever Sores, Ulcers, Itch, Scald Head, Nettle Rash, Bunions, Sore Nipples, (recommended by nurses); Whitlows, Sties, Festers, Flea Bites, Spider Stings, Frozen Limbs, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Sore and Cracked Lips, Sore Nose, Warts and Flesh Wounds, it is a most valuable remedy and cure, which can be testified to by thousands who have used it in the city of Boston and vicinity for the last thirty years.

In no instance will this Salve do an injury, or interfere with a physician's prescriptions. It is made from the purest materials, from a recipe brought from Russia, of articles growing in that country, and the proprietors have letters from all classes, clergymen, physicians, sea captains, nurses, and others who have used it themselves and recommend it to others.

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE is put in large tin boxes, stamped on the cover with the picture of a horse and a disabled soldier, which picture is also engraved on the wrapper. PRICE, 25 Cents a Box. Sold at all the stores in town or country, or may be ordered of any wholesale druggist.

ap19tf Redding & Co., Proprietors, No. 8 State st., Boston.

REMOVAL.

THOMAS McLAUGHLIN, Shirt Manufacturer, and dealer in Gentlemen's Furnishing Goods, WHOLESALE AND RETAIL, has removed from his old stand, 292, to 269 Greenwich street, corner of Murray, and invites the attention of buyers generally to his Spring and Summer stock of the above goods. Feeling confident from his long experience in the business and his increased facilities for manufacturing a superior article of Shirts, Bosoms, Collars, Stocks, Ties, &c., to be able to offer for nett cash the cheapest goods to be found in the city. Shirts made to order for the trade or otherwise. We will also receive from auction daily, Under Shirts and Drawers Gloves, Hosiery, Ties, Cravats, &c., worthy the attention of Clothiers, Dry Goods Dealers and others. Our motto is ONE PRICE ONLY. THOMAS McLAUGHLIN, 269 Greenwich street,
ap268mos (Corner of Murray street, New-York.)

Business Directory.

GEORGE B. COOK,

IMPROVED STEAM CYLINDER AND ADAMS PRESSES,

JENKIN'S BUILDING, Nos. 22 AND 24 FRANKFORT STREET, NEW-YORK. tf

---

MRS. J. McCARTHY,

FASHIONABLE MILLINERY STORE,

44 THIRD AVENUE,

Third door from 10th Street, NEW-YORK.

Cheap Straw Hats, Ribbons, Flowers, Ladies' Straw Goods.

Straw Bonnets cleaned and altered to the newest fashions.

LADIES' OWN MATERIALS MADE UP TO THE LATEST STYLES. tf

MATTHEW WALLACE,

25 CLARK STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.,

WHOLESALE DEALER IN NEWSPAPERS, BOOKS, &c.

☞ "The Irish News," on hand, by the earliest moment, each week. tf

---

McLOUGHLIN, McSHANE, & CO.,

(Successors to THOS. ANDREWS,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN

CHOICE TEAS, COFFEES, WINES, BRANDIES, AND GROCERIES,

61 FULTON STREET, near Cliff street,

M. C. McLOUGHLIN, ANDREW McSHANE, JAMES DOWLING. } NEW-YORK. 3m

---

WILLARD, FELT & CO.,

MANUFACTURERS OF ACCOUNT BOOKS,

AND IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER AND STATIONERY,

NO. 14 MAIDEN LANE,

3mos (near Broadway.)

JOHN J. STAFF'S.

WINES, LIQUORS, SEGARS,
LONDON, DUBLIN, PHILADELPHIA,
PORTER and ALE,
SCOTCH, BURTON, and EAST INDIA ALES,
CHAMPAGNE CIDER, in quantities to suit purchasers,

at 333 Broadway,

tf corner of Anthony street, New-York.

J. MURPHY & SON,

IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN

BRANDIES, WINES, GIN, RUM, IRISH AND SCOTCH WHISKEY, SEGARS, ALE AND PORTER, CORDIALS, &c.

J. M. & SON would call the attention of City and Country Dealers to their EXTENSIVE STOCK OF LIQUORS AND SEGARS under CUSTOM HOUSE LOCK and in STORE.

☞ We do not claim any superiority for our goods over those of any other House, but customers may rely upon being honorably and fairly dealt with, and all Liquors warranted as represented.

J. M. & SON are SOLE AGENTS for this City of MESSRS. BUNCHARD & HARRISON'S superior Creaming and Sparkling DOMESTIC CHAMPAGNE, which possesses the same qualities as Imported Wine, and is more agreeable to the palate. It can be sold as low as $7 the basket.

A Superior Quality of IMPORTED ST. JULIAN CLARET, in cases, at $2 50.

Orders from Country Merchants solicited, and shipped with dispatch, at 150 Pearl, and 118 Water streets.

☞ Office 138 Pearl street.

P. MONAGHAN,

IMPORTER of the various and best brands of HAVANA SEGARS, &c. &c. Country and city merchants supplied in bond or in store. Duties paid or unpaid. 121 PEARL STREET, New-York.

N. B.—Sole Importer of the J. M. Vichot, La Union, and La Primavera brands. ap261y

---

McLOUGHLIN & EVERARD,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL GROCERS,

Keep constantly on hand a select assortment of

GROCERIES, WINES, BRANDIES, TEAS, COFFEES, &c., &c.,

AT THE OLD ESTABLISHED STAND,

ap263m 44 FULTON, between Pearl and Cliff streets, New York.

WISE'S IRISH MALT WHISKEY.

IMPORTED by J. & P. Hogan, Nos. 6 and 12 West street, and 257 Third Avenue, corner of 21st street, New-York, and corner of Vanbrunt and Sullivan streets, Brooklyn. J. & P. Hogan wish to inform their friends and the public that they have just received a large quantity of WISE'S CORK MALT WHISKEY, which will be sold at a reduced price, out of bond and at the above establishment. They are the only firm who import the same in New-York. ap261y

---

BURKE & MYLER,

IMPORTED WINES, LIQUORS AND SEGARS,

No. 42 SPRING STREET, NEW-YORK,

ap268m between Mulberry and Mott streets.

JAMES AINSLIE,

NO. 93 BEAVER STREET,

OFFERS for sale from U. S. Bonded Warehouses, of his own importation, Cognac Brandies, also Rochelle Brandies, in half, quarter, and eighth Pipes, pale and dark, of the well known brand of Arzac Seignette.

Gin—Sole importer of the superior Magnolia Brand; also, Cologne and Schnapps Gin.

Wines—Burgundy, Pure Juice, and old Port, Sherry, &c. Jamaica and St Croix Rums; Stewart's Paisley Whiskey, &c. 3mos

---

P. HUGHES,

LEMON SYRUP AND CORDIAL REFINER, and Dealer in Foreign Liquors, and French Brandies of different brands, Hollands Gin, Irish and Scotch Whiskey, Scotch Ale and Porter, and other Liquors, returns his sincere thanks to the public for the patronage he has already received, and hopes they will continue the same. No. 88 Cherry street, New-York. tf

---

O'CONNOR & COLLENDER,

BILLIARD TABLE MANUFACTURERS.

53 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

IMPROVED BILLIARD TABLES AND CUSHIONS.

MICHAEL PHELAN'S

MODEL TABLES AND COMBINATION CUSHIONS,

(Patented February 19, 1856,)

CORRECT in principle and perfect in action—so constructed as to insure mathematical correctness of angles when played upon, and warranted to possess the requisite elasticity in all seasons, having been tested by the best players in this conntry, and by them pronounced the most perfect of any hitherto constructed—are offered to the public as cheap as the ordinary tables of the day. Orders promptly attended to for fitting up private or public Billiard Rooms; new Cushions put on old Tables, &c.

Saloon and Salesroom No. 39 Chambers street, up stairs.

CABINET FURNITURE AND UPHOLSTERY.

Established in 1827.

THE largest and cheapest assortment in the State of New-York. Every thing, from a Broom to the richest article, may be found, including Carpets, Oil Cloths, Mattrasses, Beds, &c., &c., at 1yr R. J. TODD'S, 88 Fulton street, Brooklyn.

KNOX'S

OFFICE FURNITURE WAREROOMS,

59 AND 89 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

☞ Desks, Chairs, Cushions, Book-Cases, Lounges, Stools, and every article suitable for counting-rooms, Banks, and Insurance offices.

Desks of every description made to order on short notice.

The Irish News.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, Editor and Proprietor.

Three Dollars per Annum. Single Copies 6 Cents. Publication Office, 29 Ann St., cor. of Nassau.

VOL. I. NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, MAY 17, 1856. NO. 6.

Publications.

CONTENTS OF NO. VI.

Editorial.

General Walker.
Robbing Peter to pay Paul.
The Dooms-day Book.
News by the Atlantic.
Answers to Correspondents.
Military Memoirs—69th Regiment, N. Y. S. M.—Emmet Guard, N. Y. S. M.

Literature.

Personal Recollections.—More about Clongowes.—Old Scenes and Faces.
Oude-acity:—The "Life of an Eastern King."
Toleration:—Lachlan Davis's "Day Star."
U. S. Democratic Review.—The Scalpel.—Literary and Art, News, &c.
Poetry.—"The Sybil of the Shannon," by John Savage.

Correspondence.

Letter from Dublin.—Letter from Boston.—Military—2d Regiment N. Y. S. M.—Irish Volunteers, Augusta, Ga.—U. S. Army Intelligence.
Presidential Facts and Rumors.
The Anniversary Meetings.
Smith O'Brien and John Frost in the Canadian Parliament.
Congressional—Synopsis of American News—News from all parts of the world.

THE IRISH NEWS,

EDITED BY THE PROPRIETOR,

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER,

DEDICATED TO THE SERVICE OF THE

IRISH PEOPLE,

AT HOME AND ABROAD,

Will be published every Saturday, on and after the 12th of April, at 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau, New-York.

TERMS.

For subscribers, $3 per annum: 6 cents a copy.
For retailers and carriers, $4 per hundred.
For Clubs, 4 copies to one address, per annum, $10.
" 7 " " " " $17.
" 10 " " " " $20.

For advertising.—Each square of eight lines,

Transient	$1
Monthly	$2
Quarterly	$5
Yearly	$16

N. B. Four lines, or under, constitute half a square.

Agents or Postmasters who interest themselves in procuring and remitting subscriptions, may retain 50 cents out of each annual subscription of $3.

☞ Subscribers, Agents, and Advertisers will please send in their orders early, and observe that our terms are invariably, payments in advance.

Communications of a private nature should always be marked so. Those connected with the editorial department are to be addressed to Thomas Francis Meagher, and those on business to Richard J. Lalor, Irish News Office, 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau.

☞ Subscribers, residing in New-York, Brooklyn, and Williamsburgh, who pay in advance, will have their papers neatly enveloped, addressed, and delivered on each Wednesday through Boyd's Express or some similar medium.

Wholesale Dealers.

DEXTER & BROTHERS, 14 Ann Street, New-York.
ROSS & TOUSEY, 108 Nassau Street, New-York.
SAMUEL YATES, 22 Beekman Street, New-York.
MIKE MADDEN, 22 Ann Street, New-York.
HAMILTON & JOHNSON, 30 Ann Street, New-York.
DE WITT & DAVENPORT, 160 & 162 Nassau Street, New-York.
HENRY TAYLOR, Baltimore, Md.
FEDERHEN & CO., 13 Court Street, Boston.
WM. HICKEY, 128 Federal Street, Boston.
REDDING & CO., 8 Court Street, Boston.
THOS. McLOUGHLIN, 42 South 4th Street, Philadelphia.
T. R. CALLENDER, 88 South-Third Street, Philadelphia.
DROVIN & CO., Philadelphia.
A. WINCH, 116 Chestnut street.
J. M. CRAWFORD, 30 and 32 Chestnut Street, St. Louis, Mo.
MATTHEW WALLACE, 25 Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.
McNALLY & CO., 75 Dearborn Street.
J. W. SULLIVAN, Kearney Street, San Francisco, Cal.
ROY'S, Detroit, Mich.
J. B. MAHONY, Cincinnati, Ohio.
J. P. WALSH, Cincinnati, Ohio.
—— COURTNEY, Charleston, South Carolina.
JOHN PLASTO, 144 Upper Abbey street, Dublin.

Retail Dealers.

NAGLE, Bangor, Me.
O'CONNELL, Cincinnati, O.
HASTINGS, Albany, N. Y.
McGOWANS, Portland, Me.
ADAMSON, Washington, D. C.
DOWNS, New-Haven, Conn.
MORRISEY, " "
DONOHUE, Newark, N. J.
JOHN H. TYSON, 89 Washington street, Hoboken, N. J.

Printed by Watters Brothers, 47 Ann street.

POWER PRESS OF J. B. WILLIAMS.

TEACHERS, ATTENTION!!—Perhaps the greatest educational event of this century is the publication of JOHNSON'S PHILOSOPHICAL CHARTS. There are ten Charts in all, each measuring 34 by 52 inches, and the set contains altogether about 300 Diagrams, illustrative of the most important outline principles of the Natural Sciences. Besides the essential diagrams found in the ordinary text-books, these charts contain several original illustrations, and possess the merit, rarely found in school-books, of being entirely original in plan and arrangement. They are, moreover, highly ornamental to a school-room, and obviate the necessity of philosophical apparatus which would cost from $3,000 to $5,000. Price of the set of ten charts, neatly colored and mounted, and accompanied with an explanatory Key, (a bound book,) $15. Ditto, on thick paper, colored and mounted, without cloth, $10. Ditto, plain, in sheets, neatly bound, $5.

Booksellers, Teachers, Agents, and all interested in Education, are respectfully requested to address the publisher,

Adolphus Ranney, No. 195 Broadway, New-York.

Mr. Ranney has also the pleasure to announce that he has purchased from Edward H. Dixon, M. D., editor of The Scalpel, and acknowledged to be the first surgeon in America, the copy-right of a work entitled "WOMAN AND HER DISEASES, From the Cradle to the Grave;" Adapted exclusively to her instruction in the Physiology of her system, and all the diseases of her critical periods; with an Appendix on the propriety of limiting the increase of family. Price $1. Copies mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price. Address as above. ap26tf

Book of Men, Women and Babies. By Dr. Porter, of New-York.—Such is the title of a book of real practical utility, and which contains more sound philosophy and good sense, than we have ever seen in a book of the kind before. No parent will ever regret putting it into the hands of his wife, sons, and daughters. Married or single, should hasten to possess it. Every mother will find the instructions in this book promotive of health and contentment in her household.—Jersey Tribune, Elizabeth City, New-Jersey.

In paper covers, 50 cents, postage free. Address Dr. Porter, 216 Fulton-st. Twelve copies to one address, $5. my17 3m

A BOOK AND STATIONERY STORE

FOR SALE CHEAP,

NOW DOING A GOOD BUSINESS, WITH A LARGE NEWSPAPER TRADE,

located nine years in one of the best business streets in this city. To a cash customer this is a rare chance. None others need apply. Location made known at this office. my 10 1t

☞ Post Office Notice.—The Mails for Europe, via Southampton and Bremen, per U. S. steamer Hermann, will close at this office on Saturday, the 17th day of May, at 10½ o'clock, A. M.

[my17 1t] Isaac V. Fowler, Postmaster.

Publications.

BOOKS RELATING TO IRELAND.

SIR JOHN DAVIES' HISTORICAL TRACTS. 8vo. full calf.
DUBLIN PENNY JOURNAL. 4 vols., very scarce.
IRISH PENNY JOURNAL.
O'CONNOR'S CHRONICLES OF ERI. 2 vols., 8vo, full calf.
ANCIENT IRISH HISTORIES. By Spencer, Campion, Hanmer and Marleborough. 2 vols., large paper, 4to, full calf.
LEDWICH'S IRISH ANTIQUITIES. 4to, calf, plates.
HAYES' BALLADS OF IRELAND. 2 vols. in one, 12mo. cloth, $1.
IRELAND ILLUSTRATED. By Petrie, Bartlett and Baynes. 4to, morocco, gilt edges.
ANNALS OF THE FOUR MASTERS. 7 vols., quarto, in Irish, with an English translation by O'Donovan. $45.
SAME WORK, translated by Cornelian. 1 vol., quarto, cloth.
CARTE'S LIFE OF THE DUKE OF ORMONDE, and the Great Affairs of his Time in Ireland. 6 vols. 8vo. Full calf, $20.
GRATTAN'S LIFE AND TIMES: By his Son. 5 vols. 8vo. Cloth, $7.
FITZPATRICK'S LIFE OF CLONCURRY. 8vo. cloth. $1 50.
FINDEN'S BEAUTIES OF MOORE. Forty-eight portraits, exquisitely engraved. Folio, cloth, gilt edges. $6.
WRIGHT'S HISTORY OF IRELAND. 3 vols. quarto, maps, portraits, and views, $7 50.
BARRINGTON'S SKETCHES. $1. SAVAGE'S '98 and '48. 1 vol., 12mo.
McGEOGHEGAN'S IRELAND. 8vo, cloth, $1 75.

MRS. HALL'S IRELAND, 3 VOLS., 8VO., FULL OF ILLUSTRATIONS. $12.

Warner's History of Ireland, 4to., $2 50. Warner's Irish Rebellion, 4to., $2 50. Life of Wolfe Tone, 2 volumes, $3 50. Mitchel's Jail Journal, $1. Mitchel's Hugh O'Neil, 37 1-2 cents. Moore's Life of Lord Edward Fitzgerald, 75 cents. Davis's Poems, with an introduction by John Mitchel, 37 1-2 cents. De Jean's Poems, 37 1-2 cents. Meagher's Speeches, $1. Furlong's Irish Prayer Book, 50 cts. Recollections of Lord Cloncurry, $1. Carleton's Willie Reilley, 75 cents. Mooney's History of Ireland, 2 volumes, $3. O'Connor's History of the Irish Brigade, 1 50. Life of Fighting Fitzgerald, 25 cents. Ellis's Romances and Ballads of Ireland, 75 cents. Burke's Speeches, 1 25.

For sale by P. M. Haverty, Bookseller, 110 Fulton street, New-York.

With a few exceptions, any of the above will be sent by mail, free.

KEATING'S IRELAND.

A NEW TRANSLATION OF THE

FORAS FEASA AR ERINN;

OR, GENERAL HISTORY OF IRELAND.

From a Manuscript Copy of the Original Irish of the Rev. and Learned GEOFFREY KEATING.

With Notes, Historical, Topographical, and Explanatory,

By JOHN O'MAHONY, Esq.

The work is now in course of preparation, and will be speedily published, in one large octavo volume of about 600 pages, with plates. Price to Subscribers, $2,00.

The book will be got up in superior style, and furnished to the address of Subscribers giving their names to a duly-authorized canvasser, or to

A list of subscribers will be printed in the work.

P. M. HAVERTY, Publisher,
tf 110 Fulton street, N. Y.

THE OLD ESTABLISHED CATHOLIC HOUSE OF

EDWARD DUNIGAN & BROTHER,

151 Fulton Street, New-York.

Honored with a Gold Medal and letters of approbation from His Holiness

POPE PIUS IX-,

and patronized by the Archbishops, Bishops, Clergy, Colleges, Convents, and Religious orders in the United States,

HAVE JUST PUBLISHED

THE HAMILTON'S, a Catholic Tale, of great beauty and power, price 38 cts.
CONSCIENCE, or the trials of Maybrooke.
BROOKE, a tale, by Mrs. M. H. Dorsey, 2 volumes, cloth, each 38 cents.
HOURS BEFORE THE ALTAR, or Meditations on the Blessed Eucharist, by the Abbe de la Bouilleru, Vicar-General of Paris, translated by a Religeiuse of the Visitation. 1 volume, price 25cts.

AND HAVE IN PRESS,

THE LOVE OF MARY, or reading for the month of May, by D. Roberts.
THE YOUNG CRUSADER, a tale. 4t

P. O'SHEA,

739 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK,

Catholic Bookseller and Publisher, Importer of Vestments, Altar Furniture, and Religious Articles generally,

Respectfully calls the attention of the Catholic Clergy, Religious Orders, Superiors of Schools and Libraries, and his patrons, generally, to his large and varied assortment of Standard and Devotional Books and Religious articles of every description, which he offers for sale on the most reasonable terms, wholesale and retail.

Particular attention is called to his recently published works, viz.,

Bickerton; or, The Immigrant's Daughter. (An anti-Know-Nothing Tale,) 12mo., cloth, ... $0 50
Life of the Princess Borghese; (Daughter of the Earl of Shrewsbury.) Translated by Rev. A. F. Hewit, (of the Redemptorists.) 1 vol., 13mo, cloth, ... 0 37½
Life of St. Francis of Assisofun. By Rev. Titus Jocelin. 1 vol., 18mo, cl., 0 37½
Life of the Egyptian Aloyzius. Translated by Rev. A. F. Hewit. 2 vols., 18mo, cloth, each, ... 0 37½
Edna and Marguerite. A Tale; by the Author of the Orphan of Moscow. 2 vols., 18mo, cloth, ... 0 37½

Religious Articles.

Rosaries, per dozen, from 20 cents, to 4 00
" each, on silver chains, from 75 cents, to 12 00
Crucifixes, (brass,) per dozen, from 8 cents, to 12 00
" (silver,) each, from 25 cents, to 25 00
Statuettes, Holy Water Founts, &c., &c., in great varieties. Country Booksellers and travelling dealers, would do well when they come to New-York, to examine this stock before purchasing elsewhere.

3mos P. O'SHEA, 739 Broadway, New-York.

HAMILTON & JOHNSON,

NEWS AGENTS,

30 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

Daily, weekly and Sunday papers, Magazines, and Cheap Publications. The trade supplied. Orders from the country solicited and promptly filled.

JOHN HAMILTON,
tf S. W. JOHNSON.

HANNA & BEEBE,

COMMISSION PAPER WAREHOUSE,

No. 27 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW-YORK,

KEEP CONSTANTLY ON HAND ALL DESCRIPTIONS OF PAPER SUCH AS

Book, Printing, Flat-cap, Folio, Glazed, colored, (sized and unsized,) Druggists', Hardware, Envelope, Manilla, Palm-leaf, Straw and Shipping, Papers Straw Boards, Box Boards, &c., &c., &c.

Also—Cop Waste for Steamboats and Railroad Engines.

They offer to Manufacturers at the lowest market prices,

Rags, Bleaching Powders, Soda Ash, Alum, Rosin, China Clay, Oil Vitriol, Oils, Feltings, Twines, Wire Cloth, Leather Belting.

☞ Liberal Advances made upon all Consignments.

Agents for Hanna, Carpenter & Abbott's Chandlerswick.

ap19 3m*

Publications.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

'98 AND '48;

THE MODERN REVOLUTIONARY HISTORY AND LITERATURE OF IRELAND.

BY JOHN SAVAGE. 12mo., cloth, $1.

There is no one work which gives the spirit of the memorable periods to illustrate which the author has devoted the present volume. It contains vivid and carefully collated descriptions of the principal battles of the United Irishmen of '98, and a clear statement of the circumstances which led to the differences between "Old Ireland" and "Young Ireland," the line of national policy adopted by the latter, with biographical notices, &c., &c.

my17 2t J. S. Redfield, No. 34 Beekman street, New-York.

THE BALLADS OF IRELAND:

COLLECTED BY

EDWARD HAYES,

Containing Selections from all the Irish Poets.

They are Ballads of the Affections, Fairy Ballads, Legendary Ballads, Miscellaneous Ballads, Translated Ballads, &c., &c.

The following are among the Authors:—Banim, Ansty, Barry, Beamish, Blacker, Brown, Callanan, Carleton, Charlotte Clarke, Croker, Croly, Thos. Davis, Francis Davis, De Vere, Dowling, Downing, Drennan, Dufferin, Duffy, Ferguson, Forrest, Fox, Frazer, Gallaher, Goldsmith, Griffin, Halpin, Hill, Hoey, Irwin, Keegan, Kelly, Kenealy, Kennedy, Knowles, Lane, Lover, Lynch, Madden, Maginn, Mahony, Mangan, McCarthy, McDermott, McDavitt, Meehan, McGee, Moore, Mulchinock, Rev. Dr. Murray, John Fisher Murray, Norton, O'Connell, Parnell, Ryan, Simmons, Smythe, Starkey, Sterling, Supple, Waller, Walsh, Wilde, Williams, Wolfe, &c.

The whole comprising 725 closely printed pages, making the most remarkable and interesting book ever presented to the people of this country.

Price—in one volume, $1. In two volumes, $1.25. The price of the Iris edition is $2.50.

☞ For sale by all booksellers.

The book will be sent to any part of the U. S., postage free, on receipt of the above prices. Published by my17 tf Patrick Donahoe, 23 Franklin-st., Boston, Mass.

JUST PUBLISHED.

BROUGHAM'S DRAMATIC WORKS.

Consisting of a collection of Dramas, Comedies and Farces, by John Brougham. Selected from

FRENCH'S AMERICAN DRAMA.

With portrait on steel, and memoir of the author, by R. Shelton Mackenzie, Esq. 12 mo. cloth. Price $1.

This volume contains:—

Game of Life,	Game of Love,
Love and Murder,	Pocahontas,
David Copperfield,	Dombey and Son,
Temptation,	Romance and Reality.

my17 1t Samuel French, Publisher, 121 Nassau street, N. Y.

MILLER, ORTON & MULLIGAN.

25 Park Row, New-York, and 107 Genesee street, Auburn,

HAVE RECENTLY PUBLISHED THE FOLLOWING

POPULAR BOOKS:

THE GREAT AMERICAN BATTLE;

OR

The Contest between Christianity and Political Romanism.

By Miss Anna Ella Carroll, of Maryland. 1 vol 12mo cloth gilt, $1 25; full gilt sides and edges, $2.

Containing 365 pages, and

TEN NEW PORTRAITS ON STEEL,

of the Distinguished Members of the American Party:

HENRY VIII. AND HIS SIX WIVES.

By Henry William Herbert. 1 vol, 441 pp. 12 mo, with accurate steel portraits of Henry and each of his wives. $1 25.

The important historic events which occurred during the reign of this powerful though reckless and dissolute monarch, and the number, character, and tragic fate of his unfortunate consorts, have invested the period, the king, and his victims with a peculiarly romantic interest, to which the accomplished author has added the charms of elegant diction; thus combining in Henry VIII. and his Six Wives historic truth and romantic interest.

Memoirs of the Life and Reign of Crtherine II.

Empress of Russia, with her Successors, comprising Incidents in the Russian History of the Fall of Sevastopol. By Samuel M. Smucker, A.M. 1 vol, 338 pages, 12mo, with steel portrait, $1.

If you would be posted,

If you want mental food, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you want good Pictures, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you want tip-top Stories, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you admire Cobb's Stories, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you like Fanny Fern's Sketches, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you want good Romances, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you want a good, cheap Paper, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you have four cents over, Buy THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!
If you are lazy in the morning, You will miss THE NEW-YORK LEDGER!

ap26 1t Ross & Tousey, are the Agents for this Paper.

JOHN PLASTO,

AGENT FOR THE "IRISH NEWS,"

PRINTER, BOOKBINDER AND STATIONER,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

Bookseller, Newspaper and Periodical Agent, 144 Upper Abbey st., Dublin.

The Trade supplied in town or country with every description of Books, Publications, Newspapers, &c., &c. A well-assorted stock of back numbers.

Orders by post, containing a remittance, promptly attended to. (Printer and Publisher of Walsh's Irish Railway Guide.) my17 tf

Cosmopolitan Literary Club.—At an election held on Friday, May 9, at the Commercial and Mathematical School corner of Little and Water streets, Brooklyn, the following gentlemen were unanimously elected officers for the ensuing term:—

Michael J. Deegan,	President.
Caen Conroy,	1st Vice-President.
Edward Morgan,	2d Vice-President.
James E. Mallon,	Treasurer.
John Furey,	Recording Secretary.
Hugh J. Winters,	Corresponding Secretary.
John Gallagher,	Editor.
S. H. Coleman,	Assistant editor.
John F. Hennessy, Jr.,	Sergeant-at-Arms.

By order, MICHAEL J. DEEGAN, President.
John Furey, Secretary. my17 1t

Shipping.

C. H. MARSHALL & CO.,

Old Black Ball Line of Liverpool Packets.

CERTIFICATES

Furnished for Passage to and from Liverpool, on the 1st and 16th of every Month, by the following splendid ships:

James Foster, Jr.	Capt. J. W. Porter.
Neptune	" E. W. Peabody.
Harvest Queen	" E. Young.
Isaac Webb	" J. M. Bayer.
Great Western	" W. G. Furrier.
Manhattan	" T. Dixon.
Isaac Wright	" E. Abeel.
Columbia	" C. Hutchinson.
Fidelia	" W. A. Macgill.
Yorkshire	" C. A. Marshall.

REMITTANCES.

Drafts, for £1 and upwards, on the Royal Bank of Ireland, and on Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., Bankers, Liverpool and London, payable on sight.

C. H. MARSHALL & CO.,
38 Burling Slip, N. Y.

Agents in Liverpool, Baring Brothers & Co.,
OLD LINE PACKETS,
Pier 23 East River, foot of Beekman street. 6m

WILLIAMS & GUION'S

Old Black Star Line of Packets. 1856.

Passage from any part of Great Britain and Ireland, secured at the lowest possible rates by this old-established line, sailing from Liverpool to New-York every five days, comprising the following magnificent Ships:

Ships.	Captains.	Tonage.
AUSTRALIA,	Smith,	2,000
BRIDGEWATER (new),	Barstow,	2,000
CULTIVATOR (new),	Austin,	2,000
CYNOSURE,	Bray,	2,000
CORNELIA LAWRENCE (new),	Knapp,	2,000
DE WITT CLINTON,	Funk,	1,800
ENTERPRISE,	Davis,	1,200
GUY MANNERING,	Dollard,	2,000
JACOB A. WESTERVELT,	Hoodless,	2,000
IRENE,	Williams,	1,400
JOHN BRIGHT (new),	Cutting,	2,000
MARMION,	Hanley,	1,200
NORTH AMERICAN,	Clark,	1,800
OSWEGO,	Stevens,	1,400
ROBERT KELLY,	Barstow,	1,500
SILAS WRIGHT (new),	Freeman,	2,000
SOUTHAMPTON,	Furlong,	1,600
THORNTON (new),	Collins,	2,000
TICONDEROGA,	Boyle,	1,400
UNIVERSE,	Cave,	2,000
VANGUARD,	Norton,	1,800

The ships of this line are the largest and swiftest in the trade, their accommodations for passengers are unequalled, and the frequency and punctuality of their departure offer advantages to the emigrant not to be had by any Line of Packets. Such passengers as decline coming out, the money paid for them will be promptly refunded without discount.

Provisions of best quality are provided for passengers; rations, consisting of Bread, Flour, Rice, Oatmeal, Tea, Sugar, Molasses, Salt, &c.

The increased patronage received by the proprietors of the Old Black Star Line has induced them to add to the Line several New Ships, which have taken their place this season; no expense has been spared to render the facilities for Emigration equal to the times, and add to the renown of these celebrated Packets.

The regular Sailing days are 1st, 8th, 11th, 13th, 21st, and 26th of each month; this will give passengers opportunity for embarking more frequent than by any other established Line, to which the attention of the public is respectfully called.

No Certificate of Passage will be issued for children under 12 years of age unless accompanied by an adult, who must be paid for on same certificate; for persons over 60 years of age, or with any impediment, without a Permit from Commissioners of Emigration.

REMITTANCES.

Persons wanting to send money to their friends can obtain drafts for any amount, which will be cashed at sight at the following Banks:

Ireland—National Bank of Ireland; Royal Bank of Ireland; Ulster Banking Co., and their Branches.

Scotland—National Bank of Scotland and Branches.

England—Messrs. GLYNN, MILLS & Co, Bankers, London; GUION & Co., Merchants, Liverpool.

For further particulars apply, if by letter post-paid, to

WILLIAMS & GUION,
40 Fulton street, New-York.

GUION & CO.,
115 Waterloo Road, Liverpool.

AGENTS—JOHN WHITNEY, Providence, R. I.
EDWARD RYAN, 2 Albany street, Boston.
THOMAS RATTIGAN, Pittsburgh, Pa.

THOS. C. ROCHE'S

PASSAGE AND DRAFT OFFICE 83 SOUTH ST.

Sole Passenger Agent for GRINNELL'S celebrated

Swallow Tail Line of Liverpool and London Packets.

THOSE sending for their friends in the Old Country can make arrangements at this office to bring them from any part of IRELAND or ENGLAND at the lowest rates.

The ships sail from Liverpool four times a month, and from London twice a month.

Drafts for sale for £1 and upwards, payable in any part of England, Ireland, Scotland or Wales.

Passage Tickets and Drafts sold in this office are GUARANTEED by CORNELIUS GRINNELL, Esq., 87 South street, New-York.

☞ No connection whatever with any other Person or House useing the name of Roche.

For further information apply to THOMAS C. ROCHE, ap263m Old Stand, 83 South street, New-York.

THE NEW-YORK AND LIVERPOOL

United States Mail Line.

The ships composing this line are the following:

The ATLANTIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The ADRIATIC .....Capt. West.
The PACIFIC .....Capt. Eldridge.
The BALTIC .....Capt. Comstock.

These ships have been built by contract, expressly for the government service. Every care has been taken in their construction, as also in their engines to insure strength and speed; and their accommodations for passengers are unequalled for elegance and comfort.

Price of passage from New-York to Liverpool in first cabin, $130; in second do., $75. Exclusive use of extra size state rooms, $325. From Liverpool to New-York, 80 and 20 guineas.

An experienced surgeon attached to each ship.

No berth can be secured until paid for.

PROPOSED DATES OF SAILING.

FROM NEW-YORK.	FROM LIVERPOOL.
Saturday, April 26, 1856.	Wednesday, April 16, 1856.
.. May 10, ..	.. April 30, ..
.. May 24, ..	.. May 14, ..
	.. May 28, ..
	.. June 11, ..

For freight or passage, apply to

Edw'd. K. Collins & Co., No. 56 Wall street, New-York.
Brown, Shipley & Co., Liverpool.
Stephen Kennard & Co., 27 Austin Friars, London.
B. G. Wainwright & Co., Paris.

The owners of these ships will not be accountable for gold, silver, bullion, specie, jewelry, precious stones or metals, unless bills of lading are signed therefor, and the value thereof therein expressed.

Shippers will please take notice, that the ships of this line cannot carry any goods contraband of war.
ap26 6m.

Shipping.

BLACK BALL LINE
OF LIVERPOOL PACKETS,

Sailing to and from Liverpool on the 1st and 16th of each Month.

THE following ten magnificent clipper Packet Ships comprise the "Black Ball Line, viz:—

James Foster Jr.,	Manhattan,
Great Western,	Neptune,
Harvest Queen,	Columbia,
Isaac Webb,	Yorkshire,
Isaac Wright,	Fidelia.

DRAFTS AT SIGHT for any amount payable in every town throughout England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

Persons returning to the old country, or those sending for their friends, will find it to their interest to select the "Black Ball Line," as the accommodations in the above clippers for Cabin, Second Cabin, and Steerage Passengers, are well known by the travelling public to be far superior to any other.

☞ Apply or address by letter, post-paid; no letter will be answered unless a postage stamp is enclosed to pre-pay postage.

Jacob Wilson, 108 South street, New York,

Who is the only authorized Passenger Agent for the "Black Ball Line," which lay at Pier 23 East River, opposite this office. my3 3m

Emigration.

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,
Office, 51 Chambers street.

NOTICE.—The recent failures, by which a large amount of Bills remitted from this country to friends in Ireland, has been returned unpaid, afford to this Society the opportunity, and at the same time impose upon it the duty of informing the public, that such losses would have been prevented if the parties purchasing Bills had availed themselves of the advantages offered by the Society.

For the purpose of entire protection a fund is constantly kept on deposit in the Bank of Ireland, against which this Society issues its drafts, payable at sight (from sums of £1 sterling and upwards), on the Bank and all its branches, and has thereby for the last Ten Years afforded a mode of remitcance perfectly safe and unquestionable.

New-York, December 29, 1851.

ANDREW CARRIGAN, President.

JOHN MANNING, ROBERT J. DILLON, HUGH KELLY, } Vice-Presidents.

EDWARD C. DONNELLY, Corresponding Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Recording Secretary.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Felix Ingoldsby,	John Nicholson,	William Redmond.
William Watson,	Hugh Kelly,	James Olwell,
John Manning,	Cornel Sheehan,	Daniel Devlin,
Terence Donnelly,	Romaine Dillon,	John McMenomy.

EMIGRANT INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS BANK.

No. 51 CHAMBERS STREET.

THIS Institution has been established for the purpose of affording to Emigrants and others, a safe place of deposit for their funds, to protect them from robbery and fraud.

It is conducted with the strictest economy—neither the Officers and Trustees, receive any compensation for their services. The entire profits belong to the Depositors, and will be divided amongst them, having due regard to the safety of the funds.

The last dividend was six per cent. upon all sums of $500 and under, and and will be continued or increased as the profits may justify.

Bank open to receive Deposits, daily, from 10 A. M., to 2, and from 5 to 7 P. M.

TRUSTEES.

William Watson,	John P. Nesmith,
John Nicholson,	John Milhau,
Andrew Carrigan,	Edward W. Tiers,
James Kelly,	Charles M. Connelly,
James Kerrigan,	Cornelius H. Sheehan,
Hugh Kelly,	Edward Bayer,
Charles O'Connor,	Daniel Devlin.
James Olwell,

JOSEPH STUART, President.
FELIX INGOLDSBY, 1st Vice-President.
JOHN MCMENOMY, 2d Vice-President.
TERENCE DONNELLY, Treasurer.
LOUIS B. BINSSE, Secretary.
PETER CREAR, Accountant.
JOHN MANNING, Comptroller. tf

REMITTANCES TO

ENGLAND, IRELAND AND SCOTLAND.

STERLING BILLS for sale on Messrs. Prescott, Grote & Co., Bankers, London, from £1 upwards, payable on demand, and negotiable in any part of the United Kingdom; also Bank of England Notes and Drafts of any of the English Banks or Bankers, bought and sold.

ap19 1y Prime & Co., 54 Wall street.

DRAFTS FOR £1 AND UPWARDS,

ON THE ROYAL BANK OF IRELAND,

(Expressly authorised by the Bank,)

FOR SALE AT THE BANKING HOUSE OF JOHN B. MURRAY,

No. 44 Wall street, (over Bank of North America,) New-York.

PERSONS wishing to send money to their friends in Europe, can remit it as above, by letter, post-paid, and upon receipt, a draft on the Royal Bank, will be forwarded without charge, to the person designated. 3m*

☞ To prevent loss, every Draft is registered here, and a copy of the register forwarded to the Bank by every mail steamer.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,

Office, corner of South and Beach Streets, Boston.

THE office of this Society is open from 7 A. M., to 6 P. M., where Emigrants can apply to obtain situations for which they are fitted. Farmers, Mechanics, and others in want of labor, will apply at the office.

Orders from employers in the country, stating the services required, the wages given, and the cheapest mode of conveyance, and giving respectable reference, will meet with prompt attention.

The Society will be thankful for all circumstantial and early information of any fraud, imposition or outrage committed on emigrants, and will endeavor speedily to apply a remedy.

MARTIN GRIFFIN, ARTHUR M'AVOY, } Vice Presidents.

NICHOLAS J. BEAN, Cor. Secretary.
JAMES FERGUSON, Rec. Secretary.
WILLIAM HICKEY, Treasurer.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

John Hughes,	P. Holly,
William Keating,	Christopher Plunkett,
Daniel O'Rourke,	Jeremiah Ford,
Thomas Hughes,	Hugh Duffy,
Owen Lappan,	M. Lennon, Charlestown,
J. Ryder,	James O'Brien, do.,

Patrick C. Boyle, Roxbury.

MICHAEL HUGHES, Agent.

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND, &c.

GEORGE McBRIDE, Jr., No. 14 Broadway, continues to transmit money, in sums large or small, to persons residing in any part of Ireland, in the same manner as he and his predecessor in business have done for the last thirty years, and more; also to any part of England or Scotland.

Money remitted by letter, post paid, to the subscriber, or personally deposited with him, with the name of the person or persons in Ireland, England or Scotland, to whom it is to be sent, and nearest post town, will be immediately transmitted and paid accordingly, and a receipt to that effect given or forwarded to the sender.

8mo GEORGE McBRIDE, Jr., N. N.

THE METROPOLITAN

FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,

No. 108 BROADWAY,
(Cor. Pine Street.)

CASH CAPITAL $300,000.

JAMES LORIMER GRAHAM, President.

EDWARD A. STANSBURY, Secretary. my8 1y

Special Notices.

DRILL ROOM GUIDE.

NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

TROOP A, (Irish Dragoons,) meet at the "Grape Vine Cottage," 45 Second Avenue, between Second and Third streets, on every Monday evening. JAMES MURPHY, Capt.

Company B, (Fitzgerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company D, (Guyon Cadets) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MURPHY, Capt.

Company I, (Jackson Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." W. O. MURPHY, Capt.

Company H, (Erina Guard) drill Thursday Evening at "Military Hall." R. CODDINGTON, Capt.

Company —, (Irish Grenadiers) drill each Thursday Evening at 22 White street. FELIX DUFFY, Capt.

Company C, (Mitchel Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." —— KEARNS, Capt.

Company J, (Carroll Guard,) drill each —— evening, at —— GALLAGHER, Capt.

TENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Brookes' Rooms." JOHN KENNEDY, Capt.

ELEVENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Montgomery Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. S. MURPHY, Capt.

FOURTEENTH REGIMENT, N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Carroll Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening, at the "Adelphi," Brooklyn. GEO. B. MAGRATH, Capt.

SIXTY NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Troop A, (Irish Dragoons,) drill each Thursday Evening at "Montgomery Hall." Lieut. B. O'CONNOR, Com'dt.

Company C, (—— ——,) drill each Wednesday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." Lieut. M. KEATING, Com'dt.

Company D, (Irish Rifles) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES QUINLAN, Capt.

Company E, (Fag a Bealac Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." GILBERT RIORDAN, Capt.

Company F, (Shields' Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Milleman's Hall," 7th avenue, corner of 26th street. JOHN R. MURPHY, Capt.

Company G, (Mechanic's Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." JOHN B. MADDEN, Capt.

Company I, (Irish Fuseleers,) drill each Monday Evening at 42 Prince street. M. CORCORAN, Capt.

Company K, (Brian Boroihme Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES HUSTON, Capt.

Engineer Corps, (Emmet Life Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Worth's Military Head Quarters," 22 White st. T. LYNCH, Capt.

70th REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company D, (Napper Tandy Light Artillery) drill each Thursday Evening at Brooklyn City Armory. WM. H. HOGAN, Capt.

SEVENTY FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company A, (State Rifles) drill each Wednesday Evening at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. Lieut. JAS. KELLY, Com'dt.

Company B, (Irish National Guard) drill each Friday Evening at "Centre Market Rooms." JOHN LANE, Capt.

Company C, (Young Ireland Rifles) drill each Friday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JOHN BURKE, Capt.

Company D, (—— ——) drill each —— at ——. —— NUGENT, Capt.

Company E, (T. F. Meagher Rifles) drill each —— at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. J. B. DONNELLY, Capt.

Company F, (Mich'l. Doheny Rifles) drill each —— at ——. J. F. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company G. (Emmet Rifles) drill each —— at ——. JOHN BEGG, Capt.

INDEPENDENT COMPANIES.

Company —, (Edward Fitzgerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." MICH'L. FLOOD NAGLE, Capt.

Company —, (O'Mahony Guard, E. M. A.,) drill each Tuesday Evening at "North America Rooms," cor. of Bayard and Bowery. JAMES CAVANAGH, Capt.

Company —, (Sons of '98,) drill each Friday Evening at the corner of 11th street and 1st Avenue, N. Y. M. H. SMITH, Capt.

Company —, (Wolfe Tone Guard,) drill each alternate Monday Evening at the "Second Ward Hotel," cor. of York and Pearl streets, Brooklyn. JOHN J. CLANCY, Com'dt.

Company —, (Irish American Grenadiers,) drill the first and third Thursday of each month at "Montgomery Hall," 76 Prince street, N. Y. MICHAEL DOYLE, Capt.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday evening, at Bridgeport, Conn. MICHAEL O'CONNELL, Capt.

TWENTY-FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at Albany, N. Y. P. H. GRIFFIN, Capt.

SECOND REGIMENT—HUDSON BRIGADE.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each week at the "Armory," Grand street, Jersey City. —— FARRELL, Capt.

SECOND REGIMENT PA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Hibernian Greens,) drill each Thursday Evening at 83 South Fifth street, Philadelphia. P. O'KEAN, Capt.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening at 104 Market street, Philadelphia. Lieut. PATRICK O'CONNOR, Com'dt.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Friday Evening at "Ewen Hall," Hawley, Pa. M. W. MORRISS, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT ME. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Grattan Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Bangor, Me. JOHN CARROLL, Capt.

SIXTIETH REGIMENT ILL. S. M.

Company —, (Shields Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Chicago, Ill. CHAS. E. MOORE, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT VA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday and Friday Evenings in Richmond. P. S. MOORE, Capt.

SIXTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill the second Thursday of each month in Charleston. GEO. SERGEANT, Capt.

SEVENTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill once a month in Charleston, S. C. EDWARD MAGRATH, Capt.

—— REGIMENT GEORGIA VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill each —— evening, in the city of Augusta. EDWARD J. WALKER, Capt.

N. B.—Commandants of Irish-American Military Companies throughout the United States, are respectfully tendered a place in the above "Directory," and requested to send such information as will enable us to represent them in it.

Mrs. Luby's Classes for Dancing, Calisthenics, &c., Greenwich Hall, 275 Bleecker street, open until the 1st June. The last assembly for the season will come off on Wednesday evening, May 14. Admission 50 cents. Mrs. Luby gives lessons on the Pianoforte on Wednesdays and Saturdays. my10 2t

GEO. McDONNELL,

BOOT AND SHOE MANUFACTURER,

32 PARK ROW, NEXT DOOR TO LOVEJOY'S HOTEL, NEW-YORK.

☞ Boots, Shoes, and Gaiters of the best quality made to order.

3m.my10 Geo. McDonnell.

BOOTS, SHOES AND GAITERS,

Wholesale and Retail,

MADE TO ORDER BY

LORIN BROOKS,

188 Fulton street, New-York, opposite Church street, West of Broadway. my10 1m

European News.

GENERAL SUMMARY BY THE HERMANN.

The United States Mail Steamer "Hermann," Capt. Higgins, with the German, French and English mails, passengers and usual cargo, from Southampton to the 23d ult., arrived on the 8th inst.

An imperial decree announces that the Russian army is to be reduced to a peace establishment. The force in the South of Russia and the Crimea is henceforth to be divided into two armies—one under the orders of Prince Gortschakoff, the other under General Luders.

News has been received at Berlin from St. Petersburg that the Count de Nesselrode had absolutely resigned his office as Minister of Foreign Affairs. The Prince Alexander Gortschakoff, now Russian Ambassador Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary, at Vienna, will succeed him. The Count de Nesselrode retains the Chancellorship of the Empire which he held with the Foreign Ministry but would immediately leave for Kissengen for the benefit of his health.

The Presse d'Orient affirms that the Hatti-Humayoun, relative to the Christians, is not inserted in the Treaty of Peace. The Plenipotentiaries, says that journal, confine themselves to mentioning the importance of that act. It adds that the cessation of occupation is formally stipulated. Ten ships of the line and six frigates had been sent to Kamiesh, and the Russians were making large purchases.

More disturbances had taken place at Kutaya and Tokat, attributed to the newly introduced reforms.

The Emperor of Russia had arrived at Moscow, accompanied by the Grand Dukes Constantine, Michael and Nicholas, and a numerous staff. The Emperor gave audience to Count Kakrewski, the military Governor. Deputations from the nobles and from the civil and military authorities accompanied him.

The Ministers of the Interior and Finance have received formal orders from his Majesty to do away with all obstructions in the way of commerce. The frontier traffic was open, and vessels were arriving at all the ports. The exports of precious metals was alone suspended, in consequence of the scarcity of gold and silver in the public treasury.

A telegraph from Berlin says that the coronation of the Czar will take place at Moscow, on the 31st August, the fete of his patron saint. The expense is estimated at about half a million sterling.

The position of matters in the Italian duchies is so critical that it was understood the French government was perfectly satisfied of the necessity for concentrating Austrian troops in that quarter. The Sardinian government was also believed to have received full satisfaction on the same point.

A rumor had reached Paris from Italy that a conference was to be opened in some principal city there, to take into consideration the affairs of the Peninsula. A visit of Baron de Stiglite to Paris was understood to have relation to various plans for assisting commercial enterprises entertained by the Russian government.

The latest mail from the East states that the insurgents against the Porte, in Arabia, have suffered so much from cholera as almost to put down the insurrection. The report affirms that 13,000 have died out of an insurgent tribe of 45,000.

Just at the time the "Hermann" was leaving Southampton for New-York, the grand naval spectacle at Spithead was being enacted. Thousands of persons from various parts had flocked to witness the scene, and the towns of Portsmouth and Southampton were literally besieged with visitors. The immense mercantile marine of the latter port was almost to a vessel brought into requisition, and, including the gigantic steamers of the Royal Mail and Peninsular and Oriental Company, upwards of fifty vessels left during the morning of the 23d for Spithead. The members of the Houses of Lords and Commons, the foreign Ambassadors, the heads of the public departments, and other government representatives, together with the entire of the shareholders and friends of the great Mail companies of Southampton embarked at that port. The naval fleet was the largest ever assembled on the waters of the Solent, and composed 240 vessels of various descriptions, viz: 24 ships of line, 19 screw frigates and corvettes, 18 paddle-wheel vessels, 4 floating batteries, 120 screw vessels and gun-boats, 1 sailing frigate, 2 powder and shell depots, 1 hospital ship and one floating battery, and 59 mortar vessels and mortar floats. The manœuvres were proceeding satisfactorily as the "Herman" touched off Spithead.

Interesting from Russia.

ARRIVAL OF THE CZAR AT MOSCOW—RECEPTION—SPEECH ON THE RESTORATION OF PEACE.

The Constitutionnel publishes a long letter from Moscow, dated the 11th of April. We extract the following:

The Emperor has arrived quite unexpectedly at our city, accompanied by the Grand Dukes Constantine, Michael and Nicholas, and a numerous staff. Their reception was most enthusiastic. This morning the Emperor gave audience to Count Zakrewski, the military governor. Deputations from the nobles and from the civil and military authorities accompanied him. When all these persons had formed a circle round him, the Emperor addressed them as follows:

Gentlemen: The war is over; for I ratified the treaty of peace which had been signed at Paris before I left St. Petersburg. I am happy to be able to announce the news to you officially, and to repeat to the nobility of Moscow the words which I addressed to my people in my last manifesto. Russia was able to defend herself for many years to come, and I believe that, no matter what forces were brought against her, she was in vulnerable on her own territory. But I felt that it was my duty, in the real interests of the country, to lend an ear to proposals compatible with the national honor. War is an abnormal state, and the greatest successes obtained by it scarcely compensate for the evils it occasions. It had caused an interruption of the commercial relations of the empire with most of the States of Europe. I should certainly have carried it on had not the voice of neighboring States pronounced itself against the policy of late years. My father, of imperishable memory, had his reasons for acting as he did. I knew his views, and I adhere to them from my very soul; but the treaty of Paris has obtained the object which it was his ambition to obtain, and I prefer this means to war.

Many of you, I am aware, regret that I should have so readily accepted the propositions made to me. It was my duty as a man, and as the head of a great empire, either to reject or accept them frankly; I have honorably and conscientiously fulfilled that duty; I am sure that allowances will be made for the difficult position in which I was placed, and that shortly every devoted friend of Russia will render justice to my views and intentions for the welfare of the country.

Supposing the fate of arms should have remained constantly favorable to us, as it has been in Asia, the empire would have exhausted its resources in keeping up large armies on different points, the soldiers of which would, in a great measure, be taken from agriculture and labor. In the Government of Moscow itself many manufactories have been compelled to close. I prefer the real prosperity of the arts of peace to the vain glory of combats.

I have thrown open the ports of Russia to the commerce of the world, the frontiers to the free circulation of foreign produce. I wish, henceforth, that the greatest facility shall be afforded in our markets for the exchange of ware of every origin, and of the raw materials and manufactures of our soils. Various projects will shortly be commmunicated to you, the objects of which will be to give an impulse to home industry, and in which, I trust, every noble man will take a share.

The Emperor, who spoke at considerable length, and with some emotion, was listened to in religious silence. His Majesty omitted nothing—neither the plans for projected railways, nor for the river navigation, nor for the roads, nor for Custom House reforms. The Ministers of the Interior and of Finance have received formal orders from his Majesty to do away with all obstructions in the way of commerce. The frontier traffic is already open, and vessels are arriving at all our ports. The export of precious metals is alone still suspended, and this is explained by the scarcity of gold and silver in the public Treasury.

The Emperor was everywhere received with the most profound respect. A grand review was held at Moscow. His Majesty visited various manufactories, and gave orders respecting his coronation, which will probably take place on 30th August next, the fete day of St. Alexander.

The Evacuation of Turkey by the Allies.

Paris (April 21) Correspondence of the London Times.

I omitted to mention yesterday that the Treaty of Peace with Russia contains a clause to the effect that the Allies shall evacuate the Ottoman Territory on the exchange of the ratifications. It is meant, no doubt, that the order shall be then formally given and that the evacuation shall take place as soon after as possible. It ought not to be forgotten that, with the best intention and the sincerest desire to execute the treaty, France and England are not in the same position in this respect as Austria. The distance we are from our encampments, and the vast amount of materiel we have to transport, independently of any unforeseen difficulties, will render the operation laborious and slow. The Austrian troops, who have gone through so harmless a campaign in the Principalities, have no such reasons for delaying their departure, and the Vienna Cabinet is quite capable of maintaining that the retreat of the Austrian heroes of Bucharest and Jassy shall be effected pari passu with the French and English from before Sebastopol.

The Austrian Encroachments on Parma.

The Vienna papers question the accuracy of the statement recently made by the Times, relative to the military occupation by the Austrians of the frontiers of Parma toward Sardinia, but it is acknowledged in official circles that the news is correct. The reason here given for the measure is, that Sardinian troops had previously advanced to the frontier, but you are not expected to believe that it is the true one. The Austrians believe that the revolutionary party in Parma receive reinforcements from Sardinia, and the Oesterreichische Zeitung does not scruple to aver that this government has a right to establish a political cordon between the Duchy of Parma and Piedmont. Timid politicians affect to believe that the Austrian occupation of the frontiers of Parma was settled between the representatives of the great powers at Paris, but bolder spirits declare that Austria did not consider it necessary to consult France and England on a question which concerned the Duchess Regent Louisa alone. It is possible that Count Buol announced the intention of his court to Count Walewski and the Earl of Clarendon, but the probability is that the supreme military authorities acted without having previously consulted the Minister for Foreign Affairs or the Under Secretary of State, who officiates during his absence. It is much feared here that the return of the Sardinian army may increase the general ferment in Italy, and Austria is evidently resolved to be prepared for all emergencies. It is well known that the Duchess Louisa demanded the assistance of this government against the revolutionary party assembled in her capital, but it is doubtful whether she wished to see Austrian troops spread over the whole Duchy. General Count Crenneville, the Austrian commander, has as great an objection to hirsute patriots as General Brown had to bearded soldiers, and the services of the Parmesan barbers are said to be in continual requisition.

Marshal Pelissier's Announcement of Peace to the Army.

The conclusion of peace was pronounced to the French army by Marshal Pelissier in the following proclamation:

Soldiers: The Emperor lately said to your brethren, "You have well deserved of the country." You will successively hear in your turn the same expressions from the august lips of his Majesty.

Soldiers: By your energy, by your resolution, your heroic constancy, your indomitable courage, you have achieved, with our brave and faithful allies, the peace of the world.

I have a right to say it, at the sight of so many fields of battle sprinkled with your blood, witnesses of your calm self-denial, and from which each time your glory rose more radiant and noble, and crowned your sublime efforts. You will shortly see again your country, happy at your return, happy at a glorious peace, a peace signed at the cradle of an Imperial infant. Let us all be impressed with that augury, let us find in it a new sign of Divine protection, and, if necessary, an additional inducement to accomplish all our duties towards the Emperor and the country.

The Marshal Commander-in-Chief, A. PELISSIER.
Head-quarters at Sebastopol, on the 2d April, 1856.

FURTHER NEWS.

By the arrival of the America, Captain Wickham, at Halifax, we have obtained four days' later news—up to April 27. The news is not remarkable. The naval review is the great topic. In France an Imperial decree orders a further reduction of the army. Count Morny goes as Minister to Russia, to attend the coronation of the Emperor Alexander. The army is also being reduced in Russia. From Turkey we learn that the French have evacuated Kinburn.

The Treaty.

The London Daily News has succeeded in obtaining a copy of the text of the Peace document, which is considered authentic. It contains thirty-four articles:

1. Restores perpetual friendship between Great Britain, Sardinia, Turkey, France and Russia.
2. All territories conquered or occupied during the war shall be reciprocally evacuated as soon as possible.
3. Russia restores to Turkey Kars and all other parts of the Ottoman territory.
4. The allies restore to Russia the towns and port of Sebastopol, Balaklava, Kamiesch, Eupatoria, and Kertsch. [Articles 5, 6, 7, 8 are wanting.]
9. The Sultan communicates to the powers his firman, granting equality to Christians, which the contracting powers must approve of, but divest themselves of all right thereby to interfere in the internal administration of the government of the Ottoman Empire.
10. The Convention of 13th July 1841, closing the Bosphorus and Dardanelles, is re-affirmed.
11. The Black Sea is neutralized, and forever forbidden to all ships of war, of every power adjoining or distant, with the exceptions specified in Articles 14 and 19.
12. Trade shall be free in the waters and ports of the Black Sea, subject only to police regulations, Russia and Turkey admitting consuls to all ports on its shores.
13. The Black Sea being neutralized, strongholds become useless—consequently Turkey and Russia agree neither to construct nor preserve any military maritime arsenals on the coast.
14. The Convention regulating the force of ships for coast-service is concluded individually between Turkey and Russia, but is appended to this treaty, and cannot be altered without general assent.
15 The act of the Congress of Vienna relative to river navigation is applied to the Danube and its mouths, and its freedom becomes a part of the law of the Empire.
16 To carry into effect Article 15, France, Austria, Great Britain, Prussia, Russia, and Turkey, appoint each a delegate to put the River in a navigable state, from Isatcha to Tza.
17. Austria, Bavaria, Turkey and Wurtemburg, each add a delegate to the Commission of the Principalities, to form a permanent commission for the purpose of keeping the river navigable, and to superintend its police.
18. The General Commission will be dissolved in two years, and the permanent commission take its place.
19. Each of the contracting powers may station two small ships at the mouth of the Danube.
20. Russia assents to the rectification of the Bessarabia frontier. The new frontier starts from the Black Sea, one mile east of Lake Bourna Sola to the Akermann Road, along which it extends to the valley of Trajan, passing South of Belgrade, and reascending the River Yalpack to Savatsika, and terminates at Karmari on the River Pruth. Elsewere it is unchanged.
21. The ceded territory is annexed to Moldavia.
22. Moldavia and Wallachia continue under the sovereignty of Turkey, with the guarantee of all the contracting Powers that no Power shall claim the individual right of interference.
23. The Porte guarantees to the said Principalities the continuance of the freedom of religion and commerce. The contracting Powers appoint a Commission to meet immediately at Bucharest, to report on the present condition and wants of the Principalities.
24. The Porte will immediately convoke a Divan in each Principality to learn the wishes of the people as to their definite organization.
25. Minutes thereof shall be sent to Paris, where the Constitution shall be framed, which the Porte shall promulgate.
26. The Principalities shall maintain a militia, and may construct works of defence approved by the Porte.
27. If the internal tranquillity of the Principalities be disturbed, the Porte must consult the contracting Powers, and cannot employ armed intervention without their consent.
28. Servia continues a dependency of the Porte, under the guarantee of the Powers, and retains its national administration, and freedom of religion and trade.
29. The right of garrison in Servia is reserved to the Porte, but no armed intervention is permitted without the consent of the Porte.
30. Russia and Turkey retain their possessions in Asia precisely as before the war, but their frontiers are to be marked out by survey.
31. The evacuation of Turkey by the Allied and Austrian forces shall take place as soon as convenient. The time and manner of such evacuation shall be the subject of private arrangement between each of the Powers and Turkey.
32. Until new arrangements shall be made, trade shall go on as before the war.
33. A convention (contents secret) concluded between France, England, and Russia, respecting the Aland Isles, shall be appended to this treaty.
34. The ratification shall be exchanged at Paris within four weeks.

The London Sun prints the above with a mourning border, and heads an editorial respecting the fleet, "Our Glory and our Shame," exciting thereby much indignation among contemporaries.

The Central American Question.

The London Morning Star, an organ of the Manchester party, says: "We are told that at the meeting of the Cabinet on Tuesday, the 22d, at which Lord Clarendon was present for the first time since his return from Paris, the answer to the United States was agreed upon. On some of the points connected with the Central American question, the British Government are prepared to give way; but they will not recall Mr. Crampton, and they are prepared to communicate to the United States that they are unanimous in their determination to continue him in his present position as Minister at Washington.

Lord Clarendon laid on the table of the House of Lords, and Palmerston on that of the Commons, the correspondence relating to Central America, and stated that the enlistment papers would be ready in a few days.

Lord Lyndhurst has given notice of a motion to inquire into the condition of Italy; and Lord Malmesbury for a vote of censure on the government for the fall of Kars.

The London correspondent of the Toronto (Canada) Globe states that a report is quite current in England to the effect that the Queen has some thought of paying a visit during the coming summer, to her royal province of Canada.

Correspondence.

DUBLIN, April 26th, 1856.

Charles Matthews is here. The night before last he played the Citizen Sangfroid in the comic drama of Delicate Ground. Old Hawkins' was crowded. The fashionables of Fitzwilliam and Merrion Squares bloomed in abundance all along the front of the dress circle. The Castle snobs were as thick as the graves in Mount Jerome. The 16th Lancers are in garrison here, and we had a pretty rich sprinkling of the officers. One of the most glowing faces was that of Francis M'Donough, the Queen's Counsel. He sat close to the Vice-regal box, with ever so many children about him, and his famous shirt-collars, like newly white-washed prison walls, shutting up three-fourths of his head. You've heard what old Bob Holmes said to him one day coming out of the Queen's Bench.

"M'Donough," says he, "it's a wonder you never catch cold in the legs."

"Why so, Mr. Holmes?"

"Faith, you've so much linen above, you can't have any below;" and old Bob, without changing a muscle, shuffled off to the Wig-room.

The great political event in Dublin, since I wrote to you last, is the attempt of the Dublin Telegraph party—Sadleir's and Keogh's precious clique—to lengthen the life of their virulent sheet. So foul had it grown to be—so deep was the loathing it caused—that not even the implied patronage of Dr. Cullen, the Arch-bishop, could save it from death. Every one looked on it as Sadleir's shroud. The very types with which it was printed seemed as if they had been smeared with the putrid grease of his grave. People came, almost instantaneously, to shun it, as if it had been the covering and rag of a leper. Consequently, the owners send round the following circular:—

"7, Lower Abbey-street, Dublin,
April 11th, 1856.

"SIR—I am desired by the present proprietor of this paper to direct your attention to the enclosed articles, from the pen of the Editor.

"These articles will show you that all that is now required to effect the change of the newspaper, the Weekly Telegraph to that which henceforth will be 'The Catholic Telegraph and Irish Sun,' is a compliance with the requisitions of the Stamp Office.

When these conditions are fulfilled, then the new paper will appear; and with 'The Catholic Telegraph and Irish Sun' will, it is hoped, be forgotten all differences of opinion that may have existed as to that paper whose place it is about to occupy. I am Sir, your obedient servant,

J. W. M'DONNELL, Publisher."

The Dundalk Democrat, in a manly, bold, eloquent article, spurns the beggar who thus, with a lie and a limp, crawls to him from the empty chest of the swindler. The Democrat writes:—

"Changing the name of a wolf, Mr. M'Donnell, will not change the savage propensities of the brute; for should you call it a lamb, that would not have the effect of keeping it from assaulting the sheep-fold. So it is with the characters who hired themselves, some four years since, to do the filthy toil of John Sadleir. They received his money, and executed his orders; they took his gold—the gold of a political swindler—and defended his treason and treachery. You cannot convince me that men who did this can be honest, or converted to an honest course of action. You cannot convince me that the creatures who executed John Sadleir's orders can ever be won to the side of patriotism or common honesty. They may feign to be honest, and endeavor to make the public believe them so, but I would place no confidence whatever in them. I would as soon confide in the honor of a common informer, as in the promises of any one connected with a Sadleirite newspaper."

Then, having reminded this Wolf in lamb's clothing of Sadleir's own written declaration, that he was "a villain of the deepest dye," and had committed "crimes which involved the ruin of hundreds," the Democrat says:—

"It was this villain who established the Weekly Telegraph. He established it to aid him in his political villainy. It is the truculent enemy of Ireland. I shall do my utmost to root it out of this part of the kingdom."

But the staunch Northern editor is not done with the miserable dog yet. He gives him another shake, and then flings him off on a dung-heap, muttering to him between his set teeth—

"This, Mr. M'Donnell, is my message in reply to your flag of truce. I am not going to desert my post. I would be worse than Sadleir, worse than Keogh, worse than the clan MacCabe, if I should do that."

The Wexford People replies to the fawning hypocrite in the same fresh style. He tells him the world has heard "of what fruitless labor it was to scrub the blackamoor white," and that it is just as useless to expect Mr. MacCabe to be decent.

Our object in writing thus, says the People, is to shun what may be expected when

"The old sign-board at the Telegraph office shall be taken down, and a new one put up. The same goods will still be on sale, the same unscrupulous dealer will still be doing business behind the counter, and the public, though paying a higher price, shall get no better value for their money than before."

The article I quote from ends with a warning prediction, which, if the soul of the impostor, McCabe, be not made of leather, must bring him on his knees to repentance.

The Wexford Guardian follows up the attack with the same pluck. Dr. Cahill has been publishing miles upon miles of letters in this hideous old Telegraph. The Telegraph exultingly alludes to the fact. "We have won this distinguished writer to our side," it exclaims. "Of course you have," says the Guardian, "for the Doctor is a sort of geologist, who knows by the aid of a divining rod, where mines are to be found." Turning from Cahill to McCabe, the Guardian flings the latter into the Slaney in this fashion—

"Barny MacCabe will be Barny MacCabe until he follows his master. He was the janissary of Sadleir, and hesitated not at any crime which man could accomplish. This Irish Sun, which now rises upon the ashes of the Telegraph, unlike that sun which rose upon the corse of Sadleir, comes not to lay bare the foul deeds which were done when it shone not, but to throw a kind of halo over them, that the public vision may be blinded, and the participators in the political crimes of Sadleir escape."

All this is first-rate. It sounds well. It tells us there is some sound life yet left in the country. Since '48 I've read or seen nothing which cheered me so much. This haughty, vigorous, wrathful spurning of a wretch who sold his rancorous theology for three pence a week, is enough to lift an honest man from his death-bed, and set him fairly on his legs again. As for myself, laying down these papers, I feel as if I had just come in from a bracing walk to the top of Killiney.

Beranger, in a letter dated April 3d, addressed to your friend Leonard, of the National Guard, Paris, denies the authorship of the ballad that has been recently going the round of the papers. Leonard's and Berranger's letters appear in the Nation of this morning. I send you copies of both. Leonard writes of Beranger—

"He was ever deeply interested in the wrongs and sufferings of Ireland, and kind to her exiled patriots. In gratitude and justice, we should not join in calumniating the greatest poet and the warmest patriot living. Had Moore loved his country as Beranger loved his, he would have done more good to it by the songs he would have written for the people, than all the lawyers and speech-makers that promised to liberate her."

A truly delightful event occurred last week in the county Cork. The Leemount estates, belonging to the Coppinger family, were forfeited by them, in consequence of the penal laws, in 1787. Thomas Stephen Coppinger, grandson of the last owner of the property, purchased it back in the Incumbered Estates Court, about ten days ago, and the evening after, the village of Coachford, and the country for miles round, echoed with the songs and shouts of the people. From the Bogra mountains to the banks of the Lee, there ran a chain of bon-fires, and the pipers were out, and crowds of the boys and girls along with them. One of the "owld stock" was back in the "owld place" once more, and the heart of the country beat to the tune of "The King shall have his ain again." The Cork Examiner has a full account of it all.

Do you care to know that a deputation on Irish Drainage, having something to say about drainage works executed in the Killimor district, barony of Longford, county of Galway, called on the Chancellor of the Exchequer, at his office in Downing street, some Sunday last week? The Marquis of Clanricarde, Lord Clonbrock, Sir Thomas Burke, Sir Thomas Redington, and Alderman John Reynolds, made up the deputation. The Evening Mail, in graceful allusion to the last named gentleman and patriot, says: "It is not easy to imagine why his brazen face was allowed to appear amongst a deputation of noblemen and gentlemen from Galway." Perhaps for the same reason that the raw recruit from Killebeggan asked the Sergeant to locate him in the 61st Regiment—"for if you do, Sergeant," says he, "I'll be next to my brother, who has been these three year in the 62d, you know."

Although not exactly an item of Irish news, still, as I am sure it will greatly amuse many of your readers, I insert here an extract from the last number of D'Israeli's paper, the Press:—

"All parties being now actively engaged in preparing for the approaching illuminations, any information upon the subject has general interest, and we are happy to be able to subjoin a list of some of the devices which will be exhibited by distinguished individuals:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer—A Budget in gas, with the inscription Tax, Vobiscum.

Sir Benjamin Hall—A Baronet's "Hand," in red lamps, with the motto, Excelsior.

Mr. James Wilson—A transparency, representing a Hat with the legend, "All round my Hat I wear this week's Economist."

Sir Joshua Walmsley—A device, showing a farthing candle, extinguished.

Mr. W. Williams—A view of Hampton Court Palace, with a Lambeth jackass kicking his heels against a lady's door.

Mr. Labouchere—A very elegant transparency of the Sun that will not set upon the Right Hon. gentleman's dominions, and of the colonies that will not stand his interference.

Mr. Ewart—A device of new patent Gallows, for the reformation of criminals, instead of their execution; the culprit is hung by the waist, instead of the neck, while a lecture is delivered to him.

Mr. V. Smith—A Coronet and the motto, Ver-non semper viret. (Vernon will be always rather green.)

Mr. F. Peel—A remarkable Tapeworm in red lamps.

Isn't it rich?

The fourth annual report of the Irish poor-law commissioners, under the Medical Charities Act, which has just been presented to Parliament, states that the expense incurred in medical charities during the year ending September 29, 1855, amounted to £89,388; while the number of cases in which relief was afforded was 732,563. The commissioners recommend the extension to Ireland of the provisions of the amended sanitary laws which were passed for England in the session of 1855.

After that sober statement, I might as well mention something betwixt-and-between — something half sober — half queer. The provincial papers have been, for the last fortnight, detailing how an Irishman having an ailing child, appealed not to the physician, but "the fairy doctor." The cure adopted was that the doctor dragged the child about the house-yard, "to take him from the good people," and the child was injured to such an extent that it soon died. A coronor's jury returned a verdict of wilful murder, and the fairy doctor fled. He was arrested in Liverpool on board ship, on the 21st of last month, having taken passage for America.

The agitation against the Irish church establishment begins to show symptoms of revival through the country. A special meeting of the Limerick Corporation is to be held next week, to petition "for the appropriation of the revenue of the church of England and Ireland to secular puposes, namely—the relief of the poor, the payment of grand-jury cess, and the education of the people;" and indications of a similar movement are to be observed generally throughout the country.

The Tenant-right agitation, too, is still to the good. There have been several "humble petitions" forwarded of late from the Catholic clergy of the diocese of Tuam, and other bodies and places, praying "the Honorable House to take the measure into their consideration." Following up these petitions, a bill has been brought in by Mr. Moore and Mr. Maguire—

"To provide for the better securing of and regulating the custom of Tenant-right, as practised in the province of Ulster, and to secure compensation to improving tenants, who may not make claim under the said custom, and to limit the power of eviction in certain cases." All buildings and improvements producing increased value, and made at the tenant's cost, are declared to be the tenant's property, and no tenant can be evicted without being paid for his tenant-right (where the custom exists) or the value of the improvements. The claimant must prove the increased value created. Disputes may be settled by arbitration, or else referred to the assistant-barrister at quarter-sessions (with respect to claims not exceeding £100). Where the claims exceed £100 the referee will be the judge of assize. Sundry other provisions follow.

In my last letter I mentioned an incident that took place on the occasion of Chief Justice Monahan sentencing Murphy and Dunne to be hanged, for the murder of Miss Hinds, in the County Cavan. Murphy's fate is fixed. Dunne, however, has a chance of escaping the halter. An application will probably be made, in the course of a few days, to the Court of Criminal Appeal, to quash the conviction of Dunne. It is alleged that a mis-trial took place in the case of Dunne; the ground of error being this circumstance, reported fully at the time, that after the jury were sworn, and the case stated, one of them, having fallen ill, was removed, and another juror was taken from the panel and substituted for him. It is stated that the prisoner should then have been directed to look to his challenges, but that this was not done; and that the substituted juror was added without any right of challenge being given to the prisoner. Another objection is reported to be, that when the substituted juror was sworn, the Attorney-General should have re-stated the case, but that he merely asked if the juror had been in court, and heard him open the case; and on being answered in the affirmative, then proceeded to produce evidence.

The murder at Rookwood is still the copious theme of newspaper articles.

The verdict of the Coroner's jury in the case of the murder of Mrs. Sarah Kelly having been an open one, and consequently not conclusive against any of the four parties now in custody for suspected participation in the crime, namely, Mr. George Strevan, and the men Kinahan, Walters, and Baron, a magisterial investigation was held on Monday, the 21st, in Moate, to inquire into the circumstances. Professional gentlemen were in attendance to watch the proceedings on the part of the representatives of the deceased lady and of Mr. Strevan, but the inquiry was held within closed doors, the reporters having been excluded. It is understood that only two witnesses were examined, one of these being Mr. Campion, for many years the law Mrs. Kelly's confidential solicitor, and who, it is stated, becomes now the owner of the Ballinderry property, where the murder was committed. After sitting a considerable time, the magistrates adjourned the inquiry until Thursday, until which day the prisoners are to be detained in custody. Notwithstanding all the efforts made to obtain information, the murder still continues involved in considerable mystery; but Dr. Baily, a gentleman related to the late Mrs. Kelly, and to whom she has, it is said, left the estates and mansion of Rookwood, in the county of Roscommon, and £100,000, besides appointing him residuary legatee, has offered a reward of £500 for such information as will lead to the arrest of the murderers. The Lord Lieutenant has also offered a reward of £100, making a total of £600. The earth around where the uufortunate lady met her death was examined again on Monday morning by the police, and a second bullet was found.

Your old friend, Barnaby Murphy, has been appointed Consul at Bilboa; these last five years he has held the same appointment at Alexandretta.

The agricultural news couldn't be better. The Mayo Constitution says, that "even in Mayo the agricultural improvement is wonderful." From the Northern Standard we learn that "oats stand foremost in extent, considerably above last year's sowing, and potatoes in like manner." After speaking of the "genial warmth which counterbalanced the harsh winds that prevailed for the last week," the Waterford Chronicle congratulates the farmer, that ample opportunity has been afforded him to carry on his preparations, and that everywhere through the country the land has been put in order for green-cropping. The Western Star is particularly bright. "Throughout the counties of Galway and Roscommon," we understand from it, "the peasantry are still extremely busy, planting potatoes, of which," it assures us, "a very large breadth will be got down." The Star declares in conclusion, they "have seldom experienced a season so favorable to the husbandman." The extraordinary demand for guano throws the Galway Vindicator into prolific delight.

But all this is in strange contrast with the following paragraph or two from the Tuam Herald, which I give you in full:

"Though there is a reflux in the tide of emigration, it is small as compared with the current of the outward tide which is carrying on to transatlantic parts groups of our fellow-countrymen. The number of emigrants to the States is materially lessened, but still scarcely a week elapses without our witnessing batches pass through this town, bound for America or Australia. It is so difficult to procure land at home on any terms, that men with capital sufficient to till the soil with profit to themselves and the landlord, are compelled to leave the country. The competition for land scarcely ever reached a higher pitch than at this moment. Along with high rents, high prices are also offered. Hitherto the owners of land have been reluctant to give accommodation to tillage tenants, both because grazing has been so remunerative, and because of the dread of a redundant population."

I must close to be in time for the America. God prosper it of her name!

KILMAINHAM.

Protection of American Citizens at Panama and Aspinwall.

We are informed that Mr. Dobbin has satisfactory reasons to believe that the sloop-of-war St. Mary's is now at Panama. Orders have been issued, we learn to the officer in command of that vessel to remain in that port so long as he may deem it necessary for the protection of American citizens. A vessel of the home squadron will touch at Aspinwall, also. The hope is indulged that the presence of a man-of-war at Panama will check any attempt at further outrages on our countrymen.

Irish News.

Spirit of the Irish Press.

The Tipperary Leader exclaims:

"Well, royalty is an expensive business, after all, and though the British constitution is the model of a political fabric, it must be admitted that it weighs rather heavily upon this poor little island. Illustrations are never wanting. There is the knighthood of Sir Robert McClure, for example. The fees for the ceremony amounted to £104 0s 2d., which was defrayed out of the public funds. It appears, that the fees payable for making Napoleon the Third a Knight of the Garter, amount to £479 13s 4d.! But this is not the worst. Do our readers know what it cost to send Lord John Russell as Great British Plenipotentiary to Vienna last year? Only £2,332 16s 4d.! Fancy that. Nearly three thousand pounds for a mission, the result of which every man of spirit in England resented as a personal dishonor! Then, we are to give a trifle of £70,000 a year to the Prince of Prussia for marrying the Princess Royal! Of course, we are; and there are slavish idiots and sycophants in Ireland, who will pronounce even this a benefit to the country.

Speaking of the reluctance of England to conclude peace, the Catholic Telegraph says England would the more willingly carry on the war in the hope she might injure Austria, which, combined with France, forced upon her a peace that leaves her the least and the lowest of the great powers of Europe.

Alluding to the recent elections in Ireland, the same paper regrets, that "the spirit of religion—the spirit of charity—was not in these proceedings. We can discern (it says) in the elections of Sligo, New Ross, and Athlone, nothing else but the spirit of unrelenting hatreds, malignant animosities—the diabolical, self-destructive spirit of infuriated, disappointed faction."

With regard to emigration, the Galway Mercury states, that "notwithstanding the disgraceful, cruel, and, we must add, ungrateful treatment which, owing to the machinations of the Know Nothings, Irish emigrants have of late met at the hands of the Americans, yet does emigration from this province continue, not in such numbers as heretofore to be sure, but yet in numbers such as will eventually militate very much against the agricultural interests of Ireland."

Condemning the breaking up of the militia, the Waterford Chronicle informs us that "the Scotch and Irish militia have been embodied little more than a year, and yet it is intended the latter shall be disbanded first. Of course, when an act of injustice is about to be perpetrated, it is usually decided that this nation shall be the first to suffer. Irish regiments of the line have been the first to sustain the credit of the British arms during what must now, we suppose, be called the late war—and Irish Militia Regiments have been among the first to contribute ample contingents to the regular service as its ranks became thinned by lead, powder, and cold steel. In every position and situation where danger was to be met and glory to be won, the Irish soldier has, we say, been first at the post of duty, and by the same rule it is, we suppose, that as our gallant countrymen have been first in everything else, they shall also be the first to feel this scandalous infliction.

The Dundalk Democrat pitches into the Catholic Telegraph:—We now ask the public what is their opinion of this organ of the Sadleir school, the foul and debased Weekly Telegraph, which pretends to be a most wonderful Catholic newspaper, but the labors of which tend to bring the national church into disgrace, to empty our chapels, reduce our population still lower than it is, and thwart and defeat the efforts of the honest men of Ireland on behalf of the rights of the tenant farmers? It was publicly burned in the streets of Kells, by some honest Meath man; and what Meath condemns must be dishonest, and deserve denunciation and reprobation.

The Democrat, however, views the European peace from the same point as the Telegraph, and speaking of England, expresses itself in this style: Not so, however, with England. Her plenipotentiaries were sulky and sullen. England had been disgraced; her naval and military forces humiliated; her boasting for nearly a century, put an end to; her prestige, with which she frightened the world, has vanished before the prowess of the Russian arms, and she wished for an opportunity to retrieve, if possible, her lost fame. That however, she never could accomplish, before a Russian foe, for, Russia is a military nation, with generals of genius over her armies, and statesmen of consummate ability around her throne. It was with reluctance to conclude a peace, except one dishonourable to Russia, that her plenipotentiaries crossed the threshold of the conference chamber.

Mr. James Doyle, (if we mistake not, connected with the Nation since '48) has assumed the editorship of the Kilkenny Journal, and in his salutatory gives the following historic sketch of that newspaper:

The first number of our journal was published on the 24th of January 1767, in St. Mary's Churchyard, under the title of the Leinster Journal. Before Grattan and his Volunteers had obtained the Constitution of '82—before the subtle genius of Castlereagh had accomplished the Union—half a century before Emancipation had been carried by O'Connell—the Leinster Journal was published in the "Faire Citie" of Kilkenny. On a fly-leaf in the first volume, now lying before me, there is a marginal note, stating that "the first proprietor, Mr. Edmund Finn, was succeeded by his widow, Mrs. Catharine Finn, who was succeeded by Mr. Patrick Kearney, who was succeeded by Mr. Andrew Henderson, who was succeeded by its present proprietors on the 17th of March 1830." The late Mr. Cornelius Maxwell, conferred upon it the title of the "Kilkenny Journal and Leinster Commercial and Literary Advertiser." During the first days of its existence it seems to have been little more than a summary of passing events, with scarcely any bias of politics or religion, gradually merging however into the expression of Liberal and Catholic opinions. Since 1830, at all events—a period of exactly 26 years on next Monday—it has been the able and consistent advocate of Catholic Rights, and the social and political Independence of the Irish people. It shall be a true labor of love to me to preserve it in this course, without waver or compromise.

The Tennessee papers announce the death of the venerable Major Marr, formerly a member of Congress, from that State.

Congressional.

Thirty-fourth Congress—First Session—Senate.

May 5.—Mr. Pugh presented a resolution of the Legislature of Ohio, in favor of the admission of Kansas with the Topeka Constitution. On motion of Mr. Clayton, the Secretary of State was requested to transmit to the Senate the original journal of the proceedings of the Board of American Commissioners convened at Paris to liquidate and audit the claims of our citizens for French spoliations. Mr. Bayard advocated the adoption of his substitute for the bill reported by the Naval Committee amendatory of the act to promote the efficiency of the Navy. The substitute proposes to restore all officers who have been placed on the reserve list, and investigate by Courts of Inquiry the capacity and fitness of all those dropped who so desire.

May 6.—The morning hour was chiefly occupied in a discussion relative to the proper location for the District of Columbia Armory. The bill making appropriation for the construction of harbor works at Marguette, on Lake Superior, Northern Michigan, was considered. Mr. Cass said it was a dangerous coast, and that the sudden storms rendered a harbor's refuge extremely necessary. It was only proposed to construct two of these works for 500 miles of coast. Mr. Stuart remarked that the bill appropriated but $25,000. There were eleven bills for harbors on the lakes surrounding the State of Michigan, but each called for only a small amount—in the aggregate less than the single appropriation for the improvement of the mouth of the Mississippi. After further debate, in which the propriety of embracing all such measures in one bill was advocated, the Senate adjourned.

May 7.—The Senate appointed a third Conference Committee on the Deficiency Appropriation bill, the two former committees being unable to agree. Mr. Bayard concluded his speech, commenced on the 5th, on the best means of promoting the efficiency of the Navy.

May 8.—On motion of Mr. Mason, the Senate took up the resolution reported from the Committee on Foreign Relations, declaring the notice which has been given by the President to Denmark, to terminate the treaty with that government regulating the payment of the Sound Dues, sufficient; and that no other or further act of legislation is necessary to put an end to the said treaty as a part of the law of the land. Mr. Sumner urged that the treaty abrogating power was kindred in character to the war making power, which was expressly lodged in Congress. The abrogation of a treaty might be a prelude to war. Former usage was in favor of the termination of treaties by the joint action of the two houses. Mr. Stuart said that when the resolution was adopted authorizing the President to give notice to Denmark, it was done, as business is usually done in executive session, without much consideration. Mr. Seward sustained Mr. Sumner's views. Mr. Clayton sustained the action of the Committee on Foreign Relations. Mr. Crittenden, of Ky., desired to know if the President could not, by his own act, terminate the treaty, and if the Senate had given him authority to terminate it at a specified time, how could he, by his his own act, extend the time, after the treaty had come to an end by its own limitation? What authority had the President alone to revive it?

May 9.—The bill granting 1,500,000 acres of land to Iowa, for the construction of three railroads across that State, was passed, yeas 31, nays 9. Some private bills were passed, and an act was reported to amend the Patent Laws. Adjourned to Monday.

House of Representatives.

May 5.—At the instance of Mr. Haven, the House took up the Senate bill appropriating $45,000 for deepening the channel over the St. Clair Flats, Michigan. Passed. The House passed, by 74 majority, the bill specifically defining the objects for which the balance of the appropriation for the improvement of Savannah river shall be expended. The bill to give the St. Louis and Iron Mountain Railroad Company the right of way through lands occupied by Jefferson barracks passed. Mr. Clingman asked leave to submit the following joint resolution: That for the better protection of the persons and property of American citizens under the law of nations, and as secured by existing treaty stipulations with reference to the thoroughfares or lines of travel between the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, the President be and is hereby authorized to employ any part of the land or naval forces of the country, and call for and use any number of volunteers that may be necessary to provide for the safety of passengers and others of our citizens in these localities, and such forces may be used by him in aid of the local authorities or otherwise, to insure the observance of such rights as the Government of the United States and citizens may be entitled to enjoy. Objected to. Mr. Clingman moved a suspension of the rules. Mr. Stephens inquired what disposition was to be made of the resolution? Mr. Clingman thought it ought to pass. Mr. Jones (Tenn.) understood that the resolution authorized the President to take possession of Central America. [Laughter.] He didn't want it now. Several voices—"We do," "Let's take it." Mr. Campbell (Ohio) said he should like to amend the resolution looking to the annexation of the British Provinces. Mr. Clingman—I shall make no motion cutting off such an amendment. Mr. Jones (Tenn.), in order to see the resolution in print, moved an adjournment.

May 6.—The House passed the bill making appropriations for Consular and Diplomatic expenses. Mr. Bennett (New-York), from the Committee on Public Lands, reported a bill granting alternate sections of lands to Iowa in aid of railroads now in process of construction. Mr. Stephens made an ineffectual effort to offer an amendment extending all the rights, privileges and liabilities heretofore conferred on Iowa to Louisiana, Arkansas, Missouri and Kansas, for the purpose of aiding the construction of a railroad from Vicksburg to Lecompton, and granting public lands to the same extent, on the same terms, and with the same restrictions. Mr. Bennett said thus adding 1,600 miles of railroad would break down his bill. Mr. Jones (Tenn.) moved to lay the subject on the table. Lost—45 against 95. A substitute for the original bill, recommended by the Committee on Public Lands for the same objects, was then adopted, but the morning hour expired before final action.

May 7.—The entire session was spent in debate on the Deficiency Appropriation bill, growing out of the failure of the Committees of Conference to agree. The principal difficulties were stated to be relative to the Senate's amendments appropriating $1,800,000 for the Army, and $300,000 for the Washington water works. No final action was had.

May 8.—The Bounty Land Law of 1855.—The House, as well as the Senate, adopted the report of the Joint Committee of Conference on the bill amendatory of the Bounty Law of 1855. On the motion of Mr. Pennington, it was resolved that the President communicate such information as may be in his possession touching the recent disturbances at Panama, and the interruption on either of the routes on foreign territory, between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, and what measures have been taken for the protection of American interests relative to the same. The House resumed consideration of its disagreement to the Senate's amendments to the Deficiency Appropriation bill. Mr. Giddings warmly condemning the appropriation of money to discharge arrearages contracted for returning fugitive slaves to Kentucky, suddenly fainted and fell to the floor. Several members immediately conveyed him to a sofa near an open window. A profound sensation was occasioned by the incident. Mr. Giddings soon returned to consciousness and was conducted to his residence. Mr. Campbell, from the Committee of Ways and Means, reported the Post Office and Ocean Mail Steamer appropriation bills. The bill granting upwards of 1,500,000 acres of land to Iowa to aid railroads in that State, was passed by 79 to 59.

May 9.—Nothing was done except to vote a third Committee of Conference on the Deficiency bill. Adjourned.

May 10.—This was the first Saturday session since the organization of the House. The roll call showed but 137 members in attendance; but more afterwards came in, and an unsuccessful move was made to adjourn. Mr. Fuller, of Pa., defined his position, past and present, on the slavery question, avowing broad national principles, and stigmatizing as forgeries certain publications attributing to him extreme northern views. Mr. Jones, of Pa., gave notice of his intention to reply to the speech of Mr. Fuller.

Presidential Facts and Rumors.

Albert Pike has issued the pronunciamento of a new party. This party is to be called the "Democratic American party"—its motto, "Americanism, Toleration, and Reform"—and its candidates Daniel S. Dickinson, of New-York, for President, and William C. Dawson, of Georgia, for Vice-President. The Tribune adds: "Albert was a vehement Whig, until he turned up a conspicuous Know-Nothing. As that last speculation is not promising, he appears now to be intent on getting up a party of his own. Perhaps he may grow it sufficiently to get sent to Congress by it, but the prospect is not flattering."

The Albany Journal says "there is no State in the Union more certain than Michigan to give its vote for the Republican candidate for the Presidency." "Probably not," say the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser, "and yet the odds are at least two to one that Michigan votes against him." To which the Detroit Free Press says, "The odds are greater than that. If there is no State in the Union more certain than Michigan to give its vote for the Republican candidate, then that candidate for the Presidency will have no votes in the electoral college. He will be beaten worse than Gen. Scott was beaten in 1852."

The Statesman says: "It is amusing to witness the anti-Democratic papers just at this time. They one day think President Pierce may be nominated at Cincinnati, and they fall upon him as with a tiger's ferocity. The next day they think they see chances for Judge Douglas, and then the hyena shows itself terrifically. The third day they persuade themselves that after all, perhaps, the lot may fall to Mr. Buchanan, and they turn upon him with the accumulated wrath of half a century!"

The following is from the Rochester Advertiser: "George Law will be the June Convention American candidate. Fillmore will decline the nomination of the party given to him at Philadelphia. He will decline because he is not an 'American' in the party sense in which that word is now used by the Know-Nothings. Information has been received from Mr. Fillmore, within a few days, to that effect."

The Evening Traveller of the 5th publishes a letter from the Hon. S. G. Haven, formerly law partner of Mr. Fillmore, and now member of Congress, dated April 13, in which he states that no ground exists for the report that Mr. Fillmore will decline the American nomination. On the contrary, Mr. Haven shows from the correspodence of Mr. Fillmore, that he is disposed to accept the nomination; and Mr. H. gives it as his opinion that he will do so.

The Pittsburg Gazette urges the nomination of Chase for the Presidency by the Black Republican party; on which the Cincinnati Enquirer remarks, "The signs are not so favorable as to make such nomination desirable by the ambitious Governor, who will find it a hard thing to again unite his scattered forces in this State; and out of it appearances are certainly anything but encouraging."

At the N. Y. Anniversary of the American Anti-slavery society, Theodore Parker concluded his lecture with a reference to the prospects for the next Presidency, during which he spoke favorably of Mr. Fremont, and of the successful opposition of his wife to the introduction of Slavery into California.

The "True Democrat," at New-Orleans, is the name of a new and well got up semi-weekly newspaper, by Dillard and Farris, $5 a year. It floats at its editorial head the Democratic ticket of James Buchanan, for President, and John Slidell for Vice-President of the United States.

Senator Bright, of Ind., has withdrawn the of use his name in connection with the Presidency, from before the Cincinnati Convention. As the second choice of the people of that State, the delegates will doubtless support Senator Douglas.

Colonel John Charles Fremont is not a Catholic, nor a slaveholder, but is a member of the Protestant Episcopal church, and is "intensely opposed to the further extension of slavery." So says C. C. Chaffee, member of Congress from Massachusetts.

The Democrats of New-Jersey and South Carolina, on the 6th, chose their delegates to the Cincinnati Convention; those from the former are in favor of Buchanan, and the latter of Pierce.

The Maine Republican Jounrnal (Buchanan) thinks Mr. Dickinson of this State, would be "an available candidate and an excellent President." That's so, adds the N. Y. Daily News.

The Tribune says, Cassius M. Clay is suggested for President by a correspondent in North-Eastern Pennsylvania, who believes he could carry that State.

The Boston Traveller recommends Hon. Caleb Cushing as a Presidential candidate.

It is now stated that Sam Houston will be an independent candidate for President.

BOSTON CORRESPONDENCE.

The report of the "Joint Special Committee on the last Census," has recently been published, together with analytical and sanitary observations thereon, by Josiah Curtis, M. D. This is a document of a most important nature, containing a vast amount of statistical and sanitary information, which it would be well if all our countrymen, resident not only here but throughout Massachusetts, would study, and observe the moral lesson it inculcates. I propose to make a few extracts from this document, and from the report of the "Census of 1855," taken by George Adams, and through your columns ask the attention of our fellow countrymen to the facts here presented.

The entire population of Boston on the 1st May, 1850, was 138,788; of this number, 52,923 were of Irish birth; 2,666 of German birth, and 7,877 of other foreign countries; making the entire number of the "foreign population" in that year, 63,466; of these only 1,549 were voters.

From the Census of Boston for 1855 we learn, that the population of this city, on the 1st May in that year, was 161,429, showing an increase in numbers, in five years, of 22,641; of this number 77,567 are males, and 83,862 females. The Irish population is 68,611, showing an increase during the preceding five years of 15,688. The German population is 4,587, showing an increase in the same period among the Germans of 1,911, while the number of "other foreigners" is 12,309, showing an increase since 1850, under this head, of 4,432. The increase in the whole foreign population since 1850, is 22,041. Taking the "foreigners" from the "natives" it appears that the latter number only 75,922, while the former are 85,507. The very important fact is thus arrived at, that the "foreign population" of this city exceeds that of the native by 9,585. The Irish population alone being only 7,311 less than the native. Now, will it be believed that only 4,564 foreigners possess the elective franchise?—the remainder having no voice whatever in making the laws by which they are governed!

Here, then, is a city, containing a large majority of inhabitants who, in the prevalent cant of the day, are what are called "foreigners," with strength and intelligence sufficient to guide and control the government of the city, and thus give a tone to the legislation of the State; yet we have not, in city or State, a single individual of foreign birth holding office of any kind, and are destitute of the influence sufficient to elect even the Keeper of a Pound!

We have seen that, during a period of five years, the population of this city has increased 22,641. Of this number, 22,041 are foreigners, and 600 only natives. Thus, had it not been for the "foreign" element, the Census would exhibit an increase of only 600 persons; and, if men "constitute a State," then it appears that Boston has need to be thankful to the poor despised foreigners, who have prevented the "modern Athens" from remaining stationary, if not from going to decay.

The births in this city, during the past five years, keep up the character of our ancient race for productiveness, and fully prove that we are as fruitful as ever. It appears that foreign parents have given birth to more than twice the number of children belonging to parents of native birth; while it would also seem that our Yankee boys and girls have discovered the value of "amalgamation," as larger numbers than in previous years have intermarried among our country people. These reports present many other interesting facts, which, with your permission, I shall, at some future time, place before your readers.

Since the fine weather set in, large numbers of our people are going West. Every day witnesses the departure of bodies of the best and most thrifty citizens of Irish birth. The agitation excited by the emissaries of a foreign government, has created a strong social persecution to which no man can submit. Respectable young Irishmen, highly educated, who have arrived here during the last seven years, are being discharged from places of trust, because they inherit the curse of Swift; and as soon as it is discovered they are Irish, others refuse to employ them. Families, who for years have employed no domestics but Irish Catholics, now refuse to have any in their houses, believing that our poor but noble and pure country-women are "Jesuits in disguise."

In every class of society we are met with the sneers and contempt of a people who would not have a nationality to boast of, were it not for the assistance received from foreigners. It has become unbearable, and I rejoice to say that this year will reduce the population of Boston more than the past five years has increased it.

I know of several parties who have gone West within the last fourteen days, amounting to some 200 persons in all. Among them were men who have resided here for twenty years and upwards.

They fondly hoped they had made themselves a home, and expected to end their days here, and place their bones in the same graves with their little ones born upon this soil. But, alas! Massachusetts is no home for them; and now, when in the "sear and yellow leaf," they must begin their pilgrimage anew, and seek for some place where they can worship God, as their father's did of old, without fear of being deprived of the rights of citizenship for clinging to the ancient faith.

Of the 200 persons above alluded to, one of them carries with him $75,000, and another about $40,000, while the smallest sum possessed by the poorest of the immigrants is not less than $800.

It is said that the Irish population of this State have sixteen millions of dollars in the Banks. A large proportion of this sum will this year be withdrawn and vested in Western lands. In twelve months hence, it is propable, the whole, or nearly the whole, of this vast sum will be taken out of this State, and placed where it will be more productive to its owners. A sudden withdrawal of this money would plunge the State into bankruptcy. Let our Hindoo revilers and persecutors beware!

Boston, May 3, 1856. FIN MCCOUL.

Hon. George Bancroft has been invited to deliver an oration in Worcester on the Fourth of July next.

American News.

The Carlisle Democrat notices the death, in that place, on Thursday of last week, of Sergeant John L. Hays, an old resident of Carlisle, and a soldier of the war of 1812. Sergeant Hays was born on the day of the battle of Lexington, and was, consequently, eighty-five years of age. He was the son of the celebrated Molly Pitcher, who distinguished herself at the battle of Monmouth, and of whom Headley, in his "Life of Washington," gives the following account:

"It was during this part of the battle (when Gen. Lee was struggling nobly against the overwhelming numbers that pressed on him) that an Irishman, while serving his gun, was shot down. His wife, named Molly, only twenty-two years of age, employed herself, while he loaded and fired his piece, in bringing water from a spring near by. While returning with a supply she saw him fall, and heard the officer in command order the gun to be taken to the rear. She immediately ran forward, seized the rammer, declaring that she would avenge his death. She fought her piece like a hero to the last. The next morning, Greene, who had been struck with her bravery, presented her to Washington, who immediately promoted her to a sergeant, and afterwards put her name on the half-pay list for life. Previous to this she fired the last gun when the Americans were driven from Fort Montgomery."

At the close of the Revolution, Molly Pitcher took up her residence in Carlisle, where she was known as Molly McCanley. She lived to an advanced age, much respected by all, and was buried with military honors.

The anuual list of the persons, copartners and corporations of Boston, who are taxed for six thousand dollars and upward, has been published. It has now become the largest document issued by the city, occupying one hundred and seventy-five pages. The tax of Ebenezer Francis is the largest, viz.: $13,421 26, on $1,743,800, of which a million and a half is personal. The estate of the late Abbott Lawrence comes next, $10,325 70, on $866,000 of real and $475,000 of personal property. Those who are taxed for a half million and upward, excluding corporations, are as follows: Nathan Appleton, $572,000; William Appleton, $636,000; J. M. Beebe & Co., $563,300; John Bryant, $668,000; Abbott S. Lawrence and W. W. Stone, trustees, $586,000; Josiah Quincy, $565,000; Samuel Sanford (since deceased), $594,100, all on real estate; David Sears, $963,300; John Welles, $637,000; Thomas Wigglesworth, $605,500, all in real estate; Moses Williams, $566,500; heirs of John D. Williams, $927,800. Though the number of persons in the city worth $50,000 and upward increase from year to year, the number of colossal fortunes is smaller than it was a quarter of a century since.

There was a terrible affair at Islesboro', Maine, last week. Joseph G. Brown, owner of a small craft, returned to his home as his family were at breakfast. When his wife saw his countenance, she exclaimed, "I am afraid of you." He immediately caught up a knife, and pursued her to a corner of the room, and cut her throat, severing both her windpipe and carotid artery. Their daughter, 11 years old, in attempting to aid her mother, seized the knife, which Brown drew through her fingers, cutting them severely. The monster fled, and undertook to escape to sea in a boat, but was overtaken by Capt. Benjamin A. Warren and three others. He threw him, self overboard, with a rock tied to his neck, saying, "Warren-you know what I have done; I have killed my wife, but she killed me first,—take care of my children—I commit myself to the waves,"—but the water being shallow he was fished up, and committed to Belfast jail. He is 35 years old, and his wife was about 30, a small woman, inoffensive, and prepossessing in appearance.

The suspension bridge over the Montmorenci Falls (Canada) gave way on the 30th ult. The Quebec Gazette of the 1st says: "Yesterday morning, while a man and a woman were crossing in a cart, about 8 or 8½ in the morning, and a lad 16 years of age, were crossing on foot, the chain plates attached to the anchors on the south side of the Montmorenci snapped asunder, the bridge dropped down, throwing all upon it over and down the Falls into the pool, 300 feet below, and which is 36 feet deep, swung itself round over the cataract, and there it hangs now like a ribbon from the towers on the north side. The roar, when the bridge gave way, was terrific. The clanking of the iron reverberated like thunder. A Mr. Giroux, who lives a mile off, distinctly heard the noise. The names of the sufferers are, Ignatius Cote, farmer, of St. Ignace, and his wife, Angelique Drouin, and Louis Vezina. Cote and his wife were going to market. The boy Vezini had been sent for bread, and was returning to Ange Gardien. The bridge cost £9,000."

Emigration to the West, says the St. Louis Daily Democrat, is now attracting a larger share of public attention than at any former period of our history. In all sections, and throughout all circles, we find various social schemes in progress of development for the planting of colonies and the formation of settlements throughout the beautiful regions of the West. In these plans, too, we find every phase of opinion represented, while almost every motive that can influence enterprise is brought to bear upon the masses of the people who throng and suffer and die away in the densely crowded cities of the Union. From the Fourierite association in Iowa to the Socialist phalanx in Texas and the Octagon establishment in the south of Kansas, all seem to look forward to the Western wilds for a realization of the dreams that have floated through the philosophies of all ages, and which appear only now about to meet with an accomplishment.

Died, at Ann Arbor, Michigan, on the 5th of April, Mr. David Page, in the 90th year of his age. Mr. Page was born at Bedford, Massachusetts, February 7th, 1767—the same year with John Quincy Adams and Andrew Jackson. He was in his 9th year at the time of the memorable march to Concord—heard the first gun fired, and the stirring events that followed were deeply impressed upon his mind, for his immediate family and friends participated in the skirmish, and of the 8 killed and 8 wounded at Lexington, one of the former was a near neighbor. Even in extreme age, when the ear was dull to external sounds, and present occurrences could awaken no interest, the old man became eloquent on the past, and never failed, as year after year brought about the 19th of April, to mention it as the anniversary of the battle of Lexington.

A German who lives in Cincinnati lost two of his cows recently, and believed that an old woman in his neighborhood bewitched them. He obtained a warrant against her on a charge of witchcraft, but the Judge decided, after hearing, that the charge was not sustained.

In Jersey City, a few days since, a bold attempt was made at robbery. About midnight the lady of the house woke up, and seeing the burglar, demanded the cause of his intrusion, when he stepped to her bedside, and raising his clenched fist, said, "Lie still, or I'll take your life." "Take my life, ha!" responded our undaunted heroine, "take care that you don't have your own taken;" and, suiting the action to the word, she said, "John, hand me that pistol!" Now, although there was no John in the room (the heroic lady being all alone) but her Spartan courage had the desired effect, and the burglar, with several of his accomplices, fled from the premises without carrying off any booty.

George M. Troup, formerly Governor of Georgia, died on the 3d inst., of hemorrhage of the lungs. Mr. Troup was elected to Congress as a Representative from Georgia, in 1807, and remained in the House until 1815. He was elected to the U. S. Senate in 1846, but resigned two years afterward. In 1823 he was elected Governor by the Legislature, and in 1825 re-elected by the people. He went out of office in 1827, but in 1829 he was sent again to the United States Senate, where he remained until 1834. Gov. Troup was ardently devoted to the interests of his State, and was for many years the most popular man within her borders. Since 1834 he had altogether abstained from any prominent position in public life.

THE CANALS.—The State Canals were opened for navigation on the 5th inst. During the following years the Canals have been opened at the dates stated:—

1846	April 16	1852	April 20
1847	May 1	1853	April 20
1848	May 1	1854	May 1
1849	May 1	1855	May 1
1850	April 22	1856	May 5
1851	April 15

The Pennsylvanian is handing down to an "immortality of infamy," the names of the Philadelphia Councilmen who refused the use of Independence Hall to Mr. Buchanan and his friends, on the occasion of his late visit to that city. The names of the "immortals" are all published in the Pennsylvanian of Tuesday, in which journal their conduct is strongly contrasted with that of the Councils of New York and Baltimore, both of those cities having extended an honorable courtesy to Mr. Buchanan, although politically opposed to him.

The Inspectors of the Eastern State Penitentiary, in Penn., for 1845, in their annual report, give a record of the religious training under which the convicts were trained, as follows:—Methodist, 110; Roman Catholic 90; German Lutheran, 65; Presbyterian, 50; Episcopalian, 21; German Reformed, 14; Baptist, 12; Friend, 6; Christian, 4; Disciple, 2; French Protestant, 2; Dutch Reformed, 2; United Brethren, 2; Ranter, 1; Menonist, 1; Universalist, 1; Israelite, 1; Non Professors, 32; Total, 416.

The Washington (Texas) American says that "Black Cat," the only living child of the famous Indian warrior Tecumseh, with a few of his followers, is encamped in that neighborhood. He wishes to start a trade between Washington and the Indians on the Reservation. The American says he is an intelligent fellow, speaks English intelligibly, and prides himself on his integrity.

We will venture the assertion, says the Oshkosh, Winnebago county, (Wis.) Courier, that within the past month the sales of real estate in that city, both in extent and amount, have exceeded by 50 per cent. those of any other place in Wisconsin of the same number of inhabitants. A large portion of these sales have been made to new comers from the East.

"A Know Nothing editor in Springfield, Mass., taking the 17th verse of Revelations as his basis, goes into an estimate to prove that if the earth should stand 400,000 years, there will still be abundance of room in Heaven. Suppose there will; how can the fact affect him?" "Good for a girl," says the Madison Argus and Democrat.

The whole number of surviving Revolutionary Soldiers in the United States, whose names were on the Pension Rolls on the 30th day of June, 1855, was only 726, of whom 177 reside in the State of New York. It is estimated that over one-half of the number have since died. The whole number of widows of Revolutionary Soldiers on the Rolls, at the same date, was 5,552.

A general law of the Wisconsin Legislature raises the per diem pay of supervisors, assessors, town clerks, and superintendents, to $1 50. The law took effect on the 1st inst. Also, every male inhabitant, Indians and negroes excepted, have to pay $1 poll tax.

Henry Taylor, one of the pioneers of Kentucky, and an Indian spy more than sixty years ago, died in Kentucky, in the 88th year of his age. He was a soldier in Wayne's campaign in 1784, and was at the battle of the Fallen Timber, on the 20th of August, in that year.

The Galveston News reports that vegetation was suffering all over Texas in consequence of drouth. The Indianola Bulletin of the 25th ult., however, says:—The crops in the interior, where stands have been procured, are looking well, although there has been no rain for a month.

Mrs. Sarah Coupson has eloped from her husband and child, at West Milford, N. J., with David White. She has eloped two or three times before, aud has five sisters, who have all run away from their husbands with other men. Ryerson is the family name of these remarkable sisters.

A grand buffalo hunt and expedition to the salt springs of Minnesota, to be absent about four weeks, has been projected at St. Anthony, and is expected to leave immediately after the adjournment of the Democratic National Convention at Cincinnati.

The Day Book says three quarters of the hands employed on the N. Y. Express are Irish. Its reporters are Irish, its mail boys are Irish, its press-man is Irish, two of its editors are foreigners, and the whole crowd of agents and newsboys that scatter it about the city are Irish.

The National Intelligencer says: "The whole number of claims presented for 'land warrants' amounts to 240,000. Examined, 170,000; issued, 54,000; leaving only 70,000 to be examined; consequently the supply for the present year cannot equal the last.

In old times, the bills of lading commenced as follows; "Shipped, by the grace of God, in good condition," &c. Dr. Franklin used to print and sell bills of lading, and some pious persons objecting to the usual heading, he advertised that he sold bills of lading "with or without the grace of God."

A projected duel, at Ligonier, Westmoreland county, Pa., last week, was put an end to by one of the pistols exploding prematurely, in the hands of a young man acting as second to one of the parties, the ramrod passing through and badly lacerating his hand. Blood having been shed, "honor" was thereby healed, and the matter in dispute was considered as settled.

"The newspapers," says the Northern Budget, "west of Troy, Albany papers included, are cut off from telegraphic reports, except those they pay for at private rates. There appears to be some misunderstanding between Mr. Craig, the newspaper agent, and the telegraph company.

The statistical returns of Providence, R. I., show that the two patent medicine establishments in that city render the enormous product of 1,000 barrels and 332,000 bottles of medicine to the amount of $700,000.

Rev. Dr. Armstrong, of Norfolk, Va., in his book entitled "The Summer of the Pestilence," inclines to the opinion that the fever of last summer is a travelling epidemic, and that, when it once reaches a place, there is no security but in flight.

There are five thousand colored people in Cincinnati. Five are physicians, one of them has an extensive practice among both blacks and whites. Among this class is Henry Boyd, cabinet manufacturer, worth $40,000.

The Cincinnati Daily Enquirer, comes to us in a very handsome shape. It is in size and getting up somewhat similar to the New-York Times. It is full of news, selected and original manuscript, and is well printed.

Dr. John C. Warren, an eminent physician and surgeon of Boston, died on the 4th inst. of a disease of the digestive organs. He had reached the advanced age of 78. He was a nephew of Maj.-Gen. Warren, who fell at Bunker Hill.

The rose of Florida, the most beautiful of flowers, emits no fragrance; the birds of Paradise, the most beautiful of birds, give no song; the cypress of Greece, the finest of trees, yields no fruit.

Fourteen persons confined in the County Jail, Cincinnati, being unable to pay the fines or costs charged against them, were released yesterday upon order of the County Commissioners.

When lovely woman veils her bosom
With muslin fashionably thin,
What man with eyes could e'er refuse 'en
From casually peeping in?

The annual manufactures of Boston and vicinity, and the other principal towns of Massachusetts, reach the enormous amount of three hundred millions of dollars, or one million for every working day in the year.

It is rumored that Mrs. Robinson, the "veiled murderess," has been transferred from the New-York state prison to the lunatic asylum, preparatory to her transfer to freedom. She has yet quite a capital of youth and beauty.

A young lady sends the following paragraph to the Florence Gazette; the editor says, "We would give her name, but refrain, because we don't want everybody to know what a tease she is :"

A paragraph is going the rounds, to the effect that Colonel J. C. Fremont was born in France, in January, 1813. His father was an emigrant from France, and his mother a native of Virginia.

The legislature, in joint meeting, re-elected Mr. Minor Governor of Connecticut, on the 8th. The whole number of votes cast was 251, of which Mr. Minor received 135, and Mr. Ingham 116.

Eighty thousand dollars have been subscribed in Charleston towards building a new steamer to run between that port and New York, in conjunction with the line already in operation.

An individual in St. Louis has sold for $24,875, a site in St. Paul, that he purchased six years before for $600. This is "taking a sight" to some purpose.

There is a man named Nathan Brown in jail in Butler county, Ohio, who had nine living wives. He is jugged this time on complaint of the Seventh.

On the 7th the engine boiler of the train from Elsinore, on the Catawissa Railroad exploded. The fireman and brakeman were killed, and the baggage master fatally injured.

The Post Office department has caused to be prepared a new stamp with the head of Jefferson, of the value of 5 cents, expressly to prepay postage on foreign letters.

ALBANY, MAY 8.—The boiler-head of the steam-tug Washington Hunt., burst, scalding the engineer, fireman and cook, the latter severely.

A monument to the memory of Col. Morgan will be inaugurated on the 4th of July next, in Winchester, Va., where the hero died.

A duel took place on the 3d, near the North Carolina State line, between Dr. Wilkins and Mr Flanner, of Wilmington. Mr. Wilkins was killed at the third fire.

There are five persons in the Cincinnati County Jail charged with murder in the 1st degree, viz.: Summons, Arrison, Bailey, Kain and Harrington. These five murdered seven persons.

The Boston Post says, that within the twenty-four hours ending Saturday noon, nineteen thousand bushels of potatoes had arrived at that port from Nova Scotia.

An individual in St. Louis has sold for $24,875, a site in St. Paul that he purchased six years before for $600. This is "taking a sight" to some purpose.

During the past four months nearly two hundred seamen have been shipped into the United States service at the Norfolk rendezvous.

The Massachusetts House of Representatives refused to reconsider the vote by which it rejected the bill to establish a Nautical School.

Wm. F. Rives, Esq., who served in the Mexican war, and has ever since been an invalid, has died in Prince George County, Va.

A little school girl in East Boston jumped the rope two hundred times in succession without stopping, and died from excess of exertion.

The Iowa Sentinel says the spring elections in that state indicate a democratic majority of about three thousand.

A man is walking for a wager in New Orleans. He is to walk 338 half hours, on a bet of $1500.

The Milwaukee papers boast that there is in that city more than twice as much wheat and nearly three times as much flour in store and ready for shipment as there is in Chicago.

Garland, the $200,000 defaulting treasurer in New Orleans, has been admitted to bail in the sum of forty thousand dollars.

Major Brown, Prosecuting Attorney of the Police Court, Cincinnati, was, on the 6th, presented with a magnificent sword.

The ladies of Charleston, S. C., have raised $16,500 for the purpose of erecting a monument to John C. Calhoun.

Within a week over one hundred persons have emigrated from Washington County, Md.; many going to Kansas.

The number of convictions at the Police court in Albany from the 1st of January to the 1st of May, was 59.

The Natchez, Miss., papers notice the fall of heavy rains between there and Vicksburg in the last week.

Mr. Harmon Gilbert, of Wilton, lately slaughtered 28 black snakes, all measuring over four feet in length.

Much sickness is said to prevail among the cattle and horses of Clinton, Iowa, and the neighborhood.

Gen. John Rayburn, a prominent democratic politician of Mississippi, died a few days since.

The city of St. Paul has offered a prize of $500, in wharfage, to the first boat at that city.

It is thought that the navigation of the Oswego canal cannot be resumed before the 20th.

The sales of 444 of the principal firms of St. Louis for 1855, amounted to $87,033,697.

The Newburyport jail has now but one tenant, and he has been there 18 years.

The new dome of the capitol at Washington will cost about a million of dollars.

More than 1,000 barrels of eggs are daily received at New York.

The Georgia Know Nothings have disbanded.

Canadian Parliament Debate.—Smith O'Brien and John Frost.

In moving for an address to the Queen for an unconditional pardon to Smith O'Brien and John Frost, Mr. Lyon Mackenzie stated his main object to be that the Canadian Parliament might publicly express its sympathy in the cause of freedom in Ireland and England. In addressing the House to justify the motion, he said that the former gentleman deserved the sympathy of this country, as he was always for liberal measures and reform, and had formerly viewed this country with feelings of affection. In support of this motion he adduced the fact of several petitions having been presented to the Provincial Legislature, and to the Imperial Parliament for the same object. And he was not a violent man in his language, as was evident from that used by him upon a certain occasion in Van Dieman's Land, when he spoke in the most kind manner of those who had punished him, and in the most respectful terms of her Majesty. The former of these exiles, he also urged, had, while a member of the House of Commons, always befriended the cause of Canadian emancipation from the thraldom of Downing street, and therefore, in gratitude, the Colonial Assembly should have a feeling of sympathy for their political benefactor. As to the latter individual (Frost,) he had fully expatiated the trivial offence for which he has suffered banishment, and is now too advanced in years to be a dangerous subject. All men were liable to go wrong; and here we found the case of a member of Parliament brought down to the most abject position, merely because he had tried to do what he could for his fellow-creatures. Had not Quebec memorialized this Legislature to interfere in the matter—and had not the Mayor of that city asked the same? Petitions had come from all parts to seek its interference on behalf of these gentlemen, and 150 members of Parliament in England had memorialized Lord Palmerston for their pardon. The honorable gentleman then alluded to the circumstances of their conviction, and the difficulty that existed with the Court in getting a verdict upon Frost's case. Frost was between 70 and 80 years of age; and surely, with his white locks of hair, the English Government need not be afraid of allowing him to return to see his wife, children, and grandchildren. If they thought there was any great danger in doing so, the Government must be in a very weak state there. The British residents in New-York had, at a meeting at the Astor House, adopted a petition to the Home Government for his release—he being present at the meeting. From what he had heard, he was a very excellent man; and he had a letter from him the other day, most cordial in its terms,—but in order to save time, he would not read it. He would conclude by putting his motion into the Speaker's hands.

Hon. Mr. Drummond, Attorney General of Lower Canada, deeply sympathized with men of noble birth (hear, hear), Mr. Mackenzie had paid a just tribute to the genius and heart-qualities of Smith O'Brien. He (Mr. D.) desired to see the latter restored to his family, but, notwithstanding all that, he would vote against the motion. He thought Smith O'Brien amply punished, but did not think the Canadian Legislature should interfere in the matter. He trusted to get a majority in the House to vote against the motion.

Mr. Bowes seconded Mackenzie's motion. Mr. Turcotte believed that Canada should not interfere. Mr. O'Farrell made a fool of himself. Mr. Robinson did not see why they should ask for the pardon of Smith O'Brien, when it was known that if he had chosen to ask for a pardon himself he might have had it. Mr. Foley could not agree with the Attorney General. Mr. Brown did agree with that official. Mr. Stevenson beheld nothing to excite the sympathy of Canada.

Mr. Mackenzie remarked that the Hon. member for Lambton (Brown) had made a parade of his feelings of sympathy with the exiles, but notwithstanding all his sympathy, he could not be induced to vote for an address praying their recall. Now he (Mr. Mackenzie) expected very little sympathy from that Hon. gentleman, in this way or any other matter. He remembered too well the way that Hon. gentleman pounced upon him when in exile, and would have kept him there if he could. He remembered too well that, through his organ the Globe, that Hon. gentleman said: "Never let Mackenzie come back. If you allow him to return he will ruin your credit." But that Hon. gentleman failed then, as he hoped he would fail now. He would say, too, that if the Hon. member for Lambton, or any other Hon. member in that House, never did anything worse than vote for the return to their homes of two of the most noble and kind-hearted men, their political career would be a proud one indeed. The Hon. member from Lambton was always very harsh on any poor people that happened to get into the wrong box.

Mr. Brown denied that he had ever opposed Mr. Mackenzie's return. He thought that it was very bad policy to place any gentleman in the position of a martyr.

After a few words from Mr. DeWitt, in favor of the motion, it was put and carried. Ayes 40, nays 38.

THE IRISH NIGHT—CANADA SYMPATHIZES WITH IRELAND.

Last Monday night, the 28th of April, was pre-eminently an Irish, or rather a Celtic night. Mr. Mackenzie, who is sometimes rather obnoxious to the other members of the House, moved a resolution for an address to the Queen, soliciting the recall of Wm. Smith O'Brien and John Frost, Mayor of Newport, in Wales, and despite of the unpopularity of the mover, and the most earnest opposition on the part of the Government, given on constitutional grounds, the motion was carried by a vote of 40 to 38, the ministry sustaining a most vexatious defeat, in their efforts to prevent the Canadian Parliament from expressing its sympathy with the suffering Celts of fatherland. We hail this as a great national triumph—as an indication that the representatives of the people of Canada do not fear to say Ireland has unjustly suffered, or that the men who sought to free her from the gall and wormwood of England's constitutional tyranny, should tread once again the soil which their sufferings have hallowed. Many of the old Reform party on this occasion broke free from the trammels of faction which recent politico-religious excitement has imposed upon them, and spoke of Ireland and Irishmen, and the cause of Irish freedom, as their hearts dictated, and as they were used to do of old, when they and we fought hand to hand, year after year, for the great principle of Responsible Government.

The passage of the resolutions for an address for the recall of our illustrious countryman is not only important in so far as it holds out a hope of a future union of the Reform party, but also in relation to its effects upon the interests of our friends and kinsmen in Ireland. Canada has heretofore existed in their minds as a wild, distant, and inhospitable region; but after the passage of the resolutions of Monday night this feeling can exist no longer. The Irish people will know, AS WE SHALL TAKE CARE THEY SHALL, that their countrymen have a strong foothold in the Canadas. Petitions, memorials, letters from particulars, and occasionally from corporations, have been hitherto the only weapons available for fighting their battles—but a new precedent is here established. England must feel hereafter that the eyes of the representatives of three millions of Canadians are upon her, and Ireland that they behold and sympathize with her in her struggles for freedom. What a spectacle is here represented to the "winking premier" of Britain! (as the Nation calls him.) The Parliament of a Celtic people, 3,000 miles away from the scene of their labors, condemning in the most emphatic terms, the barbarous and iniquitous sentence which drove the warmest, if not the wisest, patriots Ireland has ever nurtured into exile and disgrace! A government, one of the strongest in parliamentary strength we have ever had, endeavoring to defeat the motion, at the suggestion no doubt of its viceregal master, being compelled to raise a side issue, and to oppose it on the ground that Canada had no right to interfere in Imperial affairs. Every possible tribute was paid by Mr. Attorney-General Drummond to Smith O'Brien, and the cause he advocated, but the members were most humbly besought that they would not employ the dread power of parliament on behalf of an Irish "rebel." It was a something so startling to the hon. gentleman, that in the presence of the mace—that under the very nose of the brazen lion frowning so redoubtably from over the Speaker's chair, the Commons of Canada should pass an address to the Queen condemning, however indirectly, the policy which drove Ireland in '48 into the vortex of revolution, that he trusted the House would never, sanction it. But the House did sanction it.—Toronto Mirror.

Two full-sized and two smaller specimens of steam fire engines were officially entered in the competition for prizes of $500 and $300 in the Park.

The fires were lighted in the three furnaces at 10 3-4 o'clock. The competing machines were as as follows :

First : A small model by James Smith, fire-engine builder. The boiler upright tubular, the engine and pump directly, connected, and throwing the valve by a lever.

Second : A full-sized machine, by W. C. & J. S. Burnham. Boiler also upright tubular, with two engines, each connected directly to one of their much approved patent pumps, and also to a cranked shaft. Valves worked by eccentrics. The carriage of this machine was of sufficient size to carry wood for fuel.

Third : A full-sized machine, by Wellington Lee and J. G. E. Larned; boiler, Larned patent (upright double tubes, with fire both inside and out), two oscillating engines (Reed's patent), connected to one rotary pump (Cary's patent.)

Fourth : A small cylinder and pump attached to the last, and working by the aid of steam from the same boiler.

All the machines were made in this city; all operated with wood fuel; the steam in all followed the piston throughout the full stroke; and all worked without serious difficulty for about an hour, after which Smith's broke at some point and the fire was drawn. Smith's played through twenty feet of hose, and threw a quarter-inch stream about 65 feet; Burnham's played through fifty feet hose, and threw a three-quarter inch stream about 130 feet; Larned's played through fifty feet of hose, and threw an inch and a quarter stream about 185 feet. For a long time this engine threw two streams, one an inch and one-sixteenth and the other one inch in diameter, directing the latter back into the cistern to economize the water, which was not supplied fast enough by hose from three hydrants. During a short period both streams were played into the air, each exhibiting nearly all the force observed when played alone. Lee & Larned's machine complete weighs 6,600 lbs., Burnham's weighs 4,000. Smith's was never weighed. The committee to award the prizes is the Standing Committee of the Board of Councilmen on Fire Department.

Mr. Henry Grinnell, of New-York, has received a letter from Lady Franklin, in which she expresses a desire that Dr. Kane should visit England for the purpose of taking charge of another Arctic expedition. She still hopes that some survivor of Sir John Frandlin's party may be found living among the Esquimaux, from whom might be obtained the particulars of her husband's fate. She proposes to fit out a propellor at her own expense, and give the command to Dr. Kane.

Answers to Correspondents.

The Criterion is a graceful and learned paper. But it sometimes falls into errors. A recent number contained a long review of Mr. Savage's book. Half of it purported to be a sagacious political argument, through which an earnest sympathy with Ireland prevailed. Speaking of O'Connell's favorite project of the Repeal of the Legislative Union, the Criterion writes:

"To our mind the brilliant antithesis of one of Ireland's own most gifted sons, Richard Lalor Sheil, comprehends and settles the whole question. Deriding the project for the Repeal of the Legislative Union, he said, "Repeal the Union—restore the Heptarchy."

Mr. Sheil gets credit from the Criterion for a phrase he never made use of. Sir Robert Peel, in the debate on O'Connell's motion for Repeal, in 1834, spoke thus: "When Dr. Johnson was asked to refute the arguments for the non-existence of matter, he stamped his foot upon the ground, and exclaimed, 'I refute them thus.' When Mr. Canning heard the first whisper in this House of a Repeal of the Union, this was all the answer he vouchsafed—"Repeal the Union—restore the Heptarchy." So far, indeed, from making use of this "brilliant antithesis," or speaking at all in the spirit of it, Mr. Sheil, on the occasion alluded to by the Criterion, delivered one of his most telling speeches in favor of Repeal; and, illustrating the perfect feasibility of the project, cited the existence of Sweden and Norway:

"Sweden and Norway have one King and two parliaments. Since the year 1815, there has been no quarrel between the Legislatures."

And then he turns to another example:

"You were instrumental in effecting the Union of Belgium and Holland. Lord Castlereagh, who carried the Irish Union, represented you at the Congress in which the different arrangements with respect to Belgium and Holland were made. You have yourselves recently been parties to that separation which Belgium demanded, and you assented to the grounds on which it was required."

But we are not arguing Repeal. It is a gracious service, we conceive to remedy the mistake of a writer who devotes himself to the inculcation of the art of correct composition, and, having done so, we leave Repeal where O'Connell found it.

PRESIDENTIAL.—We have received the following document marked "official," and stop the press to give it the instant and immediate benefit of our circulation. We need not dwell on the character of the writer, or his important pronunciamento. We do not envy the feelings of the man, native born or "foreign," who is not moved by it. We break no confidence in saying that it is whispered about that the "great American traveller" is preparing notes of his vast wanderings—the author was six times in Washington—for Bayard Taylor's forthcoming "Cyclopedia of Modern Travel." All other travellers stand still until they hear of Pratt's peregrinations.

The Rise And Progress of America. The power and influence of America, consists, in Emigrants setling, building up, and enriching America, it is attributable to the Intelligence of the laboring classes, the Military, the Navy, the Literature, the Press. Let universal sufferage be tolerated in this country, that is, let every intelligent legal voter who respects the American Flag, have the priviledge of voting at the city, State and united states Elections. The Irish Nation unquestionably are characterized by her inhabitants. If it had not been for the Ireishmen, we should not had our canals, our Rail Roads, our Telegraphs. The Ireish men are noted for Strength, for ardious labor, whit, and strong attatchment to association and their Nationality. America is composed of all Nations, kindreds, and Toungs, and they demand a man for the Next Presidency, one who is able to take an average of all the Parties, and go in for the good for all. The attatchment of the Ireishmen towards each other is very commendable trait in their character. Their is no way to benefit any man until you first secure his confidence that you are his Friend. I am for taking an average of all the parties and go for the union of States, which form our great and growing confederacy. I am an Editor, Author and Publisher and Honorary Member of the Military. Danial Pratt, Jr., of Boston, the Great American Traveller, and the Independent candidate for the Presidency of the U. S. A.

We learn that Mrs. Luby will repeat her clever lecture on "The Dances of all Nations," on June 2, at her Academy, and will be assisted by Mdlle. Eliza Valentini, who is favorably known as a talented artiste and composer. The exercises of the pupils of both ladies will add to the interest of the occasion.

We devote a page to-day to the most interesting facts and statistics furnished by the anniversary meetings of the various societies held in New-York. To our out-of-town readers they will be interesting, and to all useful for reference. We shall conclude them next week.

THE IRISH NEWS.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, MAY 17, 1856.

GENERAL WALKER.

A strong feeling has, for many weeks past, prevailed here in favor of this brave soldier of republicanism. Heretofore, somewhat subdued in its expression, the Executive and Congress were allowed full leisure to take the initiative which the interests of America, and the great principles underlying its constitution, suggested. Wearied of delay, impatient of the restraints thrown in the way of their generous action, fearful of fresh difficulties thickening round their countrymen in Nicaragua, the citizens of New-York have broken through their silence.

The meeting at the National Hall, last week, attests the sympathy of the mass of the people for the Democratic army of Granada. The Red Ribbon was displayed. The flag of the Five Volcanoes, unfurled above the chair, received the enthusiastic recognition of men of all parties. The speeches were hearty and instructive. In their conclusions they were not only inspiriting, but practical. Not cheers, not resolutions, not men even, but arms and money—the sinews of war—do the democrats in Nicaragua require; and these they shall have. Such was the decision of the meeting. To give prompt effect to it, a Committee was named to collect subscriptions, and forward them.

With all this we are thoroughly delighted. The noble work has our heartiest good wishes, and whatever service it is in our power to render.

On subjects of an interest exclusively American—on those, rather, which divide the Commonwealth into great parties, and give rise to contests at the Polls, in Senates, and Conventions—we reserve our opinion, until, with the privileges, the obligations of citizenship justify its utterance. Not so with those questions which rise above the debates of mere political parties, swell beyond the frontiers of the country, attract with their glowing magnitude the sympathies of all men, and the consequences of which will spread and deepen, like great rivers, through the future.

Such are the revolutions of Europe; the labors in the white Arctic fields; the breaking of that antique seal, which has till now shut out the world from Japan; the tunnelling of the Alps, or any of the other great actions of human genius, bringing sterility, disorder, decay or tyranny, into fruitfulness, harmony, life and liberty.

Such, too, is the question now debated with fire and sword upon the Isthmus of Nicaragua; a question of infinite interest, and if men would only look upon it with honest eyes, and from a clear, bold height, instead of from a cobwebbed corner, a question of the grandest aspect. Not since Columbus set his foot on the sands of San Salvador—not since that prophetic bell of Philadelphia proclaimed liberty to the ends of earth—has a question of grander import announced itself in thunder to mankind.

But were the events now occurring in Nicaragua to be limited with their issues to that country; were they never to affect the commerce and sovereignty of the United States; never to proclaim themselves as that tocsin of the Declaration has for all ages done; yet must they deeply excite the sympathies of all who desire to see a country in the fruition of peace, prosperity, and freedom.

The cause in which General Walker has staked his life, is just, generous, and glorious. Invited by the Democrats of Nicaragua, who are to that country what the Whigs of the Revolution were to the old Thirteen States and their struggle, he sets sail for Rejealo, and with a handful of intrepid followers, strikes down the Aristocrats, who in that quarter perpetuate the instincts and example of the Tories of the old colonial days.

No one disputes this. No one ventures a breath in defence of the Serviles of Granada. But General Walker, it seems, had no right to interfere! The cause he has chivalrously helped must be suffered to perish, until some text from Grotius is found to justify his promptitude to succor the oppressed. That's the argument. That's the argument of those who in cold blood stand by to see the Serviles of Nicaragua once more with their grasp upon the throat of the people, the Costa Ricans in possession of the route to California, the English with a lease of it for 999 years, in payment of the services of the Euridice at the mouth of the San Juan, and other value less publicly bestowed.

The world has not thrust its arms elbow-deep into its breeches pockets, put on its spectacles, hemmed and hawed solemnly, turned over Grotius, Burlemachi, Vattal—a page every half hour—to justify Lord Cochrane in Callao, Humbert in the bay of Killala, Devereux in Venezuela, Byron in Greece, Dembinski in Hungary, Lafayette at Brandywine. There are some events, the loftiest planted in history, which—as Grattan said of the Irish Volunteers—contain in themselves both principle and precedent.

On the 1st day of January, 1796, in reply to the Minister of the French Republic, on the latter presenting the colors of France to the United States, George Washington pronounced these noble words:

Born, Sir, in a land of liberty; having early learned its value; having engaged in a perilous conflict to defend it; having, in a word, devoted the best years of my life to secure its permanent establishment in my own country,—my anxious recollections, my sympathetic feelings, and my best wishes, are irresistibly excited, whensoever, in any country, I see an oppressed nation unfurl the banners of freedom.

In the spirit of these sentiments, New-York has spoken out. New-Orleans has done the same. Nicaragua shall be free! The Democracy of America decrees it.

ROBBING PETER TO PAY PAUL.

The Danish Sound Dues Question is to all appearances to be left as it has been, or very nearly so. The agitation of it has awakened the researches of some historical and statistical students—has rippled in noisy figures, flashed in some angry, and floated in other philosophic paragraphs through the editorial columns of American and European journals, but farther than that, apparently, the result has been, and will be, nothing.

That the collection of these Dues is a swindle, has been very generally admitted by those who have given the subject any study; and that it should be annulled, was as generally howled from one end of Europe to the other, when the American notice to that effect was wafted to Europe some sixteen months ago. This commotion on the part of philanthropic Europe was in no wise lessened by a knowledge of the fact that Denmark was poor, and that the Dues and Tolls formed one of her three chief resources of revenue.

"Live and let live" is a good and manly maxim; but the means of so doing must be guaranteed by some slight allusion to the existence of reciprocal honesty.

If the audacity of a "Confidence Man" carried him successfully through an "immemorial usage"—as the Dane says—of his neighbors' gullibility and quiescence, we doubt if the plea of "custom" would much affect the decision of the court, were he at last clearly arraigned at the bar of public justice. Denmark has played such a game, and with a "distinguished consideration" not noticeable otherwise in the business, gave the implicative and euphonious name of "Due" to what is more truly characterized by the grating and irritating monosyllable "Tax." It is in every sense an imposing relic of the feudal times. The commercial nations have had to render to the Dane, as the serfs did to the barons, a portion of their toil and care and industry; and from the extensive character of the tariff, there is scarcely a product of the earth but pays this tribute. Were these taxes confined to commodities landed in Denmark, on the home-industry-protection system, nothing could be said; but it is quite the contrary, the tax being demanded at the mouth of the cannon, for passing by the country, as vessels pass England and France, going through the Straits of Dover.

The notice of America, and the agitation of the matter in Europe drove Denmark to a "Conference" with the interested powers; America alone, reclining on its right and not on the chances of being swamped among the balancers of power, refusing to send a representative. After some time, the Danish Commissary, Mr. Bluhme, submitted a proposal of capitalization—in effect that for the abolition of the tolls Denmark should receive thirty-five milllions Danish rix dollars; the mere consideration of which appears to us as tantamount to an acknowledgment of the right of collection. Mr. Bluhme offered the following conditions:

That all the powers interested in the Baltic trade and navigation participate in the payment, and that it shall be agreed to by the powers represented in the Conferences, Denmark reserving to herself to treat separately with the powers not represented as to their quota share.

That a sum of 2,335,088 rix dollars shall be considered as an indemnity for the lighthouse dues, and 32,664,912 rix dollars as compensation for the duties upon goods.

That the payment of the quota share of each of the represented powers, shall be guaranteed to Denmark in a satisfactory manner.

He also declared the sum stated to be the minimum of "indemnity which Denmark had the right to claim;" the divisions of which among the nations interested is estimated respectively at: Great Britain 10,000,000 Danish money (or about £1,200,000), the share of Russia about the same, that of Prussia about 4,500,000 Danish, that of Sweden and Norway about 2,000,000, that of Netherlands 4,500,000, that of France 1,250,000, that of Belgium 3,000,000, that of Spain 1,000,000, and so on in proportion to the yearly average amount of dues each State has paid in later years.

England—which through its leading journals so decidedly backed up the intentions of the United States—has, as we stated in a previous article, changed her tone, the Danish foreign debt being chiefly held by British bondholders. She has rejected the proposal of Denmark, and it is rumored proposes instead that a period of fourteen years be conceded to Denmark to continue the tax, after which it shall expire of itself—or that the Baltic states alone should pay the capitalization. Another statement, however, is afloat, said to be confirmed by authority in Copenhagen as the real proposition of the English Government, to wit: "That the Sound Dues are to be retained, but their amount shall in future be levied in the Baltic ports instead of at Elsinore," which in the eyes of some Englishmen is wholesome, and "in conformity with English interests," as it proposes to prolong the revenue which serves as security to the Anglo-Danish loan.

So, the Taxes will be prolonged that England be guaranteed her loan.

The Shipping Gazette, which has the pockets of its patrons at heart, raises another and very sensible point, which is not easily out-argued:

Has our contemporary (the Times) taken the trouble to ascertain whether Denmark is entitled to levy these tolls at all? We are told that if the 35,000,000 rix dollars demanded by Denmark for the capitalization of the dues be paid, British shipping will benefit, in English money, in the proportion of between £70,000, the present sum paid by this country in the shape of Sound Dues, and £45,000, the interest of the sum which it is proposed England shall pay by way of capitalization. But who is to pay the £45,000? Not the shipping interest, surely? Upon what principle can Government justify the bill which they have just passed for the abolition of passing tolls, levied in this country on shipping, if they should be induced to determine that, with respect to foreign passing tolls, not only compensation shall be paid, but be paid by the shipping interest. We believe, as we have affirmed on every occasion since the subject has been under discussion, that Denmark had never any right, except by treaty, to levy these obnoxious tolls, and that, at the expiration of the treaty now in existence, British ships would have a right to pass into the Baltic without leave of Denmark, and, of course, without submitting to be taxed by that State. Are the United States going to pay their share of the sum demanded for the capitalization of the Dues; or, when Denmark has exacted all she can from European commerce, are American ships to ride through the Sounds free from the exactions from which other maritime countries have had to purchase exemption? This is a question which must be answered before the subject of compensation can be permitted to be opened in this country. Whatever the issue may be, it must be perfectly understood that British ships will no longer submit to pay these passing tolls to foreign States, nor will the shipping interest consent to be saddled with the cost of compensation to foreign powers, for the abolition of such imposts as our government has admitted, in the present season, to be iniquitous and unjustifiable, as regards the passing tolls on ships levied at our own ports.

The question of poverty which seems to claim attention in behalf of Denmark is somewhat absurd. If a nation with some two and a half millions of a population, and a revenue of about fourteen millions of dollars (American) chooses to run in debt to the extent of sixty millions, and otherwise beggars itself by sustaining, or trying to sustain, a royal style, title, and dignity, besides a standing army of twenty-five thousand soldiers; it is scarcely a republican duty to throw aside a question of national right, merely to allow the little old prodigal to keep up appearances.

The question is not of the poverty of any party, but of money claimed where it is not due.

THE DOOMS-DAY BOOK.

An article in the London Times has lately told the truth about Ireland, with a terrible emphasis. We learn from it, that in March, 1851, the number of men and women in Ireland was reduced to 6,550,000, from 8,175,000, their number in June, 1841. So that, the Irish population, in ten years, has decreased by more than 1,500,000. This the Times observes, with a superb complacency, was, of course, the effect of the famine, and its concomitant pest:

"No extent of emigration, such as was possible for Ireland, could explain it. Emigration at the very utmost could only have kept the numbers of the population at or near the same level; it is entirely contrary to experience to suppose that it could have neutralized the average annual excess of births, and then reduced that level so signally. Emigration has undoubtedly contributed its own effect; but, after making all possible allowance for this; a very large proportion remains to be accounted for, and nothing else will account for it but the famine and the plague."

Having thus calmly explained the decrease in the population, the philosopher exclaims:

"What an idea of their intensity is impressed on us by the multitude of their victims! More than a million human beings stricken down in less than three years by hunger and disease!—a population nearly equal to half of Scotland—more than half that of London proper—fully equal to that of four first-rate English cities—larger than that of one of the Canadas, and exceeding that of some half-dozen other not unimportant English colonies! Men talk of war as if it were the great destroyer of life. But what have two years of this war, with all the means and appliances of the destructive art, and—more deadly still—with all the combined horrors of disease without remedies, and climate without protection—of tents and clothing that exposed men, already prostrate under typhus or dysentery, to the piercing blasts and cutting sleet of the Crimea—what have they done in comparison with the pest which slew its countless victims in the stillness of a two years' unbroken peace? Even if the loss on the side of our enemy be allowed to include the mortality among the inhabitants of the Crimea, or the motley band which may have accompanied the Russian armies without sharing the dangers in the field—the total amount of those who have perished on their side and that of the allies will not equal the victims of the Irish famine."

And to what was that famine owing, will the lordly Times tell the world? Will it tell the world, that whilst this havoc was spreading, Ireland was exporting to England food to the value of fifteen million pounds sterling, and had on her own soil ample provision for double her population? Will it deny what John Mitchel has put in black and white—that during the four famine years—'46, '47, '48—Ireland exported four quarters of grain for every quarter she imported, besides cattle; and of the grain imported, the greater part had been exported before, and came back laden with two freights and speculators' profits, to the helpless consumers?

EUROPEAN NEWS BY THE ATLANTIC.

The chief feature of the news by the Atlantic (which arrived on last Monday, with dates to 30th ult.), is the official publication of the Treaty which we publish elsewhere. The missing articles, numbers 5, 6, 7 and 8, are given. 5 and 6 provide for a general amnesty and exchange of prisoners. 7 and 8 admit Turkey to the public law and political system of Europe. By these we are informed "her independence and territorial integrity" are secured, as also an engagement which binds the contracting powers, should a misunderstanding arise with the Porte, not to use physical force, without giving notice to the other parties to the contract; not, of course, that they would stop them—oh, no, but merely that an opportunity for mediation might be made.

Peace was formally proclaimed in London on the 29th ult. with all the pomp, pageantry and histrionic scene-shifting, banner-bearing and mock dignity of mediæval processions. The British Crimean inquiry commission draws to a close. Colonel Tulloch has summed up and Lord Lucan has made his reply.

The King of Algiers is not alone in arms, but is "eager for the fray," and makes his appearance on the muster-roll of the first regiment of the Grenadiers of the Imperial Guard as Enfant de Troupe.

The "churching" of the Empress Eugenie took place on the 30th, and she would make her first appearance in public at the Odeon theatre.

The Court of Rome is sedulously endeavoring to obtain from the government of Tuscany privileges similar to that lately granted by Austria.

Sunday, the 4th of May, was appointed as a day of thanksgiving, for the restoration of peace in England. Parliament would adjourn from Friday the 9th to the 16th May. Lord Palmerston and Earl Fortescue are to have the two vacant orders of the English garter.

From India we learn that the "Santhal rebellion" was completely subdued; that Oude was quiet, the "King" of the latter having left on his visit to England.

The Chinese imperial troops have sustained a defeat, and the insurrection is active at Kiangi.

LITERARY CLUBS.

Elsewhere in our columns may be found the advertisement of the "Cosmopolitan Literary Club," a debating Society, established in Brooklyn. Societies of this character have been generally considered as conducive to mental improvement; and from what we can learn of the plan and objects of this society, it seems to us not only to deserve success, but quite likely to attain it.

MILITARY MEMOIRS.

THE SIXTY-NINTH REGIMENT, N. Y. S. M.

Three years of actual service in the field are necessary, according to good authority, to complete the education of the soldier. And although the proposition was originally predicated on an experience of British troops, the general truth it expresses may fairly entitle it to a wider application. Some service would seem to be necessary. For until his discipline has been indurated in the shocks and trials of battle—tempered as if by the ordeal of fire—it is, at best, but preparatory, and may cut a far other figure in the field from what it did in the drill-room. Such discrepancies in the conduct of even brave men, on their military debut, are not wanting to the page of history.

"There have been and are heroes who begun
With something not much better or as bad;
Frederick the Great from Molwitz dared to run
For the first and last time."

And small blame to lesser heroes if, in similar circumstances, their nerves should be disturbed. For, in truth, there is considerable difference between performing evolutions in a placid and serene consciousness of entire security (except in so far as you may be enfiladed by bright eyes), and going through the same exercises in the face of an enemy, pounded by his cannon and seeing comrades drop on every side; or, between marching through admiring thoroughfares in sunny weather, and against a foe whose glistening bayonets rush to the charge. One is the holiday aspect of war; the other its unadorned reality, in whose unsparing glare shams and pretences of all kinds meet exposure and discomfiture, as inexorable as happened to our "Anglo-Saxon relatives" in their late Crimean campaign. The "moral" of all of which is, that it is well that war is not often visible in its true phase; else, it may be doubted whether so many would swell its "pomp and circumstance" as are now lured by its fascinations, and whether the pretentiousness of some who never smelled powder "fired in anger" —never stood "in the imminent deadly breach," or rolled back the adverse tide of battle—would not assume a more modest tone on a closer acquaintance with a game involving the grave issue of life and death.

Of this class, the rank and file of the regiment whose name heads this memoir is not composed, but of men who present a remarkable and cheering contrast. An honorable ambition to establish a regiment, that might compare creditably with kindred organizations, was the impulse that prompted its formation, and has continued to be the inspiration of its command. From its incipiency, it has had to contend with its full share of difficulties, but it has never asked more than "a clear stage and no favor." Thus, born amid clashing rivalry, it is animated by a keen but generous esprit de corps.

By reference to the files of the Irish-American (kindly placed at our disposal by the proprietors), we find an account of an incident in the early history of the organization, viz.: an excursion in September, 1851, of the several companies then enrolled, to Staten Island, where they were presented with the beautiful green flag now belonging to and borne by the regiment. This presentation was made by Mrs. Col. Doheny, on behalf of a committee of ladies, including Mrs. G. D. Dowling, in an elegant address, which was appropriately responded to by Captain McGrath, the then Acting Colonel. In connection with this affair, which passed off most pleasantly, affording happy augury of future success, it may not be out of place to render a passing tribute to the memory of that officer. In him the infant organization found a fast and efficient friend, whose sagacious counsel and helping hand were an unfailing support in its early struggles; and whose solicitude relaxed not until it left the object of his care competent to fight its own way through a rough world.

The regiment was organized in '51, but it was close on the 1st of January, 1852, before it received its first Colonel. By an order of Brigadier Ewen, dated Dec. 26, 1851, it was announced that Charles S. Roe was duly elected and commissioned as Colonel of the 69th, and in that capacity would assume the command. By a regimental order of the same date, Col. Roe informed the officers of the regiment of his commission, and invited them to meet him at Military Hall, Bowery, on the evening of the 29th Dec., 1851. At that meeting, he pledged himself to discharge his duty to the regiment without partiality, and to the best of his ability; a pledge, which it is but bare justice to state, he did, during his continuance in command, strictly and honorably fulfill. The first Lieu't-colonel of the regiment was Michael Doheny, who held command until Nov., 1853, when he resigned.

The Regiment attended at Metropolitan Hall on occasion of a lecture given by Mr. Meagher, for the benefit of the New-York Volunteers, on the 4th of June, 1853; as it also did at his last lecture at the Academy of Music, given for the benefit of the orphans, on the evening of the 8th of April last. And on both occasions its presence and band handsomely contributed to the effect and object of the lecture.

On the 3d October, 1854, Col. Ryan, the present commandant, their captain, was elected to the post of Lieutenant-Colonel, vacant by the resignation of Lieut.-Col. Doheny. Captain Robert Nugent was elected at the same time to the post of Major, vice McBirney resigned. Lieut. John McCartan having resigned his commission of Lieutenant, and having been honorably discharged from the duties of such office, was, at the same time, appointed and commissioned as Adjutant of the regiment; thereby relieving Pay-Master White, who had been discharging, pro tem., the duties of that office. On the 2d of February, 1855, Colonel Roe, much to the regret of the regiment, resigned his command induced thereto by failing health; and Colonel Ryan shortly thereafter, was elected thereto, and now holds the same. On the 3d of March, 1856, the post of Lieut.-Col., vacant by the promotion of Col. Ryan, was filled by the election of Captain Butler, of the Irish Rifles to the same; who made his first parade as Lieut.-Col. with the regiment, on the last 17th of March.

Apropos of this last anniversary, it may not be amiss to state that this regiment parades on St. Patrick's Day. A custom which is in no way affected by the mutations of the weather.

The following list comprises the staff of the regiment:

STAFF.

John McCartan,	Adjutant,	Re-appointed.
Wm. M. Giles,	Surgeon,	Vacancy.
Louis D'Homergue,	Assistant Surgeon,	Vice Giles promoted.
Wm. H. White,	Paymaster,	Re-appointed.
Matthew O'Connor,	Quartermaster,	Vice Conway resigned.
James Bagley,	Chaplain,	Vacancy.
John McLoughlin,	—	—

NON-COMMISSIONED STAFF.

John O'Dwyer,	Sergeant Major,	Re-appointed.
C. D. O'Sullivan,	Quar. Sergeant,	"
Arthur Tracy,	1st Color Sergt.,	"
Patrick Smith,	2nd " "	Vice Bradley removed.
Thomas Dolan,	Right Gen. Guide,	Vice Smith promoted.
Edward Fagan,	Left Gen. Guide	Dolan ap't'd. R. G. Guide.
Graffula,	Leader of the Band.

This last gentleman, in his most useful capacity of band-master, has rendered himself highly popular in the regiment.

The uniform of the regiment is dark green, slashed with gold lace, and piped with scarlet cloth; trowsers of sky-blue cloth, with a stripe of scarlet. Uniform of non-commissioned officers and privates the same, but slashed with yellow worsted binding. The staff wear chapeaus. The Directory will furnish a list of the companies, with their respective nights of drill.

Thus, having endeavored to sketch—we fear imperfectly—a Memoir of the 69th, we cannot dismiss the subject without a word on the character and composition of the regiment. It is composed mostly of adopted citizens, who "wear the Green," but in the ranks may be found men of different climes, united as well in the bonds of discipline as in sympathy with the oppressed of all lands, and in fealty to the land of their adoption. The subaltern officers comprise a band of young men, whose generous rivalry it is to discharge their respective duties intelligently and faithfully, and thereby retain their "friendly relations" with the commandant. For the latter is a vigilant officer, whose glance is quick to detect, and whose disapprobation is sure to follow misconduct. Assiduous in his attention to his command, and ably assisted by his Lieut.-Col., it is reasonable to suppose he will eventually accomplish for his regiment a first class rank in the militia of the State.

EMMET LIFE GUARD, ENGINEER CORPS, SIXTY-NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

On the 9th August, 1855, at the request of a few patriotic Irish gentlemen, Thos. Lynch, Esq., called a special meeting of the friends of Ireland, at the late Capt. Kerrigan's, to devise the best method of forming a military company, having for its object the elevation of the Irish character in this country; and, by inculcating in the minds of young Irishmen, the necessity of being competent soldiers, that when their services are required here to defend this Republic, they may honorably acquit themselves. At first the members proposed forming an independent corps, but owing to some opposition, the Company made but very little progress. Finally, the members resolved that they should attach themselves to a militia regiment, and at the instance of that sterling Irishman, Lieut. Col. Butler, they obtained a position as Engineers in the 69th regiment, under command of Col. Ryan, 4th Brigade, 1st Division, N. Y. S. M. On the 17th March, (St. Patrick's Day,) 1856, they made their first parade in full uniform, at the head of the 69th regiment. Since their first parade they have recruited strongly, and now intend forming another Company—Grenadiers—with the same uniform. As they are now organized as Engineers, they are allowed by law to have 1 captain, 1 sergeant, and 2 corporals. The Company has selected for Captain, T. Lynch, Esq., a native of the County Cavan, Ireland; for Sergeant, P. T. Murtha, Co. West Meath, Ireland; the two Corporals are John H. O'Brien, of Limerick, and T. Keogh, of Dublin, Ireland. The uniform worn by this Company is the same as that worn by Robert Emmet on the memorable 17th July, 1803, at the head of the insurrectionists in Thomas street, Dublin; it consists of a single breasted green coat, with scarlet facings; buff knee breeches, falling 7 inches below the knee; military boots, coming 1 1-2 inches over the knee cap, with buff tassels, two cross belts, body belt and cross belt. On the latter, a brass plate with a silver American shield, surrounded by a wreath of shamrocks. The epaulettes are of scarlet worsted and green cloth; the hat is the same as the U. S. army regulation hat, bearing the N. Y. State arms and a castle; the plume and pompon is green, red and white. They carry muskatoons, with swords. They drill on every Monday evening at half-past 7 o'clock, at Worth's Military Headquarters, 22 White street. The members of this Company are all young men, (between 18 and 30 years of age,) of Irish birth, who bear a warm love for their native land. The Company is now in the hands of gentlemen who will leave nothing undone to perfect its success.

Literature.

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS.

MORE ABOUT CLONGOWES—OLD SCENES AND FACES.

The dear old college stood very nearly in the centre of a circle of ancient towns. There was Clane, something like two miles off; Kilcock, between five and six, Celbridge, pretty much the same; Naas, not a perch further; Prosperous, within four; Maynooth, in the opposite quarter, about the same distance. Very old and ragged, with very little life stirring in them, they seemed to have gone asleep many years ago, and to have at last waked up, half suffocated, shivering, and robbed of the best of their clothes. In the brightest day of the summer, they impressed one with this notion. In the drenching black rain of December, their miserable appearance chilled the blood of the fattest stranger who chanced to pass through them, and to the imaginative mind suggested the ruins of Baelbec. In short, there wasn't a decent town in Kildare, nor on the Kildare borders of Dublin.

Clane was one street. The street numbered a hundred houses, more or less. Every second one was a shebeen, or tavern, dedicated, as the sign-board intimated, to the entertainment of Man and Beast. I recollect that on one sign-board, next to the post-office, the Cat and Bagpipes rampantly figured; whilst on another, a red coffin, with three long clay pipes crossed upon the lid, and a foaming pot of porter pressing down the pipes at the point of intersection, gave the public to understand that the wakes of the neighborhood would be "convaniently" supplied. There was a police-barrack, of course, with a policeman perpetually chewing a straw outside on the door-step, rubbing his shoulder against the whitewash of the door-post, and winking and spitting all the day long. There was a Protestant church—and that, too, of course, right opposite the police-barrack—with its gaunt angular dimensions, fat tower in front, sheet-iron spire, and gilt weather-cock on top. There was a low-sized, most modest, low-roofed little Catholic chapel, back from the street a few yards, with a convent, sheltering three Sisters of Mercy, on the right hand side coming down from Dublin, and on towards the South.

At the southern end of the street, a quarter of a mile from where the houses dropped off, the beautiful brown Liffey, deepening into gurgling pools, spreading thinly and sparklingly over beds of sand and pebbles, threw itself under the arches of the quaintest, queerest, crookedest, most broken-backed bridge, that ever flung shadows on the flashing path of the speckled trout and red salmon, rushing away, with many a round of caprice and turmoil, through green rushes, sandbanks alive with martins, sedges rustling with otters, into the copper-hued darkness of Irishtown wood.

Oh! what a river is that exquisite wild Liffey! How it tumbles; glides away; buries itself darkly in pools of fabulous depth; leaps over rocks; deepens, as it were, thoughtfully, under ruins and raths; plunges down into valleys; ripples and whispers under willows, the close leaves of the strawberry, and the purple-ivied basements of church-tower, country-mansion, and castle; running the wildest, most ruinous, and grandest frolic imaginable, until it frowns and grows sulkey a little above the King's Bridge, of Dublin, and in a turbid thick stream washes the granite walls of the quays, over which the Four Courts and Custom House rear their stately porticoes and domes.

In a yellowish, dry, worm-eaten manuscript, in the Arundelian Library of Stonyhurst, I glanced one day on a passage glowingly eulogistic of Clane. The manuscript contains an account of the Synods held, at different periods, in Ireland. This poor dribbling village of Clane was the favored scene of one of them, six hundred years back; and, apropos to it, the chronicler, whoever he was, styled it the hortus angelorum—the Garden of Angels. It is now a paradise in ruins. The broken walls of an abbey, matted with ivy, shadowing a confused crowd of tombstones and tablets, the inscriptions of which no casual eye can decipher, alone remain to bear out the panegyric put on parchment recording its saintliness and glory.

One tomb especially, within those broken gray walls, ever attracted me, bringing me close to it, and urging me with a silent impulse back into the dim paths of the past. It was that of a Crusader. So I thought. So every one who visited it thought. So the whole neighborhood, for miles round, and for generations, decided. Within the last week, I have been looking over one of the beautiful Tracts of the Celtic Union, entitled "The Traces of the Crusaders in Ireland," and whilst I find in its bright pages vestiges of this chivalrous Knighthood near Clonegall, in Carlow, and on the Mourne, three miles south of Mallow, and at Toomavara, near the ruins of Knockbane, and in the parish of Temple-Michael, in the barony of Clashmore and Cashbride, and at Ballyhack, close to the estuary of the Suir, I am cast adrift from Clane, where the chain-clothed legs and turtle-breasted body of a Templar, burst out, as if with an incompressible leprosy, from the dock-weeds, the nettles, the rank grass, the daffodils, the nightshade, and blackberry bushes with which it is hemmed in, over-shadowed, and most dismally margined.

That's the fault I find with Clongowes. They talked to us about Mount Olympus and the Vale of Tempe; they birched us into a flippant acquaintance with the disreputable Gods and Goddesses of the golden and heroic ages; they entangled us in Euclid; turned our brains with the terrestrial globe; chilled our blood in dizzy excursions through the Milky Way; paralyzed our Lilliputian loins with the shaggy spoils of Hercules; bewildered us with the Battle of the Frogs and Mice; pitched us precipitately into England, amongst the impetuous Normans and stupid Saxons; gave us a look, through an interminable telescope, at what was doing in the New World; but, as far as Ireland was concerned, they left us, like blind and crippled children, in the dark.

They never spoke of Ireland. Never gave us, even what is left of it, her history to read. Never quickened the young bright life they controlled, into lofty conceptions and prayers by a reference to the martyrdoms, the wrongs, the soldiership, the statesmanship, the magnificent memories, and illuminating hopes of the poor old land.

All this was then to me a cloud. Now I look back to it, shake my hand against it, and say it was a curse.

The fact, I have stated. The reason of it—at least what appears to me to be the reason of it—I may, in a little time, explain.

What true scholars and patriots they might have made, those old Jesuits of Clongowes, had they taken their pupils to the battle-fields of William Aylmer's army—skirting the bog of Allen—or to the Geraldine ruins of Maynooth, or the grave of Wolfe Tone in Bodenstown churchyard, or to the town of Prosperous, where Dr. Esmonde buried the Red Cross under the hot ashes of his insurgent torch, or to the woods and mansion of Rath-Coffey, where Hamilton Rowan once lived—where the bay of his famous blood-hounds still echoed in my time, and where an old man—lean, shrivelled, skinny, with wiry, thin locks—still mumbled and shuffled along the decayed avenue, showing the worn pike, at the end of his staff, which he had charged with against the North Cork in Maynooth;—what true scholars and patriots, Irishmen in nerve and soul, might they have made us, had they taken us to these sites, instead of keeping us within the pillars of the Parthenon, or the forum and shambles of the Tiber?

I write this, not that they kept us aloof from these places of national interest; not that they actually imprisoned us within the routine range of the classics, and shut the gates on us, as if there were no chastity or illumination without; but that we wandered with them, day after day, miles upon miles, over these fields and localities, without a finger to mark them on our memories, or a syllable to mingle them with our joyousness, our poetry, and rhetoric. Ireland was the last nation we were taught to think of, to respect, to love and remember.

It is an odd fiction which represents the Irish Jesuits as conspirators against the stability of the English empire in Ireland. With two or three exceptions, they were not O'Connellites even. In that beautiful, grand castle of theirs, circled by their fruitful gardens and grain-fields, walled in by their stately dense woods of beech-trees, walnut, and firs, they lived and taught—so it seems to me now—rather as hostages and aliens, than freemen and citizens.

But, I can't bear to say anything against Clongowes. It is to me a dear old spot. Long may that old tree, on which I've carved my name, put forth its fragrant blossoms, multiply its fruit, lift its aged head to Heaven, and receive thereon the dews which fertilize, and the golden beams that propagate!

Midway between Clane and Maynooth—just off the road skirting the domain of the College—lived one Father Kearney, the parish-priest of the united parishes of Clane and Rath-Coffey. He was a great friend of the College; was always on hand there, whatever ceremony or pastime, high-mass or funeral, academical exercise or collegiate symposium, was to take place. With short black trowsers, tight black gaiters, skimpy black dress-coat, rumpled white cravat, sandy scant hair—at the tail of the plough, in the pulpit, abreast of the altar, in the chair of the study-hall, examining the boys, or mixing his punch—he was ever the same, grotesque, unique, and attractive.

He had nothing to do with the college, but somehow or other, the old gentleman was constantly there. The Jesuits had a gala-day once a month. The boys had foot-ball or handball, fishing or skating. They had an extra allowance of meat, whatever it was, and tart, varying from apple to rhubarb, and from rhubarb to gooseberry, as the season permitted. The Jesuits had a choice banquet in one of those frescoed halls I have already described.

To this banquet came all the neighbors. The Aylmers, Gerald and William, nephews of the noble old rebel I have mentioned, were never missed from this monthly feast, during my time, and for fifteen or twenty years before it. They did right. Were I living near old Clongowes—close to it as they were—I'd dine there, not only every month, as they did, but every day, if possible.

From this monthly table, too, Father Kearney was never absent. The boys used to say—though his cottage was two miles off—he smelt the dinner, and, in dressing himself, timed his toilette by the perfume, which came to him from the chimney-top of the college kitchen, across the woods, the fields, and marshy bottoms. For upwards of thirty years, Father Kearney, in his short breeches, tight black gaiters, clumsy rumpled cravat, and carroty scant hair, was at that feast. On the Academical or Commencement day, year after year, he examined a certain class in the Third Book of Cæsar, asked the same questions, and found the same faults. In Christmas week he visited the theatre, sat longside of the President, snuffed himself plenteously, hemmed and hawed mightily, perpetually pulled his nose and his waistcoat, brushed his breeches over his knees, and sat there, snuffing and puffing, the venerable Sphynx of the scene.

His cottage was known by the name of Snipe Lodge. It was a thatched cottage, with a clay floor, naked rafters, and four panes of green glass—each of them with an enormous bull's eye—to let the light through. He had a housekeeper, named Biddy, and a butler, named Jim. Between Biddy and Jim, it was hard to keep the place clean. The calf was forever opening his Reverence's door, upsetting the chairs, and the turf in the corner. There were a blackguard parcel of dogs incessantly scampering about, biting the legs of the poor who came with their sores and their crutches for alms, and frightening the hens from their roost.

As for the hens, they had, at last, to take refuge on the smoked rafters, under the roof. Elsewhere, they had neither immunity nor peace. There, night and day, they used to crowd up, shake their wings, shut and open their eyes, and make themselves comfortable. Below, was the hard floor of black clay, mixed with lime. All round, on four sides, were the walls, built thickly of mud, and whitewashed within. Overhead were the black rafters, crowded with hens, flapping their wings, pecking their leggings and breasts, and making themselves indecently at home.

A few weeks after the consecration of the Right Rev. Dr. Nolan, Bishop of Kildare and Leighlin, Father Kearney gave a grand dinner in the one room of Snipe Lodge. It was the great event of Biddy's existence. She never had anything but a few eggs and a cut of bacon to fry, before this. Now she had a pair of chickens to roast, and another pair to boil, and a beautiful ham to dress and serve up with young cabbage, besides having the biggest potfull of potatoes (pink eyes) to look after, and a cupfull of fresh mustard to mix. It was a great day with Jim, by the same token. He had to lay a clean cloth, scrub the year's rust out of the knives and forks, borrow three or four chairs from the neighbors all round, and keep the hens off the rafters, and the table immediately under them. This was the worst trouble of all. For though Jim, now and then, took the sweeping brush to them, and occasionally his Reverence's blue cotton umbrella—opening and shutting it suddenly, to frighten the birds from their roost—and though in these efforts he was assisted by Biddy, who took the basting-spoon to help the umbrella, it was all to no purpose. The hens would keep to the rafters, flapping their wings, dropping their spare feathers, and, whenever Jim turned his back, and Biddy was bent over the pot on the fire, popping down straight on his Reverence's clean table-cloth, to have a crumb or two from the loaf which lay there, on a blue-rimmed dinner-plate, waiting for the chicken, potatoes, and bacon to come on. Father Kearney himself used sometimes to look in, and whisk his yellow silk pocket handkerchief at the obstinate fowls which overlooked the scene of his feast. But the fowls didn't mind him. As Biddy observed, they didn't care a straw for his Reverence, and she wouldn't be surprised if they misbehaved before the Bishop himself!

"You might as well," Biddy used to say to her master, turning round from giving the roasting chickens a turn, her face and hands pouring over with gravy, "you might as well lave them alone, for the divil's in them to-day."

The company arrived. Father O'Conner, the Procurator of Clongowes, was the first on the ground. Next came the Aylmers, William and Bob, the latter the best horseman that ever crossed a ditch from the Boyne to the Barrow. Then came Father Kearney's curate from Clane, and Father Dignan, of Clongowes, and Dr. Walsh, all the way from Naas, and the parish priest of Prosperous, and two Professors from Maynooth, and Dr. O'Flannigan, the comfortably-fed druggist and doctor from Celbridge.

O'Flannigan, by-the-bye, was the physician in ordinary to the college of Clongowes. He visited it once a week—every Tuesday, if I recollect rightly—walked through the Infirmary, felt pulses, knocked against chests, fixed his castor-oil eyes upon tongues, muttered monosyllabically to Judy, the head nurse and matron of the Infirmary, wrote something in a book which Judy kept in her cupboard, along with her tea, sugar, prayer-books, and two or three withered, inflexible lemons.

His invariable prescription was senna and salts. The boys called it "black draught." It made no difference what ailed you, that dose was prescribed. Toothache, neuralgia, constipation, scarletina, pleurisy, lumbago, ringworm, lockjaw, or softening of the brain, for everything, the most trivial or most desperate, that "black draught" was Dr. O'Flannigan's corrective. It was with him that same "sweet oblivious antidote" which cleansed "the stuff'd bosom of that perilous stuff which weighs upon the heart," and purged it to "a sound and pristine health."

His assistant was a lay-brother of the College, one Phillip O'Reilly, of whom I purpose to write more fully in the course of these grateful recollections. Judy always administered the dose. She mixed it, stirred it with a teaspoon, forced it inexorably on the patient, piously ejaculating—"Take it now, for the poor sowls in Purgatory!" When it was swallowed, she gave the patient the quarter of a dry apple, recommending him just to take the taste off his mouth, and not eat it all.

Close upon the heels of Surgeon O'Flannigan, Major Rind, a Protestant neighbor, came in. Then somebody from near Bishop's Court, Lord Ponsonby's place, where O'Connell tumbled D'Esterre. The Bishop came last.

The dinner was laid. The roast chickens were put at the foot, and the boiled at the head, and the ham at the side, right under Bob Aylmer's magnificent scimetar-shaped nose, and the potatoes everywhere round. Father Kearney carved the boiled chickens, with the Bishop on his right, and Major Rind on his left. Jim bustled about with a new apron, and a clean napkin under his arm, doing everything wrong, with Biddy, as red as a poppy and as hot as a hob, standing at the kitchen door—it opened into the parlor—and ordering him to do this, and do that, and bewildering him wholly.

"Sure I can't, if you tell me," he used to cry out, turning upon Biddy, with a plate full of fowl, or a cut of the loaf on the top of a knife.

By-the-bye, Jim had an idea that, for everything, the plates should be warm. If Dr. O'Flannigan asked for a little bread, Jim ran into the kitchen, snatched a plate from the plate-warmer, cut a slice of the loaf, and handed it on the hot plate to the Doctor. If Father O'Connor, the huge Procurator, asked for the mustard, Jim pushed Biddy aside, snatched up another blazing hot plate, and planting the mustard-pot on it, ran it into the Procurator. Old Bob Aylmer asked him one time for a cork-screw. Jim brought it to him on a hot plate. The hot plate was his absorbing idea.

* Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year 1856, by THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, in the Clerk's office of the District Court of the U. States, for the Southern District of New-York.

The dinner was pleasant—indeed, it was jovial. The company forgot the clay floor they were sitting on, and the black rafters overhead, where the Harpies were roosting. The Sherry had gone round half a dozen times at the least. The Port, too, had more than once circled the board.

"Let's have the champagne," said Father Kearney. "Jim, hand round the champagne."

Jim made a dart for the kitchen for a hot plate. Biddy stopped him, however, spreading her check apron before him, and so bringing him quick to a halt, like the Roman race-horses pulling up in a sheet on the Corso.

"You omadhawn," says she, "what do you want?"

"A warm plate, Biddy," says he.

"The divil warm ye," says she, "can't ye have betther manners before his blessed lordship, the Bishop?"

With this reproof, Jim came to his senses, and twisted the wire off a silver-crowned bottle. Then he drew a carving knife across the veins of the throat, and up went the crowned head—neck and all,—with a flash. At the same instant, frightened out of their wits by the report, and one of them being hit by the cork in the wing, down came the Harpies with a rush, and a flap, and a spatter—three of them straight on the table—one of them into the potato dish—another on Dr. O'Flannigan's wig—another into the good Bishop's lap—whilst the cock made for the one pane of glass behind his lordship, and darting through it, went fluttering and splashiag, all fuss and feathers down the dirty boreen which led from Snipe Lodge to the high-road. It was some time before order was restored. It was some time before Biddy and Jim succeeded in dislodging the Harpies. It was a very long time before Dr. O'Flannigan, of Celbridge, composed his offended feelings, and straightened his wig.

"Gerald," Father Kearney calls out to Bob Aylmer's brother, "stick your hat through the window, and keep the cowld from back of the Bishop."

Father Kearney, of Snipe Lodge, never entertained after that day. Biddy, I believe, died of a rush of blood to the head. Jim, disgusted with the world, went to Mount Mellary, and was there clothed with the gown and cowl of La Trappe. Poor old Bob Aylmer has shouted his last tally-ho. Dr. O'Flannigan still dispenses senna and salts, though Judy, his beautiful Ganymede, has returned to dust. The guest of the feast sleeps beneath the pavement of Carlow Cathedral, and the host is troubled no more with obstreperous fowl and the affairs of Snipe Lodge.

He put together a large sum of money. His will broke it up and distributed it amongst the sweetest and noblest charities of the country. Two months after his death, it was all found in a tin box, under the thatch, over the front door of Snipe Lodge.

THE SYBIL OF THE SHANNON.

Suggested by my expectation previous to, and delight after hearing Catharine Hayes sing the melodies of her country.

I. Expectation.

My heart was throbless, in its depth of hope—
Aye, in its deep expectancy lay still,
As some shy mountain lake
Looking to Heaven its lone guise to take;
Its joy, when Phœbus smiles noon down the slope,
Or gloom, when sunset purple-robes the hill,
And spreads across the dreamy lakelet's breast
Its shadow, like a lullaby of rest.

Hope had so conquered all my thinking art,
I sat a dreamer, waiting to be woke
Into more vast expansion of my heart,
Or chill'd to misery by the enthusiast yoke.

I felt a mute, electric sympathy—
Such as in nature binds the plant and tree,
The shrub and soil,
And stellar systems toil—
Bind my still being to a hoped-for voice;
And, in my faith elate,
I did anticipate
The lyric grandeur of the coming hours.
My muteness did rejoice
As silent nature o'er the seeds of flowers!

I doubt not but that I that moment longed—
Then, when the glories of my fancy thronged
To make a voice, and made it for my soul—
That I might sink beneath the wild control
Of my own brain,
Through fear the longed-for strain
Might not, superior, with my ear condole.

II.—Realization.

The graceful girl appears
Against the volumed cheers,
As, fronting Earth's plaudite, the dawn his standard rears:
Then, all was silent as a widow spent in tears.

She sang, and all around
Seemed panting with the weight of tenderness conferred;
And eyes seemed straining e'en to catch the sound,
To ease, by seeing, the unseen power all heard.
As one in mist,
Frights and conjectures on a sound aside;
But feels not lone, if through the foggy tryst,
He could but see his shadow for a guide.

Her voice made all my heart-strings musical,
And my brain seemed many flutes,
And clarions rich, and hautboys mellow,
And reeded ministers to her vocal thrall,
Which, in their vigor, had grown dumb as mutes
For utterance of thought; for the dense air—
Dense in the fervor of melodious prayer,
Which had a thousand messengers of bliss—
Captured my brain, and hushed it with a kiss;
Giving and taking, with a jealous breath,
Souud which might kill with joy, or dead might wake from death!

And so the singing air
Hallow'd to silence my congenial brow;
As, in the summer fair,
The atmosphere of gold
Doth a rich halo fold
Around the stainëd leaves of every flower and bough.

Her voice rose like the moon beyond a western hill,
And rising to meridian of the midnight silent,
Cast its beam'd cadence on the æriel ocean still,
And left it rippling lucent melodies!
And fancy we each cone a starry island;
We might imagine us in angel skies,
Where song is light, and life to erst world-eyes.

Oh! how it filled the crannies of my soul,
Laving the barren margins of its sorrow,
And made all fertile of delight the while
As to its banks the fruit-inspiring Nile.
God! how her voice did all my senses roll
Into one sense of song! And could I borrow
The pulse of each in that awed, list'ning throng,
I'd crave transfiguration,
By the thousand-soul'd oblation,
On the lyric mount of glory, with the dreamy Queen of Song!

III.—Visions.

I travelled into dreamland 'neath the spell.
There, mystic Ossian hoary,
With his white locks, like a glory,
Floating round that womb of heros, the bard-chief's cloudy brow—
On a throne of massive mist,
In a robe, tinct amethyst,
Which the lazy sun-clouds kissed,
Sat right regally, I trow.

And a million sunsets glowed
In the rear—through which he trode—
And wove a golden tangle where the air had loosed his locks;
And a million crispy, chill,
And mysty dawns stood still—
Which he had used at will—
And he sat 'mid his immortal years, like shepherd 'mid his flocks!

All ages for his courtiers,
All nations for his flock,
The ærial rebels waste them,
As the sea-foam round a rock;
The light'ning for a sceptre,
The thunder at command,
He rules the cloud-capp'd realm
Of the gorgeous bardic land!

Round him his offspring warriors stand,
And maids, at either hand;
And, interplaced amid the hero groups
Are virgins, waving garland troops
Of shamrocks, dight with dewy di'mond—
Gathered o'er night, are spectre bards,
Vet'rans of song and rhyme, and
Pious rivals for the bard's rewards—
The nearest seat to him upon the throne!
The wires are eloquent with mystic tone,
Echo pillows on the clouds its dreams,
While all the air is springing lyric streams!

* * * * *

That trill! ah soul, and I've been dreaming, too!
Borne on the echo of a maiden's voice;
Ah, blessed voice! thou'st woke my pride anew,
And in thy triumph doth my heart rejoice.

October 5th, 1851. John Savage.

OUDE-ACITY.

The Private Life of an Eastern King. By a Member of the Household of his late Majesty Mussur-u-deen, King of Oude. Redfield.

Although the author of this book sets out with stating that Oude is "a mere trifle about which a great deal too much has already been said," he nevertheless proceeds to add a little to the "general stock of information," as booksellers' advertisements not seldom announce literary hacks' jog-trot over some well-worn path of literary labor. Oude was not always such "a mere trifle." It was once the seat of a powerful empire, and a great province north of the Ganges. Plenteously watered, generally level, and well cultivated—encompassing an area of over seventeen millions of acres, only one-tenth of which is forest and jungle, and having a revenue, as stated in Montgomery Martin's History of the British Colonies, of £1,813,562, or over nine million dollars; it presented a too tempting field for the filibustering movements inaugurated by the British Government under the name of "Civilization" and "Spread of the Gospel." The Nabob of Oude backed up the Great Mogul against the English under Lord Clive, in 1760; but the English, after dividing the native princes and making them, to a considerable extent, perform their work in murdering each other, effected a treaty with Oude in 1764, nine years after which the gallant Nabob was reduced to the position of nominal stipendiary, or monarch at will of his own dominions. Oude, of course, was recognized as a "most faithful ally of Great Britain;" was humbugged into a very important position in its own eyes; and the King paid for being a State pensioner. He was, however, in the "eyes of the world," and the compilers of government reports and grim statistics, a "faithful ally." No one had a greater affection for him than Lord Wellesley, when he went to India; and, in recognition of his services, "rewarded his fidelity," adds the author of the present work, with a delicious self-complacent humor, "rewarded his fidelity by annexing half of Oude to the Bengal Presidency. He could not find (benevolent Lord) any better way of recompensing the people for the good faith of their rulers, than by putting them under his own government."

Our author continues with keen jest to tell us that "the Marquis of Hastings borrowed two crores of rupees from Ghazi-u-deen—that is, two millions of pounds sterlings, and in lieu thereof, gave the Nabob a barren tract of land at the foot of the Himalayas, conferring with it also, the title of King—his Highness. The Nabob was changed to his Majesty the King, which of course, was more than an equivalent for a couple of millions of pounds sterling. Poor Ghazi "was fain to be content, or at all events to appear so." Hastings rifled two of the female members of the Nabob's family, and tortured their eunuchs to extort treasures from them; which facts gave a thunder to the voice of Edmund Burke, and a devastating lightning to the tongue of Brinsley Sheridan, which yet roll and fork and play over the Parliamentary history of England. Such conduct also—the "rapacity pursued by the authorities in the case of two women of exalted rank"—drove young Thomas Russell from the ranks of the army in India, shocked, disgusted and discontented, to seek, in coalition with Tone and Emmet, a panacea for the ills that, not less than India pertained to Ireland, and to share with them the penalty of rebellion.

Oude has hung on since to the Lion's lip; but ultimately has been swallowed by that very rapacious and religiously inclined quadruped.

At the present time this book is interesting, giving in full detail the social habits, customs, sayings, and doings of the Court of Lucknow, where Mussur-u-deen was "protected" as King of Oude. The work is very pleasantly written, having all the piquancy which well cultivated English audacity gives to personality, with an unintentional political ripple, which, of course, the author did not mean to introduce. He would merely say, however, "that Oude is one of the most miserably-governed countries under Heaven"—and that "it would be a blessing (British blessing) to its numerous inhabitants, were the Indian government to do for it what has been so well done for the Punjab!"

Done for the Punjab! La Allah hu! Desiring to appropriate the territories on the Bombay side of the Sutlej, they instigated the Sikhs to what the Earl of Ripon had the Oude-dacity to call an "unprovoked invasion of the British territory"—to put down which they concentrated some fifty-two thousand soldiers, under Sir Henry Hardinge, on the frontier, which were gallantly met and fought by the Sikhs, under Mewa Singh, Goolab Singh, and the Dhera Sahib. Dreadful was the carnage on both sides; the Sikhs lost their cannon; and with the acquisition of the Punjab the English arms lost its prestige, which even a Parliamentary vote of thanks could not restore.

Oude, as well as the Punjab, has been done for, but on somewhat more "peaceful and moral," and truly religious principles.

TOLERATION.

The Day Star of American Freedom; or the birth and early growth of Toleration in the province of Maryland, &c., &c. By George Lynn-Lachlan Davis, of the bar of Baltimore: C. Scribner, New-York: Murphy, Baltimore.

"Nothing dies so hard, and rallies so often as intolerance," says Sydney Smith.

This is peculiarly and strangely illustrated in the early history of the Colonies; and while its effects—in scattering the population outside the boundaries where intolerance "in the name of God" made a hell for freedom of opinion, and in forcing into being and activity new communities, which were the basis of new States,—may, in this day afford some consolation to the philosophic mind; in so much, that the means taken, defeated the end sought; still, reviewing the past, one cannot well comprehend, cannot well excuse the malignity, sacrilegious zeal and relentless rigor which characterized the early settlers of New-England.

Providence, it would seem, marked those men out as the indirect means of laying the foundation of a mighty commonwealth, which would remain the direct monument at once of their misfortunes, and of their own intolerance when they had escaped that of others.

Never did such a creed of nationality as that of the American republic spring from the tenets of so narrow-minded a group of men as settled on the eastern seaboard of the continent. Every one of them looked at Heaven with one eye shut, or beheld the Creator, as it were, through an inverted telescope. Yet, with all their blinking at Providence, and their understanding brotherly love no further than an agreement in identical modes of worship, they had other qualities in common which ultimately tended to the common good.

They had a wilfulness and a doggedness of action, that at times gives a greater strength than justness; an enthusiasm that kept the fires of their separated communities burning brightly; and a stubborn persistence that carved the barren soil into submission—that tamed it into productiveness, and flecked it with smiling farms and hot hearths, by the light of which the angel of Destiny might have deciphered a red struggle without parallel, and a history without compeer.

"Industrious husbandmen, rigid moralists, and bigotted theologians," as Sanderson (Introduction to Lives of Signers") truly calls them; their history is not more startlingly inconsistent with the past than it is significant at present and for the future.

The ordeal of intolerance through which they passed did not purify them. The Freedom of Opinion for which they had sacrificed every hope in Europe, and overcame every feeling of patriotism, family and fortune in leaving it—which flung them to the wild ravings of the wintry ocean to escape the more condensed virulence that bowed them on the land—those impulses that gave dignity and grandeur to their exile, had no lesson for them as Colonists, no inspiration for them as Christians.

Flying from religious persecution, they adopted its worst attributes with a sanctimonious blood-thirstiness equal to Oliver Cromwell, and a vindictiveness worthy of James the Second. As persecution in the first instance led to the colonization of Massachusetts, so the persecution of the Colonists induced the settlement of Connecticut, Rhode Island, New-Hampshire, and added to the strength of Maryland.

At the first remarkable flood of Emigration in 1630, when some fifteen hundred persons sailed for Massachusetts, and laid the foundation of Boston, Charlestown Dorchester, Roxbury and other towns, the emigrants held their first general Court on board the ship "Arabella," at Charlestown, and passed a law which was the germ from which much inhuman persecution and intolerance first sprung. The law declared that none should be admitted as freemen, or entitled to any share in the government of the colony, or even enjoy the right of jurymen, excepting those who were received members of the Church; by which measure, says the only authority at hand,* "every person whose mind was not of a peculiar structure, or accidentally impressed with peculiar ideas, was at once cast out of society, and stripped of his civic rights."

As horticulturists cut the chief stem of a tree that the branches may spread, so this law prevented the upward growth of Massachusetts, and sent much vigorous sap and life into the surrounding settlements. Soon that eloquent, turbulent and eccentric man, Roger Williams, who had "the bump of combativeness largely developed, and was ever ready to enter into disputation,"† came under the religious ban, and was banished from Salem. Followed by many of his adherents, he founded Providence. Some two years subsequent, Coddington, a wealthy merchant, and seventy-six others, who favored the opinions of Ann Hutchinson, and held "eighty erroneous opinions," were banished, and, having purchased the island of Aquetneck of the Indians, named it Rhode Island, and with Williams' community laid the foundation of the State. Yet the persecution which exiled both Williams and Coddington, gave them no lesson in brotherly love. The first, in turn persecuted the Quakers, and the second abused the first as "a mere weathercock, constant only in inconsistancy—the author of a lying and scandalous book; a poor man that doth not know what should become of his soul, if this night it should be taken from him."‡

These men received a charter from Charles the First, which was confirmed by his successor, and by which it was guaranteed that —"None were ever to be molested for any difference of opinion in religious matters;" yet, in the first assembly held under the charter, Roman Catholics were denied the right of voting, and excluded from every office. A century had rolled over, and still Cotton Mather had reason to say that "Rhode Island was occupied by Antinomians, Anabaptists, Quakers, Ranters, and every thing else but Roman Catholics and christians, and if any man has lost his religion he may find it in this general muster of opinions—in this Gawzzim of New-England, this receptacle of the convicts of Jerusalem, and the outcasts of the land." The Rev. Mr. Peterson, who is not very choice himself betimes, draws attention to this "intolerant and abusive language from a professed believ er in Christ," but adds that the age in which it was written is apology for the writer.

In like manner Connecticut owes its origin as a State to the expulsion of Hooker, who, accompanied by some one hundred people, toiled through untracked swamps, and tangled forests, to the banks of the Connecticut river, and founded Hartford, Springfield, and other places. It would seem however that suffering but hardened their souls, as well as their bodies. Their laws became notoriously odious, and in their treatment of the Quakers, they were but little less relentless than their pious brethren of Massachusetts. For the fourth breach of the law made against him the offending Quaker was imprisoned, kept to hard labor, and his tongue bored with a red-hot iron.

New-Hampshire, though planted by companies of merchants from London, Bristol, Exeter, Plymouth and other English towns, for the establishment of fisheries, would have proved an utter failure, but that the vigor of Massachusetts piety hunted out Wheelwright, a preacher of note, who founded the town of Exeter. Still the settlement was weak and under the control of the parent colony; but in the beginning of the eighteenth century it received wholesome increase, by the addition of over one hundred families from the north of Ireland. "These industrious people," says Grimshaw, "introduced the manufacture of linen, and excited much curiosity by their spinning wheels; as the species which they brought over, being set in motion by the foot, was a novelty amongst the colonists. They also taught the cultivation of the potato; a vegetable well-known to have been carried to Ireland from Mexico, about the middle of the sixteenth century."

Even after the alliance had been formed between the New-England colonies, (excepting Rhode Island, it being opposed by Massachusetts as utterly godless and heretical,) for mutual defence against the Indians and Dutch of New-York, the political brotherhood that circumstances forced upon them, in no ways tended to impart a fraternal warmth to their "religious" feelings. The opposition which drove the Quakers from England, met them on the shores of America; notwithstanding that the Colonies had from their government, offered an asylum—"hospitality and succor to all Christian strangers flying from wars, famine, or the tyranny of persecution." Thus, religious despotism hanged men from the flagstaff of liberty, and done people to death in the name of the living God.

As the New-England colonies hanged and tortured all who were not Puritans, Virginia, under the plea of creating a uniformity of religion, harassed every one not belonging to the Church of England; and this so continued, with more or less variation, until 1776, when Jefferson introduced to the Virginia Legislature his Bill for the Revision of the Laws of that State, by which he established religious freedom there; and, in the words of the code, declared that "coercion is a departure from the plan of the Holy Author of our religion."*

Mr. Davis's work naturally suggested the historical reminiscences and references which we have outlined. To appreciate his labors, these facts should be within our view; and to pass opinion on the truthfulness of his conclusions, one must be at least somewhat familiar with the relative position of Maryland to the other States.

Founded in 1634, it also owed its origin to the illiberal policy of Britain; but the principles of the founders were totally different from those of Massachusetts. The first expedition to Maryland consisted of about two hundred Roman Catholics. "The charter was a compact between a member of the English, and a disciple of the Roman Church; between an Anglo-Catholic king, and a Roman Catholic prince; between Charles the First of England, and Cecilius, the second Baron of Baltimore, and the first Lord Proprietary of Maryland. To the confessors of each faith it was the pledge of religious freedom;" and well and truthfully was the compact executed by Cecilius. Freedom to Protestant and Catholic was not only allowed, but exacted.

"A freedom, however, of a wider sort springs forth at the birth of the colony—not demanded by that instrument, but permitted by it—not graven upon the tables of stone, or written upon the pages of the statute-book—but conceived in the very bosom of the proprietary, and of the original Pilgrims—not a formal or constructive, but a living freedom—a freedom of the most practical sort. It is the freedom, which it remained for them, and for them alone, either to grant or to deny—a freedom embracing within its range, and protecting under its banner, all those who were in Jesus Christ. And the grant of this freedom is that which has placed the proprietary among the first law-reformers of the world, and Maryland in advance of every State upon the continent."

Their own sufferings but taught the Maryland colonists to revere the sacred privileges which their exile presented, and they were even so tenacious of guarding the feelings of those who differed from them, that a "contumelious expression against o ther denominations was expressly forbidden by the laws." It is interesting to know, that while they were hanging those who differed with them in Massachusetts, the records of Maryland show that, even under the administration of the first Governor, no single case of persecution occurred in the colony. The policy of Leonard Calvert "included the humblest as well as the most exalted; and his maxim was, 'Peace to all—proscription to none;' religious liberty was a vital part of the earliest common-law of the province."

The Puritan, hunted from Virginia the Dutchman from the banks of the Delaware, the Quaker and Free-Thinker from Massachusetts and Connecticut, found refuge in Maryland; which, in a word, then became to the American colonies, what the Republic has since become to the world.

Any faults of Mr. Davis's style are more than overbalanced by the intrinsic value of his researches, and their compression into this comprehensive volume.

* Vide Grimshaw's Hist. of America, &c., a very useful compendium. Also, Am. Quarterly Review, 1835.

† Hist. of Rhode Island. Peterson. We notice that this author quotes whole paragraphs from Grimshaw without giving any more credit than "a judicious writer says," &c.

‡ Letter from Coddington to George Fox, the Quaker, quoted in Hist. of Rhode Island.

* "It met with opposition; but, with some mutilations in the preamble, it was finally passed; and a singular proposition proved that its protection of opinions was meant to be universal. Where the preamble declares, that coercion is a departure from the plan of the holy author of our religion, an amendment was proposed, by inserting the words 'Jesus Christ;' so that it should read, 'A departure from the plan of Jesus Christ, the holy author of our religion; the insertion was rejected by a great majority, in proof that they meant to comprehend within the mantle of its protection, the Jew and the Gentile, the Christian and Mahommetan, the Hindoo, and infidel of every denomination."—Life of Jefferson.

United States Democratic Review (May,) contains several articles of interest, of which the chiefest in interest are Great Britain and the United States; Our Ocean Marine; the continuation of a paper on William Wordsworth, and some dozen pages made up from Lieut. Brewerton's stirring "War in Kansas." In the poetic line, Mr. Cone's "Be up and Doing," and Mr. Rosenberg's "Doubts," are commendable, which didactic poems seldom are. We take a "brick" from each. From the first this:—

Are you rich? forget your money,
And for something nobler strive;
Storing up a sweeter honey
In the busy human hive.

* * * *

Craftsman's son and homeless stranger
Love Incarnate had to be,
From his cradle in the manger
To his death upon the tree!

And from the second this:—

Never ask what others think:
Wouldst thou buffet with the wave?
Only trust in self can save;
Doubt to swim is lead to sink.

Wouldst thou lift thee to the sky?
Never look how others rise;
Borrowed craft is never wise;
Bold of wing is strength to fly.

The Scalpel is quite as keen and brilliant as the name indicates. There is a heartiness about Dr. Dixon's writings thoroughly refreshing; and even an unprofessional who dips into his pages, must recur to them again. They shake one up. The work is printed by Mr. J. C. Watters, 47 Ann st., and is a fine specimen of typography—quite as clean as a scalpel ought to be. Sherman & Co., Astor House.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Public Documents from	Hon. J. Kelly, M. C.
The Bunsby Papers, (second series,) Irish Echoes. By John Brougham.	Derby & Jackson.
The Lady's Guide to perfect Gentility, &c. By Emily Thornwell.	"
The Sparrow-Grass Papers. By Frederic S. Cozzens.	" "
Memoirs of Henry the Eighth of England; with the fortunes, fates, and characters of his six wives. By Henry W. Herbert.	Miller, Orton & Mulligan.
Memoirs of the Court and Reign of Catherine the Second, with a brief survey of the Romanoff dynasty. By Saml. M. Smucker, A.M.	"
Brougham's Dramatic Works, Vol. 1, with Memoir by Dr. Shelton Mackenzie.	S. French.
National Democratic Review, April: Washington.	Buell.
Philly and Kit, or Life and Raiment. By Caroline Chesebro: author of "Isa," a "Pilgrimage," &c.	Redfield.
The Ballads of Ireland: collected and edited by Edward Hayes. 2 Vols. Boston.	Donahoe.
United States Democratic Review. May.	Lloyd & Campbell.
History of Europe from the Fall of Napoleon to the accession of Louis Napoleon. By Sir Archibald Alison, Bart.	Harper & Brothers.
Select Orations of M. T. Cicero. Translated by C. D. Yonge.	"
Vagabond Life in Mexico. By Gabriel Ferry.	"
Treatise on Arithmetic, Theoretical and Practical. By Elias Loomis, L.L.D.	"
Public Documents from	Hon. S. A. Douglas.
The Scalpel. Edited by E. H. Dixon, M. D.	Sherman & Co.

Literary and Artistic News.

The Presse, the journal of Emile de Girardin, publishes, says the Tribune, by way of advertisement, a statement of its circulation in each year of its existence. In 1836, six months after it was started, it reached a sale of 9,331, and in 1837 attained the figure of 13,200. The next year, in a struggle with the coalition which united Thiers, Guizot, Berryer, and Ledru Rollin, it came near receiving its death-blow; its circulation fell to 2,300. Still, under the ban of this coalition, it rose, in 1839, to 9,550, and from that time steadily increased to 16,895 in 1844. The enlargement of the sheet, the next year, raised its circulation to 22,971. There was an increase of nearly 3,000 the next year, and the popularity of its opposition to Guizot, the year after, gave it 7,000 more. But it was not till after the Revolution of February, with its abolition of the stamp tax, and the great increase in the circulation of all the journals which followed, that the Presse reached its maximum; its number of subscribers and purchasers then rose from 32,300 in 1847 to 63,869. In 1849, when Cavaignac suppressed it for a time, it declined again to 34,779; and in 1850 it fell to 31,479. The coup d'état reduced it in 1851 to 21,236, and in 1852 to less than 19,000. The revival of commercial prosperity in France raised it, in 1853, to 22,782, and the excitement consequent on the war in the East and the Paris Exhibition increased it in 1854 to 34,775. During that year the whole paper was daily set up five times, and printed in two hours on five four-cylinder presses. During the year 1855 its circulation was 42,646, and the whole number of sheets printed was 15,352,498, on which a duty of 1,226,805fr. was paid.

In announcing the publication (in England) of some hitherto unprinted letters of Macklin, the famous actor and author, the Daily Times takes occasion to awaken some reminiscences of Quick, another actor, to whom the letters were addressed. He it was, be it remembered, who first clothed Macbeth in the Highland costume; for the chief, until then, had been played by Garrick in a full-dress military uniform and the wig. Quick was a little, lively sprat man, the original of Tony Lumpkin, Isaac Mendoza, and Beau Mordecai, in "Love a-la-Mode," Macklin's successful comedy. He was a great favorite of that old pighead, George III., who used to open his great German mouth and bellow when he came on the stage. He was full of gibe and merriment. On one occasion he played Richard the Third before the King, for his benefit, and though he performed it with rare excellence, the audience would insist on laughing at every line, as is the case often with another great actor on our own boards. Quick, with the best tragic intentions, thought it best to give them their way, and humor them; so when he came to the scene, by way of putting a finishing stroke to the fun, he extemporized, "And if you can't get a horse, bring a jackass!"

"A horse, a horse, my kingdom for a horse,"

The Lord Lieutenant and suite lately visited the office of the Brehon Law Commissioners in Trinity College, Dublin. From Dr. Graves, Dr. O'Donovan, and Mr. Curry, he received all information as to the contents of the laws and the language in which they are written. Seventeen volumes of the transcripts, made from the manuscripts in the libraries of Trinity College, the Royal Irish Academy, the British Museum, and the Bodleian Library, Oxford, were submitted for inspection. These manuscripts have been multiplied by the application of the anastatic process of printing, so as to produce a considerable number of fac simile copies, available in the process of preparing the work for the press. A copious glossary of difficult works has been collected, occupying three large quarto volumes, and a complete index made of all the headings of paragraphs for the purpose of collation.

Mr. James Doyle—formerly of the Nation (we believe), and at present editor of the Kilkenny Journal, is about to collect the poetry of Young Ireland, in the Celtic Union series. It will be a worthy contribution to the literature of the time, embracing, as it must, the most vigorous and vivid effusions of many poets not included in the "Spirit of the Nation"—the writings of Speranza, Mary Eva, Martin MacDermott, John Savage, Joseph Brenan, in the Irishman of '49, &c. Besides, it must collect for the future generation some of the best words of the olden bards —Mangan, Williams, De Jean, F. Davis (the Belfast man), McCarthy, Barry, Duffy, and others, who filled with a lyric bounty the years from '43 to the scattering of the confederates.

Ticknor & Fields, Boston, have in press an edition of Browning's Poems, more full than any yet published, but not complete. —"Sordello" and some other of his least satisfactory productions being omitted. By the way, Browning recently remarked to a friend that "Sordello" was an experiment on his part—every alternate line of the poem as written being omitted from the printed book! The experiment, he gravely added, did not prove successful—many readers finding the work incomprehensible. Quite likely! says the Tribune.

The London Athenæum quotes, from a letter written at Florence, a very favorable notice of a picture just sold to Mr. Alfred Skerry, of London, by Mr. Gowld, an American artist. The subject is a Turkish girl who has just quitted the bath, and we are told, first, that "the artist has travelled much in the East, and his Turkish girl is really Turkish, and not Parisian," and next, that the picture (which is about 24 by 18 inches) "might hang on the wall of any drawing-room in England."

McVicker, the comedian, has achieved a great success in Chicago and St. Louis, with Charles Gayler's comedy of "Taking the Chances."

A young lady near Boston, says the Times, not quite sixteen years of age, being under the influence of the Spirit of Bethoven, is engaged in writing an opera. It is further declared that she has never been instructed in music. Being under age, of course all the music will be in a minor key, and in spite of the assertion that the fair composer never took any lessons upon a musical instrument, we nevertheless think that she must be a pretty good performer on the lyre.

Joseph Muller, the celebrated Orientalist, is about to make a scientific journey to Spain, at the private expense of the King of Bavaria. His principal object will be to examine the collection of Arab manuscripts in the Escurial, which was commenced under Philip II.

Macaulay received over $60,000 for the first two volumes of his "History of England." For the third and fourth, thus far, $80,000 more, making the snug little sum of $200,000 for the five volumes up to the present time.

We see by an advertisement, that Mr. Lewis, Lithographic Artist, of Buffalo, has just completed a portrait of John Mitchel. It is large, on superior paper, and said to be an admirable likeness.

MILITARY CORRESPONDENCE.

SECOND REGIMENT, N. Y. S. M.

We attended a battalion drill of the Second Regiment, Col. Bogert, on Wednesday evening, the 7th inst., at the City Arsenal. It was conducted by the Colonel in person, Captain Darrow acting as Adjutant, in the absence of Adjutant Clarke, confined to his house by sickness, and consisted of some battalion movements and the manual of arms. The muster was slim, which we were informed it was owing to a want of due notice; several companies whose muster-rolls are respectable, turning out in comparatively skeleton proportions. The drill itself was of average merit; the movements, especially the battalion movements, wanting the ease and uniformity conferred by practice. The manual was better. Col. Bogert seemed to handle his regiment with facility, and under more favorable circumstances would have done better. The breaking into column by companies, marching by the flank and in column, were the chief movements executed.

We were glad to learn from Quarter-master Moore, that the prospects of the regiment are brightening. The regiment consists at present of the following companies:—Washington Continentals, Captain Darrow; Caledonian Fusileers, Lieut. Maguffie; City Grenadiers, Captain Irwin; State Grenadiers, Lieut. Regan; Highland Guard, Captain Manson; Swiss Rifles, Captain Robert; Columbian Rifles, Captain Weinburger; Lafayette Rifles, Capt. Simon.

The "bill of dress" of these companies is strangely diversified, each selecting and adhering to the uniform typical, apparently, of national tastes and feelings. Thus, of the two Scotch companies, one rejoices in the "kilt," the other still retains the "bonnet;" and so with the other companies. This diversity gives quite a fanciful appearance to the regiment on a parade; but is attended with what we would suppose to be, at least, a countervailing disadvantage—the difficulty it must present to the due equalization of companies. Lieu't-Col. Robinson and Major McIlveen are officers whose promotion to the posts they respectively hold, has been evidently "the reward of merit."

KINGS COUNTY MILITIA.

From a peep at a leaf in the Colonel's book, we learn that the Seventieth Regiment, Col. Graham, will make their first parade for the season on the 12th of June next. This regiment is composed of cavalry and artillery, and the display of guns on the occasion will be greater, as we are informed, than ever before made by any single regiment in the State. There will be a sham fight. The route is to be through the Eastern District, and the scene of action to be determined by the officers resident in that quarter. Hogan's artillery (the Napper Tandy,) is attached to this command; as are also Taafe's Lancers.

AUGUSTA, GEO., MAY 6, 1855.

To the Editor of the Irish News:

Availing myself of the special privilege which you so generously extend to military officers, I beg the use of your columns for a few brief remarks, concerning the "Irish Volunteers" of Augusta. This company was organized about five years ago under favorable auspices, which continue up to the present time. In numerical strength we cannot compare with other cities having a larger Irish population. It at present consists of 35 effective men, all of whom are proud to carry the arms of their adopted country, and would be equally proud to use them effectually against her enemies, within or without, if need be.

One of the most pleasing incidents since its organization was the presentation of a beautiful Flag, on 3d November last to the corps by an accomplished young lady of this city, who delivered on the occasion an eloquent address. The flag is greatly admired, as much for its happy conception of style as for its beautiful execution. It is about two yards square of double green silk; on one side are the arms of the State of Georgia, painted by Mr. Sharp, a talented artist of this city. On the other side is the Harp of Erin, surmounted by the American Eagle and an array of Stars, worked in rich gold bullion, and underneath, in a scroll, is the legend—"Erin-go-Bragh." The flag is trimmed with costly gold tassellings, and an embellished pike surmounts the staff. St. Patrick's Day is the anniversary of the corps, which is usually celebrated by a target excursion.

The City Council in its benevolence has appropriated the sum of $200 annually towards the defraying the contingent expenses of the corps, in common with the different volunteer companies of the city, which, to us all, is a very desirable boon.

The officers are, Edward J. Walker, captain, deservedly respected and esteemed by the members. He is a son of South Carolina, of distinguished abilities as a lawyer, and a fearless Democrat in politics. The first lieutenant is Thomas Whyte of the North of Ireland, and one of the Young Ireland School. The second lieutenant is Nicholas Daly, an efficient soldier and a worthy Irishman, from Wexford. The third lieutenant is Thomas Phibbs, from Sligo.

Contemplating some modification in the present uniform worn by the company, I withhold any further remarks until such change is complete.

Very sincerely, THOMAS WHYTE.

U. S. Army Intelligence.

(From our Washington Correspondent.)

The following assignments of officers are directed by the Secretary of War, viz.:—

COMMISSARY DEPARTMENT:

Brevet-Col., J. P. Taylor, to duty at St. Louis, Mo.
Brevet-Major, G. G. Waggaman, to duty at Baltimore, Md.
Captain A. E. Shiras, to duty at San Antonio, Texas.
Captain W. B. Blair, to be relieved, and await further orders.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT:

Ass't-Surgeon, R. H. Coolidge, to be relieved; his new station to be designated hereafter.

PAY DEPARTMENT:

Major T. J. Leslie, to duty in the city of Washington.
Major St. Clair Denny, to duty at St. Louis, Mo.
Major David Hunter, to duty at Fort Leavenworth.
Major H. Hill, to duty in the city of New-York.
Major F. A. Cunningham, to duty, Department of Texas.
Major J. R. Hagner, to be relieved, and wait further orders.
Major Henry Prince, to duty, Department of Texas.

CORPS OF ENGINEERS:

Brevet-Major J. Saunders, to New-Orleans, La.
Brevet-Major P. G. T. Beauregard, to duty at Fort Delaware.
Lieut. William P. Trowbridge, to duty in Louisiana and Texas.
Lieut. W. H. Stevens, to duty on Coast Surveys.

CORPS OF TOPOGRAPHICAL ENGINEERS:

Lieu't-Col. J. Kearney, to duty on the Surveys.
Captain A. A. Humphreys, to duty as a member in the Light House Board, Washington.
Captain S. N. Macomb to duty, Department of New-Mexico.
Captain J. H. Simpson, to duty on Coast Survey.
Captain W. R. Palmer, to duty, Department of Texas.
Captain G. Thom, to duty on the military road now in construction in Minnesota Territory.
Brevet-Capt. G. Meade, to duty on the Surveys of the Lakes.
Lieut. J. W. Abert, to duty, Department of Florida.
Brevet-Capt. A. L. H. Hardcastle, to duty at Louisville, Ky.
Lieut. G. H. Derby, to duty on Coast Surveys.
Lieut. J. G. Parke, to duty on Pacific R. R. Surveys.

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT:

Major John Symington, to duty at Alleghany Arsenal.
Capt. C. P. Stone, to duty at Alleghany Arsenal.

RESIGNATIONS:

Brevet-Capt. Hardcastle, Top. Eng'rs.
2nd Lieut. Jones, 1st Cavalry.

City News.

The subscribers of the Corn Exchange held a meeting at their rooms on the 8th, to take measures for the relief of the sufferers at the Cape Verde Islands. Mr. John L. Buckley was chosen President; N. J. Hibbard and Joseph Ketchum Vice-Presidents, and Theodore Perry, Secretary, Suitable resolutions were passed and the following committee of twenty-five appointed to receive contributions, &c.:—Thomas Dunham, William H. Newman, Stephen Valentine, Isaac T. Frost, Francis McDonald, James Doherty, Samuel Nimmons (of Thos. Richardson & Co.), N. H. Wolfe, H. W. Smith (of Jesse Hoyt & Co.), J. M. Fiske, Lewis Roberts, Thomas Rigney, George Wotherspoon, John O. Woodruff, Edward Hincken, Smith J. Eastman (of Brush & Co.), John W. Lewis, William Mangam, George W. Edwards, Peter Rice, Isaac H. Reed, P. P. Rodocanachi, David Dows, Cornelius Grinnell, Herman Stutzer.

William S. Rowland, Esq., who, for about three years past, has boarded at No. 39 Ninth street, committed suicide on the 5th, in his room, by shooting himself through the head with a pistol, causing almost instant death. He was a single man, supposed to be in affluent circumstances, and as far as known had no pecuniary embarrassments to contend with. The deceased was a brother to the Rev. Mr. Rowland, a divine of this city. He was 37 years of age and a native of Connecticut.

A new line of stages is proposed to run from Coenties slip up South street to Gouverneur; through Gouverneur, Madison and Goerick streets to Third street; through Third street and Avenue D to Greenpoint ferry. It is intended to run fourteen stages. The subject is before a committee of the Board of Aldermen.

The Water Committee of the Brooklyn Common Council have reported in favor of the Nassau Water Works Company introducing water into the City of Brooklyn, and in favor of taking $1,300,000 of the stock. This Company propose to furnish twenty millions of gallons a-day, and the whole cost not to exceed $4,200,000, and to be completed within three years.

The Stockholders of the Accessory Transit Company met on the 5th, and elected a President and Board of Directors as follows: President—Cornelius Vanderbilt; Directors—Peleg Hall, Joseph L. White, Frank Work, Chauncey St. John, W. Whiteright, Jr., Richard Schell.

The Board of Councilmen on the 7th inst., raised the salary of Mayor Wood to $6,000. At the same time, the salary of Comptroller Flagg, and of Mr. Taylor, Street Commissioner, were raised to $5,000 each, and the salary of the Deputy Commissioner to $2500.

Joseph R. Male, editor of El Nicaraguense, who was arrested here last fall, on a charge of vioalting the neutrality laws as related to Nicaragua, but permitted to depart on account of ill health, died recently, it is said, at the scene of his labors.

The skeleton of a man was dug up, in President, near Clinton street, Brooklyn, on Friday, while some workmen were engaged in digging a cellar. It is perfect in all its parts.

Dr. Cheeseman, after 36 years faithful service in the New-York Hospital, has resigned his situation as surgeon to that institution.

MARRIAGES.

At Queenstown, John Roche, of Cork, to Mary Anne, daughter of Jeremiah Scully, Queenstown.
At Kinsale, Michael Fleming, merchant, to Mary Anne, daughter of Captain Jeremiah M'Carty, Harbor View, Kinsale.
At Limerick, August Mollard, late of France, to Ellen Lahiff, daughter of the late James Lahiff.
At St. Anne's church, Dublin, Denis M'Carthy, to Charlotte, daughter of Wm. Harvey, of Queenstown.
At St. Andoen's church, Thomas William Higgins, barrister-at-law, New-York, to Isabella, second daughter of Samuel Wade, Ussher's Island, and niece of the late Gen. Collins.
At Fiddown, Wm. Murray Drummond, late 89th Regt., to Eliza Thomasina, daughter of Wm. Briscoe, of Garneragh, Kilkenny.
At Kilteevan, J. J. Blake, Sub-Inspector of Constabulary, to Ellen, daughter of the late Charles O'Connor, of Cloontuskert, Galway.
At St. Peter's, Pimlico, John Pitt Kennedy, Roughnish House, Tyrone, and Manchester street, London, to Augusta Lewis, daughter of Robt. George Smith, Pimlico.
April 17, in St. Thomas's church, William L. Victor, Esq., fourth son of the late John George Victor, Esq., of Belfast, to Helena, third daughter of the late Robert Usher, Esq., of Rock Abbey, Cashel, county Tipperary.
At Dublin, Wm. Liddell, of Manchester, to Jane Maria, daughter of the late Francis Reynolds, of Sackville street.
In St. Mary's church, Dublin, Wm. H. James, Assistant-Surgeon of the Bengal Army, to Sarah Frances, daughter of the late Wm. West, M. D.
At St. Peter's church, Dublin, William Gibson, of Merrion square, and Rockforrest, Tipperary, to Charlotte, daughter of John Hare, Dublin, and the Deer Park, Cashel.
At Clondalkin, John Fagan, merchant, Edinburgh, to Maryanne, daughter of Thomas Seery, Sallypark, Clondalkin.
At Monkstown church, Chaworth J. Ferguson, only son of Joseph Ferguson, of Prospect, Westmeath, to Mary, daughter of the Rev. T. Smyth, of Vesey place, Monkstown.
At Johnstown Castle, the Right Hon. Sir Thomas Esmonde, Bart., of Ballynastragh, county Wexford, to Sophia Maria, widow of Hamilton Knox Grogan Morgan.
At Moneymore, George Vesey Stewart, son of Mervyn Stewart, of Martray House, to Margaret Torrens, daughter of John Rowley Miller, of Moneymore.
At Portnashangan church, Edward Wm. Ring, late of Belmont avenue, to Esther Christiana Doyle, of Charleville.
At Sligo. John Burns, grocer and spirit merchant, to Catherine, daughter of Denis O'Connor, of Corsella, and niece to Charles O'Connor, of Roadstown House, Sligo.

DEATHS.

At Castleview, Cork, Margaret, wife of Richard W. Long, aged 89.
At Blackrock, Margaret, wife of Cornelius Curtin.
On board H. M. S. Nerbudda, supposed to have been lost off the Cape of Good Hope, aged 18, Burdett H. Browne, son of John Denis Browne, of Mount Browne, Mayo (formerly M. P. for that county.)
At Waterford, at the patriarchal age of 90, Daniel Hogan, architect, a worthy and respected citizen, a considerate and kind employer.
On the 15th ult., Denis Keeffe. J. P., of Dungarvan and Mountain Castle, aged 65 years.
At Tramore, Mrs. Hayes, aged 70 years, relict of the late Thomas Hayes.
At Newtown, near Waterford, Mrs. Randal Penrose.
At 30 Eccles street, Dublin, Francis Pilsworth, aged 77.
At 40 Lower Baggot street, Dublin, Mr. Davis, aged 74.
At 6 Wellington street, Dublin, the wife of M. G. Harrington, and daughter of the late John Alexander, of Maryville House.
At Hollyfort, county Wexford, Sophia, wife of the Rev. Mathew W. Palliser.
At Glen House, Cardonagh, Michael Doherty, aged 78 years.
At Mahonstown, county Meath, aged 76, Jane, last surviving daufihter of of the late Caleb Barnes.
Aged 80 years, Eleanor, relict of Richard Senior, of Balrinrally, Queen's county.
At Lisbon, Pierce, son of Thomas Griffith, of Ballyporeen, Tipperary.
At London, aged 88 years, Anne, widow of John Boyle, of Belfast.
At 14 Queen street, Dublin, Margaret, wife of Michael Donohoe.
At Naas, in his 68th year, Patrick Farrell.
At Finner, county Rosoommon, aged 63 years, Mrs. Mary Barrett, mother of Rev. Mr. Barrett, R. C. C., Croghan.

Special Notices.

KELLER'S EMPIRE HALL,

NO. 596 BROADWAY, TWO DOORS ABOVE THE METROPOLITAN HOTEL.—TRIUMPH OF ART!—THE THIRD SERIES OF THE

GRAND TABLEAUX AND MUSICAL SOIREES,

For which, in addition to the already approved and attractive programme, will be added the talent of the celebrated vocalist,

MADAME LOVARNY,

And the popular GERMANIA QUARTETTE CLUB.

MONDAY, TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY EVENINGS, May 12, 13, and 14, 1856.

The following diversified and brilliant order of performances will be given

MONDAY, TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY EVENINGS.

PART I.

First Tableau—Time and Poetry.....by Keller
Quartette—Land of Light (Spohr).....Quartette Club
Solo—Trumpet.....Mr. Weiss
Second Tableaux—Diana and Acteon.....Mad. Keller
Solo—celebrated Lute Song, from "Anna Boleyn,".....Bellini
Madame Lovarny, (her first appearance in two years.)
Third Tableau—Famine (by desire).....L. Keller
Quartette—Sleep My Dear Maiden (Kucken).....Quartette Club
Fourth Tableau—Shower of Gold.....L. Keller

Intermission of ten minutes.

PART II.

First Tableau—Banks of Amazons.....L. Keller
Ballad—The Merry Swiss Girl, composed expressly by Lindley, for Madame Lovarny's voice, and sung by her with rapturous applause at Jullien's concerts in London and the United States.
Second Tableau—"Olympia"—The Banquet of the Gods.....L. Keller
Quartette—Schneiderlied, or Tailor's Song.....Storch
By the Quartette club.
Third Tableau—Faith, Hope and Charity.....Mme. Keller
Scotch Ballad—Comin' thro' the Rye.....Mme. Lovarny
Quartette—The Hunter's Song.....Quartette club
Last Tableau—Washington crossing the Delaware, (from the great national picture by Leutze.)

Doors open at 7½ o'clock. Commence at 8 o'clock. Private Boxes, $5. Single seats to Private Boxes, $1. my17 1t

The Best Hair Dye.—DR. O. M. BALLARD'S new article received the highest premium at the World's Fair and American Institute, where it was examined by the distinguished Chemists, Dr. Chilton, and Prof. John Torrey, and pronounced the best. For sale by the best Druggists. Principal office and store, 498 Broadway, New-York. my17 3m

MAPS OF NICARAGUA,

(From the Latest Surveys,)

NORTH and Central America, containing distances, population, Transit Company's route through Nicaragua, description of the country, and effects of thirty year's civil war, &c., vessels in the United States navy, portraits of Walker, Kinney, and French. Size of the map, 26x32 inches. Price 25 cents. Improved second edition. Agents wanted.

my17 2t J. Haven, 115 and 117 Nassau street, up stairs.

THE GREATEST WONDER OF THE AGE!

A REMEDY WHICH CURES IN FIVE MINUTES.—M. LEROUX'S FRENCH CHOLERA COGNAC BITTERS.—This wonderful and scientific compound is recommended by the most eminent and learned physicians of all Europe and America, and enjoys the best reputation of anything similar ever offered. It is without doubt the best, most efficient and generally acknowledged remedy against Cholera, dysentery, diarrhœa, and complaints of the stomach in general. The numerous patients who have tried it according to directions, have invariably found relief in a very short time, and the best proof of it is, that since this standard remedy was introducee in the armies of the allies in the Crimea, the mortality of the soldiers from Cholera and similar diseases was reduced by over 75 per cent.; in consideration of which, the inventor was presented by the French and English governments with a gold medal, bearing the inscription, "Hail! M. LEROUX, the great Chemist and inventor, by whose knowledge our armies are preserved from Cholera."

This invaluable preparation is also a remedy for biliousness, indigestion, weakness, and general derangement of the stomach. Upon being taken, it creates appetite, and prevents the heaviness attendant upon eating, by persons who are dyspeptic.

In this city, also, this remedy has been tried with the most undoubted success, and the undersigned can produce the best testimonials of our most celebrated physicians, as to its immediate and complete success, which he will be happy at any time to show to any that may wish to see them. S. STEINFELD, sole agent for the United States, No. 70 Nassau street, corner of John.

P. S.—Those not having money to pay, may call at my place from 8 to 5 P. M. and receive this remedy gratis. my17 3m

☞ Post Office Notice.—The MAILS FOR EUROPE, per British Mail steamer PERSIA, close at this office on WEDNESDAY, the 14th day of May, at 10½ o'clock, A. M. Isaac V. Fowler, Postmaster.

Post-Office Notice.—THE MAILS FOR CALIFORNIA, per steamer GEORGE LAW, will close at this office on TUESDAY, May 20th, at 10 o'clock, P. M my17 1t Isaac V. Fowler, Postmaster.

ANNIVERSARIES.

May 4.

American Female Guardian Society.—The twenty-second annual meeting of the American Female Guardian Society was held at the Collegiate Reformed Dutch Church, corner of Twenty-ninth street and Fifth avenue. The edifice was greatly crowded.

From the Treasurer's report, it appears that the income and expenditure of the society, including both the publishing department and Home for the Friendless, amounted to $27,925 77. The present liabilities of the society are $2,500 due upon a lot recently purchased, on which a new and much-needed building is in process of erection connected with the Home for the Friendless.

From the press have been issued an average of 23,000 copies of the Advocate and Guardian, semi-monthly, of 184,000 folio pages; 5,000 Annual Reports; 1,000 copies of Letters to a Young Christian; present issue of the Advocate, semi-monthly, 26,000. The number of letters registered, received through this department, is 3,500. The number of new subscribers received since last report, about 3,200. The number of tracts, papers, &c., contributed gratuitously the past year amount to some 300,000 pages.

The number of life members received is 253. Whole number, 2,000. The Home for the Friendless, founded by this society some eight years since, has sheltered, fed and clothed over 6,000 inmates, and sustained an average family of between one and two hundred from year to year, near 2,000 of whom have been friendless and homeless children.

New York Bible Soiety.—The annual sermon before this society was delivered before a large audience at the Dutch Reformed Church, Washington square, by Rev. Dr. Cheever, from the following text: "And he was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood, and his name is called the Word of God." (Rev. 19th chap., 13th verse.)

The Bible has just been translated into 260 languages and dialects, and is ready to be presented to 600,000,000 of the inhabitants of the earth. Only 190,000,000 have as yet received it. It has, therefore much yet to do.

Presbyterian Church—Board of Foreign Missions.—The nineteenth anniversary of the above-named society was held at the Rev. Dr. Potts' Church, University place. The audience was not large.

The receipts from all sources (including a balance of last year of $87 07, and also an unexpended balance from the sales of the Omaha reservation of $8,282,)	$201,933 61
Expenditure	201,908 75
Leaving a balance of	$24 86

The advance in the receipts of the treasury, from all sources, over those of the last year, has been something more than $10,000, the greater part of which is from the ordinary contributions of the Church, and which is regarded by the Board as an encouraging feature in the missionary work.

The publications of the Board have been the same as those of the previous year.

Eighteen missionaries (five of whom have been in this country on a visit), and thirty male and female assistant missionaries, making forty-eight in all, have been sent out during the year. This is a much larger number of missionary laborers than has ever been sent out in any previous year.

There are nine missionaries among the various Indian tribes of our own country, connected with which there are thirteen principal stations and out-stations, twelve ordained missionaries, sixty assistant missionaries, ten churches, three hundred and twenty-three church members, ten schools, and more than five hundred pupils in the various stages of their education.

There are two missions in Western Africa, one in Liberia, and the other on the Island of Corsica. There are two missions in India, three of them having been consolidated in one during the year. In Siam there is one mission at Bongkork, connected with which there are three ordained missionaries, three female assistant missionaries, one Chinese assistant, and one boarding-school, numbering twenty-eight pupils. There are three missions in China: at Canton, Ningpo, and Shanghai. The mission to the Chinese in California is still continued under the care of Rev. Wm. Speer, whose labors have been of great service to the Chinese in various ways.

There are two missions under the care of the Board in South America, one at Buenos Ayres and the other at Bogota, in New Granada. The one at Buenos Ayres has been of two years' continuance; the other has but just commenced. Funds have been remitted to the Evangelical missionary societies of Belgium, Paris, Geneva, and the Waldenses Synod, to the amount of $6,000.

Two missionaries are laboring in this city for the benefit of the Jews; and though no very marked results have as yet attended their labors, they report from time to time encouraging facts in connection with their labors.

May 5.

American Seamen's Friend Society.—The Twenty-eighth Anniversary of this Society was celebrated at the Broadway Tabernacle, P. Peritt, Esq., President, in the chair. The Rev. H. Loomis, one of the Secretaries, then read an abstract of the annual report, which is as follows:—In the year 1830 the tonnage of American vessels was 1,191,776 tons; the number of seamen and watermen under the American flag, including those in the navy, a little over ninety thousand. In 1855, only 25 years afterward, the tonnage had increased to 5,212,000 tons, and the number of seamen to nearly four hundred thousand, not having more than quadrupled in one-fourth of a century. In 1814 the tonnage of the British Commercial Marine was 2,616,965 tons, employing 172,786 men and boys. In 1854, forty years afterward, the tonnage had increased to 5,043,270, and her seamen, including the 63,000 in her navy, to nearly 400,000, both having doubled in less than half a century. The commerce, tonnage and seamen of the world have much more than doubled during the last forty years. Every thing indicates a more rapid increase in the future. This century shall not end, ere the 150,000 vessels of the civilized world shall have become 300,000, with swifter wings and stronger power to do the biddings of commerce; and their fifteen million of tonnage shall have become thirty million, and their million and a half of seamen shall have become three million; a number of men larger than this whole nation three-quarters of a century since—larger than the whole Anglo-Saxon race two centuries ago. A nation dwelling on the sea, drawn from every other, uniting every other, diffusing its life, and spirit, and energy, through every other; yet peculiar to itself, a unit in itself, separate from all the rest, dwelling alone on the sea. The Foreign Chaplaincies of the Societies are, in New-Granada—Aspinwall and Panama; in the Sandwich Islands—Honolulu and Lahaina; in Peru—Callao and the Chincha Islands; in Chili—Valparaiso; in China—Canton; in France—Havre and Marseilles; in Sweden—Gottland; in Denmark—Copenhagen; in New-Brunswick—St. Johns. The Society also sustains the Bethel in Mobile Bay, and the Sailors' Home in New-York, and aids the Bethel in Portland, Maine, and the Mariner's Church in New-York. In the Seamen's Saving Bank, in New-York, seamen alone have deposited nearly one-third of a million of dollars the past year. Over two and a half millions in that Bank belong to seamen.

Sailors' Home.—The number of boarders during the year ending May 1, was 3,300, who deposited in the Bank about $12,000, and carried away or sent to friends about $60,000. The number of boarders during the last 14 years, 47,156.

Finances.—The receipts of the Society have been $22,283.43. Expenditures during the year, $21,648.73. This amount does not include the receipts and expenditures of auxiliaries, and local societies on our seaboard and on our Western waters. The whole would amount to nearly $100,000.

The New-York Institution for the Blind.—The anniversary exhibition of the New-York Institution for the Blind, was held in the Tabernacle. The annual report says that it is now more than a quarter of a century since this Institution was founded. Beginning with three blind children, who had lost their sight by opthalmia in the Alms House, it now numbers 163 pupils and is daily increasing in usefulness. The instructors of the school are now, with one exception, blind graduates of the institution. The institution has raised $7,000, which, together with the same amount from the Legislature, has relieved them from the embarrassment caused mainly by the debt incurred in the manufacturing department. During the past year the institution has been blessed with remarkable good health; there has not been a death for the last eighteen months. The amount received during the year from various sources, is $61,045, leaving a balance in the Treasury of $6,645.80, but the outstanding debts are more than enough to absorb this.

May 6.

Colonization Society.—The twenty-fourth anniversary of the New-York State Colonization Society was held at the Dutch Reformed Church, Lafayette place. Anson G. Phelps, Esq., presided. The Treasurer's Report, and also the Annual Report, were read. The report states that information obtained by the Rev. J. B. Pinney, on a visit to Liberia, showed that while the condition of the Republic was insufficiently favorable to encourage the Society to perseverance, yet some improvement was necessary in the care of emigrants, both on their passage and after arrival. As to the funds, the season was one of general pecuniary pressure, but individual generosity has compensated for the loss in general collections, so that the year compares favorably with other years in the general result. There has been a decrease, compared with 1855, of $2,780 in legacies, but an increase in donations and from agencies. There has been an increase of over $3,000 in the permanent school fund, being a portion of the legacy of Mr. Bloomfield, of Rome, N. Y. The legacy left by Mr. Howland, of $10,000, for the emancipation of slaves, has been deposited in one of the Trust Companies to the credit of the American Colonization Society, but the New-York Society to be consulted before any of the fund can be used. The American Colonization Society has been enabled to get its funds into better order than in the beginning of 1855. The applications for emigration, if all accepted, would require at least $50,000, to which the erection of the necessary buildings and acclimating, for experiment, some emigrants on the mountains, will require $100,000. That Society is about sending a large company of emigrants from the South to Liberia. The slave trade, although chiefly suppressed along the West coast of Africa, is still carried on from several points. From the vicinity of Lagos it is reported that about 2,000 or 3,000 were exported in 1855. The report recommends the employment of small steamers instead of sailing vessels, for its suppression.

The New-York Sunday School Union celebrated their Anniversary yesterday afternoon. The different schools assembled in the following churches:—Broadway Tabernacle; Baptist church, Oliver street; Central Presbyterian church, Broome street; Seventh Presbyterian church, corner of Broome and Ridge streets; Baptist Tabernacle, Second avenue; Dr. Adams' church, Madison Square; Thirteenth-street Presbyterian church; Dr. Hutton's church, University place; Reformed Dutch church, corner Twenty-first-street and Fifth avenue; Forty-second-street Presbyterian church. There were altogether about 120 scholars, averaging 12 to each church. The average number of attendants of each school being estimated at 150, which is quite low, would make the number of children participating in the celebration, about 17,000. The fortieth annual report briefly reviews the course of the Society, and expresses gratitude that out of the 120,000 children, estimated to be in the city, nearly one-half have attended the Sabbath schools, and one-third are on the register. 4,444 families have been visited in search of pupils, and 4,663 children have been thus induced to attend. Yet, besides the children who attend other schools there are full 60,000 children in the city not having the benefits of this system of christian education. The whole number of schools of the Union is 200. The whole number of different scholars during the year was 56,044. The whole number now on register, is 38,152. The number of superintendents is 244. Male teachers, 1,970; female teachers, 2,110. The number of colored pupils is 644. The increase of scholars over last year was 5,132. The whole number of volumes in school libraries is 78,328. The amount of the contributions for various benevolent objects, was $9,899. The report closed with a brief, though feeling allusion to the death of Messrs. Brinsmade, McKeen, and Purser.

A General Anti-Slavery Meeting was held at the Shiloh church in Prince st. The house was quite filled, the audience being composed about equally of white and colored persons. Lemuel Tappan presided, and the meeting was addressed by Henry Highland, Mr. Lamor, Wm. Welles Bonner, and Hon. Mr. Goodall. The speakers were much interrupted by Mr. Joseph Howland, who advocated the cause of the American Anti-Slavery Society, which, on account of the disunion principles of its members, did not seem to be in the favor of the meeting.

May 7.

American and Foreign Bible Society.—Held in the Baptist Church, Oliver street, Rev. B. T. Welsh, D.D., in the chair. The Treasurer, read an abstract of his report, by which it appeared that the receipts from all sources for the past year amounted to $105,618 10; disbursements, $108,409 56, exceeding the receipts by $1,791 46.

American Home Missionary Society.—This society is thirty years old, and is brisk and prosperous. It celebrated at the Tabernacle. It has received during the last year $193,548; payments have amounted to $186,611, and there are $9,551 due to missionaries; with a balance in the Treasury of $23,942, received chiefly in legacies towards the close of 1855. The receipts exceeded those of 1854 by $13,000. There are 986 laborers in active service; 10 missionaries have preached to colored congregations, and the pupils in Sunday Schools count up to 60,000. There have been added to the missionary churches 2,502 persons, and 50 new churches have been organized within the year, and 48 houses of worship were completed.

The Five Points' House of Industry.—The meeting of the children and patrons of the Five Points' House of Industry (Mr. Pease's) took place at the Tabernacle. The building was filled, chiefly with ladies, not more than one hundred gentlemen being present. The children, to the number of 260, were seated in the organ gallery.

Archibald Russell, the President, read the second annual report of the Trustees.

In relation to the new building recently erected, the report states that the exact cost of the structure cannot now be stated, but it will not vary much from $25,000, in addition to the cost of ground, which was $11,000. $17,031 09 has already been paid on the building. The trustees have made arrangements to borrow on mortgage $16,000, which leaves about $3,000 to be provided for immediately.

The whole number of inmates the past year has been 1,005, accounted for as follows:

Remaining March 1, 1855	242	Sent to situations	628
Since received, men	77	Returned to their friends	119
Women	371	Sent to other institutions	43
Children	315	Expelled	50
		Left voluntarily	50
		Remaining March 1, 1856	115
Total.	1,005	Total	1,005

From the Treasurer's report we glean the following facts:

Cash on hand March 1, 1855	$3,201 89	Payments: Rent	$2,696 00
Work	1,801 37	Furniture	224 23
Board	2,092 86	Provisions	7,459 21
Donations for current expenses	12,917 74	Work	1,008 98
Donations for building	14,085 80	Clothing	1,126 91
		Incidental, travelling, transportation, medicines, funerals, &c.	824 68
		Superintendent and assistants	1,814 95
		Out-door poor	477 70
		Building	17,031 09
		Balance	1,435 41
Total	$34,099 16	Total	$34,099 16

The Alumni of Union Theological Seminary met in the chapel of that building. The meeting was largely attended. Representatives from the different graduated classes made statements of their personal affairs. After the election of officers for the ensuing year, the meeting adjourned until Wednesday of the Anniversary week in 1857.

The Third Anniversary of the American Congregational Union was celebrated in the Church of the Puritans, Union square. The audience, which was mostly composed of ladies, was, says the Times report, very meagre.

American Anti-Slavery Society.—The first meeting of the Twenty-second Anniversary Session of the American Anti-Slavery Society took place in the City Assembly-Rooms which were crowded to excess. Afternoon Session was held at 3 P. M., and the Evening Session at 7½. The speakers were—Messrs. Garrison, Redmond, Mrs. Lucy Stone Blackwell, Theodore Parker, C. C. Burleigh, Hawell, Mrs. Lucretia Mott, S. P. Andrews.

American Tract Society—Receipts of the Past Year.—Notwithstanding the hostilities that have obstructed the operations of the Society during the past year, it appears that the voluntary donations made for the year ending April 1, 1856, exceed those of any previous year, by $2,401 60.

Donations from Branches and Auxiliaries	$17,595 90
Donations to constitute Life Directors	6,000 91
Donations to constitute Life Members	22,080 11
Donations from Churches and Individuals	86,336 99
Donations in Legacies	26,421 17
Total amount of Donations	$158,435 08

The receipts from sales of publications the past year amount to $257,171 51, of which $50,128 75 were from sales of the American and German Messenger and Child's Paper, $149,102 from sales of publications by agents and colporteurs, and $57,940 53 from sales by booksellers, missionaries, and individuals. The total receipts of the Society for the year were $415,606 59.

May 8.

American Bible Society.—The Fourteenth Anniversary of the American Bible Society was held at the Broadway Tabernacle. The President, Hon. Theodore Frelinghuysen, in the chair. The Treasurer's Report was read by Henry Fisher, Esq., Assistant Treasurer. The managers' report was also read. Of life directors, 105 have been made during the year, and of life members, 1,678. The receipts of the year amount to $393,167 25, being an increase of $46,355 68 over the former year. Of this amount $161,060 48 are gratuitous, and $232,106 77 from sale of bibles and testaments. The number of volumes issued is 668,225—since the organization of the society 11,321,912. Many more than formerly of the larger and better bound books have been issued.

Grants of Money.—The embarrassments of the former year have not admitted as many foreign grants as the Board desired to make. To publish the scriptures in France $1,000 have been paid; for the same purpose at Constantinople about $4,000; for Syria, $500; for Oroomiah $2,500; Northern India, $2,000; for Germany $1,000.

At a meeting of the Commissioners of Emigration held on the 7th, Mr. Kennedy made the following quarterly report:—

Months,	Vessels,	Bond Pas.	Not Bond.	Means.	Per Head.
Jan.	7	1,015	42	$38,126 19	31.10
Feb.	20	2,082	164	97,343 11	39.77
March	45	5,279	433	247,917 86	43.40
April	34	6,652	381	509,134 81	72.39
Total,	106	15,028	1,020	$892,552 27	55.61

During the first week in May, 17 ships and 5,803 passengers.

From this table it will be seen that the emigration is steadily increasing, and that a better class are landing.

The debt of the Commissioners has decreased slightly. It is now $89,629 28.

Special Notices.

A CIRCULAR.

TO those engaged in Mercantile pursuits, any invention that will facilitate their labors is highly worthy of notice as well as extensive patronage. One of the most important inventions of the present age is that of a pen which possesses the necessary qualities of fineness in mark and durability in use. Those of John Foley, manufacturer Gold Pens and Pencils, 167 Broadway, New-York, stand pre-eminent. Their superior value is tested by the long time he has been engaged in our city in their manufacture.

We, the subscribers who know the value of these pens, from long use of them, cheerfully recommend them to those who wish for the most convenient article in the counting room. Signed by the following and many other parties:

Geo. S. Coe, Vice-President American Exchange Bank.
B. Murray, Assistant Cashier do. do. do.
J. Seymour, Cashier Bank of North America.
F. A. Platt, Cashier Corn Exchange Bank.
B. T. Hoogland, Cashier National Bank.
W. T. Hooker, President Continental Bank.
James McCall, President Metropolitan Bank.
H. Meigs, Jr., Cashier do do.
J. C. Beach, Cashier Marine Bank.
G. R. Conover, Cashier Importers' and Traders' Bank.
R. H. Lowery, Cashier Bank of the Republic.
W. B. Meeker, Assistant Cashier Bank of New-York.
T. D. Meiggs, Teller Bank of America.
Charles Windsor, Teller Mereantile Bank.
D. Randall, do. do. do.
J. M. Crane, Teller Shoe and Leather Bank.
J. E. Southwick, President Atlantic Bank.
George D. Arthur, Cashier do. do.
P. S. Henderson, Cashier Brooklyn Bank.
Constant W. Brown, Merchants' Bank.
Joseph W. Corlies, President St. Nicholas Bank.
George Ellis, Cashier Bank of the Commonwealth.
R. A. Tooker, Cashier Nassau Bank.
Samuel B. White, Cashier Grocers' Bank.
Edwin Ludlow, Cashier Ohio Life Insurance and Trust Co.
H. W. Cheeseman, Teller Market Bank.
Samuel H. Kissam, Teller Bank of Commerce.
William F. Brown, do. do. do.
S. K. Raymond, Teller Mechanics' Bank.
George D. Lyman, Manager New-York Clearing House.
Charles Dennis, Vice-President Atlantic Mutual Insurance Co.
A. B. Neilson, President Sun Mutual Insurance Co.
Elwood Walter, President Mercantile Mutual Insurance Co.
E. Russell Hinckley, President Atlas Mutual Insurance Co.
Daniel Drake Smith, President Commercial Mutual Insurance Co.
John P. Paulison, Vice-President Astor Mutual Insurance Co.
J. F. Cox, Vice-President Great Western Insurance Co.
William Le Coney, Vice-President Pacific Mutual Insurance Co.
William K. Ackerman, Secretary Illinois Central Railroad Co.
Wm. Bement, Treasurer New-York and New-Haven Railroad Co.
E. B. Litchfield, Treasurer Cleveland and Toledo Railroad Co.
R. B. Turner, Register do. do. do.
J. M. Hopkins, Sec'y. Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana R. R. Co.
G. H. Ford, Dep. Treas. do. do. do.
J. F. Davenport, Treasurer Hudson River Railroad Co.
Edward Thompson, Agent Long Island Railroad Co.
James Rowe, Cashier New-York Herald.
A. Gordon, Bookkeeper New-York Herald.
Henry L. Meech, Cashier Daily Times.
Richard B. Connelly, County Clerk.
T. M. Wigham, of Jacob Little & Co.
J. H. Stebbins, of N. R. Cobb & Co.
Jesse Payne, of Wells, Fargo & Co.

Winslow, Lanter & Co.	E. W. Tiers & Co.
R. W. Clarke, Dodge & Co.	Brown & De Rosset.
Carpenter & Vermilye.	Coolidge & Young.
Meigs and Greenleaf.	Shepard & Nelson.
H. T. Morgan & Co.	Spies, Christ & Jay.
Condit, Jenkins & Co.	H. M. Schieffelin & Fowler.
Quick L'Hommedieu.	Fairchild & Fanshawe.
Atwood & Co.	Beale, Melick & De Witt.
G. S. Robbins & Co.	Carhart, Bacon, Clark & Co.
T. Ketcham & Co.	Brewer & Caldwell.
Drake & Bradford.	American Express Co.
E. S. Munro & Co.	Hall, Dana & Co.
Wetmore & Robert.	Gage, Sloans & Dater.
Stevens, Wallace & Morris.	Afwater, Knapp & Woodruff.
Wells, Butterfield & Co.	Richards & McHarg.
S. B. Chittenden & Co.	Johnson & Higgins.
W. Carpenter, Ide & Co.	James & Henry McBride.
C. E. & W. J. Babcock.	Moody and Telfair.
Sheldon, Hoyt & Co.	L. Roberts & Co.
Bird & Neilson.	Waldo, Barey & Co.
Barclay & Livingston.	Jewell, Harrison & Co.

These Pens vary in size and price, viz., $1, $1 25, $2, $3 and $4 each, with complete silver extension cases, new style pencil, &c., attached are $2, $2 50, $3, $3 50, and $4 each. The undersigned is manufacturer of the celebrated "John Foley's bank pen," price $3 and $4 for the large size, including holder. All pens of my manufacture are made of fine gold, finished in the best manner; points warranted not to come off, and guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction; if not, will exchange them or return the money. Any of the above pens will be sent by mail on receipt of the price. Pens and cases made to order for trade, on the most advantageous terms.

JOHN FOLEY, Gold Pen Manufacturer,
1mo 167 Broadway, New-York.

GREENWOOD LAKE HOTEL,

Orange Co., (near Chester,) State of New-York.

THE proprietor of the Parquette Saloon, under the Broadway Theatre, respectfully informs the public that he has leased the above fashionable watering place which has been carried on for years by Col. Felter, and trusts from the manner in which he has treated his city friends to the best the market could afford, to merit the continuance of their favors during the Summer months. The Hotel has all the advantages necessary for a summer residence—a copious lake furnishing sport for gentlemen addicted to piscatorial pursuits; carriages suitable for invalids; woods and shady groves for lovers—in fact, everything conducing to pleasure and health during the warm days now approaching. The Hotel is easy of access, Stages meeting each train of the New-York and Erie Railroad at Chester.

All applications for Rooms, to be addressed to
my3 8m George Mellon, 326 Broadway, N. Y.

Gentlemen's Hats in Quarterly Patterns.—The established excellence and style of our peculiar fabric for Gentlemen's wear, renders it needful for us only to announce the quarterly issue for March, 1856. LEARY & CO., Leaders and Introducers of Fashions for Gents. Hats, Astor House, Broadway. my10t2

STATEN ISLAND

FANCY DYING ESTABLISHMENT.

OFFICE No. 3 John street, (two doors from Broadway,) New-York, solicit orders for dying Broadcloths, Merinoes, Paramattas, De Laines, and Silk, Woolen, and fancy goods of every description; Satin and Taffeta Ribbons, Gimps, Fringes, Galloons, and other trimmings dy and re-finished with great success.

Also ladies and ge ents, Shawls, &c., &c.
BARRETT, NEW & CO.,
3mos st., (2 doors from adway,) N. Y.

DRY GOODS AND EMBROIDERIES.

H. MAGEE, has removed to 140 Atlantic street, Brooklyn, where he has opened a large stock of SPRING AND SUMMER GOODS, which he will sell at very low prices. my3 1m

Lumber and Timber for Export and City Trade.—THOS. RIGNEY & Co. offer for sale AT THEIR YARD FOOT OF THIRTIETH-STREET, North River, a general assortment of LUMBER AND TIMBER, suitable for export and the city trade. SHIPPERS AND BUILDERS will find it to their advantage to examine their stock previous to buying. Apply as above, or to J. PICKARD, Agent, 26 Bridge street. my17

EMPLOYMENT OFFICE for Servants, 129 Waverley Place, two doors from Sixth avenue, New-York.—A large number of competent help can be suited with good situations, in city and country, without delay. Employers in the city and country supplied with the best of female help. [my17 3m] WM. O'BRIEN, Proprietor.

KNOX'S
OFFICE FURNITURE WAREROOMS,

59 BEEKMAN STREET, UP STAIRS.

DESKS! DESKS!! DESKS!!!

DOUBLE and Single counting-room DESKS, from 3 to 8 feet long. Office Desks from 3 to 6 ft., of Mahogany, blackwalnut and oak; cases for Books and pigeon-holes. Office chairs, cushions, lounges and Office Tables of every description. my17 tf

Special Notices.

Edwin A. Brooks, wholesale and retail Boot and Shoe Store, Nos. 575 Broadway, and 150 Fulton street, New-York. Constantly on hand French Calf Skin and Patent Leather Boots, Shoes and Gaiters, made with Dick's Patent Elastic Shanks, and Congress Gaiter Boots; also a large assortment of Ladies' and Children's Gaiters and Shoes, Waterproof and Cork Sole Boots, Perpetual Gloss and Leather Over Shoes.

Boy's and Youth's Boots, Shoes and Over Shoes. my3 3m

"TERRA COTTA"
CHIMNEY TOPS,

PLAIN and Ornamental. Drain Pipes of all sizes, superior manufacture, lowest rates. LONG ISLAND POTTERY. Depot, 82 Nassau street, New-York. my10 3m

HERRING'S
PATENT CHAMPION FIRE AND BURGLAR PROOF SAFES.

THE great interest manifested by the public to procure more perfect security from Fire for valuable papers, such as BONDS, MORTGAGES, DEEDS, NOTES, and BOOKS OF ACCOUNT than the ordinary SAFES heretofore in use had afforded, induced the subscribers to devote a large portion of time and attention during the past fourteen years in making improvements and discoveries for this object, and they now beg leave to assure their numerous friends and the public generally that their efforts have been crowned with complete success, and now offer the "IMPROVED HERRING'S PATENT WORLD'S FAIR PREMIUM FIRE-PROOF SAFE," as the

CHAMPION SAFE OF THE WORLD!

Having been awarded Medals at both the

World's Fair, London, 1851, and in New-York, 1853,

As superior to all others. It is now undoubtedly entitled to that appellation, and, secured with HALL'S PATENT POWDER-PROOF LOCKS, which also was awarded MEDALS as above), forms the most perfect Fire and Burglar Proof Safes ever offered to the public.

The subscribers also manufacture all kinds of Boiler and Chilled Iron Bank Chests and Vaults, Vault Doors, and Money Boxes or Chests, for Brokers, Jewelers, and Private Families, for Plate, Diamonds, and other Valuables, and are also Patentees (by purchase) and Manufacturers of

JONES' PATENT PERMUTATION BANK LOCK.

SILAS C. HERRING & CO., Patentees,
GREEN BLOCK, Nos. 135, 137 and 138 Water street, New-York. my10 tf

Medical.

THE GREAT RUSSIAN REMEDY.

Pro Bono Publico.

"EVERY MOTHER SHOULD HAVE A BOX IN THE HOUSE HANDY IN CASE OF ACCIDENTS TO THE CHILDREN."

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE. It is a Boston remedy of thirty years' standing, and is recommended by physicians. It is a sure and speedy cure for Burns, Piles, Boils, Corns, Felons, Chilblains, and old Sores of every kind.

For Fever Sores, Ulcers, Itch, Scald Head, Nettle Rash, Bunions, Sore Nipples, (recommended by nurses); Whitlows, Sties, Festers, Flea Bites, Spider Stings, Frozen Limbs, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Sore and Cracked Lips, Sore Nose, Warts and Flesh Wounds, it is a most valuable remedy and cure, which can be testified to by thousands who have used it in the city of Boston and vicinity for the last thirty years.

In no instance will this Salve do an injury, or interfere with a physician's prescriptions. It is made from the purest materials, from a recipe brought from Russia, of articles growing in that country, and the proprietors have letters from all classes, clergymen, physicians, sea captains, nurses, and others who have used it themselves and recommend it to others.

REDDING'S RUSSIAN SALVE is put in large tin boxes, stamped on the cover with the picture of a horse and a disabled soldier, which picture is also engraved on the wrapper. PRICE, 25 Cents a Box. Sold at all the stores in town or country, or may be ordered of any wholesale druggist.

ap19tf Redding & Co., Proprietors, No. 8 State st., Boston.

Dr. J. J. McGowan, Physician and Surgeon, Graduate of Harvard University, Fellow of the Massachusetts and Rhode Island Medical Societies, etc., has removed to No. 69 Canal street, New-York, a few doors from Broadway, where he will attend to calls in every branch of the medical profession. Dr. McG. will devote particular attention to chronic diseases, and those of women and children. m10 1t

A Retired Clergyman, restored to health in a few days, after many years of great nervous suffering, is anxious to make known the means of cure. Will send (free) the prescriptions used. Direct to
Rev. JOHN M. DAGNALL,
my10 3m No. 59 Fulton street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

THE EYE AND EAR!

DR. BIRGE, invites the attention of the afflicted to his practice in treating the Eye and Ear. He has cured more than five hundred persons who were pronounced incurable by other Occulists. He has also restored to sight seventeen persons born blind, and he pledges himself to cure every case that may be presented. That no one need be imposed upon, he warrants a cure in every case.

AMAUROSIS.—This obstinate disease he treats with astonishing success.

CATARACT.—This delicate and important operation, I warrant sight in every case.

ARTIFICIAL EYES inserted perfectly to imitate the Natural Eye.

DEAFNESS.—My treatment for this difficulty I offer as the most successful that has ever been in practice. I have restored to their hearing a large number who had been perfectly deaf more than twenty years.

Letters of inquiry for advice will be promptly attended to. Office 430 Broadway, New-York City. ap26 3m

All eye-diseases cured by Dr. C. W. Upham, Oculist, Successor to Dr. Roehrig, 334 Fourth street, near Broadway. No cupping, bleeding, or salivating. Cataract cured in many cases without operating. Office hours from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M. References given. Persons residing in any part of the country, can be treated by correspondence. my17 4t

"Eye and Ear."—DOCTOR HENDERSON, Oculist and Aurist, 419 Broadway, corner of Canal street, treats all diseases of the eye and ear, without cupping, leeching, blistering or the use of calomel. Within the past two years upwards of thirty cases of blindness from inflamation have been restored to sight, to whom reference can be given, (hundreds of which can be seen in my circular,) by inclosing three postage stamps. Electro-chemical Medicated Vapor and Sulphur, hot and cold water BATHS. Office hours 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Sundays and evenings by appointment. 419 Broadway, corner of Canal st., New-York. my17 3m

IMPROVED ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

DR. J. ALLEN, (late Professor in the Ohio College of Dental Surgery,) invites attention to his improved method of constructing Artificial Dentistry, which combine the following advantages:

1st,—There are no seams or crevices for the lodgement of food, to vitiate the saliva, or infect the breath. The interstices are all filled with a silicious compound, which is so applied as to form an artificial gum; this is fused at a high heat, which unites the Teeth firmly to each other, and to the plate upon which tney are set, thus imparting great strength and lifelike appearance to the denture.

2d,—The Teeth for this style of work are made perfectly natural in form and shade, and when properly set with the artificial gum as above, exhibits that harmony with the other features which characterize the natural organs.

3d,—The original form and expression of the mouth and face can be restored. This is done by having the denture so constructed as to bring out the sunken portions and sustain them in their proper position; this is an important feature in this style of work, to which the author devotes special attention.

4th,—A clear and distinct articulation of speech is restored. This is effected by having the inside of the teeth, and artificial gum, of a natural form, to which the tongue is readily adapted; this prevents the hissing or muffled sounds so often observed in speaking or singing, in persons wearing artificial teeth.

The Rooms are at No. 30 BOND STREET, New-York. A Pamphlet containing more full particulars, sent free, to those who desire it. ap26 3m

H. G. LUTHER,
SURGICAL AND MECHANICAL DENTIST,

No. 698 BROADWAY, Second House above Fourth st.

HAVING enjoyed an extensive practice during the last twelve years, feels confident of his ability to give perfect satisfaction to all who may honor him with their preference. He is prepared to perform all operations connected with his profession, in the most faithful manner, and in strict accordance with scientific principles, embracing all the recent improvements of the day.

References of the most respectable character given if desired. Patronage respectfully solicited.

☞ N. B. Teeth extracted without pain. my17 3m

Special Notices.

PROSPECTUS.

THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC REVIEW is now firmly established in Washington City. Every great question before the present Congress will be elaborately discussed in its columns.

Such subscribers to the "Western Democratic Review," as have overpaid, will be furnished with the "National Democratic Review," which, it is believed, will prove a work of vastly superior merit.

A considerable portion of each number of the REVIEW will be devoted to Literary and Scientific subjects. Several, among the most accomplished scholars and distinguished politicians in the country, will be regular contributors to its columns.

In answer to numerous inquiries of old and new friends, we deem it proper to say, THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC REVIEW will be printed and published at Washington City; is totally unconnected with any political Magazine in the country; is devoted, not to the support of any politician, but to the interests of the National Democracy—that democracy which will ever "carry the flag and keep step to the music of the Union."

The REVIEW is published in pamphlet form, upon beautiful white paper, in solid long primer, 96 pages per month—making two volumes per year, of 576 pages each.

TERMS.—$3 per year, payable invariably in advance.

INDUCEMENTS TO CLUBS.—Five copies for one year—$10; twelve copies for one year—$20. Booksellers ordering the work, will be furnished at the usual magazine rates.

Members of Congress, and postmaters in every part of the Union, are hereby authorized to receive and receipt for subscriptions to the REVIEW.

All moneys may be transmitted by mail at the risk of the editor.

Copies of the REVIEW will be found for sale at the Bookstore of Franck Taylor, 402 Pennsylvania Avenue, and at the office of publication 468 10th street, between D and E.

All communications to be addressed to
GEO. P. BUELL,
Editor National Democratic Review.

Catholic Society for the Promotion of Agricultural Settlements.—Office No. 3 Chamber street, (over East River Bank. Open from 9 to 4.

3t J. G. MOYLAN, Sec., pro tem.

Emigrant Intelligence Office and Labor Exchange, No. 2 Canal street, corner of Centre street, New-York.—The office is established by the Commissioners of Emigration, where can always be found large numbers of LABORERS and SERVANTS, at very low rates of wages; and persons can have their orders filled by writing to the Superintendent, and sending the amount necessary to pay the passage of the parties required. No fees charged to employers.

JAMES P. FAGAN, Superintendent.

REMOVAL.

McConville & Murphy, Importers of Wide Silks Shawls, Vestings, and Linen Goods, have REMOVED to No. 36 LIBERTY STREET, where all orders will be punctually attended to. tf

To Military Companies and Civic Societies.

OLD MONTGOMERY HALL, 76 Prince Street.—The Subscriber, having taken a lease of the above well known popular concern, begs to inform the Members of Military Companies and Civic Trades Bodies, and Managers of Balls, that he is ready to treat for the letting of spacious and well-lighted rooms, suited for meetings, &c.

The Bar attached to the Hall is always supplied with the best imported an domestic Liquors, Brandys, Wines, Ales, Irish and Scotch Whiskey, a choicest brands of Havana Cigars. JOHN DOLAN.

TO PRINTERS.

COPPER FACED TYPE.—CORTELYOU'S NEW-YORK TYPE FOUNDRY, and PRINTERS' WAREHOUSE, established in 1823, 29 Spruce street, four doors below William street.

The subscriber is prepared to furnish his well-know nd superior Book and Newspaper Printing Types, in fonts to suit purchasers. Also, German and Ornamental Types, Greek, Hebrew, Ornaments, Music, Brass Rules, &c., manufactured of metals equal to any in this country, and finished in the most accurate manner. He also furnishes Presses, Chases, Composing Sticks, Stands, Cases, Furniture, Ink, &c.

WOOD AND METAL TYPES,

from other Foundries, and every article required in a Printing Office, at the lowest prices, for cash or approved paper. Type, copper-faced by the Newton Company, furnished to order. Old Type received at 9 cents per pound in exchange for new. Estimates for Printing Establishments furnished on application.

☞ Printers of newspapers who will insert this advertisement three times before January 1, 1857, sending me one of the papers, will be paid in printing types, when purchasing four times the amount of the bill.

PETER C. CORTELYOU.

PIANOS, MELODEONS AND MUSIC.

The Cash system adopted!—Prices greatly reduced.

HORACE WATERS,
No. 333 Broadway, N. Y.,

AGENT FOR THE BEST BOSTON AND NEW-YORK INSTRUMENTS.

The largest assortment of

Pianos, Melodeons, Musical Instruments,

AND

MUSICAL MERCHANDISE,

of all kinds, in the United States, Pianos from ten different Manufactories, comprising those of every variety of style, from the plain, neat and subtsantial 6½ octaves, in Walnut or Rosewood Cases, from $150 to $200, to those of the most elegant finish up to $1000. No house in the Union can compete with the above in the number, variety, and celebrity of its instruments, nor in the extremely low prices at which they are sold.

Horace Waters' Modern Improved Pianos,

WITH OR WITHOUT IRON FRAMES.

possessing in their improvements of over-strings and action, a length of scale power, and compass of tone equal to the Grand Piano, united with the beauty and durability of structure of the square Piano. They are justly pronounced by the Press and by the first Musical Masters to be equal to those of any other manufacturer. They are built of the best and most thoroughly seasoned material, and guaranteed to stand the action of every climate.

Each Instrument guaranteed to give satisfaction, or purchase money refunded. Second-hand Pianos at great bargains, constantly in store; price from $30 to $140.

Horace Waters' Melodeons,

SUPERIOR INSTRUMENTS IN TONE, TOUCH AND DURABILITY OF MAKE.

(Tuned the equal temperament.) Melodeons of all other styles and makes. Price, $45, $60, $75, $100, $125, $140; double Reeds, $150; double Reeds and two banks of Keys, $200. Less a liberal discount. Clergymen and Churches, an extra discount.

Martin's Guitars, Brown's Harps, Flutes, Flutinas, Accordeons, Violins, and Musical Instruments,

OF ALL KINDS, AT LOWER PRICES THAN EVER BEFORE OFFERED TO THE PUBLIC.

A large discount to Teachers and Schools. The trade supplied on the most liberal terms.

MUSIC.

One of the largest and best selected catalogues of Music now published, comprising many of the choice and most popular airs of the day, and will be sold at one-third off from the regular prices.

Music sent by mail to all parts of the country, post paid. Particular and personal attention paid to all orders received by mail. Satisfaction guaranteed in every instance. Pianos and Melodeons for rent, and rent allowed on purchase. Pianos and Melodeons for sale on monthly payments. Second-hand Pianos taken in exchange for new. General and select Catalogues and Schedule of prices forwarded to all parts of the country by mail.

☞ Great inducements offered to agents in all parts of the country, to sell the Horace Waters' Pianos, Melodeons, and Catalogue of Music.

PIANOS AND MUSIC.—We learn that Horace Waters, of 333 Broadway, N. Y., agent for the sale of many of the most celebrated makers of Pianos and Melodeons, is offering them at prices which we advise all who desire to purchase to avail themselves of. He is also selling his large and well-known Catalogue of Music at one-third off from the regular prices, and will forward the same free of postage. His offers to the trade, teachers and schools, are of the most favorable character, all of which he will be able to fill to the letter, for having wisely adopted the cash system. The Horace Waters' Pianos are known as among the very best. We are enabled to speak of those instruments with some degree of confidence, from personal knowledge of their exeellent tone and durabl quality.—N. Y. Evangelist. ap19tf

Information is wanted of Henry Murray and Margaret his wife,—before her marriage, Margaret Donegan,—of Ireland, they can hear o something very greatly to their advantage on addressing, (post paid,) ALEXANDER P. GARESCHE, St. Louis, Mo. my10 3t

Information Wanted—Of RICHARD, MICHAEL, and JAMES HEALY, formerly of Mountmellery, county of Waterford, Ireland, by their mother, the Widow HEALY, at E. CONNOLLY'S, 229 West 39th street, N. Y. my17 1t

Wanted.—Good hands to embroider on linen. Apply at GENIN'S Bazaar, (under St. Nicholas Hotel,) 513 Broadway. my17 3m

Business Directory.

RICH CARPETING.

1856. SPRING IMPORTATION. 1856.

ARTHUR DONNELLY,

98 BOWERY, (West side,) BETWEEN GRAND AND HESTER STREETS.

IS now prepared to exhibit his New Spring Styles of

Foreign and Domestic Carpetings,

Comprising every grade and every description, from the Cheapest Fabric to the Richest.

Importing his goods direct and thus saving the commission and interest which most dealers pay, he is enabled to offer them at prices highly favorable to consumers, who will find at his store, among other Carpetings adopted to all varieties of taste, the following elegant descriptions:

Medallions,	at	14s to 18s per yard.
Velvet,	"	10s to 16s "
Tapestry,	"	6s to 12s "
Brussels,	"	7s to 12s "
Three-ply,	"	7s to 10s "
Ingrain,	"	3s to 7s "
Common Ingrain,	"	18d to 3s "

English and American Floor Oil Cloths,

of every imaginable width, pattern and style.

A complete and choice assortment of

STAIR AND HALL CARPETS, RUGS, MATS, MATTINGS,

and of everything else appertaining to the Carpet Trade.

ARTHUR DONNELLY, 98 Bowery, (West side,)
ap193m Between Grand and Hester sts., N. Y.

SMITH, BROTHERS,

[ONE PRICE]

CLOTHING WAREHOUSES,

122 AND 140 FULTON ST., N. Y.

The PRICE is marked on all the goods in

PLAIN FIGURES.

We have now on hand a splendid assortment of Spring and Summer Clothing, together with our new styles of Spring

RAGLANS,

PELISSIERS,

AND CANROBERTS—

OR, SUMMER OVER-COATS.

ap268m SMITH, BROTHERS, 122 AND 140 FULTON ST.

IRISH, ENGLISH, AND SCOTCH LINEN GOODS.

THE subscribers who are exclusive dealers in LINEN GOODS, would invite the attention of housekeepers and others to their complete stock of

Shirting Linens,	Towelings,
Sheeting Linens,	Diapers,
Pillow-case Linens,	Lawns,
Table Linens,	Linen C. Handkerchiefs;

or, Linen goods of any description, which they offer for sale at very low prices.

J. C. Milliken & Co., 748 Broadway,
ap26 above Astor place.

LATEST FASHIONS.

THE New Hat Company would here lay before their readers a few of the advantages to be derived from their system of doing business, which is ONE QUALITY, ONE PRICE, AND NO ABATEMENT. In the first place, any gentleman, whether he be a judge of the article or not, can rely upon receiving our first and only quality. Secondly, our price is so low, that the man of the most limited means is enabled to procure a fine and fashionable hat, (at the same time we wish it to be distinctly understood that our hats are not to be excelled by those sold at four dollars by any other establishment,) and lastly, we strive to please. If any gentleman desiring a hat differing from the usual style, will call and leave his order, we shall endeavor to suit him in every respect. The inducements which we offer to wholesale purchasers, and the trade in general, are not to be exceeded by those of any other establishment.

Also, a large assortment of CLOTH CAPS, CHILDREN'S FANCY HATS, UMBRELLAS, &c., constantly on hand at the lowest rates. Nos. 146 and 148 Nassau st. ap263m

---

LINEN HALL, 332 BOWERY,

EGAN & CO.,

THE proprietors take leave to inform their customers and the public, that they have moved their entire stock of Linen Goods to the above store, where they will from this time forward continue the wholesale together with the retail, of

Linens and Dry Goods,

of all kinds, at the lowest cash price. They are all of their own importation, and in order to make a permanent trade, they will retail them at the importer's prices. Their stock consists of Linen Sheeting, all widths and qualities; Damask Table Cloths, white and brown; Damask Table Linens, Diapers, Hucks, Back Towelings, Napkins, D'Oylies, White and Brown Drills, Checks and Stripes, all warranted pure linen, together with a large lot of

New Silks,

from 4s. to 12s. per yard; Stripes and Plaids, a splendid lot of Black Silks.

There are no damaged or bankrupt's goods included in this list, and they will sell lower than any other house having the same articles. Having a buyer always in Ireland, they are in a position and determined to sell low, and establish their house on the same principle as the "Old Linen Hall," in Dublin. Ladies are respectfully requested to examine the above stock, as affording a large assortment in variety and value. Amongst them will be found a splendid lot of 5-8 Damask and Snowdrop Napkins, from $1 to $1.50 per dozen, tickings and bleached muslins, cheap by the piece.

Striped Poplins,

A large assortment, from 8s. to 3s. 6d. per yard, with all other kinds of Dry Goods, to meet the wants of Spring and Summer purchasers.

ap261m EGAN & CO., Linen Hall, 332 Bowery.

GREEN & SEWELL,

BANKERS,

No. 29 Wall Street, New-York.

DRAFTS on the Belfast Banking Co., available in any part of Ireland, for sale.

REMITTANCES from the interior, promptly forwarded to any address in Ireland, and receipt therefor returned to the sender. General Banking business transacted. my17 6m

---

COAL.

THE subscriber respectfully informs his friends and the public generally, that he has opened a new Coal Yard, cor. 27th Street and 9ih Avenue, where he is prepared to sell the best quality of Red and White Ash Coal, at the lowest market price for cash. Weight warranted, or forfeit coal.

6mos* JOHN MACDONALD.

CHEAP COAL.

I BEG to inform my countrymen and friends and the public in general that I always sell the very best sort of Red and White Ash Coal at the very lowest prices. My object being quick sales and small profits, for cash.

ap193m Richard Clinton, 250 1st Avenue, cor. 15th St.

COAL of the very best quality both Anthracite and Bituminous, for family and manufacturing purposes, for sale by the subscriber from his Yards, 632 Washington, 128 McDougal, and 146 West Thirty-second streets. Also, Coal by the cargo.

ap191y Thomas Maher.

COPARTNERSHIP NOTICE.

THE undersigned have formed a Copartnership, under the name and firm of Foot, Cole & Co., for the transaction of the Paper Commission Business, at 32 Beekman street.

FOOT, COLE & CO.

JOEL W. FOOT,	C. D. HARMAN,
CHAS. COLE,	CARLTON LE SAGE.

Mr. H. C. Goodwin, has no further connection with us. ap19

P. H. McGINN,

FURNISHING UNDERTAKER,

No. 198 WEST 42d STREET,

Adjoining the Church of the Holy Cross, New-York.

INTERMENTS procured in any Burial Ground or Cemetery in the vicinity of New-York or elsewhere. All articles for Funerals, furnished on the most reasonable terms and at the shortest notice.

☞ All Orders promptly attended to, at all hours, day or night. ap198m

---

WRITING INKS.

WE ask the attention of all who wish imperishable records,—a matter of great importance to State, County and Town Offices, Banks, and others, to Dr. Chilton's test of the prominent Inks in use, made with a view to show their different degrees of permanence by exposure. Engraved facsimiles of the test can be seen at our office.

Thaddeus Davids & Co.,

ap196m Manufacturing Stationers, 26 Cliff street.

MEAGHER & CAMPBELL,

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT LAW,

NO. 82 BROADWAY.

NOTARY PUBLIC,

Commissioner for the U. S. Court of Claims.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, having formed a partnership with MALCOLM CAMPBELL, for the general practice of the law, the firm will continue to devote their attention to such law business as may be intrusted to them, including conveyancing, practice in all the courts of the state of New-York and of the United States, and general collecting business in all parts of the world. Particular attention will be given to the prosecution of claims against the United States in the Court of Claims.

Mr. Meagher may be consulted daily, on law business only, at No. 82 Broadway, from three till five o'clock P. M.

B. S. TREANOR,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

15 MASSACHUSETTS BLOCK, COURT SQUARE, BOSTON.

Particular attention paid to Conveyancing, and the examination of titles to Real Estate.

THOS. H. HURLEY,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,

NO. 252 BROADWAY.

WILLIAM E. ROBINSON,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR,

HAVING entered into partnership with ISAAC DAYTON, Esq., (author of the work on Surrogates,) and WILLIAM A. COURSEN, Esq., gentlemen long known, and of high standing at the New-York Bar, has removed to their new office at 267 BROADWAY, third door below Chambers street.

☞ All business either in the Criminal or Civil Courts, promptly and faithfully attended to. ap191y

---

JOHN A. McSORLEY,

CUSTOM HOUSE AND SHIP BROKER, AND NOTARY PUBLIC,

7 BROAD STREET,

Clergymen, importing Vestments, Church Ornaments, &c., will be liberally treated with by calling on the subscriber.

REFERENCES:

Messrs. Thos. McClune & Co.,	Messrs. D. & J. Sadlier & Co.,
C. Meletta,	James Cook & Co. 6m

JAMES HARLIN,

WATCH, CLOCK MAKER, AND JEWELER.

236 HENRY STREET, BROOKLYN.

All watches and clocks bought or repaired at my establishment, warranted for twelve months. *

JOHN KENNEDY'S

STEAM MARBLE WORKS,

35TH STREET, NEAR BROADWAY.

Statuary and Marble Mantle-Pieces, Monuments, Grave Stones, Tombs, &c. All orders thankfully received and punctually attended to. *

M. J. CONNELL,

METROPOITAN BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTER,

NO. 39 BEEKMAN STREET, 1 DOOR EAST OF WILLIAM, NEW-YORK, AND 73 GRAND STREET, WILLIAMSBURGH.

All orders intrusted to me will be promptly attended to, and executed with unparalleled dispatch. tf

---

JAMES CAIN,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

AND

CLOTHIER,

NO. 129 FULTON STREET,

(HERALD BUILDING,) New-York.
my31y

NICHOLAS WALSH.

SEXTON AND UNDERTAKER.

NO. 8 SIXTH AVENUE.

ROBERT IRWIN,

CHEAP BOOT AND SHOE STORE,

my10 156 Chatham street, opposite James' st., New-York. 3m

R. HOGAN,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

UMBRELLA AND PARASOL MANUFACTURER,

374 BOWERY, NEAR FOURTH STREET.

Repairing neatly executed. my17 3m*

SAMUEL YATES,

GENERAL NEWS AGENT,

Foreign and Domestic Newspapers supplied to the Trade.

No. 22 Beekman Street.

WILLIAM M. SMITH,

The Public Favorite, and only American Opposition

BILL POSTER AND DISTRIBUTOR,

THE OLDEST ESTABLISHED IN THE BUSINESS.

Work done promptly and faithfully—cheaper, quicker, and better than any other poster in the city. Work done either in New-York, Brooklyn, Williamsburgh, or Jersey City. Boards lent for concerts, or any kind of work.

OFFICE, 23½ SPRUCE STREET, NEW-YORK,
ap26tf (Between William and Gold streets.)

FASHIONABLE HATTER, 223 THIRD AVENUE.

COWHY'S Spring style of Hats, now ready, are superior to anything hitherto offered in Beauty of Shape, and Elegance of Finish. Being a practical hatter himself, Cowhy is enabled to sell A SUPERIOR HAT AT A VERY MODERATE PRICE.

His young gent's hat is one of great beauty, and his assortment of children's fancy hats and caps cannot be surpassed by any other establishment in the city.

N. B.—Hats and Caps made to order, and warranted to fit, by COWHY, 223 Third Avenue, between 19th and 20th streets. my31y

---

REMOVAL.

THOMAS McLAUGHLIN, Shirt Manufacturer, and dealer in Gentlemen's Furnishing Goods, WHOLESALE AND RETAIL, has removed from his old stand, 292, to 269 Greenwich street, corner of Murray, and invites the attention of buyers generally to his Spring and Summer stock of the above goods. Feeling confident from his long experience in the business and his increased facilities for manufacturing a superior article of Shirts, Bosoms, Collars, Stocks, Ties, &c., to be able to offer for nett cash the cheapest goods to be found in the city. Shirts made to order for the trade or otherwise. We will also receive from auction daily, Under Shirts and Drawers Gloves, Hosiery, Ties, Cravats, &c., worthy the attention of Clothiers, Dry Goods Dealers and others. Our motto is ONE PRICE ONLY. THOMAS McLAUGHLIN, 269 Greenwich street, ap268mos (Corner of Murray street, New-York.)

GEORGE B. COOK,

IMPROVED STEAM CYLINDER AND ADAMS PRESSES,

JENKIN'S BUILDING, Nos. 22 AND 24 FRANKFORT STREET, NEW-YORK. tf

---

MRS. J. McCARTHY,

FASHIONABLE MILLINERY STORE,

44 THIRD AVENUE,

Third door from 10th Street, NEW-YORK.

Cheap Straw Hats, Ribbons, Flowers, Ladies' Straw Goods.

Straw Bonnets cleaned and altered to the newest fashions.

LADIES' OWN MATERIALS MADE UP TO THE LATEST STYLES. tf

MATTHEW WALLACE,

25 CLARK STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.,

WHOLESALE DEALER IN NEWSPAPERS, BOOKS, &c.

☞ "The Irish News," on hand, by the earliest moment, each week. tf

---

McLOUGHLIN, McSHANE, & CO.,

(Successors to THOS. ANDREWS,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN

CHOICE TEAS, COFFEES, WINES, BRANDIES, AND GROCERIES,

61 FULTON STREET, near Cliff street,

M. C. McLOUGHLIN, ANDREW McSHANE, JAMES DOWLING. } NEW-YORK. 3m

---

WILLARD, FELT & CO.,

MANUFACTURERS OF ACCOUNT BOOKS,

AND IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN PAPER AND STATIONERY,

NO. 14 MAIDEN LANE,

3mos (near Broadway.)

JOHN J. STAFF'S.

WINES, LIQUORS, SEGARS,
LONDON, DUBLIN, PHILADELPHIA,
PORTER and ALE,
SCOTCH, BURTON, and EAST INDIA ALES,
CHAMPAGNE CIDER, in quantities to suit purchasers,
at 333 Broadway,
tf corner of Anthony street, New-York.

J. MURPHY & SON,

IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN

BRANDIES, WINES, GIN, RUM, IRISH AND SCOTCH WHISKEY, SEGARS, ALE AND PORTER, CORDIALS, &c.

J. M. & SON would call the attention of City and Country Dealers to their EXTENSIVE STOCK OF LIQUORS AND SEGARS under CUSTOM HOUSE LOCK and in STORE.

☞ We do not claim any superiority for our goods over those of any other House, but customers may rely upon being honorably and fairly dealt with, and all Liquors warranted as represented.

J. M. & SON are SOLE AGENTS for this City of Messrs. BUNCHARD & HARRISON'S superior Creaming and Sparkling DOMESTIC CHAMPAGNE, which possesses the same qualities as Imported Wine, and is more agreeable to the palate. It can be sold as low as $7 the basket.

A Superior Quality of IMPORTED ST. JULIAN CLARET, in cases, at $2 50.

Orders from Country Merchants solicited, and shipped with dispatch, at 150 Pearl, and 113 Water streets.

☞ Office 133 Pearl street.

P. MONAGHAN,

IMPORTER of the various and best brands of HAVANA SEGARS, &c. &c. Country and city merchants supplied in bond or in store. Duties paid or unpaid. 121 PEARL STREET, New-York.

N. B.—Sole Importer of the J. M. Vichot, La Union, and La Primavera brands. ap261y

---

McLOUGHLIN & EVERARD,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL GROCERS,

Keep constantly on hand a select assortment of

GROCERIES, WINES, BRANDIES, TEAS, COFFEES, &c., &c.,

AT THE OLD ESTABLISHED STAND,

ap268m 44 FULTON, between Pearl and Cliff streets, New York.

WISE'S IRISH MALT WHISKEY.

IMPORTED by J. & P. Hogan, Nos. 6 and 12 West street, and 257 Third Avenue, corner of 21st street, New-York, and corner of Vanbrunt and Sullivan streets, Brooklyn. J. & P. Hogan wish to inform their friends and the public that they have just received a large quantity of WISE'S CORK MALT WHISKEY, which will be sold at a reduced price, out of bond and at the above establishment. They are the only firm who import the same in New-York. ap261y

---

BURKE & MYLER,

IMPORTED WINES, LIQUORS AND SEGARS,

No. 42 SPRING STREET, NEW-YORK,

ap268m between Mulberry and Mott streets.

JAMES AINSLIE,

NO. 98 BEAVER STREET,

OFFERS for sale from U. S. Bonded Warehouses, of his own importation, Cognac Brandies, also Rochelle Brandies, in half, quarter, and eighth Pipes, pale and dark, of the well known brand of Arsac Seignette.

Gin—Sole importer of the superior Magnolia Brand; also, Cologne and Schnapps Gin.

Wines—Burgundy, Pure Juice, and old Port, Sherry, &c. Jamaica and St Croix Rums; Stewart's Paisley Whiskey, &c. 3mos

---

P. HUGHES,

LEMON SYRUP AND CORDIAL REFINER, and Dealer in Foreign Liquors, and French Brandies of different brands, Hollands Gin, Irish and Scotch Whiskey, Scotch Ale and Porter, and other Liquors, returns his sincere thanks to the public for the patronage he has already received, and hopes they will continue the same. No. 88 Cherry street, New-York. tf

---

O'CONNOR & COLLENDER,

BILLIARD TABLE MANUFACTURERS.

53 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

IMPROVED BILLIARD TABLES AND CUSHIONS.

MICHAEL PHELAN'S

MODEL TABLES AND COMBINATION CUSHIONS,

(Patented February 19, 1856,)

CORRECT in principle and perfect in action—so constructed as to insure mathematical correctness of angles when played upon, and warranted to possess the requisite elasticity in all seasons, having been tested by the best players in this conntry, and by them pronounced the most perfect of any hitherto constructed—are offered to the public as cheap as the ordinary tables of the day. Orders promptly attended to for fitting up private or public Billiard Rooms; new Cushions put on old Tables, &c.

Saloon and Salesroom No. 39 Chambers street, up stairs.

CABINET FURNITURE AND UPHOLSTERY.

Established in 1827.

THE largest and cheapest assortment in the State of New-York. Every thing, from a Broom to the richest article, may be found, including Carpets, Oil Cloths, Mattrasses, Beds, &c., &c., at 1yr R. J. TODD'S, 88 Fulton street, Brooklyn.

KNOX'S

OFFICE FURNITURE WAREROOMS,

59 AND 89 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

☞ Desks, Chairs, Cushions, Book-Cases, Lounges, Stools, and every article suitable for counting-rooms, Banks, and Insurance offices.

Desks of every description made to order on short notice.

The Irish News.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
JOHN SAVAGE, LITERARY EDITOR.

THREE DOLLARS PER ANNUM. SINGLE COPIES 6 CENTS
Publication Office, 29 Ann St., cor. of Nassau.

VOL. I. NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, MAY 24, 1856. NO. 7.

Publications.

CONTENTS OF NO. VII.

Editorial.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.
THE MURDER AT WILLARD'S.
SOMETHING IN THE WIND.
GAVAN DUFFY IN AUSTRALIA.
MINISTERIAL MISERIES.
MILITARY MEMOIRS—Montgomery Riflemen, of Paterson.

Literature.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY—Irish Memories—their Significance and Beauty—their Harmony with the Republic—Part I.
JAMES G. PERCIVAL, THE POET—His Life and Works.
MOORE'S LIFE OF LORD EDWARD FITZGERALD.
POETRY—"Dreaming," by Ponchartrain.
CORRESPONDENCE—Military Presentation to Capt. Heuston—Seventh Regiment at East New-York—U. S. Army Intelligence.
MISCELLANEOUS—Presidential Facts and Rumors—Irish News—English News—American News—Important Central American Intelligence—European Summary—Congressional—City News—The Turnverein Festival—News from Buenos Ayres, California, Oregon and Washington Territories.

THE IRISH NEWS,

EDITED BY THE PROPRIETOR,

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER,

DEDICATED TO THE SERVICE OF THE

IRISH PEOPLE,

AT HOME AND ABROAD,

Will be published every Saturday, on and after the 12th of April, at 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau, New-York.

TERMS.

For subscribers, $3 per annum: 6 cents a copy.
For retailers and carriers, $4 per hundred.
For Clubs, 4 copies to one address, per annum, $10.
" 7 " " " " $17.
" 10 " " " " $20.

For advertising.—Each square of eight lines,

Transient	$1
Monthly	$2
Quarterly	$5
Yearly	$16

N. B. Four lines, or under, constitute half a square.

Agents or Postmasters who interest themselves in procuring and remitting subscriptions, may retain 50 cents out of each annual subscription of $3.

☞ Subscribers, Agents, and Advertisers will please send in their orders early, and observe that our terms are invariably, payments in advance.

Communications of a PRIVATE nature should always be marked so. Those connected with the editorial department are to be addressed to Thomas Francis Meagher, and those on business to Richard J. Lalor, Irish News Office, 29 Ann street, corner of Nassau.

☞ Subscribers, residing in New-York, Brooklyn, and Williamsburgh, who pay in advance, will have their papers neatly enveloped, addressed, and delivered on each Wednesday through Boyd's Express or some similar medium.

Wholesale Dealers.

DEXTER & BROTHERS, 14 Ann Street, New-York.
ROSS & TOUSEY, 108 Nassau Street, New-York.
SAMUEL YATES, 22 Beekman Street, New-York.
MIKE MADDEN, 22 Ann Street, New-York.
HAMILTON & JOHNSON, 30 Ann Street, New-York.
DE WITT & DAVENPORT, 160 & 162 Nassau Street, New-York.
HENRY TAYLOR, Baltimore, Md.
FEDERHEN & CO., 13 Court Street, Boston.
WM. HICKEY, 128 Federal Street, Boston.
REDDING & CO., 8 Court Street, Boston.
THOS. McLOUGHLIN, 42 South 4th Street, Philadelphia.
T. R. CALLENDER, 88 South-Third Street, Philadelphia.
DROVIN & CO., Philadelphia.
A. WINCH, 116 Chestnut street.
J. M. CRAWFORD, 30 and 32 Chestnut Street, St. Louis, Mo.
MATTHEW WALLACE, 25 Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.
McNALLY & CO., 75 Dearborn Street.
J. W. SULLIVAN, Kearney Street, San Francisco, Cal.
ROY'S, Detroit, Mich.
J. B. MAHONY, Cincinnati, Ohio.
J. P. WALSH, Cincinnati, Ohio.
—— COURTNEY, Charleston, South Carolina.
BRICE, 100 Exchange Place, New Orleans.
JOHN PLASTO, 144 Upper Abbey street, Dublin.

Retail Dealers.

NAGLE, Bangor, Me. — ADAMSON, Washington, D. C.
O'CONNELL, Cincinnati, O. — DOWNS, New-Haven, Conn.
HASTINGS, Albany, N. Y. — MORRISEY, " "
McGOWANS, Portland, Me. — DONOHUE, Newark, N. J.
JOHN H. TYSON, 89 Washington street, Hoboken, N. J.

Printed by Watters Brothers, 47 Ann street.
POWER PRESS OF J. B. WILLIAMS.

TEACHERS, ATTENTION!!—Perhaps the greatest educational event of this century is the publication of JOHNSON'S PHILOSOPHICAL CHARTS. There are ten Charts in all, each measuring 34 by 52 inches, and the set contains altogether about 300 Diagrams, illustrative of the most important outline principles of the Natural Sciences. Besides the essential diagrams found in the ordinary text-books, these charts contain several original illustrations, and possess the merit, rarely found in school-books, of being entirely original in plan and arrangement. They are, moreover, highly ornamental to a school-room, and obviate the necessity of philosophical apparatus which would cost from $3,000 to $5,000. Price of the set of ten charts, neatly colored and mounted, and accompanied with an explanatory Key, (a bound book,) $15. Ditto, on thick paper, colored and mounted, without cloth, $10. Ditto, plain, in sheets, neatly bound, $5.

Booksellers, Teachers, Agents, and all interested in Education, are respectfully requested to address the publisher,

Adolphus Ranney, No. 195 Broadway, New-York.

Mr. Ranney has also the pleasure to announce that he has purchased from EDWARD H. DIXON, M. D., editor of The Scalpel, and acknowledged to be the first surgeon in America, the copy-right of a work entitled "WOMAN AND HER DISEASES, FROM THE CRADLE TO THE GRAVE;" Adapted exclusively to her instruction in the Physiology of her system, and all the diseases of her critical periods; with an Appendix on the propriety of limiting the increase of family. Price $1. Copies mailed, post-paid, on receipt of price. Address as above. ap26tf

Book of Men, Women and Babies. By DR. PORTER, of New-York.—Such is the title of a book of real practical utility, and which contains more sound philosophy and good sense, than we have ever seen in a book of the kind before. No parent will ever regret putting it into the hands of his wife, sons, and daughters. Married or single, should hasten to possess it. Every mother will find the instructions in this book promotive of health and contentment in her household.—Jersey Tribune, Elisabeth City, New-Jersey.

In paper covers, 50 cents, postage free. Address DR. PORTER, 216 Fulton-st. Twelve copies to one address, $5. my17 3m

Liberty and Nicaragua!—The citizens of New-York, friendly to the cause of Republicanism in Central America, are invited to attend a grand Mass Meeting, in the Park, on Friday evening, May 23, 1856, at 5 o'clock P.M. for the purpose of encouraging the struggling patriots under General Walker in their efforts for freedom, and to approve of the action of the American Government in their recognition of the Nicaraguan Minister.

Some of the most distinguished speakers in the country have been invited and will address the meeting.

JOHN CLANCY, Chairman.

ALEX. C. LAWRENCE, A. OAKSMITH } Secretaries.

Publications.

BOOKS RELATING TO IRELAND.

SIR JOHN DAVIES' HISTORICAL TRACTS. 8vo. full calf.
DUBLIN PENNY JOURNAL. 4 vols., very scarce.
IRISH PENNY JOURNAL.
O'CONNOR'S CHRONICLES OF ERI. 2 vols., 8vo, full calf.
ANCIENT IRISH HISTORIES. By Spencer, Campion, Hanmer and Marleborough. 2 vols., large paper, 4to, full calf.
LEDWICH'S IRISH ANTIQUITIES. 4to, calf, plates.
HAYES' BALLADS OF IRELAND. 2 vols. in one, 12mo. cloth, $1.
IRELAND ILLUSTRATED. By Petrie, Bartlett and Baynes. 4to, morocco, gilt edges.
ANNALS OF THE FOUR MASTERS. 7 vols., quarto, in Irish, with an English translation by O'Donovan. $45.
SAME WORK, translated by Cornellan. 1 vol., quarto, cloth.
CARTE'S LIFE OF THE DUKE OF ORMONDE, and the Great Affairs of his Time in Ireland. 6 vols. 8vo. Full calf, $20.
GRATTAN'S LIFE AND TIMES: By his Son. 5 vols. 8vo. Cloth, $7.
FITZPATRICK'S LIFE OF CLONCURRY. 8vo. cloth. $1 50.
FINDEN'S BEAUTIES OF MOORE. Forty-eight portraits, exquisitely engraved. Folio, cloth, gilt edges. $6.
WRIGHT'S HISTORY OF IRELAND. 3 vols. quarto, maps, portraits, and views, $7 50,
BARRINGTON'S SKETCHES. $1. SAVAGE'S '98 and '48. 1 vol., 12mo.
McGEOGHEGAN'S IRELAND. 8vo, cloth, $1 75.

MRS. HALL'S IRELAND, 3 VOLS., 8VO., FULL OF ILLUSTRATIONS. $12.

Warner's History of Ireland, 4to., $2 50. Warner's Irish Rebellion, 4to., $2 50. Life of Wolfe Tone, 2 volumes, $3 50. Mitchel's Jail Journal, $1. Mitchel's Hugh O'Neil, 37 1-2 cents. Moore's Life of Lord Edward Fitzgerald, 75 cents. Davis's Poems, with an introduction by John Mitchel, 37 1-2 cents. De Jean's Poems, 37 1-2 cents. Meagher's Speeches, $1. Furlong's Irish Prayer Book, 50 cts. Recollections of Lord Cloncurry, $1. Carleton's Willie Reilley, 75 cents. Mooney's History of Ireland, 2 volumes, $3. O'Connor's History of the Irish Brigade, 1 50. Life of Fighting Fitzgerald, 25 cents. Ellis's Romances and Ballads of Ireland, 75 cents. Burke's Speeches, 1 25.

For sale by P. M. Haverty, Bookseller, 110 Fulton street, New-York.

With a few exceptions, any of the above will be sent by mail, free.

KEATING'S IRELAND.

A NEW TRANSLATION OF THE

FORAS FEASA AR ERINN;

OR, GENERAL HISTORY OF IRELAND.

From a Manuscript Copy of the Original Irish of the Rev. and Learned GEOFFREY KEATING.

With Notes, Historical, Topographical, and Explanatory,

By JOHN O'MAHONY, Esq.

The work is now in course of preparation, and will be speedily published, in one large octavo volume of about 600 pages, with plates. Price to Subscribers, $2,00.

The book will be got up in superior style, and furnished to the address of Subscribers giving their names to a duly-authorized canvasser, or to

A list of subscribers will be printed in the work.

P. M. HAVERTY, Publisher, 110 Fulton street, N. Y.
tf

OLD ESTABLISHED CATHOLIC HOUSE.

EDWARD DUNIGAN & BROTHER,

(JAMES B. KIRKER,)

151 FULTON STREET, NEW-YORK,

PUBLISH the largest and finest assortment of Catholic Bibles, Testaments, Prayer Books, Tales, School Books, and other works, to be found in the United States.

An extensive supply of all other Catholic articles always on hand.

Catalogues of their publications sent free of postage.

E. D. & BROTHER HAVE JUST ISSUED

1. THE LOVE OF MARY. Devotions for the month of May. 38c.
2. THE YOUNG CRUSADERS. A tale. 38c.
3. HOURS BEFORE THE ALTAR; or Meditations on the Blessed Sacrament. 25c.
4. THE CONVERSION OF RATISBONNE. 25c.
5. CONSCIENCE, or the Trials of May Brooke, a tale by Mrs. A. H. Dorsey. 2 vols; each 38c. 4t May 24

P. O'SHEA,

739 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK,

Catholic Bookseller and Publisher, Importer of Vestments, Altar Furniture, and Religious Articles generally,

RESPECTFULLY calls the attention of the Catholic Clergy, Religious Orders, Superiors of Schools and Libraries, and his patrons, generally, to his large and varied assortment of Standard and Devotional Books and Religious articles of every description, which he offers for sale on the most reasonable terms, wholesale and retail.

Particular attention is called to his recently published works, viz.,

Bickerton; or, The Immigrant's Daughter. (An anti-Know-Nothing Tale,) 12mo., cloth,	$0 50
Life of the Princess Borghese; (Daughter of the Earl of Shrewsbury.) Translated by Rev. A. F. Hewit, (of the Redemptorists.) 1 vol., 18mo, cloth,	0 37½
Life of St. Francis of Assisciun. By Rev. Titus Jocelin. 1 vol., 18mo, cl.,	0 37½
Life of the Egyptian Aloyzius. Translated by Rev. A. F. Hewit. 2 vols., 18mo, cloth, each,	0 37½
Edma and Marguerite. A Tale; by the Author of the Orphan of Moscow. 2 vols., 18mo, cloth,	0 37½

Religious Articles.

Rosaries, per dozen, from 20 cents, to	4 00
" each, on silver chains, from 75 cents, to	12 00
Crucifixes, (brass,) per dozen, from 8 cents, to	12 00
" (silver,) each, from 25 cents, to	25 00

Statuettes, Holy Water Founts, &c., &c., in great varieties. Country Booksellers and travelling dealers, would do well when they come to New-York, to examine this stock before purchasing elsewhere.

3mos P. O'SHEA, 739 Broadway, New-York.

HAMILTON & JOHNSON,

NEWS AGENTS,

30 ANN STREET, NEW-YORK.

DAILY, weekly and Sunday papers, Magazines, and Cheap Publications. The trade supplied. Orders from the country solicited and promptly filled.

JOHN HAMILTON, S. W. JOHNSON.
tf

MAPS OF NICARAGUA,

(From the Latest Surveys,)

NORTH and Central America, containing distances, population, Transit Company's route through Nicaragua, description of the country, and effects of thirty year's civil war, &c., vessels in the United States navy, portraits of Walker, Kinney, and French. Size of the map, 26x32 inches. Price 25 cents. Improved second edition. Agents wanted.

my17 2t J. Haven, 115 and 117 Nassau street, up stairs.

WRITING INKS.

WE ask the attention of all who wish imperishable records,—a matter of great importance to State, County and Town Offices, Banks, and others, to Dr. Chilton's test of the prominent Inks in use, made with a view to show their different degrees of permanence by exposure. Engraved facsimiles of the test can be seen at our office.

Thaddeus Davids & Co.,
ap19 6m Manufacturing Stationers, 26 Cliff street.

Publications.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

'98 AND '48;

THE MODERN REVOLUTIONARY HISTORY AND LITERATURE OF IRELAND.

BY JOHN SAVAGE. 12mo., cloth, $1.

THERE is no one work which gives the spirit of the memorable periods to illustrate which the author has devoted the present volume. It contains vivid and carefully collated descriptions of the principal battles of the United Irishmen of '98, and a clear statement of the circumstances which led to the differences between "Old Ireland" and "Young Ireland," the line of national policy adopted by the latter, with biographical notices, &c., &c.

my17 2t J. S. REDFIELD, No. 34 Beekman street, New-York.

THE BALLADS OF IRELAND:

COLLECTED BY

EDWARD HAYES,

Containing Selections from all the Irish Poets.

They are Ballads of the Affections, Fairy Ballads, Legendary Ballads, Miscellaneous Ballads, Translated Ballads, &c., &c.

THE following are among the Authors:—Banim, Ansty, Barry, Beamish, Blacker, Brown, Callanan, Carleton, Charlotte Clarke, Croker, Croly, Thos. Davis, Francis Davis, De Vere, Dowling, Downing, Drennan, Dufferin, Duffy, Ferguson, Forrest, Fox, Frazer, Gallaher, Goldsmith, Griffin, Halpin, Hill, Hoey, Irwin, Keegan, Kelly, Kenealy, Kennedy, Knowles, Lane, Lover, Lynch, Madden, Maginn, Mahony, Mangan, McCarthy, McDermott, McDavitt, Meehan, McGee, Moore, Mulchinock, Rev. Dr. Murray, John Fisher Murray, Norton, O'Connell, Parnell, Ryan, Simmons, Smythe, Starkey, Sterling, Supple, Waller, Walsh, Wilde, Williams, Wolfe, &c.

The whole comprising 725 closely printed pages, making the most remarkable and interesting book ever presented to the people of this country.

Price—in one volume, $1. In two volumes, $1.25. The price of the Iris edition is $2.50.

☞ For sale by all booksellers.

The book will be sent to any part of the U. S., postage free, on receipt of the above prices. Published by my17 tf PATRICK DONAHOE, 23 Franklin-st., Boston, Mass.

KELLER'S EMPIRE HALL,

NO. 596 BROADWAY, TWO DOORS ABOVE THE METROPOLITAN HOTEL.—TRIUMPH OF ART!—THE THIRD SERIES OF THE

GRAND TABLEAUX AND MUSICAL SOIREES,

MONDAY, and every evening during the week.

Mr. KELLER will present five new Grand Tableaux, and an entire change of Vocal and Instrumental Music, in which

MADAME LOVARNY,

And the popular GERMANIA QUARTETTE CLUB will appear.

In addition to which

HERZ FRANZ STOEPEL

Will make his first appearance, and give his wonderful performances upon THE WOOD AND STRAW INSTRUMENT.

THE METROPOLITAN

FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,

No. 108 BROADWAY,

(Cor. Pine Street.)

CASH CAPITAL $300,000.

JAMES LORIMER GRAHAM, President.

EDWARD A. STANSBURY, Secretary. my31y

JOHN FOLEY,

MANUFACTURER OF FINE GOLD PENS!

BEST QUALITY ONLY.

GOLD AND SILVER PENCIL CASES.

my24tf No. 163 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

LIVERPOOL AND PHILADELPHIA

STEAMSHIP LINE.

CITY OF BALTIMORE....CITY OF WASHINGTON.
CITY OF MANCHESTER...KANGAROO.

THE magnificent new steamship City of Baltimore, Capt. Leitch, 2,367 tons, 500 horse power, will sail from Philadelphia on the 26th June, and from Liverpool on the 16th July. Steerage passage from Philadelphia, $30; from Liverpool, $45, including cooked provisions. Persons wishing to send for their friends from Great Britain and Ireland, by the above line of splendid Steamships, or by first-class sailing Packets, can purchase passage tickets on application to Sabel & Contis, 177 Broadway, New-York.

Or to their Agents in Albany—A. T. Holmes.....Dubuque—Jas. C. Rattray.

Baltimore—Foard & Rodgers.....Hartford, Ct.—A. Rose.
Boston—F. S. Saxton.....New-Orleans—Jenkins.
Buffalo—Robt. Hager.....Pittsburg—John Thompson, Williams & Co.
Chicago—Lull & Mayer.....Pottsville—R. Edwards.
Cincinnati——————.....Toronto, C. W.—D. K. Feehan.

"Hair Dye and Wig Manufactory Buchanan" informs his friends and the public that he can warrant his Dye will give every satisfaction. Sold wholesale and retail at 395 Broadway, near Walker street, New York city. May24 4t

TO the Ladies.—Millinery.—A large and beautiful assortment of Ladies' and Misses' Bonnets, Straw Trimmings, Ribbons, Flowers, and Mantillas, at WILLIAM S. IRVINE'S, No. 112 Canal street.

Sewing Machine Depot.—Sewing Machines of all kinds improved and repaired, on reasonable terms, in the most substantial manner. Superior Machine Oils for sale. A large assortment of Machine Silk Twist and Needles for sale at reduces prices.

my 24, 3 mos. F. S. COATES & Co., 345 Broadway, New-York.

Doctor H. Brennan, 185 West 42nd Street, between 8th and 9th Avenues. It gives me much pleasure in recommending to the inhabitants of this city the above named gentleman, who, in his professional capacity, as Physician, is exceedingly deserving of the patronage of the public. Two of my children having lately been sick, and their recovery despaired of by three Physicians, I called on Doctor Brennan to attend to to them. He did so promptly and faithfully, and to him, under Divine Providence, am I indebted for their speedy and perfect restoration to health. To all persons needing a Physician of eminent abilities and gentlemanlike deportment, I would most zealously and emphatically recommend Doctor Brennan. May his professional career be onward, is the sincere desire and prayer of the undersigned:

N. Y., May 20, 1856. [my 24.] CORNELIUS FARLEY, 186 West 13th-st.

☞ Post Office Notice.—The MAILS FOR EUROPE, per U. S. Mail steamer Atlantic close at this office on SATURDAY, the 24th day of May, at 10½ o'clock, A. M. Isaac V. Fowler, Postmaster.

Post-Office Notice.—THE MAILS FOR CALIFORNIA, per steamer GEORGE LAW, will close at this office on TUESDAY, May 20th, at 1 o'clock, P. M
my17 1t Isaac V. Fowler, Postmaster

Shipping.

C. H. MARSHALL & CO.,

Old Black Ball Line of Liverpool Packets.

CERTIFICATES

Furnished for Passage to and from Liverpool, on the 1st and 16th of every Month, by the following splendid ships:

James Foster, Jr.	Capt. J. W. Porter.
Neptune	" E. W. Peabody.
Harvest Queen	" E. Young.
Isaac Webb	" J. M. Bayer.
Great Western	" W. G. Furrier.
Manhattan	" T. Dixon.
Isaac Wright	" E. Abeel.
Columbia	" C. Hutchinson.
Fidelia	" W. A. Macgill.
Yorkshire	" C. A. Marshall.

REMITTANCES.

Drafts, for £1 and upwards, on the Royal Bank of Ireland, and on Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., Bankers, Liverpool and London, payable on sight.

C. H. MARSHALL & CO.,
38 Burling Slip, N. Y.

Agents in Liverpool, Baring Brothers & Co.,
OLD LINE PACKETS,
Pier 23 East River, foot of Beekman street. 6m

WILLIAMS & GUION'S

Old Black Star Line of Packets. 1856.

Passage from any part of Great Britain and Ireland, secured at the lowest possible rates by this old-established line, sailing from Liverpool to New-York every five days, comprising the following magnificent Ships:

Ships.	Captains.	Tonage.
Australia,	Smith,	2,000
Bridgewater (new),	Barstow,	2,000
Cultivator (new),	Austin,	2,000
Cynosure,	Bray,	2,000
Cornelia Lawrence (new),	Knapp,	2,000
De Witt Clinton,	Funk,	1,800
Enterprise,	Davis,	1,200
Guy Mannering,	Dollard,	2,000
Jacob A. Westervelt,	Hoodless,	2,000
Irene,	Williams,	1,400
John Bright (new),	Cutting,	2,000
Marmion,	Hanley,	1,200
North American,	Clark,	1,800
Oswego,	Stevens,	1,400
Robert Kelly,	Barstow,	1,500
Silas Wright (new),	Freeman,	2,000
Southampton,	Furlong,	1,600
Thornton (new),	Collins,	2,000
Ticonderoga,	Boyle,	1,400
Universe,	Cave,	2,000
Vanguard,	Norton,	1,800

The ships of this line are the largest and swiftest in the trade, their accommodations for passengers are unequalled, and the frequency and punctuality of their departure offer advantages to the emigrant not to be had by any Line of Packets. Such passengers as decline coming out, the money paid for them will be promptly refunded without discount.

Provisions of best quality are provided for passengers; rations, consisting of Bread, Flour, Rice, Oatmeal, Tea, Sugar, Molasses, Salt, &c.

The increased patronage received by the proprietors of the Old Black Star Line has induced them to add to the Line several New Ships, which have taken their place this season; no expense has been spared to render the facilities for Emigration equal to the times, and add to the renown of these celebrated Packets.

The regular Sailing days are 1st, 8th, 11th, 18th, 21st, and 26th of each month; this will give passengers opportunity for embarking more frequent than by any other established Line, to which the attention of the public is respectfully called.

No Certificate of Passage will be issued for children under 12 years of age unless accompanied by an adult, who must be paid for on same certificate; for persons over 60 years of age, or with any impediment, without a Permit from Commissioners of Emigration.

REMITTANCES.

Persons wanting to send money to their friends can obtain drafts for any amount, which will be cashed at sight at the following Banks:

Ireland—National Bank of Ireland; Royal Bank of Ireland; Ulster Banking Co., and their Branches.

Scotland—National Bank of Scotland and Branches.

England—Messrs. Glynn, Mills & Co, Bankers, London; Guion & Co., Merchants, Liverpool.

For further particulars apply, if by letter post-paid, to

WILLIAMS & GUION,
40 Fulton street, New-York.

GUION & CO.,
115 Waterloo Road, Liverpool.

Agents—JOHN WHITNEY, Providence, R. I.
EDWARD RYAN, 2 Albany street, Boston.
THOMAS RATTIGAN, Pittsburgh, Pa.

THOS. C. ROCHE'S
PASSAGE AND DRAFT OFFICE 83 SOUTH ST.

Sole Passenger Agent for Grinnell's celebrated

Swallow Tail Line of Liverpool and London Packets.

THOSE sending for their friends in the Old Country can make arrangements at this office to bring them from any part of IRELAND or ENGLAND at the lowest rates.

The ships sail from Liverpool four times a month, and from London twice a month.

Drafts for sale for £1 and upwards, payable in any part of England, Ireland, Scotland or Wales.

Passage Tickets and Drafts sold in this office are Guaranteed by CORNELIUS GRINNELL, Esq., 87 South street, New-York.

☞ No connection whatever with any other Person or House useing the name of Roche.

For further information apply to THOMAS C. ROCHE, ap263m Old Stand, 83 South street, New-York.

THE NEW-YORK AND LIVERPOOL
United States Mail Line.

The ships composing this line are the following:

The ATLANTIC ..... Capt. Eldridge.
The ADRIATIC ..... Capt. West.
The PACIFIC ..... Capt. Eldridge.
The BALTIC ..... Capt. Comstock.

These ships have been built by contract, expressly for the government service. Every care has been taken in their construction, as also in their engines to insure strength and speed; and their accommodations for passengers are unequalled for elegance and comfort.

Price of passage from New-York to Liverpool in first cabin, $130; in second do., $75. Exclusive use of extra size state rooms, $225. From Liverpool to New-York, 80 and 20 guineas.

An experienced surgeon attached to each ship.

No berth can be secured until paid for.

PROPOSED DATES OF SAILING.

FROM NEW-YORK.	FROM LIVERPOOL.
Saturday, April 26, 1856.	Wednesday, April 16, 1856.
" May 10, "	" April 30, "
" May 24, "	" May 14, "
	" May 28, "
	" June 11, "

For freight or passage, apply to

Edw'd. K. Collins & Co., No. 56 Wall street, New-York.
Brown, Shipley & Co., Liverpool.
Stephen Kennard & Co., 27 Austin Friars, London.
B. G. Wainwright & Co., Paris.

The owners of these ships will not be accountable for gold, silver, bullion, specie, jewelry, precious stones or metals, unless bills of lading are signed therefor, and the value thereof therein expressed.

Shippers will please take notice, that the ships of this line cannot carry any goods contraband of war. ap26 6m.

Shipping.

BLACK BALL LINE
OF LIVERPOOL PACKETS,

Sailing to and from Liverpool on the 1st and 16th of each Month.

THE following ten magnificent clipper Packet Ships comprise the "Black Ball Line, viz:—

James Foster Jr.,	Manhattan,
Great Western,	Neptune,
Harvest Queen,	Columbia,
Isaac Webb,	Yorkshire,
Isaac Wright,	Fidelia.

DRAFTS AT SIGHT for any amount payable in every town throughout England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

Persons returning to the old country, or those sending for their friends, will find it to their interest to select the "Black Ball Line," as the accommodations in the above clippers for Cabin, Second Cabin, and Steerage Passengers, are well known by the travelling public to be far superior to any other.

☞ Apply or address by letter, post-paid; no letter will be answered unless a postage stamp is enclosed to pre-pay postage.

Jacob Wilson, 108 South street, New York,
Who is the only authorized Passenger Agent for the "Black Ball Line," which lay at Pier 23 East River, opposite this office. my3 3m

Emigration.

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND.

Irish Emigrant Society,
Office, 51 Chambers street.

NOTICE.—The recent failures, by which a large amount of Bills remitted from this country to friends in Ireland, has been returned unpaid, afford to this Society the opportunity, and at the same time impose upon it the duty of informing the public, that such losses would have been prevented if the parties purchasing Bills had availed themselves of the advantages offered by the Society.

For the purpose of entire protection a fund is constantly kept on deposit in the Bank of Ireland, against which this Society issues its drafts, payable at sight (from sums of £1 sterling and upwards), on the Bank and all its branches, and has thereby for the last Ten Years afforded a mode of remittance perfectly safe and unquestionable.

New-York, December 29, 1851.

Andrew Carrigan, President.
John Manning, Robert J. Dillon, Hugh Kelly, } Vice-Presidents.
Edward C. Donnelly, Corresponding Secretary.
Peter Crerar, Recording Secretary.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Felix Ingoldsby,	John Nicholson,	William Redmond.
William Watson,	Hugh Kelly,	James Olwell,
John Manning,	Cornel Sheehan,	Daniel Devlin,
Terence Donnelly,	Romaine Dillon,	John McMenomy.

EMIGRANT INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS BANK.

No. 51 Chambers Street.

THIS Institution has been established for the purpose of affording to Emigrants and others, a safe place of deposit for their funds, to protect them from robbery and fraud.

It is conducted with the strictest economy—neither the Officers and Trustees, receive any compensation for their services. The entire profits belong to the Depositors, and will be divided amongst them, having due regard to the safety of the funds.

The last dividend was six per cent. upon all sums of $500 and under, and and will be continued or increased as the profits may justify.

Bank open to receive Deposits, daily, from 10 A. M., to 2, and from 5 to 7 P. M.

TRUSTEES.

William Watson,	John P. Nesmith,
John Nicholson,	John Milhau,
Andrew Carrigan,	Edward W. Tiers,
James Kelly,	Charles M. Connelly,
James Kerrigan,	Cornelius H. Sheehan,
Hugh Kelly,	Edward Bayer,
Charles O'Connor,	Daniel Devlin.
James Olwell,

Joseph Stuart, President.
Felix Ingoldsby, 1st Vice-President.
John McMenomy, 2d Vice-President.
Terence Donnelly, Treasurer.
Louis B. Binsse, Secretary.
Peter Crear, Accountant.
John Manning, Comptroller. tf

REMITTANCES TO

ENGLAND, IRELAND AND SCOTLAND.

STERLING BILLS for sale on Messrs. Prescott, Grote & Co., Bankers, London, from £1 upwards, payable on demand, and negotiable in any part of the United Kingdom; also Bank of England Notes and Drafts of any of the English Banks or Bankers, bought and sold.

ap191y Prime & Co., 54 Wall street.

DRAFTS FOR £1 AND UPWARDS,
ON THE ROYAL BANK OF IRELAND,

(Expressly authorised by the Bank,)

FOR SALE AT THE BANKING HOUSE OF JOHN B. MURRAY,

No. 44 Wall street, (over Bank of North America,) New-York.

PERSONS wishing to send money to their friends in Europe, can remit it as above, by letter, post-paid, and upon receipt, a draft on the Royal Bank, will be forwarded without charge, to the person designated. 3m*

☞ To prevent loss, every Draft is registered here, and a copy of the register forwarded to the Bank by every mail steamer.

IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY,

Office, corner of South and Beach Streets, Boston.

THE office of this Society is open from 7 A. M., to 6 P. M., where Emigrants can apply to obtain situations for which they are fitted. Farmers, Mechanics, and others in want of labor, will apply at the office.

Orders from employers in the country, stating the services required, the wages given, and the cheapest mode of conveyance, and giving respectable reference, will meet with prompt attention.

The Society will be thankful for all circumstantial and early information of any fraud, imposition or outrage committed on emigrants, and will endeavor speedily to apply a remedy.

Martin Griffin, Arthur M'Avoy, } Vice Presidents.
Nicholas J. Bean, Cor. Secretary.
James Ferguson, Rec. Secretary.
William Hickey, Treasurer.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

John Hughes,	P. Holly,
William Keating,	Christopher Plunkett,
Daniel O'Rourke,	Jeremiah Ford,
Thomas Hughes,	Hugh Duffy,
Owen Lappan,	M. Lennon, Charlestown,
J. Ryder,	James O'Brien, do.,

Patrick C. Boyle, Roxbury.

MICHAEL HUGHES, Agent.

REMITTANCES TO IRELAND, &c.

GEORGE McBRIDE, Jr., No. 14 Broadway, continues to transmit money, in sums large or small, to persons residing in any part of Ireland, in the same manner as he and his predecessor in business have done for the last thirty years, and more; also to any part of England or Scotland.

Money remitted by letter, post paid, to the subscriber, or personally deposited with him, with the name of the person or persons in Ireland, England or Scotland, to whom it is to be sent, and nearest post town, will be immediately transmitted and paid accordingly, and a receipt to that effect given or forwarded to the sender.

8mo GEORGE McBRIDE, Jr., N. N.

GREEN & SEWELL,
BANKERS,
No. 29 Wall Street, New-York.

DRAFTS on the Belfast Banking Co., available in any part of Ireland, for sale.

Remittances from the interior, promptly forwarded to any address in Ireland, and receipt therefor returned to the sender. General Banking business transacted. my17 6m

Special Notices.

DRILL ROOM GUIDE.

NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

TROOP A, (Irish Dragoons,) meet at the "Grape Vine Cottage," 45 Second Avenue, between Second and Third streets, on every Monday evening. JAMES MURPHY, Capt.

Company B, (Fitzgerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company D, (Guyon Cadets) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. MURPHY, Capt.

Company I, (Jackson Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." W. O. MURPHY, Capt.

Company H, (Erina Guard) drill Thursday Evening at "Military Hall." R. CODDINGTON, Capt.

Company —, (Irish Grenadiers) drill each Thursday Evening at 22 White street. FELIX DUFFY, Capt.

Company C, (Mitchel Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." —— KEARNS, Capt.

Company J, (Carroll Guard,) drill each —— evening, at —— GALLAGHER, Capt.

TENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at "Brookes' Rooms." JOHN KENNEDY, Capt.

ELEVENTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Montgomery Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." THOS. S. MURPHY, Capt.

FOURTEENTH REGIMENT, N. Y. S. M.

Company E, (Carroll Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening, at the "Adelphi," Brooklyn. GEO. B. MAGRATH, Capt.

SIXTY NINTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Troop A, (Irish Dragoons,) drill each Thursday Evening at "Montgomery Hall." Lieut. B. O'CONNOR, Com'dt.

Company C, (—— ——,) drill each Wednesday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." Lieut. M. KEATING, Com'dt.

Company D, (Irish Rifles) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES QUINLAN, Capt.

Company E, (Fag a Bealac Guard) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." GILBERT RIORDAN, Capt.

Company F, (Shields' Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at "Milleman's Hall," 7th avenue, corner of 26th street. JOHN R. MURPHY, Capt.

Company G, (Mechanic's Guard) drill each Thursday Evening at the "Eagle Rooms." JOHN B. MADDEN, Capt.

Company I, (Irish Fuseleers,) drill each Monday Evening at 42 Prince street. M. CORCORAN, Capt.

Company K, (Brian Boroihme Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JAMES HUSTON, Capt.

Engineer Corps, (Emmet Life Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Worth's Military Head Quarters," 22 White st. T. LYNCH, Capt.

70th REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company D, (Napper Tandy Light Artillery) drill each Thursday Evening at Brooklyn City Armory. WM. H. HOGAN, Capt.

SEVENTY FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company A, (State Rifles) drill each Wednesday Evening at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. Lieut. JAS. KELLY, Com'dt.

Company B, (Irish National Guard) drill each Friday Evening at "Centre Market Rooms." JOHN LANE, Capt.

Company C, (Young Ireland Rifles) drill each Friday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." JOHN BURKE, Capt.

Company D, (—— ——) drill each —— at ——. —— NUGENT, Capt.

Company E, (T. F. Meagher Rifles) drill each —— at cor. of 11th street and 1st Avenue. J. B. DONNELLY, Capt.

Company F, (Mich'l. Doheny Rifles) drill each —— at ——. J. F. MAGUIRE, Capt.

Company G. (Emmet Rifles) drill each —— at ——. JOHN BEGG, Capt.

INDEPENDENT COMPANIES.

Company —, (Edward Fitzgerald Guard) drill each Monday Evening at "Eagle Rooms." MICH'L. FLOOD NAGLE, Capt.

Company —, (O'Mahony Guard, E. M. A.,) drill each Tuesday Evening at "North America Rooms," cor. of Bayard and Bowery. JAMES CAVANAGH, Capt.

Company —, (Sons of '98,) drill each Friday Evening at the corner of 11th street and 1st Avenue, N. Y. M. H. SMITH, Capt.

Company —, (Wolfe Tone Guard,) drill each alternate Monday Evening at the "Second Ward Hotel," cor. of York and Pearl streets, Brooklyn. JOHN J. CLANCY, Com'dt.

Company —, (Irish American Grenadiers,) drill the first and third Thursday of each month at "Montgomery Hall," 76 Prince street, N. Y. MICHAEL DOYLE, Capt.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday evening, at Bridgeport, Conn. MICHAEL O'CONNELL, Capt.

TWENTY-FIFTH REGIMENT N. Y. S. M.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Wednesday Evening at Albany, N. Y. P. H. GRIFFIN, Capt.

SECOND REGIMENT—HUDSON BRIGADE.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each week at the "Armory," Grand street, Jersey City. —— FARRELL, Capt.

SECOND REGIMENT PA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Hibernian Greens,) drill each Thursday Evening at 83 South Fifth street, Philadelphia. P. O'KEAN, Capt.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill each Tuesday Evening at 104 Market street, Philadelphia. Lieut. PATRICK O'CONNOR, Com'dt.

Company —, (Emmet Guard,) drill each Friday Evening at "Ewen Hall," Hawley, Pa. M. W. MORRISS, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT ME. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Grattan Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Bangor, Me. JOHN CARROLL, Capt.

SIXTIETH REGIMENT ILL. S. M.

Company —, (Shields Guard,) drill each Thursday Evening in Chicago, Ill. CHAS. E. MOORE, Capt.

FIRST REGIMENT VA. VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Montgomery Guard,) drill each Monday and Friday Evenings in Richmond. P. S. MOORE, Capt.

SIXTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Meagher Guard,) drill the second Thursday of each month in Charleston. GEO. SERGEANT, Capt.

SEVENTEENTH REGIMENT S. C. S. M.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill once a month in Charleston, S. C. EDWARD MAGRATH, Capt.

—— REGIMENT GEORGIA VOLUNTEERS.

Company —, (Irish Volunteers,) drill each —— evening, in the city of Augusta. EDWARD J. WALKER, Capt.

N. B.—Commandants of Irish-American Military Companies throughout the United States, are respectfully tendered a place in the above "Directory," and requested to send such information as will enable us to represent them in it.

Mrs. Luby's Classes for Dancing, Calisthenics, &c., Greenwich Hall, 275 Bleecker street, open until the 1st June. Admission 50 cents. Mrs. Luby gives lessons on the Pianoforte on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

GEO. McDONNELL,
BOOT AND SHOE MANUFACTURER,
82 PARK ROW, NEXT DOOR TO LOVEJOY'S HOTEL, NEW-YORK.

☞ Boots, Shoes, and Gaiters of the best quality made to order.

3m.my16 Geo. McDonnell.

BOOTS, SHOES AND GAITERS,
Wholesale and Retail,
MADE TO ORDER BY
LORIN BROOKS,
188 Fulton street, New-York, opposite Church street, West of Broadway. my10 1m

European News.

The royal mail steamship Asia, Capt. Lott, which left Liverpool May 3, arrived off Sandy Hook on the 15th.

The news is three days later than that received by the Atlantic, but presents no feature of decided importance.

In the British Parliament the adjourned debate on Mr. Whiteside's motion for a vote of censure on the government for the fall of Kars, had been pressed to a division, when the motion was lost by a majority of one hundred and twenty-seven against it.

The official report of the proceedings of the Peace Congress had been published, but are little more than a reproduction of the treaty and protocols already made known.

It appears that the advance copy of the treaty of peace, which eventually appeared in the London News, was handed about among the London press, but not one of those enterprising papers would pay for it the price demanded—1,000 francs, about $200.

The Presse d'Orient announces that the majority of the inhabitants of Eupatoria are emigrating, through fear of being imprisoned, and similar movements are taking place in Abasia and in Mulgravia.

A private letter from Constantinople, emanating from a respectable source, confirms the fact of Safet Effendi, Mustachar or Councillor to the Grand Vizier, being named Turkish Commissioner to the Danubian Principalities. It is believed that he takes with him to Bucharest the firmans superseding the present hospodars, Prince Stirbey and Prince Ghika. It is more than surmised that the Porte has resolved to abrogate the institution of the Hospodars, as settled by the treaty of Balter Liman, and to restore the ancient custom of nomination for life. Safet Eeffendi also takes with him the firmans convoking the divans, ad hoc, who are to act in concert with the mixed commission, in ascertaining the wishes and requirements of the Moldo-Wallachian population, and which will be embodied in the report to be addressed to the Plenipotentiaries. The commissioner for the French government will probably be Baron Talleyrand, formerly attache to the French embassy at Madrid, the Minister at Wiemar, and recently at Carlsruhe. M. Baudin, Secretary of Embassy at London, was the person at first intended. It was stated some time ago, that the Porte intended appointing a provisional government in the Principalities, until the new reforms are arranged. The person to be placed at the head of this government, will probably be Theodore Balche, or Constantine Negri.

A letter from Berlin, in the Bourse Gazette, of Vienna, says: "The proposals made by England to capitalize the Sound Dues, and to extinguish the capital by gradual payments, will not be accepted by Denmark, which has addressed a circular to that effect to its agents at the foreign courts interested in the question. The States bordering on the Baltic have not yet replied to the proposals of England. The negotiations which had commenced at Copenhagen, and were interrupted in March last, will probably be resumed.

A telegraphic dispatch from Copenhagen, of the 27th of April, states, that by an unexpected turn the exclusive Danish party presented in the sitting of the general Diet, on the 26th, by its organ, Bishop Mourad, a proposition tending to revise the common constitution throughout.

There was a commercial crisis at Brunn, which is the principal manufacturing town in Austria, and the credit of some houses is much shaken. Many of the Brunn merchants are concerned in the construction of a tramroad from their city to Rossitz, where there are excellent coal mines; but not having sufficient capital to complete it, they have raised money at 15, 18, and even 20 per cent. interest. One of the directors of the Credit Bank went to Brunn to see how things stood, and his report is said not to have been favorable.

Advices from Rome of 24th of April, say that the high ecclesiastical circles are panic-struck at the Sardinian programme of Italian reform, and irritated with the strong language made use of respecting the maladministration of the Pope's government. The sudden departure from Paris, of Monsignor Berardi, Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, is attributed to the consternation of the Court at the bare mention of a question of such vital importance as a limit to the Pope's temporal sovereignty, and the consequent desire to have a negotiator of sagacity and devotedness on the spot, to assist the Nuncio in his remonstrances and counteract the suggestions of the Plenipotentiaries.

The stations to which French consuls or agents will be sent in the Black Sea; are said to be Kertch, Cherson, Bakshiserai, or Simpheropol, Nicolaieff and Taganrog, with as before, a consul at Odessa.

It is stated that two French divisions, and also English troops, will remain some time at Constantinople after the evacuation of the Crimea, perhaps with a view to the repression of a rising against the Christians.

On Tuesday, April 29, Count Orloff, in a state carriage, proceeded to the Tuileries and officially notified to the Emperor Napoleon the death of Nicholas and the accession to the throne of Alexander.

Accounts from Jaffa of the 16th of April states that the day before another sanguinary fight had taken place at Naplause; the Governor had finally beaten the rebels. Assistance had been demanded from Jerusalem but the Pacha of that city kept for himself his troops and cannon in the anticipation of disorders which might break out. At Jerusalem, moreover, the energetic attitude of the Pacha and the consuls promised to conjure away all danger. In the disturbance of the 4th ultimo, at Naplouse, the consular flags were pulled down, but the houses of the English agents were alone burnt down. It is the father of the Prussian consul, and not the consul, who has been killed. The Greek church and the English chapel have been abandoned, but no consul has perished.

Queen Victoria gave a concert on the evening of April 30th, at Buckingham Palace, at which the following artistes assisted, viz., Mesdames Novello, Viardot, Bosio, and Didiee, Signori Gardoni and Ronconi, Mr. Sims Reeves and Herr Formes. The foreign Ministers and a party of the nobility and gentry were invited, to the number of about 370. Mr. and Mrs. Dallas attended by royal invitation.

The Neapolitans are much gratified by a fact recently brought to light. Guilio Bianconi, a shoemaker, of Aversa, near Naples, was the man, it appears, who planted the French flag on the Malakoff Tower. He left his country some years ago for Algiers, where he entered a company of Zouaves. With them he embarked for the Crimea, and there he performed that act which has procured him his captaincy, the cross of the Legion of Honor, and the order of St. Maurice and of Lazzaro.

Spain.

A private letter from Madrid speaks of a desire existing on the part of the Government for making an expedition against Nicaragua, combined with France and England, under the apprehension that if the Americans succeed there the same filibusters may pass on next to Cuba. There are persons, however, who are of opinion that Spain had better keep her flag out of any collision with the "stripes and stars," for that the United States would in all likelihood make "a mighty pretty quarrel" out of anything of the sort, and that neither England nor France might think it expedient to extricate Spain from her embarrassment.

Twenty-one companies of the Valencia National Guard were on the 17th disarmed without resistance. The military commission was actively pursuing its endeavors to discover the principal criminals of the 6th of April, who will be punished with the utmost severity of the law. The town continues in an excellent state.

A report is in circulation that an insurrection had broken out at Granada, on the occasion of the drawing for the conscription, produced in the capital a slight alarm, which was soon dissipated. The committee of the congress appointed to examine into the conduct of the ex-ministers have determined on impeaching M. Sartorius.

The review of the National Guard of the province and city of Madrid, as well as the garrison of the capital, took place at Madrid, on the 20th. The army and the National Guard cordially fraternized. They both cried warmly—"Vive la Reine! Vive la Constitution! Vive Espartero!" Everything passed off with the most perfect order, and there was no accident to be regretted.

Portugal.

Last accounts from Lisbon present the Deputies still talking about the proposed adjournment of the discussion on the financial measures, and it is probable that the motion of Sr. Miguel de Canto will be carried. The other day a deputy very justly remarked that more time has already been lost in this matter than was consumed by the Paris Congress in settling the peace of Europe.

There is some probability that a statue to the great navigator Vasco de Gama will be erected near the Jeronymite Convent, whilst another to Camoens will be set up in Belem square, and a third, of the discoverer of Brazil, Nyno Alves Cabral, will be erected in the Rocio square.

The weather still continues somewhat unsettled, and the almanacs predict rain for two months to come.

News from China, India and Persia.

Hong-Kong dates are to March 15.

Sir John Bowring was about to proceed to Japan, to endeavor to obtain further treaty concessions, similar to what Russia obtained before the breaking out of the war. Sir John will also proceed to Cochin China to persuade the sovereign of that country to enter into a treaty similar to the one his Excellency negociated with Siam.

The arrival of the mail has had the effect of closing one of the great American houses at Canton—Nye, Brothers & Co. For some time past the credit of the firm has been sinking. The mail brought £15,000 returned bills drawn on F. Hush & Co., and a like sum returned from other quarters. The liabilities of the firm are estimated at one million and a half dollars. The cause of the failure (overtrading) will probably reach one or two other firms of Canton and Shanghai.

The American ship Mermaid, a splendid clipper vessel belonging to E. Gassett & Co., of Boston, was totally lost on the Pratas Shoal on the night of the 2d of March. Crew saved; cargo, cotton from Bombay.

We learn, from the New China Herald, with regard to the rebellion, that the Imperialists had of late been getting the worst of it; that they had sustained a defeat at Chin-kiang-fou, which they were besieging, and had fallen back on Tantoo, where they had formerly a military camp. At Whoo-hoo, on the banks of the Yang-tsze-keang, upwards of a hundred Imperialists had been killed, amongst whom were some Shanghai people, whose friends had received the intelligence of their death. It is reported that the people on the banks of the Yang-tsze-keang allow their hair to grow, for fear of being killed by the rebels, and that the mandarins had ceased decapitating them for this crime, as the numbers were so great that it was feared the whole country would rise in their defence. The Herald says the rebellion is now most active in Keang-se, to the south of the Poyang lake. It is reported that in the prefecture of Tseu-chou, between the Yang-tsze-keang and the Yellow rivers, seven cities have been taken by a set of rebels distinct from those of Nankin.

India, the Santhal Insurrection—Oude.—We take the following as the only items of interest from the Bombay correspondence of the London Daily News, dated April 2nd:

The Santhal insurrection is not only completely quieted, but malcontents, lately spreading terror through the districts, are quietly and of their own free will, earning their bread as railway laborers, improving the country they lately ravaged.

Oude continues as tranquil and orderly as any of the oldest provinces of the empire, and the organization for the new administration of affairs is all but completed. From the characters of many of the new employees, an impression has got abroad that more weight has been given to hints and recommendations from home in filling up vacancies than to the views of the chief Commissioner. If Sir James Outram is to be held responsible for the good government of the province, the absolute nomination of his employees is indispensable. The late king has got as far as Cawnpore, on his way, it is said to England.

Recent Annexations in India.—A return obtained by Sir Erskine Perry, and just printed, shows that the following annexations have taken place in India since the close of the Punjab war:—1849: Jeitpore (Bundelpund) 165 square miles, 16,000 population; 64,130 rupees gross revenue. Sumbulpore (southwest frontier, Bengal,) 4,693 square miles, 274,000 population; 73,000 rupees gross revenue.—1850: Burgat (Cis-Sujlet Hill states), 30 square miles, 3,420 population, 7,000 rupees gross revenue. The reason for annexation in each of these cases is, "failure of heirs." Part of the Sikkim (North-eastern India), 1,670 square miles, 61,766 population, 32,037 rupees gross revenue; "insult to the British Government, in seizing the persons of its representatives."—1852: Oodeypore (south-west frontier of Bengal), 2,306 square miles, 133,000 population, 16,480 rupees gross revenue; "failure of heirs;" Pegu, 20,000 square miles, one million population, revenue not known; "conquered from the Burmese during the last war." Territory resumed from Meer Ali Morad, one of the ameers of Sind, 5,412 square miles, population not known, 483,658 rupees gross and 261,043 net revenue; "forgery of a treaty, whereby he acquired certain districts which belong to the British Government."—1853: County of Tularam Sonaputtee, in northern Cachar, 2,160 square miles, 5,015 population, 1,208 rupees gross and 1,017 net revenue; "misconduct and breach of engagements with the British Government."—1854: Nagpore territory, 80,000 square miles, four million population, 400,000 rupees gross revenue; Jhansi (Bundelcund), 2,532 square miles, 200,000 population, 612,889 rupees gross revenue.—1855: Boodawul, 910 population, 2,727 rupees gross revenue. The last three annexations have been made on the ground of "failure of heirs." This shows that during the period of 1849–55, the territories annexed comprise 118,968 square miles, and 5,694,111 population, exclusive of the population of "territory resumed from Meer Ali Morad," which is not returned. There are four "cases in which annexation has been proposed by the government in India."—1852: Kerowiee, (Rajpootana); recommendation, withdrawn.—1855: Adjyghur (Bundelcund); to be reconsidered.—1856: Inchulkurunjee (Colapore); under consideration. Tanjore fort and ground adjacent; decision of the court of directors not communicated.

Persia,—Difficulty with Great Britain.—During the past fortnight (says the Bombay Times, of April 2d,) we have had three arrivals from the Persian Gulf, the latest being the Victoria steamer from Bushire, on the 20th of March. Everything was quiet and peaceable, the English residents being treated with the most marked respect by Government. It was rumored that the Ambassador's flag had, under some provisional arrangement with the Consul, been re-hoisted at Teheran, and that Mr. Mukray might very possibly be requested by the Shah to return. In place of proceeding to Mussool, near Bagdad, in Turkish Arabia, as originally proposed, he had gone north-westward, to Tabreez, remaining within the Persian dominions, encountering severe weather, intense cold and heavy snow on the way.

Everything continues uncertain in reference to the occupation of Herat and the state of matters in Affghanistan. The treaties of 1954, which have been published, show that we are in no way bound to assist Dost Mahomed, unless in so far as it meets our convenience.

It is quite apparent that the movements in Central Asia are spoken of in terms of the wildest exaggeration, and that they are not such as to occasion any rational man the slightest anxiety or alarm.

Foreign Miscellany.

Said Pacha has, during the last few days, been rushing about the country in the most fanciful manner. His Highness first started from Alexandria at the utmost speed of the railway to look at his new toy, a palace on the banks of the Nile, which he has purchased from one of his nephews for £100,000 sterling; thence he proceeded to the barrage of the Nile, where he is erecting extensive fortifications, which can never be of any use; then he came down the Nile to Cafr-el-Ais, whence he summoned by electric telegraph from Alexandria an accession of troops to the 2,000 cavalry and infantry he always takes about with him. At Cafr-el-Ais he expressed his intention of going to the great fair of Tantah in the Delta, which was then taking place, but changed his mind, and went down the Nile to Atfeh, where some measures are finally to be taken for the deepening of the canal. From Atfeh he returned to Cafr-el-Ais, and went to Tantah, where he spent a couple of days, and had the dancing girls to perform in his presence. Suddenly he gave order to take down all the tents, and mounting on horseback, he started in the direction of the railway station, where preparations were hurriedly made to receive his Highness, but he said he was not going by the railway, and proceeded down the line. The train started and soon overtook his Highness, who immediately called out to the engine driver to stop. The Viceroy dismounted, and on the plea of unwillingness to disturb the passengers, he gets on the locomotive, sits on the coke, and is now in Alexandria.—Letter from Alexandria (April 5.)

The Tribunal of Correctional Police at Paris have sentenced by default a man named Oppenheim to five years' imprisonment and 500f. fine, for having, by falsely pretending to be the eminent banker of that name, got a contractor for public works, named Buquoi, to give him 10,000f., in money and bills for 15,000f., on the promise of advancing him 500,000f. to enable him to execute the Civita Vecchia Railway, after which he took to flight. The man was also condemned to restore the money and bills.

The Precis Historiques says:—"The Sisters of Charity are rapidly increasing their establishments in Germany. The Protestants themselves encourage them in some towns. At Ulm the great esteem in which they are held is such that a committee composed of Protestants has been formed to collect and receive subscriptions and watch over the entertainment of some Sisters whose continuance in the hospital of that city was jeopardized.

There is in existence a treaty between the great powers of Europe, (except England and France,) signed in 1852, in which it is stipulated that no descendant of Louis Napoleon should be regarded as the heir apparent to the French crown; when he died, Russia, Austria and Prussia pledged their word to each other "to restore the legitimate heir of the throne." So the trouble in Europe may not be ended yet.

An advertisement appears in a Salzburg newspaper for a maid-servant. She is to live in the country, receive twenty-four florins (about ten dollars) a year, with board and lodging; be a good singer; be capable of taking her part in Koller's and Buhler's wasses, and understand the ringing of the church-bells.

A Berlin tailor, a lively speculator, exhibits a full Paris congress costume for fashionable attraction. It consists of an Orloff great coat, a Walewski evening frock, a Cavour waistcoat, Clarendon small clothes, and Manteuffel cravat, with Ali Pasha shirt front and Buol claque.

The French senate has just lost one of its members, in the person of the Count de Barral, who died in Paris a few days ago, aged 68. He held the post of page to the Emperor Napoleon I., and was present with him at the battle of Austerlitz.

A despatch from Stockholm announces that Prince Oscar, the second son of the King of Sweden, leaves Stockholm for London, in the middle of May, for his betrothal with the Princess Mary, of Cambridge.

One of the most celebrated pulpit orators of Paris, the Abbe de Deguerry, said in a sermon during Lent: "Woman, now-a-days, forget in the astonishing amplitude of their dresses, that the gates of Heaven are very narrow."

The Russian ladies have pledged themselves to wear dresses of domestic manufacture only.

There now remains in India but one native state of any considerable magnitude—that of Hyderbad, in the Deccan.

Since the abolition of the newspaper stamp in England, several of the old papers have stopped.

The Central American Question.

PUBLICATION OF FURTHER DISPATCHES—IMPORTANT CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN LORD CLARENDON AND MR. CRAMPTON.

A Blue Book of more than 300 pages has been presented to both houses of Parliament, containing the correspondence on the Central American question. A large proportion of these documents, and all that is necessary for the thorough comprehension of the question, were published in the American papers in January.

The Blue Book now submitted to Parliament contains some additional correspondence on this subject, and we give below some late and important dispatches that have passed between Lord Clarendon and Mr. Crampton in relation to this alleged proposal of arbitration:

The Earl of Clarendon to Mr. Crampton.

FOREIGN OFFICE, Feb. 8, 1856.

SIR: Mr. Buchanan called here two days ago, and with reference to a statement of mine in the House of Lords on the 31 ultimo, that Her Majesty's Government had offered to the United States Government to refer to arbitration the interpretation of the treaty of 1850, said he had not understood that any such offer had been officially and formally made to him, although he admitted that it had frequently been mentioned by me.

I told Mr. Buchanan that I received this communication with the utmost surprise, and that I really was at a loss to understand it, as the offer had been made by me in the most formal manner by direction of the Cabinet; that he had discussed with me the objections to the course and the difficulty of selecting any power whom both parties would regard as impartial; that in fact we had hardly ever discussed the Central American question together, without my saying that arbitration would be the fairest way of settling the matter, and that nearly three months ago I had again called his attention to the offer of her Majesty's Government, which he had promised to report to his Government. I then read to Mr. Buchanan my dispatch to you, dated Nov. 10, the correctness of which he did not dispute, and I said I had thought it right, in the event of any correspondence being laid before Congress, that the proposal of her Majesty's Government should be made known officially to Mr. Marcy through you, otherwise I had not been in the habit of addressing public dispatches to you on the subject, as I found that Mr. Marcy considered that the question was entirely in Mr. Buchanan's hands. Indeed, I had, as much as possible, avoided writing upon the matter, and had, therefore, not answered Mr. Buchanan's last note, although there was much in it that merited reply, because I wished to avoid all cause of irritation, and saw reason to think that this correspondence might assume a polemical and angry tone. I had given him, therefore, the advantage of the last word, and my communications had all been verbal, but it was a great satisfaction to me to reflect that neither upon that, nor upon any other subject, in the course of two years, had a hasty word passed between us, or anything that would not tend to promote kindly feelings between our respective countries.

Mr. Buchanan cordially concurred as to the friendly character of our relations and said that, although he had not considered the offer of arbitration to have been made in a formal manner, yet that he had invariably reported to his Government every thing that had fallen from me on the subject.

In answer to an inquiry from me, Mr. Buchanan added that no notice had been taken of the offer of arbitration by his Government. I am, &.,

(Signed) CLARENDON.

Mr. Crampton to the Earl of Clarendon—(Received March 18.)

Washington, March 4, 1856.

My Lord: With reference to your lordship's dispatch of the 8th ult., informing me that, to your lordship's great surprise, Mr. Buchanan has stated to you that he had not understood your lordship as having proposed formally to submit to arbitration the points in dispute between the two Governments in respect to the interpretation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, I learnt with equal surprise, a few days since, before the receipt of your lordship's dispatch, that the Government of the United States were under the same impression, and that the President intended, in answer to an inquiry on the part of the Senate, to send a message to that body, in which it would be stated that no such offer had ever been understood to have been made.

Your lordship has on so many occasions, in your unofficial as well as in your official correspondence with me, alluded to this proposal having been made by you to Mr. Buchanan, that it did not occur to me as possible that he had not conveyed it to his Government; and as the subject of the Central American question, the negotiation of which Mr. Marcy had on several occasions informed me he considered to have been, on the part of the American Government, confined exclusively to Mr. Buchanan's hands, had not, consequently, come under discussion between Mr. Marcy and myself, I did not conceive it to be necessary or desirable that I should originate any conversation on that topic, or make him a formal communication of the information conveyed to me by your lordship's dispatch of the 10th November last.

On receiving the above information of the misapprehension of the United States Government, I referred to that dispatch, and finding that it contained an instruction to me to communicate it to Mr. Marcy, I immediately did so, with a short explanatory note.

I must certainly take blame to myself for not having executed the instruction at an earlier period; but I confess that the passage of the dispatch conveying it to me had escaped my attention, and I had looked on the dispatch as intended to apprise me of what was going forward, rather than as an instruction to make a formal offer of arbitration to the United States Government.

Under this impression I thought it would be better for me to defer speaking to Mr. Marcy on the subject of the proposed arbitration until he should allude to it, for I apprehended that my interference in the matter might be taken as an undue intermeddling in a negotiation not under my charge, and as evincing a precauton which might not be well received, intended to guard against some presumed negligence of Mr. Buchanan's Government.

In the meantime I lost no opportunity of stating to leading Senators and other persons that such an offer had been made by her Majesty's Government.

Congress is now, however, in possession of the fact, and although certain Senators and certain newspapers have thought proper to attribute to Her Majesty's Government and myself the most extraordinary motives for what they consider to be your Lordship's negligence and not Mr. Buchanan's misapprehension, I am quite at a loss to conceive what object they can possibly imagine Her Majesty's Government could have in misleading the Government of the United States, and thus defeating for a time the object which her Majesty's Government themselves had in view.

I have only to repeat to your Lordship the regret that an oversight of my own may have in any sort contributed to prolong the erroneous impression produced by Mr. Buchanan's mistake of your Lordship's meaning.

I have the honor to inclose copies of the correspondence laid before Congress upon this subject. I have, &c.

[Signed] JOHN F. CRAMPTON.

Here follows the second letter from Mr. Crampton to Mr. Marcy, dated Washington, Feb. 27th, 1856, in which the former states that he overlooked Lord Clarendon's instructions to submit his proposal of arbitration to the United States Government. Published in the Daily Times, March 1st.

The Earl of Clarendon to Mr. Crampton.

FOREIGN OFFICE, March 26, 1856.

SIR:—I have received your dispatch of the 4th instant, explaining your omission to acquaint Mr. Marcy of the desire of her Majesty's Government to submit to arbitration their differences with the Government of the United States respecting the interpretation of the treaty of the 19th of April, 1850, which, by my dispatch of the 10th of November, you were instructed to do.

The Government of the United States cannot, however, found on your omission any allegation that they were thereby left in ignorance of any such offer having been made by her Majesty's Government; for, as I informed you in my despatch of the 8th of February, giving an account of Mr. Buchanan's statement that the offer of arbitration had not been formally made. Mr. Buchanan distinctly told me that whatever I had said to him upon the subject had been reported to his Government.

I cannot, however, but regret that you did not act upon the instruction conveyed in my dispatch of the 10th of November last, as it turns out your doing so would have made misunderstanding impossible; but, at the same time, it is right to add that you had repeatedly informed me that Mr. Marcy declined entering upon a question which was confided entirely to Mr. Buchanan, and such being the case, it certainly never occurred to me that the United States Government could have been ignorant of the offer of arbitration, which had been repeatedly made, and strongly recommended by me as the only mode of settling, in an honorable and satisfactory manner, a difference of opinion respecting the interpretation of a treaty. I am, &c.,

(Signed) CLARENDON.

[Extract.]

WASHINGTON, March 31, 1856.

It will be within your Lordship's recollection that Mr. Clayton was informed, by Sir Henry Bulwer, before the Treaty of 1856 was signed, that Ruatan was de jure and de facto a British possession; and Mr. Clayton has, on various occasions since, in conversation with me, stated that he considered Ruatan as much a British possession as Jamaica, or any other British West Indian island.

THE PROPOSED ARBITRATION ON THE CENTRAL AMERICAN QUESTION.

From the London Post (Official).

The correspondence with the United States respecting Central America is now published in the form of a Blue Book of considerable size, containing documents ranging in date from September, 1849—the period immediately antecedent to the negotiations relative to the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty—up to the present time. The first questions which public impatience not unnaturally asks are, what are the positive subjects of dispute between Great Britain and the United States, and at what stage has that dispute arrived? To answer the last question first; it appears Lord Clarendon has repeatedly offered to refer to arbitration our differences with the Government of Washington concerning the true interpretation of the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty. This offer has never been accepted, and has hardly been acknowledged. There is an incidental question, of little moment, as to the conduct of Mr. Crampton in not communicating a dispatch of Lord Clarendon's to Mr. Marcy, in which his Lordship informs Mr. Crampton of his offers of arbitration made to Mr, Buchanan, and desires him to make known the dispatch to Mr. Marcy.

Mr. Crampton regrets this omission on his part, but for all practical purposes the American Government, in conversations between Mr. Buchanan and Lord Clarendon, in whose hands the chief conduct of the negotiation has of late rested, were repeatedly invited to refer the matter to arbitration. Extracts of Mr. Buchanan's letters to his Government are given, in which he distinctly informs them of Lord Clarendon's proposal to refer the question to a third power. Mr. Buchanan, in an early part of the negotiation, represents himself as having "jocularly" replied to this proposal, that "the Emperor of Russia was the only power sufficiently independent to act as an impartial umpire in the case, and they had gone to war with him." On another like occasion, he says he "playfully" observed that "they had gone to war with our arbitrator." The upshot is, that up to the present moment the United States show themselves unwilling to submit to any arbitration. At this stage, then, the dispute has arrived. The Cabinet of Washington persists in its views, and the English Government resolutely maintains its own. * * * *

The Americans now wish to put such an interpretation upon the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty as to involve our retiring altogether from the position which we hold in that part of the world. The Americans assert that our protectorate of Mosquito, our possession of Ruatan, and our occupation of the Territory between the rivers Sibun and Sarstoon, are alike indefensible according to the treaty. We wholly deny this. With respect to the Mosquito protectorate, it has been exercised ab antiquo, and the very words of the treaty—"protection which either affords or may afford"—prove that the intention of the contracting parties was not to prohibit or abolish the protectorate, but to prevent its being used for purposes of occupation or colonization. Lord Clarendon admirably states the arguments which bear out this proposition to complete demonstration. The case is clear regarding the Islands of Ruatan and Bonacca, now called the "Bay Islands," and the Territory between the rivers Sibun and Sarstoon, for they form no part of Central America, which comprise the States that formed the Republic formerly known by that name, viz.: Guatemala, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Salvador and Honduras.

On this point Mr. Clayton's own words are perfectly satisfactory. He says on July 4, 1850:

"To the settlement, commonly called British Honduras, as distinct from the State of Honduras and the small islands in the neighborhood, which may be known as its dependencies, the treaty we negotiated was not intended by either of us to apply."

He is equally explicit as regards Ruatan, for Mr. Crampton says that Mr. Clayton had repeatedly stated to him in conversation, that he considered Ruatan as much a British possession as Jamaica, or any other British West Indian Island. From these facts Mr. Marcy and Mr. Buchanan in vain try to escape. Our case is so plain, and the conduct of our Government so straightforward and conciliatory, that we cannot but hope it will be impossible for any serious quarrel to arise between the two countries concerning this matter.

Congressional.

Thirty-fourth Congress—First Session—Senate.

May 13.—On the motion of Mr. Fish, the Secretary of War was directed to report to the Senate an estimate for the removal of the rocks at Hell Gate, New-York, so as to admit of the passage of vessels of war, and the largest class merchantmen, and such other aids to navigation as to render this passage safe. He gave notice that he should take early opportunity to introduce a bill providing for carrying out the above object. The Senate agreed to the report of the Committee of Conference on the Deficiency Bill. Mr. Cass concluded his remarks commenced yesterday, saying with regard to Kansas, that the recent troubles in that Territory had not in the least weakened his faith in the great doctrine of the right of man to govern himself. He condemned the everlasting discussion of the slavery question, which was quadrennially renewed with increased virulence on the eve of each Presidential election. The South does not meddle with the social system of the North, and if the North would follow its example, we should be the happiest and most contented, as we are to-day the finest, nation on the face of the globe. Mr. Clayton, speaking on the question of the Sound Dues, contended that this country ought no longer to submit to such an exaction. The treaty with Denmark had been abrogated, and nothing that could now be said or done would restore it.

May 14.—Mr. Clayton, of Del., said he had seen in the morning newspapers what purported to be an extract from a letter from the British Minister at Washington, dated March 31, 1856, in which Mr. Crampton says:

It will be within your Lordship's recollection that Mr. Clayton was informed by Sir Henry Bulwer, before the treaty of 1850 was signed, that Ruatan was de jure and de facto a British possession, and Mr. Clayton has, on various occasions since, in conversation with me, stated that he considered Ruatan a British possession as much as Jamaica or any other West India Island.

Mr. Clayton branded this statement as utterly untrue in every particular. The British minister must have labored under an hallucination as strange as ever entered the brain of any man, to make such a declaration. Nothing like it had ever escaped him in conversation with Mr. Crampton or any one else. Fortunately the fact did not rest merely upon the statements of Mr. Crampton and himself. He had a living witness. And first he would call attention to a letter written by Mr. Crampton, and read in the Senate on the 12th of January 1854, in which he (Mr. Crampton) attempted to prove that Ruatan was not a dependency of Belize, and was not exempted from the provisions of the treaty of 1850. He then had Mr. Crampton's testimony on the subject, and read it to the Senate. He would now read it again, to contradict Mr. Crampton's statement, which was made known to him for the first time this morning, and of which he had not the most remote conception. In this letter Mr. Crampton said—"The dependencies of British Honduras are in my opinion distinctly enumerated in the treaty of 1786." He had made this statement deliberately, and the irresistible conclusion was that Ruatan was not included in those dependencies. Mr. Clayton said, while he was detained at his lodging by sickness in February or March last, he was called on by Mr. Crittenden, and while they were engaged in conversation on this subject, Mr. Crampton came in to invite him (Clayton) to dine with him. He was too sick to accept of the invitation, but took occasion to ask Mr. Crampton if he knew anything of the charge that he (Clayton) had ever admitted that Ruatan was exempted from the operation of the treaty, and Mr. Crampton, in most unqualified terms, acknowledged that there was no truth in the report that he (Clayton) had ever made any such intimation to him. Mr. Crittenden, of Ky., corroborated Mr. Clayton's statement. Mr. Cass thought it very certain that Mr. Clayton, unless in some fit of insanity, could never have said to Mr. Crampton what was attributed to him. Mr. Pratt, of Ia., inquired what evidence there was that this letter was authentic. He thought there must be some mistake. Mr. Clayton had no knowledge as to its authenticity. No matter by whom made, it was false. If Mr. Crampton did not make the statement, he was not injured by these remarks; if he did make it, it was for Mr. Crampton to explain. Mr. Fish said, that in the course of two interviews with Mr. Crampton, the latter had stated that Mr. Clayton always denied that Ruatan was a British possession. He thought there must be some mistake in the copy of the letter. Mr. Cass said, that Great Britain being repeatedly driven from one point of defence, had invariably taken refuge at another, and recent events had shown this more strongly than ever. THE IOWA LAND BILL.—The Senate, after debating the motion to reconsider the vote by which the Iowa Land Bill was passed, refused to reconsider and adjourned.

May 15.—CENTRAL AMERICAN AFFAIRS—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.—A Message was received from the President, inclosing reports from the Secretary of State, Secretary of the Navy, and the Attorney-General, in reply to a resolution of the Senate in March last, also a resolution of the House adopted May 8, both having reference to routes of transit between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, through the Republics of New-Granada and Nicaragua, and to the condition of our affairs with Central America. The documents accompanying the report are very voluminous. Those from the Attorney-General comprise instructions to prevent the fitting out of expeditions, military or naval, for invading the territory of any Foreign powers. The report of the Secretary of the Navy embraces various orders to the Commanders of the Susquehanna, Potomac, Fulton, and St. Mary's. To Commodore Paulding the Secretary incloses a copy of the statement of Capt. Tinklepaugh, of the Orizaba, saying that it presents a case which makes it manifest that our flag be shown at San Juan de Nicaragua. In consideration of these circumstances, he is directed to proceed there with the frigate Potomac, and in distributing the vessels of the Home Squadron, the Secretary gave particular instructions to each Commander to touch at Panama, Aspinwall and San Juan, as often as consistent with a due regard to the interests of our country in those parts—the sloop St. Mary's to remain at Panama as long as she is needed. The documents contain full particulars of the outrages at Panama. Also, a letter from President Rivas, dated April 17, addressed to the President of the United States as "Great and good friend." He says he is desirous of cultivating friendly relations, and has thought fit to accredit Padre Vijil, as Minister to the United States, a reliable person, on account of his knowledge of public affairs and his patriotic feelings, to the end, with that character, he may enter into treaties of alliance. He asks this Government to treat him kindly.

INTERESTING DEBATE.

Mr. Mason moved to refer the message to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and to print it. Mr. Crittenden had seldom, if ever listened to a message from the Executive which was fraught with more absorbing interest, or which might lead to more serious consequences. In one week's time the country would be agitated from one end to the other on this subject, and it might result in our being involved in war. If we were to have a war, however, he wanted it to be accepted or denounced by Senators in an open, manly manner, and not have a course of policy pursued by which we should go on, step by step, blindly until we fell into the pit. The Government of Nicaragua, which the President has officially recognized, was a thing of yesterday, as it were. At any rate the shoes were not yet worn out upon the feet of those who had wrought this new revolution, and already the Executive had become satisfied of its permanency and its capacity to discharge its duties as a nation in the great family of nations. This seemed to him a very hasty conclusion to arrive at in a matter of so much consequence, the revolution having been effected too, as the President admits, by the co-operation of our own countrymen who went there contrary to the laws of this country. Was this the national prudence which had hitherto guided our course? What said General Jackson when Texas long stood knocking for admittance into the Union, even after we were assured of her ability to govern herself, and when she had by repeated victories established her title to be considered one of the communities of the world? General Jackson's message gave a thorough, profound, and patriotic rebuke to every principle of the present message.

Mr. Mason could see no objection to the reference. The documents merely informed the Senate of the actual condition of the country in which we take a great deal of interest. The President had learned that a change had taken place in the Government of Nicaragua, which simply amounted to the fact that they had one set of law-makers in lieu of another, and being satisfied the new Government was a Government de facto, and had sufficient ability to conduct the affairs of the country, the President felt himself called upon to receive its minister. That was all. The argument of the Senator from Kentucky, in the case of Texas, would not apply here. That was a new nation in the family of nations, but Nicaragua has been recognized as a political community ever since 1824—at one time in confederation with other States, and afterwards as a separate State. When they change their Government all we have a right to inquire, is it a real Government, and have they shown sufficient stability to entitle us to receive them as such. We have had a minister resident there for several years, and she has had one here. We have been on terms of political intercourse with Nicaragua for a series of years, as we have with other Governments, and the President must, by virtue of his office, regulate our diplomatic intercourse with foreign Ministers. This existing Government of Nicaragua has been established six or eight months, and so far as we are informed, it is a government of greater stability than has existed in that unfortunate country for many years. The Senator had spoken of war. Who are we to go to war with? Whence is the cloud to arise? Does he allude to a foreign transatlantic Government that has more than once intermeddled as we have never done, but have always refrained from doing, with the domestic as well as political affairs of Nicaragua? Are we to be deterred by that from acknowledging that Government? Mr. Mason said, if he thought the recognition of the Government of Nicaragua would bring to an issue the question pending between us and any foreign power, in which we are in the right, he would not hesitate to do it. We had not refused to recognize the existing Governments of France when they had passed through the various stages of monarchy, anarchy, military despotism, a republic, and at last an autocracy.

Mr. Pratt said the Government of Nicaragua, being recognized, our citizens would have the right to go there, and could make that a stable Government, which was not so now. He thought that nineteen-twentieths of those who had established the Government were Americans, who had gone there in violation of the neutrality laws.

Mr. Mason said the recognition would not affect our neutrality laws in the slightest degree. Our citizens are at liberty to go where they please, and after they have reached a foreign country they could engage in any pursuit they pleased.

Mr. Weeler gave a history of the struggle between Chomorro and Castillon, saying that Walker went there by invitation of the latter, after he had succeeded in establishing himself at the head of the Nicaraguan army. The present Government of Nicaragua was established by the aid of North Americans, at the request of the natives, and during the six months it has been in operation there has been no civil war, and he knew of no party in Nicaragua who were trying to upset the existing Government. There was no other pretended Government there. He alluded to British interference in behalf of Costa Rica, and said the British Government had, during the last eight years, annexed 200,000 square miles, being more territory that all the Central American States combined. Our Central American affairs are fast coming to a head. It may be, we shall be precipitated into a war, but if so we may just as well settle this matter now as at any other time. I desire war with no country. I represent a constituency upon whom will fall the full weight of the first blow that shall be struck; but if we are to have war, let it be on this great principle: We are on the right side, and the God of our fathers will go with us and give us the victory; thrice is he armed who has his quarrel just.

The documents were ordered to be printed, and without taking the question on the reference, the Senate adjourned.

House of Representatives.

May 13.—Mr. Jones, (Pa.) in reply to his colleague, Mr. Fuller, denied, on unquestionable authority, that Mr. Buchanan was Chairman of the Committee which framed and reported to the meeting at Lancaster, resolutions denunciatory of the Missouri Compromise. Mr. Buchanan did not see them till they appeared in print. During Mr. Polk's admininistration, Mr. Buchanan proposed to extend the Missouri line to the Pacific, but in 1850 he declared that the Compromise measures superseded that line, which construction led inevitably to the adoption of the principles embodied in the Kansas Nebraska bill. Mr. Jones pointed with pride to the long public life of Mr. Buchanan. Mr. Fuller, of Pa., gave the Democratic journal of that State as the authority for his assertion, that Buchanan had reported the Lancaster resolutions denunciatory of the Missouri Compromise—it was published in 1852. The House adopted the report of the Committee of Conference on the Deficiency bill, from which had been stricken an appropriation of $300,000 for the continuation of the Washington aqueduct. Two hundred and ten thousand copies of the agricultural portion of the patent office report was ordered to be printed. Mr. Evans depicted the fatal consequences to our nationality which must result from the continued agitation of the Slavery question, and invoked the South to stand firm in an unbroken phalanx against the invaders of their constitutional rights.

May 14.—A bill was reported granting to Florida a million acres of land for railroad purposes. The Public Lands Committee intend to report similar bills for Michigan, Louisiana, Mississippi and Wisconsin, requiring in all about six million acres. The Florida bill passed—84 to 57.

May 15.—Mr. Knowlton offered a resolution that the judiciary Committee be directed to look into the late homicide case, and report whether Mr. Herbert should be held amenable to the House, under the power to punish or expel members for disorderly behavior. This motion was laid on the table by a vote of 79 against 70. The Washington City Municipal Elections Bill was passed. Adjourned.

May 16.—Nothing of importance transacted in either House. Both adjourned to Monday 19th.

Sketches from Life.

A pen and ink sketcher in the Daily Times, under the head of foreign gossip, gives some sketches of which we retain the outline, with just sufficient color to add to the effect.

Mr. Chisholm Anstey, M. P. for the Borough of Youghal, Ireland, has arrived at Hong Kong, over which important colony he has been appointed Attorney-General. Mr. Anstey is a strange ourang-outang looking creature. Being bald, he labors under a delusion common to artificially high-foreheaded gentlemen, that he looks like Shakespere, of which supposed resemblance he is singularly proud. He was born in Van Dieman's Land, in which pleasant dominion his father holds large property. On coming to England, he started as a barrister and champion of the English Roman Catholics, and was for some time associated with the late Mr. Lucas in the conduct of the Tablet newspaper. For his zeal in the cause of the Roman Catholics, of which he was a devoted bayard, he was made, by his Holiness the Pope, a Knight of the Gold Spur. He did not, however, get on much the faster for this addition to his heel, but soon, from restless ambition, became dissatisfied, and quarrelled with most of the leading Roman Catholic ecclesiastics, including the present Cardinal Wiseman. At the election of 1847 he started for the borough of Youghal, and on Repeal and ultra Roman Catholic principles, and was returned. Mr. Urquhart, of Eastern notoriety, contributing the necessary funds. Mr. Anstey justified his patron by accusing Lord Palmerston of every crime committed beneath the sun. When he had concluded, Mr. Shiel, M. P. for Dungarvan, the Irish orator, arose, and premising "that the geographical propinquity of Dungarvan to Youghal must be my excuse for following the honorable gentleman," disposed in seven minutes of his seven hours' oration, amid the cheers and laughter of the House. A few days afterwards, as Mr. Anstey was sitting on a bench behind Lord Palmerston, the wily diplomat, with that gallant ease that sits so lightly on him, turned round and making some familiar remark, took the Commoner's arm, and, to his delight and confusion, walked with him out of the house. A few evenings after, a small scented card, "Lady Palmerston at home Saturday evening," displayed itself in the corner of Mr. Anstey's pier glass, in a fourth-floor chamber, in the Temple, and in Lady Palmerston's saloons Mr. Anstey, was, henceforward, found in spotless white tie and waistcoat, a favored guest. If he had got a good price, exclaimed the forsaken Urquhart, I might have forgiven him, but, oh! horrible to sell me for an ice. Mr. Spooner, who introduced the bill for the withdrawal of the grant to Maynooth, is a most lugubrious-looking individual, with long lantern jaws always in trim for a psalm. He repeats every year the same speech and same arguments. A few days since, Mr. Osborne, the witty member for Middlesex, had a copy of his last year's speech in his lap, and, as he proceeded, called out, with his usual gay audacity, as he went on: "Now, old boy, for Bellarmine, now Bailey," and so on, to the intense delight of the House. Mr. Spooner is usually seconded by Mr. Newdegate, his colleague, another solemn swell, and their character was well epitomized by Sergeant Murphy, the member for Cork, and par excellence wit of the House. "There are three degrees of spooneyism," exclaimed the Sergeant, "Spoon, Spooner, Newdegate."

Mr. Meagher, the member for Waterford city, and father of Mr. T. F. Meagher, made his maiden speech in opposition to Mr. Spooner's bill. Mr. Meagher, though not a speaker, is regarded with more respect than perhaps any of the Irish members both in the country and the House of Commons. He is alike insensible to favors, flattery, or fashion, perhaps the most powerful seducer of all three; and it may be said of him, as of FABRICIUS of old, as well might you turn the sun from his path as him from the road of rectitude. He is a Roman Catholic of the severest intensity, both in practice and belief, and in politics inclined to what is for the time termed "the Independent Opposition;" but he is generous and tolerant in opinion, and with a spirit worthy of imitation among Irishmen, while sternly adhering to what he deemed right, did not, like so many of his countrymen, think necessary to denounce all who differed from him as spies, traitors, perjurers and thieves. Mr. Meagher is a man of large fortune, which he employs with a beneficent generosity in doing good, and, though he has never shared in the enthusiastic national aspirations of his son, probably from a disbelief in the possibility of their realization, is intensely proud of his heroism and genius. The representation of his native city was forced on both occasions upon Mr. Meagher, entirely against his wish, his tastes and habits being unsuited to the turmoil of Parliamentary life, and as long as he desires he may retain it.

Sir Robert Peel has returned with his beautiful bride from passing the honeymoon in Italy. Sir Robert is a noble gallant fellow, with a heart and hand open as day; and like all such characters, full of noble virtues and soft weaknesses. In his youth he was wild, kept Lola Montez, fought with the Jesuits, gambled in all the hells, and did all manner of dangerous and daring things. In person he is of splendid proportion, and with features which, if not delicately defined, are manly and full of fire. He wears, contrary to the usual custom in England, an imperial and moustache, and his hair, like his father's, is a slightly subdued red. But he has none of the cold caution which characterizes the decorous Bob, and that chip of the old block, his brother Frederick.

Padre Vijil.

The New Orleans Delta gives a somewhat romantic sketch of the life and antecedents of Padre Vijil, the new Minister from Nicaragua. The Padre has the character of possessing the energy, experience and capacity to qualify him for the post to which he has been appointed. Indeed, the Delta regards him as a remarkable man, who enjoys a greater reputation, as a thinker and a scholar, than most of his countrymen. He is now in the maturity of life, being about fifty years of age; of a pleasing person, and agreeable manners. He has travelled extensively, and been a keen observer of men and things. In many respects, his career has been an adventurous and romantic one.

The Padre was at one time a lawyer, and enjoyed a high reputation in his profession. He became involved in the political movements which have periodically agitated Nicaragua and the neighboring states, and his zeal carried him into difficulties the consequence of which was death or exile. Chosing the latter alternative, he left Central America, and as he was prohibited from returning in the character either of lawyer, soldier, or politician, he resolved to become a priest, so that he might again reside in his native land, under the protection of the church.

In his new capacity (says the Delta) the Padre won many friends and rapidly rose to distinction in the ecclesiastical world, securing universal respect by his charity, his talents, and his unquestionable virtues. There is no safer profession than that of a priest, and, as far as our experience goes, none so profitable. So the Padre found that he was secure under his surplice, and that one who cannot love his country as a lawyer with impunity, can afford to worship her as a priest. In diplomacy he soon distinguished himself as much as in theology, and we see the practical result of his sagacity and energy in the recent appointment which he has received from the revolutionary government of Nicaragua.

Personally the Padre is a very accomplished individual, with splendid physical as well as mental organization. He is said to be one of the handsomest men in Nicaragua. With his fine, well-balanced head, his stately bearing, his polished manners, his insinuating eloquence, he is likely to overtop by a head (if we may use the significant phrase of old Homer) all the diplomatists, foreign and domestic, assembled at Washington.

From California, Oregon and Washington Territories.

By the arrival of the Empire City at New-Orleans, we have San Francisco dates to the 21st of April. The California news is not important.

The Oregon war continued. A body of Regulars had been defeated by the Indians at Rogue River, with a loss of twenty-eight killed. The capture and destruction of Cascades by the Indians is confirmed. Several whites had been massacred at that place. It was reported that 1,000 Indians were approaching Dallas from the North. Several other fights are reported, the whites being generally victorious.

In Washington Territory the Indians were attacking the settlements in every direction. Col. Buchanan had defeated the Indians along the banks of the Rogue River, thus relieving the citizens in that vicinity. The Central American papers are filled with the official correspondence between the dignitaries of State and the Commander of the United States sloop-of-war St. Marys and others, relative to the riot at Panama. There is nothing from Nicaragua, except a report that Col. Schlesinger had been recaptured by the Walker party, and condemned to be shot.

SIXTEEN DAYS LATER.

By the arrival (16th) of the George Law, W. L. Herndon, U. S. N. Commander, which left Aspinwall on the 7th, we have news of a frightful accident on the Havana railroad. The train with the passengers from the George Law for San Francisco ran off the track between Aspinwall and Panama, and was made a complete wreck.

Up to the time of leaving Aspinwall a correct account could not be obtained of the number killed and wounded, but rumors stated the number large.

Peace and quietness prevailed in Panama, and there were no signs of further disturbance.

The sloop-of-war St. Mary was in the harbor, where she would remain awaiting orders.

Died, on board the George Law, on the 13th of May, L. H. Willis, of fever. On the same day, Dr. T. J. Houpt, of consumption.

The George Law brought $1,687,816 in specie.

We have accounts of terrible freshets in Tennessee. In Giles county the damage is immense. Richland creek and its tributaries swept away stock of all kind, hogs, cattle, and sheep, with the greatest force. One man lost two hundred sheep. Nearly every small bridge, from Columbia to Elkton, has been carried away. But the most melancholy result, says the Nashville Banner, occurred at Lynnville, situated on the turnpike road, about fourteen miles north of Pulaski.

Lynn Creek, running through the town, rose to such a height on Tuesday morning, and so suddenly, as to destroy almost without warning a house occupied by a man named Richardson, situated in the lower part of the village, within some twenty feet of the main road. The building was crushed in a few moments, the father and mother finding themselves, with an infant, drifting down the angry torrent, two other children having perished in bed, at the time the house fell. After floating with the wreck about three quarters of a mile, the whole family lodged against a tree, the father severely injured, the three children dead, and the mother so jammed among the drift, as with the best efforts of the husband barely able to keep her head above the roaring waters.

In this condition they were discovered a little after daylight, and heroically rescued by a young man named Isaac Bearden, who swam his horse to the spot, declaring his intention to "save them or perish in the attempt." Others finally aided him in the generous endeavor. Such noble conduct needs no eulogy; it is an honor to human nature.

It is reported that an overseer and a negro man have perished in the same neighborhood. Altogether, the visitation has no parallel in the history of that region since its settlement.

Yesterday, says the Philadelphia Journal of the 15th, in the Sixth Ward, a young man, who had paid his addresses to a young woman and wronged her, was arrested at the suit of the mother of the injured one, in order to compel him to make reparation. Hearing that her faithless lover was in the hands of the police, and at the magistrate's office, with the prospect of going to prison, the disconsolate fair one attempted to put an end to her existence by hanging herself. She was fortunately discovered and cut down. As soon as the lover heard of this turn of affairs, he was so overpowered that he at once resolved to act nobly, and straightway made the unhappy lady his wife.

Irish News.

Debate in the Commons on the Irish Presbyterian Grant.

On the grant of £39,000 for the Protestant non-conforming ministers in Ireland being proposed,

Mr. A. Pellatt objected to the vote. The sum had been gradually increased, and he was not aware of any grounds to justify parliament passing such a grant. He moved that it be reduced by the sum of £37,639. In Ireland, where there was a state payment to the Presbyterian clergy of £35 each, there was the greatest difficulty in raising the income any higher by voluntary contributions; whereas the congregations of the same class of ministers in the Free Church of Scotland raised £100 a-year without any difficulty; the fair inference from which was, that the state payment had the effect of pauperising the Irish Presbyterian clergyman. It was an avowed political payment; and he called upon the Roman Catholic members of the house, placed as they were in the position of compulsorily paying for the support of the Established Church in that country, to join with him in wiping out the payment to the Presbyterian ministers in Ireland. The hon. gentleman concluded by moving the reduction of the vote by £37,639 14s. 8d. for forty-four ministers (first class), and 485 ministers (second class).

Mr. Kirk supported the vote, which had been granted in lieu of tithes, of which those clergymen had been unjustly deprived. The whole sum granted was only one-seventh of the whole amount of which the Presbyterian clergy of Ulster had been so deprived. That sum was about £9,000 a-year, while the grant was only £1,200. He defended the Presbyterian Church of Ireland from the imputation that the grant had been made to them for the purchase of loyalty; and denied that the Presbyterian congregations of Ulster were rich—were other, in fact, than what was called tenant farmers there, but who would be called cottiers in Scotland or England. If the grant were withdrawn, religious worship would inevitably cease in some districts, because the congregations would be too poor to support a clergyman from their own resources. The wealthier classes of Presbyterians had subscribed a sum of £25,000 to build manses and improve livings to the fullest extent of their means. The success of the scheme of the hon. gentleman would be a failure in Ireland, if the results were to be judged by what had taken place in England, where 274 chapels were vacant for want of funds to pay the clergymen, while there were no fewer than 290 ministers in England without charges. In Wales there were 75 chapels vacant. If that was the case in this wealthy country, what might be expected to pass in such a poor country as Ireland? Still many of the poorer parishes of Ireland contributed even beyond their means.

Sir J. Fitzgerald supported the amendment, on the ground that the vote to Maynooth had been refused.

Mr. Hadfield also supported the amendment.

The committee then divided—Ayes, 60; Noes, 230; Majority against Mr. Pellatt's amendment, 170.

Mr. Hadfield said their cause was growing, and he hoped they would by-and-by put an end to these extinctions. The Regium Donum to a great extent owed its support to the Catholics, and that, too, notwithstanding the bitter hostility of Protestants to a vote for the support of the education of the priests. The hon. gentleman, after some further remarks, and stating that the vote was in itself a piece of bold effrontery, proposed to reduce it by £3.097. For the amendment, 39; Against it, 214; Majority, 175.

Mr. Kershaw moved that the sum of £500 for ages, salaries, and allowances be struck out of the vote, and also a sum of £151 15s. 8d. for the payments of clerks and synods. He said that a considerable number of Presbyterians in Ireland were anxious that this grant should be done away with (cries of "no, no"). He might be mistaken with regard to a considerable number; but, at all events, he was not mistaken with regard to several Presbyterians. He thought it was an injustice and a hardship upon the poor Nonconformists of England, who were content to live upon 10s. or 14s. a-week, that the Government should come down here, year after year, and for this grant of money. He himself heard the other day the hon. member for Sheffield (Mr. Hadfield) offer to him £5,000 to build fifty chapels in the county of Lancaster, which was an example he should like to see followed by others (hear, hear.)

Mr. Hadfield supported the amendment for reducing the vote.

The committee divided. For the amendment, 40; Against it, 198; Majority, 158.

The Chairman then put the original motion.

Mr. F. Crossley objected to it, as involving a new principle, and, to give hon. members an opportunity of speaking on it, moved, as an amendment, that the Chairman report progress.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer hoped the hon. member would withdraw his amendment, considering that important business had prevented the house going into committee of supply until a late hour.

The committee then divided. For the amendment, 16; against it, 211; Majority, 195.

Mr. Barnes moved, amid loud cries of "divide," that the vote be reduced by £346 3s. 4d., the allowance for the ministers for new congregations.

After a few words from Mr. Kirk and Mr. Hadfield, the votes were agreed to without a division.

The vote for £6,062 for charitable allowances in Ireland was also agreed to.

The opening of the Foynes railway will not take place till June, instead of May, as was generally expected.

The Tipperary Free Press (by last mail) says, there was 1,001 paupers in the Cashel union, being a decrease of 356 from the same period last year. At the last meeting of the Clogheen union, there were 505 paupers in the house, being a decrease of 168 from the same period last year.

A petition from Queenstown in favor of the tenant bill, having 1,400 signatures attached, has been forwarded by the Rev. Mr. Cullinan, R. C. A., to Mr. Maguire, for presentation.

On the 6th instant, says the Liverpool Daily Times, a case of gross superstition, which resulted in the death of a boy, took place in Kilkenny. The facts were these:—A boy, about ten years of age, named Patrick Kirans, who resided with his parents, near Kilkenny, was attacked with illness, but the nature of the disease is not stated. Some of the neighbors persuaded the parents of the boy that he was "fairy struck!" In consequence, a "fairy man" was sought, and found in the person of one Michael Donovan, an ignorant fellow about twenty-one years of age. He was sent for, and on arriving at the house he was shown the poor lad, who was at the time in articulo mortis. Donovan dragged the boy out of bed, and gave him a jug full of cold water to drink. The boy rejected this, being at the moment in the last pangs of existence. Donovan then declared that the fairies would not be put out of the boy in this manner, and in order to show his power over the "wee people," he pulled the boy violently by the ears, beating him about the head, and kicked him severely on parts of the body. The boy died, and there was no more about the matter until the priest of the neighborhood heard of the transaction, and he at once informed the coroner, who held an inquest on the body, and the jury found a verdict of wilful murder against Donovan. The "fairy man" had in the meantime absconded, and a reward was issued for his apprehension. On 21st ult., Head-constable Richard M'Hale, of the Irish constabulary, arrested Donovan on board the ship Bridgewater, now in the river Mersey, and bound for America. He had a sum of £1 4s. in money, and a good store of clothes and provisions on board. The accused at first denied that he was the person charged, and said he was from Tipperary, but ultimately he confessed he was the man. Mr. M'Hale brought him on shore. He was transmitted to Ireland to answer the charge.

The Waterford Mail learns with pleasure that very satisfactory tenders for steam service between South Wales and Waterford have been received by the Directors of the South Wales Railway, who naturally say that having expended a large sum in bringing the Railway to the water's edge at Milford, they cannot allow it to stop there. We understand one of the largest steamboat proprietors in the south of Ireland has gone to London to try and obtain the contract, and we hope he may be successful.

Sergeant Berwick intends to offer himself as candidate for the representation of Dungarvan. From an Irish exchange we learn, that Mr. Maguire, the present representative will not seek to be re-elected, as he intends to stand for Cork.

A poor fisherman, of the name of Kilpatrick, of the county Down, Ireland, by the death of an uncle in this country, lately became heir to the nice little sum of $80,000. An excellent haul, and better than Killyleagh bay ever furnished.

It is said that the new iron ship now building at the Neptune Foundry, will be as large as the Great Britain.

There are 255 paupers less in the Waterford union than shown by the returns for the year previous.

The following evidence of "how to save a ledger" appeared before Commissioner Hatchell, of the Insolvent Court, last month. The Insolvent (named Atchison) being questioned as to how and from what books he got certain dates which he had been using, made answer—

Insolvent—My books and papers were all destroyed by the great storm of Christmas, 1852, with the exception of my ledger. My house was blown down but I saved the ledger.

Commissioner—How did the ledger escape?

Insolvent—Oh! my lord, all respectable mercantile men keep their ledger in a place of safety, away from the other books. They generally have a place excavated in the earth and a large flag over it, and they put the ledger there.

Commissioner—I see; was that your way of keeping it?

Insolvent—Oh! yes—with a large flag upon the place, there was just room for the ledger and a thin book.

Commissioner—How often did you take it out of the tomb? Every night?

Insolvent—Oh! no, my lord, about once a week.

Court—Did anybody ever see the ceremony, or assist in the operation of burying the ledger, but yourself? Were you the sole mourner?

Insolvent—No one but myself! I kept it there for fear of theft, but I kept my money in a desk, it was by that means I saved the ledger.

The Commissioner said this extraordinary romance was of a piece with the Insolvent's whole conduct, and with the way in which the books were kept. He would let the case stand over.

It seems that the expectations respecting the employment of the Irish militia for another year on active service are not to be realised. The Dublin Mail now announces that a correspondence upon the subject has taken place between the War-office and the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland. His Excellency was informed that the Government had resolved upon disbanding the English and Scotch regiments of militia, and Lord Carlisle was asked whether there was, in his opinion, any valid objection to taking a similar course with respect to the Irish militia, and, as the reply is to the effect that the Irish Government sees no objection, the Irish militia will, no doubt, be disembodied. It is generally supposed that the medical officers will receive compensation.

From Loughrea, county Galway, under date April 26, we have the following: This morning the sub sheriff of the county, accompanied by 100 police and three officers, proceeded to the lands of Dartfield, to put in execution seven ejectment decrees obtained at the last Galway assizes; and six ejectment decrees, had at the last quarter sessions of Ballinasloe, against the tenants on the property of Mrs. Maria Louisa Blake. On arriving at the houses where the conflict took place on the 23d of November last, they found them deserted, so that there was nothing left for the sheriff to do but to give possession. Eight men were then procured, who, being provided with crowbars, proceeded to level the houses, seven of which were razed to the ground, and the doors and windows of the others stopped up with stones, the roof of each being first tumbled in.

The Dublin papers inform us that the zealous intervention of one of the city of Dublin members in procuring a share of the public money to be expended on fire-works for the amusement of his constituents had been promptly followed by the Earl of Carlisle, who had already issued orders for a brilliant illumination in all the public offices on the ratification of the treaty of peace by the several Sovereigns. Arrangements will be also made for a display of fireworks on a large and magnificent scale. The place selected for the principal display was the Phœnix Park, and the spot "his Excellency" has pointed out as the most suitable for the purpose is the mound on which the Wellington Testimonial stands, as being a position which will enable the greatest number of persons to witness the fireworks, and as the best adapted to afford those at a distance an opportunity of seeing their effect.

The magisterial investigation relative to the murder of Mrs. Sarah Kelly was resumed on the 24th, at Moate, the procedings, as previously, being private. The steward of the deceased, and two other witnesses were examined, but it is understood that nothing of importance was elicited. The Crown Solicitor conducted the enquiry, and professional men attended on the part of the representatives of the deceased and of her nephew, Mr. Strevans, who continues in custody, The magistrates decided on remanding all the prisoners, and a further reward of £200 has been offered for private information relative to the murder, making the amount of reward already offered £800. A local paper has the following misty revelations respecting the assassins of Mrs. Kelly: "We are enabled to state from private sources that many facts have been elicited tending to create a belief that the assassination of the unfortunate Mrs. Kelly was the result of a widely-extended conspiracy, and that the impunity with which the murderers were permitted to escape was not by any means accidental. Further it would not at this stage of the proceedings become us to state; probably a very short time will develope the foul machinations which led to the sanguinary deed." Mr. Strevans, nephew of Mrs. Kelly, and James Bannon were on Thursday committed for trial at the assizes.

The important business of settling the list of parties liable for the debts of the Tipperary Bank, was commenced on the 28th, by Master Murphy, in the Nisi Prius Court, Dublin. Nothing was done with the list. One might suppose (says the Dublin correspondent of the Morning Herald) that every name on the list was disputed, or charged with being erroneously there. One counsel represented no fewer than 53 English shareholders, who one and all repudiate any liability to the concern; and he promised that affidavits from each would be forthcoming at the next meeting. One of these repudiators is a governess, and her name stands on the list for 400 shares. The main business had reference to Messrs. Vincent, Frank, and J. Scully, Mr. W. Kennedy, and Mr. Keating, M.P. Counsel on behalf of Mr. V. Scully showed that he parted with his shares in April, 1855, because he ceased to have any confidence in the concern. Althongh a director, he knew nothing at all about it. There was no audit of the accounts, and he was kept completely in the dark. The Master postponed his judgment as to whether he should be held liable in the first or second instance. Mr. Keating represents himself as merely the trustee of Mr. John Sadlier, and seeks exemption on this ground. In short, no one admits he is liable in the first degree, and implies he should go scot free. One thing is quite clear—that the late John Sadleir and his brother, Mr. James Sadlier, managed to get possession of the entire property of the Bank, the funds of the shareholders, and the lodgments of the depositors, while they managed to keep the other directors in utter ignorance of their doings.

After the close of the ceremonies on Low Sunday, a rather important meeting took place in the parish chapel, Loughrea, to take preliminary steps, and get subscriptions for the purpose of building a new cathedral in this town. The Bishop concluded a most eloquent address by putting down his name for a subscription of £100, which was followed by Mr. Smyth for a similar sum of £100. Several other subscriptions were at once handed in, and before the proceedings terminated nearly £1,000 had been subscribed.

The Lord Lieutenant has appointed Mr. Murland, chairman of the Dublin and Drogheda Railway Company, to make a special inspection of the estates under the management of the Commissioners of Education in Ireland, the Governors of Erasmus Smith's Schools, the Incorporated Society, and of other estates belonging to endowed schools in Ireland.

The first company in Ireland under the Limited Liability Act, has been announced in Cork, for the sale of wool, the growth of which has increased in that country, since 1851, from 10,610,640 lbs to 17,974,355lbs in 1855. The export of British and Irish wool to the continent it is stated by the promoters of the company, has increased, since 1853, from 6,060,674lbs to 15,493,616 lbs.

The amount expended during the year ended September 29, 1854 in the relief of paupers in 51 unions in Ireland was 27,120 at an expense of about £81,000; while during the year ended September, 1855, the number was 30,692, and cost about £80,000.

There is a split in the Orange camp, according to the Banner of Ulster, which says:—"The Downshire Protestant and Newry Telegraph have been for the past three or four weeks waging a most unseemly contest in reference to the principles and practices of Orangeism. Personalities are freely indulged in, and charges of the most disreputable descriptions applied to the conduct of the proprietors and managers of each are freely exchanged. The poor Orangemen seem to be in a ridiculous position and in sorry hands. The Downshire Protestant is also at loggerheads with the pseudo Orange Downpatrick Recorder, and we now learn that Ainsworth Pilson, Esq., the proprietor of the latter, has withdrawn from the Down Protestant Association. The tricksters are evidently being found out by their own friends."

In the Incumbered Estates Court a petition has been filed on behalf of the Right Hon. George Arthur Hastings, Earl of Granard, owner and petitioner, for the sale of his estates in the county Longford. Net rental, £5,819 3s. 10d.

Once more emigration is on the increase, and peasantry are leaving the country in large numbers. From Dublin the departures are considerable.

The lambing season, which is always looked to with interest by flockmasters, has now commenced very generally in the northern counties of Ireland; and dry weather being so suitable, it has hitherto been attended with great success. The lambs are remarkably healthy and strong. The year bids fair to be a prolific one, for the greater portion of the ewes have brought forth doubles.

On the 19th ult. Mr. William Sheil, Supervisor of Inland Revenue, accompanied by Messrs. Nixon and Sessions, officers, searched the house of David Holmes, in Alexander street, Belfast, where they discovered, concealed, the head and worm of a still; and having proceeded to another part of the town they found the distillery, containing a large still and all other utensils necessary for carrying on illicit distillation on an extensive scale, the whole of which was conveyed to the seizure store. This is the second seizure of the kind made in Belfast by the above-named supervisor and officers.

The camp at Aldershot has been enlivened by something more stirring than diurnal drill; it has been the scene of an engagement as like to an actual battle as the warlike may hope to see in a country, in which, as Sydney Smith says, "a pig has not been killed in fair fight for centuries." Amongst the regiments that were stationed at Aldershot, were the Hertfordshire militia, and the Galway militia; the English regiment being about 900 strong, the Irish less than half. What was the origin of the ill-feeling which sprung up between the regiments, is not, as yet, clearly known; but it is presumed that the English had indulged their playful disposition in such compliments as "bloody Hirish," which Pat did not stomach. Whatever doubt as to the cause of the fray, there is none whatever as to its result; for the 400 Celts bestowed a tremendous leathering on the 900 Saxons.

The Waterford Mail brings us news of another militia riot, thus:—"A drunken brawl occurred in Broad-street and the Square on Sunday evening, 20th ult., in which some of the Co. Dublin militia were opposed to some of the persons residing in that locality. The militiamen used their belts freely on their antagonists, but nothing very serious resulted. The police were early on the spot endeavoring to separate the combatants, in which duty they received a good deal of rough usage. They were aided by strong pickets of the regiment, and up to a late hour the pickets both of militia and constabulary paraded the scene of the encounter."

M-. Pollock, says the Enropean Times, the wealthy Glasgow merchant, who has receutly become an extensive landowner in the west of Ireland, has brought with him peculiar notions of the rights of property, which, strange to say, find but little encouragement or sympathy on the part of the Irish press, whether devoted to the landlord or popular interest. Indeed, it may be said that, rightly or wrongly, almost every man's hand is raised against him, as far as regards some recent proceedings taken by him for the better clearance of his estates in Galway.

The Limerick Observer contains the following paragraph :—The pistols which O'Connell used on the occasion of his celebrated duel with D'Esterre, in days when duelling was a practice which the laws of society enforced upon gentlemed under the penalty of loss of caste and honor, were sold by auction in this city on the 24th, by Mr. Coleman at his auction mart, to Mr. Gleeson, P. L. G., for 27s. the pair. This case of pistols was purchased previously at the Cahercon auction, by a person present, and were subsequently pawned in Limerick.

It is stated that the Crown has taken some steps, in the Court of the Archbishop of Canterbery, preparatory to the appointment of an agent to administer the affairs of the late John Sadleir, in the hope that some benefit may result to the creditors—those numerous victims of his unprecedented and enormous frauds.

A policeman in Limerick, who had lost all his savings in the Tipperary Joint Stock Bank, and whose father-in-law lost all he had possessed in the same ill-fated concern, was prevented by a comrade from blowing his brains out this week in a room to which he had gone for the purpose. He is now an inmate of the District Lunatic Asylum.

